Irregular Warrant.]—B. was convicted in a penalty of 2*l.* and costs, and in default of payment two months' imprisonment. He gave notice of appeal and left the court. A conviction and warrant were afterwards drawn up and signed by the magistrates, in which blanks were left for the amount of the costs. The costs having been ascertained by the clerk to the magistrates, and inserted by him, the warrant issued. B. then for the first time became informed of the amount of the costs. In an action by him against the magistrates for false imprisonment:—Held, that the signing the conviction and warrant in blank was an irregularity, not an excess of jurisdiction, and therefore B. was rightly nonsuited. Bott v. Ackroyd, 28 L. J., M. C. 207; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1053; 7 W. R. 420.

Default—Setting in Stocks.]—By 29 Car. 2, c. 7, ss. 1, 2, a penalty of 5*s.* is imposed to be levied by distress, and in default of such distress, or in cases of insufficiency or inability to pay the penalty, the offender is to be set publicly in the stocks for two hours. By 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 18, the amount of costs is to be specified in a conviction, and is to be recoverable in the same manner as any penalty adjudged by such conviction is to be recoverable. A conviction under 29 Car. 2, c. 7, s. 1, adjudged the offender to forfeit and pay 5*s.* and 11*s.* costs, and that the several sums, if not paid, should be levied by distress, and in default of sufficient distress that the party convicted should be set publicly in the stocks by the space of two hours, unless the several sums should be sooner paid:—Held, that the conviction was bad, as the justice was not warranted in adjudging that the offender should be set in the stocks in default of payment of the costs, that not being a method provided by 29 Car. 2, c. 7, for recovering the pecuniary penalty, but a substituted punishment. Reg. v. Barton, 3 New Sess. Cas. 470; 12 Q. B. 389; 18 L. J., M. C. 56; 13 Jur. 232.

Several Offenders.]—A conviction under 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 32, s. 30, included four persons and adjudged each of them to forfeit and pay the sum of 2*l.* each, &c., and if the said sums be not paid, that each of them, C., B., W. and S., so making default, should be imprisoned for one month, unless the said several sums and the costs and charges of conveying each of them, C., B., W. and S., so making default, to the said gaol, should be sooner paid:—Held, that the conviction made each defendant liable to be imprisoned until he had paid the penalty, and the expense of conveying not himself only, but the other persons convicted, and was therefore bad, and that this was not a case to exercise the power of amendment under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 7. Reg. v. Cridland, 7 El. & Bl. 853; 27 L. J., M. C. 28; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1213.

Impecunious Prisoners—Payment by County under Prisons Act, 1877.]—Expenses of conveying impecunious prisoners to prison are payable under s. 4 of the Prisons Act, 1877, by the secretary of state and not by the county. Mullins v. Surrey (Treasurer), 51 L. J., Q. B. 145; 7 App. Cas. 1; 45 L. T. 625; 30 W. R. 157; 15 Cox, C. C. 9; 46 J. P. 276—H. L. (E.)

Of Distress.]—Where an act gives power to a magistrate, on a summary conviction, to award the reasonable charges of taking a distress, he must ascertain the amount in the conviction; and an adjudication that the defendant shall pay the reasonable charges of the levy is bad. Lex v. Symonds, 1 East, 189.

Under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 14, s. 1, where a warrant of distress is granted for a poor, highway and other rates, the party applying for a distress warrant is the person to whom the costs of such application are to be paid. Walsh v. Southwell, 6 Ex. 150; 20 L. J., M. C. 165.

9. Commitments.

Before 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, and 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42.]—General warrants of commitment are illegal. Money v. Leech, 3 Burr. 1742; 1 W. Bl. 555, 563.

A commitment for treasonable practices is legal. Rex v. Despard, 7 Term Rep. 736; 4 R. R. 563.

Authority.]—A warrant need not set forth the authority under which it is granted. Rex v. Goodhall, 1 Ld. Ken. 122.

A warrant of commitment in execution, after a conviction, must shew before whom the conviction was, and the authority to convict. Rex v. York, 5 Burr. 2684.

A warrant of commitment stated that "H. B., in a certain affidavit, made and sworn to by him before C. C., a competent authority by law to administer the same, did falsely, wickedly, wilfully and corruptly commit wilful and corrupt perjury":—Held, bad, for that it did not state that the perjury was committed in the course of a judicial proceeding, or before a competent authority to administer an oath in a judicial proceeding. Reg. v. Bartlett, 1 D. & L. 95; 12 L. J., M. C. 127; 7 Jur. 649.

A warrant of commitment which recites a conviction must shew, on the face of the recited conviction, that the offence was one over which the committing magistrate had jurisdiction. Reg. v. King, 1 D. & L. 721; 13 L. J., M. C. 43.

Date.]—A warrant issued by justices to enforce the payment of a penalty of which a party had been convicted under 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 64, and 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 85, if not issued too soon, is not bad because it was dated too soon. Newman v. Hardwicke (Earl), 3 N. & P. 368; 8 A. & E. 124; 1 W. W. & H. 284; 7 L. J., M. C. 101.

A warrant of commitment without any date is bad. Fletcher, Ex parte, 1 D. & L. 726; 13 L. J., M. C. 16; 8 Jur. 146.

In Writing.]—Where a power is given to magistrates to commit by issuing forth their warrant (as under 5 Geo. 4, c. 18, s. 2), such warrant must be in writing; and an imprisonment without a warrant, except during the period necessary to prepare the warrant, is illegal. Hutchinson v. Lowndes, 1 N. & M. 674; 4 B. & Ad. 118; 2 L. J., M. C. 3.

The irregularity is not cured by a warrant of commitment drawn up on a subsequent day, dated as of the day of commitment. Ib.

Contents and Recitals.]—A commitment in execution by a magistrate must state that the party has been convicted; setting forth that he was charged on oath with the offence was insufficient. Rex v. Cooper, 6 Term Rep. 509.

A commitment is bad if the conviction as stated in the warrant of commitment does not shew jurisdiction. Peerless, In re, 1 Q. B. 143; 10 L. J., M. C. 67.

If a warrant of commitment in execution, manifestly defective on the face of it, shews that there has been a conviction, the court will not notice the defect until the conviction is returned into court. Rex v. Taylor, 7 D. & R. 622.

A warrant of commitment, setting out the character in which the prisoner is committed in the disjunctive, is bad. Rex v. Evered, Cald. 26.

A commitment in execution need not recite the title of the statute, on which the proceeding is founded. Rex v. Harpur, 1 D. & R. 222.

It is fatal, in a warrant of commitment for a riot, under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 8, to state that the defendant began to pull down and destroy "in part" a dwelling-house. Reg. v. Lowden, 7 D. P. C. 538; 1 W. W. & H. 551.

A commitment for embezzlement is sufficient, if it shews a sufficient offence to warrant the commitment, though it does not state the act to have been done feloniously, or with the precision of an indictment. Rex v. Croker, 2 Chit. 138.

A commitment need not be drawn with the same precision as an indictment. Rex v. Remnant, 2 Leach, C. C. 583; 1 East, P. C. 420; 5 Term Rep. 169; Nolan, 205.

In a commitment for felony, it is not necessary to allege that the offence was feloniously done; it is sufficient if enough appears for the court to collect whether the charge is felony or not. Rex v. Judd, 1 Leach, C. C. 484; 2 East, P. C. 1018; 2 Term Rep. 255.

A warrant of commitment, under 4 Geo. 4, c. 34, s, 3, adjudged that J. G., having contracted to serve J. S. as a collier, and the term of his contract being unexpired, did unlawfully misdemean and misconduct himself in his service, by neglecting and absenting himself from his service without the leave of his master, without having given to his master any notice thereof, and without assigning any sufficient reason for so doing:—Held, that the warrant was bad, as it did not shew that J. G. had absented himself without lawful excuse. Geswood, In re, 2 El. & Bl. 552; 2 C. L. R. 269; 23 L. J., M. C. 35; 17 Jur. 1163; 2 W. R. 94.

A warrant of commitment under 4 Geo. 4, c. 34, s. 3, recited that complaint had been made to the justice that A. had contracted to serve with B. and C. in their business for a term of one year, to commence from the 4th November last, and that the term of his contract being unexpired, A., on the 2nd June instant, unlawfully misconducted himself in his service by neglecting and absenting himself from his master's service without notice, or assigning a sufficient reason. The warrant adjudged the complaint to be true, and convicted A. of the offence, and sentenced him to be imprisoned for a month:—Held, that A. was entitled to be discharged from custody, as the warrant was bad for not stating either that the contract was in writing, or that A. had entered into the service. Askew, In re, 2 L. M. & P. 429; 20 L. J., M. C. 241; 15 Jur. 705.

A warrant of commitment which does not state either that the offence was committed, the contract entered into, or the party employed or found within the jurisdiction of the magistrate, is bad. Johnson v. Reid, 6 M. & W. 124; 9 L. J., M. C. 25.

An affidavit cannot be received on the return to a writ of habeas corpus for the purpose of shewing that the prisoner did not in fact contract within the jurisdiction as stated in the warrant of commitment. Smith, Ex parte, 3 H. & N. 227; 27 L. J., M. C. 186; 6 W. R. 440.

One offence may be properly described in a warrant of commitment by the words "aid, abet, counsel and procure." Ib.

It is no ground of objection to a warrant, that it differs in some particulars from the conviction, so long as it discloses substantially the same offence. Barnes v. White, 1 New Sess. Cas. 504; 1 C. B. 192; 14 L. J., C. P. 150; 9 Jur. 181.

Under 20 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 2, for regulating servants in husbandry, artificers and other labourers there mentioned, if a justice of the peace, upon a complaint made to him of the misconduct of such persons in their employment, sentence the offender to be committed to the house of correction for a time not exceeding one calendar month, he must, if he intended to proceed upon that statute, also sentence him there to be corrected and held to hard labour; but the statute gave the justice an option to punish the offender in that manner, or otherwise, by abating part of his wages, or by discharging him from his employment. And the meaning of the terms, "there to be corrected," is to be understood of a correction by whipping. Rex v. Hoseason, 14 East, 605.

Where the certiorari is taken away from a defendant, but not from the prosecutor, the court will assume that the warrant of commitment contains a true recital of the conviction, unless it is brought before the court by the prosecutor, though the recital shews the conviction to be bad. Reg. v. Reynolds, 1 D. & L. 846; 13 L. J., M. C. 65; 8 Jur. 192.

The return to a writ of habeas corpus set out a warrant of commitment, purporting to recite an order of quarter sessions, confirming a conviction under the 9 Geo. 4, c. 69, s. 1 (the Night Poaching Act), which adjudged the offenders "to find sureties by recognizance, that each of them, H. R. and E. H., should not offend again for the space of one year next following":—Held, bad. Ib.

A warrant of commitment is not evidence of the facts which it recites. Stevens v. Clark, 2 M. & Rob. 435; Car. & M. 509.

Where by a statute giving justices a power to commit summarily they are empowered to commit the offender to prison for a certain period with or without hard labour, and in their warrant of commitment nothing is said about hard labour, it is to be taken that they did not mean to give hard labour, and the warrant is not objectionable for omitting to state whether the imprisonment is to be with or without hard labour. Thompson, Ex parte, 3 L. T. 318.

Period.]—Under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 75, a secretary of state, upon a requisition in the name of the King of the French to deliver up a person who is accused of having committed certain crimes in the act mentioned, may, by a warrant under his hand and seal, authorise a justice to commit such person to gaol, there to remain until delivered pursuant to such requisition. A warrant of commitment under this statute directed the gaolor to keep the prisoner in his custody until he should be discharged in due course of law:—Held, bad, for not pursuing the authority given by the statute as to the time of commitment. Besset, Ex parte, 6 Q. B. 481; 1 New Sess. Cas. 337; 14 L. J., M. C. 17; 9 Jur. 66.

A warrant of two justices, committing the collector of the rates for the parish of Richmond to the county gaol, upon complaint against him for refusing to account and pay over the moneys collected by him, adjudging that he should be committed to the gaol, there to remain until he should have made a true account, and until such money as upon the said account should appear to be remaining in his hands should be paid by him or his sureties, held good, although it concluded by directing the gaoler to keep him until he should be discharged by due course of law. Goff's Case, 3 M. & S. 203.

Presence of Accused.]—Where a statute gives a magistrate a power of commitment, without a previous conviction, it should appear on the face of the warrant of commitment that the charge was heard and the evidence taken in the presence of the prisoner. Reg. v. Tordoff or Tordoff, 5 Q. B. 933; D. & M. 693; 1 New Sess. Cas. 171; 13 L. J., M. C. 145.

Where a warrant of commitment, under 6 Geo. 3, c. 25, s. 3, did not recite a conviction, it must appear on the face of it that the examination on which the magistrate has proceeded was on oath, and taken in the presence of the prisoner. Gray, In re, 2 D. & L. 539; 14 L. J., M. C. 26.

Place.]—The 16 & 17 Vict. c. 30, empowered two justices of the peace to punish, on summary conviction for assaults committed on females, or children under fourteen years, any person charged before them "sitting at a place where the petty sessions are usually held":—Held, that a warrant of commitment for such offence, in the form given by the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, schedule (P 1) was good, although it did not state that the justices, before whom the party was charged, were sitting at a place where petty sessions are usually held. Allison, In re, 10 Ex. 561; 3 C. L. R. 319; 24 L. J., M. C. 73; 18 Jur. 1055; 3 W. R. 62. And see Reg. v. Hyde, 7 El. & Bl. 859, n.; 21 L. J., M. C. 94; 16 Jur. 337. Eggington v. Lichfield Corporation, 5 El. & Bl. 100; 24 L. J., Q. B. 360; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 908.

Substitutionary.]—The return to a habeas corpus by a gaoler, stated that the prisoner was received by him under a warrant of commitment, reciting a conviction under the Act for the Prevention of Smuggling (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 53, which authorises justices to amend their warrant of commitment); that on a subsequent day some person came to the gaol, took away the warrant, and left in lieu thereof another warrant, dated the same day, under the hands and seals of the same justices, but which contained no statement of its being a substituted warrant; and that under this warrant he had since detained the prisoner:—Held, that it did not sufficiently appear that the second warrant was substituted by the authority of the justices, and that the prisoner was therefore liable to be discharged. Rex v. Elmy, 3 N. & M. 733; 1 A. & E. 843; 3 L. J., K. B. 199.

Where an act of parliament authorises magistrates to commit, if a good warrant of commitment is shewn, the court will not inquire into the validity of a previous document, under which a prisoner was in fact committed; since a conviction, if such was necessary at all, may be at any time drawn up to sustain a commitment valid in form. Reg. v. Richards, 5 Q. B. 926; D. & M. 777; 1 New Sess. Cas. 182; 13 L. J., M. C. 147; 8 Jur. 752. See Hammond, In re, 9 Q. B. 92; 15 L. J., M. C. 136; and Smith, Ex parte, 3 H. & N. 277; 27 L. J., M. C. 186; 6 W. R. 440.

Where a prisoner has been lodged in gaol under a bad warrant of commitment, even in the nature of a conviction (as where the commitment is under the Vagrant Act, 5 Geo. 4, c. 83, s. 4), a good warrant of commitment subsequently delivered to the gaoler, but before a rule for a habeas corpus has been obtained, is a good answer to that rule. Cross, Ex parte, 2 H. & N. 354; 26 L. J., M. C. 201.

10. Disposition and Delivery up of Property.

Application for Disposal of Property.]—The plaintiff was tried and acquitted on a charge of stealing a diamond ring and pin found on his person. The defendant, a superintendent of police, into whose hands the goods had come in the ordinary course of proceedings, did not deliver them to the plaintiff, but within a reasonable time applied to a metropolitan police magistrate under 2 & 3 Vict. c. 71, s. 29, for an order as to how he was to dispose of them. The magistrate, after hearing evidence, including that of the plaintiff, adjourned the hearing to a day not yet expired. In an action for the detention and conversion of the goods:—Held, that the defendant, having within a reasonable time proceeded, in accordance with the provisions of the act, to place the matter in the hands of the magistrate, was not liable. Bullock v. Dunlop, 46 L. J., Ex.

150 ; 2 Ex. D. 43 ; 35 L. T. 633 ; 25 W. R. 98. Affirmed, 36 L. T. 194 ; 25 W. R. 293 ; 13 Cox, C. C. 367, 581—C. A.

Order for Delivery of Money "charged" to have been fraudulently obtained.]—By 2 & 3 Vict. c. 71, s. 29, "if any money or goods charged to be stolen or fraudulently obtained shall be in the custody of any constable by virtue of any warrant of a justice, or in prosecution of any charge of felony or misdemeanor in regard to the obtaining thereof, and the person charged with stealing or obtaining possession as aforesaid shall not be found, or shall have been summarily convicted or discharged, or shall have been tried or acquitted, or if such person shall have been tried and found guilty, but the property so in custody shall not have been included in any indictment upon which he shall have been found guilty, it shall be lawful for any magistrate to make an order for the delivery of such goods or money to the party who shall appear to be the rightful owner thereof."—An accused person, having been arrested by a police constable, was taken to a police station, where she was searched and a sum of 108*l.* was found upon her, and taken possession of by the police. In the charge-sheet kept at the police station the following charge against her was entered :—"Fraudulently obtaining on the 10th instant, the sum of 5*s.* from Miss M., and also the sum of 5*s.* from Miss B., by representing that she (the prisoner) was collecting subscriptions for the children's treat of St. Peter's, Eaton Square, and further with endeavouring to procure charitable contributions by false pretences." On the following day she was brought before a metropolitan police magistrate who had the charge sheet before him, and convicted her summarily in respect of the two first offences specified therein, and sentenced her to two consecutive terms of imprisonment. At the hearing, in addition to Miss M. and Miss B., three other ladies were called, who proved that she had obtained from them various small sums, amounting to about 2*l.* 5*s.*, by making similar fraudulent representations :—Held, upon those facts, that the money found upon the prisoner was not money "charged" before the magistrate to be stolen or fraudulently obtained within the meaning of s. 29, and therefore that he had, after the conviction, no jurisdiction to make an order under that section for the delivery to her of the whole of the 108*l.* by the constable in whose custody it had remained. The word "charged" in s. 29 is used in its technical legal sense, and imports a formal charge made before a magistrate against an accused person of having stolen or fraudulently obtained specific goods or money, which charge the accused is called upon to answer, and is given an opportunity of answering. Reg. v. d'Eyncourt, 57 L. J., M. C. 64 ; 21 Q. B. D. 109 ; 37 W. R. 59 ; 52 J. P. 628.

Where Decision a Bar to subsequent Proceedings—Delivery up of Property.]—The plaintiff applied to a magistrate within the metropolitan police district for an order under 2 & 3 Vict. c. 71, s. 40, for the delivery up to him by the defendant of goods alleged to be unlawfully detained from him by the latter. The magistrate, after due inquiry into the title to the goods, refused an order, and the plaintiff thereupon brought an action of trover for the goods :—Held, that the proceedings before the magistrate did not preclude the plaintiff from maintaining his action. Dover v. Child, 45 L. J., Ex. 462 ; 1 Ex. D. 172 ; 34 L. T. 737 ; 24 W. R. 537.

Illegal Seizure—Permit.]—If goods which have been seized, and brought to the magistrates' office, are afterwards restored as having been seized illegally, and the party cannot remove them back without a permit, it is the duty of the magistrates to procure such permit. Price v. Messenger, 3 Esp. 100 ; 5 R. R. 559.

And see CRIMINAL LAW.

11. LIMITATION OF TIME FOR COMPLAINTS AND ORDERS.

In what Cases.]—The 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 11, as to the period of six months does not apply to warrants of distress for rates. Sweetman v. Guest, 37 L. J., M. C. 59 ; L. R. 3 Q. B. 262 ; 18 L. T. 52 ; 16 W. R. 426.

The commitment by two justices under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 39, of a member of the town council and local board of a borough for nondelivery of a rate-book in his possession, by virtue of his office as overseer and collector of the borough rates, is a civil and not criminal proceeding, being in the nature of a distraint. The limitation of six months by s. 11 of Jervis's Act (11 & 12 Vict. c. 43), will therefore not apply. Mayer v. Harding, 17 L. T. 140.

Semble, that such limitation will only apply when the object of the proceeding is punishment and not merely coercion. Per Lush, J. Ib.

By s. 38 of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, the act is to commence and take effect seven weeks after its passing :—Held, that a complaint, after the act came into operation, upon matter which arose before, was barred by s. 11, though six calendar months from the time when the matter of complaint arose had elapsed when the statute passed. For, the act having given time for preferring any such complaint before the limitation clause came into operation, no such injustice resulted from giving full effect to s. 11, as would warrant the court in putting upon it a restricted construction. Reg. v. Leeds and Bradford Ry., 18 Q. B. 343.

Persuading Seamen to Desert.]—A. had, on the 4th of April, 1867, endeavoured to persuade O. not to join his ship. O. did, however, return to his ship, and sailed with her next morning. He did not return till the end of the following October ; that is, a period of over six months from the commission of the offence by A. An information at the instance of O. was laid on the 14th of November, which was heard on the 19th of the same month, before two justices, when A. was convicted. The Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, s. 257, which creates the offence, provides that proceedings under it must be commenced within six months after the commission of the offence, or, if either or both the parties be during such time out of the United Kingdom, then within two months after they both happen to arrive at or be within the same :—Held, that the information was laid in sufficient time under this section. Austin v. Olsen, 9 B. & S. 46 ; 37 L. J., M. C. 34 ; L. R. 3 Q. B. 208 ; 17 L. T. 537 ; 16 W. R. 426.

Order for Payment—Lands Clauses Act.]—The adjudication of two justices under the Lands Clauses Act (8 & 9 Vict. c. 18), s. 22, as to the value of an interest in lands required for the execution of an undertaking within that act, in respect to which no agreement has been come to between the promoters and the party entitled to sell as to the value thereof, is not an order for the payment of money within 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 11 (Jervis's Act), and the summons to hear and determine such question of compensation is not out of time if issued after six months from the notice to treat given by the promoters of the undertaking. Reg. v. Hannay, 44 L. J., M. C. 27; 31 L. T. 702; 23 W. R. 164.

An order of two justices under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 18, awarding compensation for damages done to a landowner by the construction of a railway, is within the clause of the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43. Reg. v. Leeds and Bradford Ry., 21 L. J., M. C. 193; 16 Jur. 817. S. C., nom. Edmundson, In re, 17 Q. B. 67.

—— Improvement of Borough—Demolition.]—The words "order for the payment of money or otherwise," in 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 1, include orders of every kind which a justice of the peace has authority to make. Morant v. Taylor, 45 L. J., M. C. 78; 1 Ex. D. 188; 34 L. T. 139; 24 W. R. 461.

Therefore, when a local act for the improvement of a borough provided that if buildings should be erected contrary to any requirement by the corporation, the corporation might make complaint thereof before a justice, who was empowered to make an order directing the demolition of the building:—Held, that pursuant to 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 11, the complaint upon which an order for demolition was to be founded must be made within six months after the completion of a building erected contrary to the provisions of the local act. Ib.

—— Expenses.]—The 18 & 19 Vict. c. 122, s. 73, authorises the commissioners under that act, in certain cases, to take down, repair, or otherwise secure, dangerous structures, and enacts that the expenses incurred by them shall be paid by the owner of the structure. No time for making complaint, in respect of the expense, is limited by the act. Sect. 97 enacts that these expenses may be recovered in a summary manner; and s. 103 enacts that expenses directed to be recovered in a summary manner, may be recovered in manner directed by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43. The commissioners having incurred expense, demanded payment of the owner of the structure, who refused to pay:—Held, that the six months were to be reckoned from the demand and refusal, not from the incurring of the expense. Labalmondiere v. Addison, 1 El. & El. 41; 28 L. J., M. C. 25; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 433.

In 1854, permanent improvements were completed by a local board of health upon premises. F. was receiver of the rent of the premises, appointed by the Court of Chancery. In 1853 and 1854 F. and the local board agreed that the expenses should be raised by mortgage, and notice of the sum was given to F., who paid 30*l.* in part payment. He afterwards ceased to be receiver, and refused to pay the balance. A demand of payment was made upon him in 1857, and in December he finally refused to pay. A complaint was made by the local board before justices, upon the 19th January, 1858:—Held, that the matter of complaint arose when notice of the amount to be raised by mortgage was given to F., and that the information ought to have been laid within six months from that time. Eddleston v. Francis, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 568; 3 L. T. 270.

Desertion of Wife.]—To constitute an offence under 5 Geo. 4, c. 83, s. 4, there must be a running away and deserting a wife or child, and a chargeability to a parish by reason of it. Therefore it is sufficient, if the information is laid within six months of the chargeability, although the running away took place more than six months before the information was laid. Reeves v. Yeates, 1 H. & C. 435; 31 L. J., M. C. 241; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 751; 10 W. R. 779.

Continuing Offence.]—A conviction for a continuing offence (e.g. for acting contrary to a closing order), by which a daily penalty is imposed, is bad if the number of days exceeds the limit of six months provided by s. 11 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848. Reg. v. Slade, Saunders, Ex parte, 64 L. J., M. C. 232; [1895] 2 Q. B. 247; 15 R. 499; 73 L. T. 343; 59 J. P. 471.

—— Penalty imposed in Advance.]—By s. 8 of the Tramways Orders Confirmation Act, 1873, the promoters of a tramway were to be subject to a penalty not exceeding 5*l.* for every day on which they continued to omit to maintain and keep in good order and condition the rails and roads of their tramways. By an order of justices dated December 15, 1893, they were fined 5*l.* for not keeping the rails in good condition and repair on October 23, 1893, and 1*l.* for every day on which such act of omission should continue. By a subsequent order of justices of February 8, 1895, they were ordered to pay 420*l.* for penalties incurred under the order of December 15, 1893, being 1*l.* per day since the date of that order:—Held, that the order of February 8, 1895, must be quashed as bad under s. 11 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848, and as being founded on an order bad on the face of it in respect of the continuing penalty. Reg. v. Struve, 59 J. P. 584.

Computation of Time.]—In computing the one calendar month within which complaint must be made under s. 14 of 12 & 13 Vict. c. 92, the day on which the offence was committed is not to be included. Radcliffe v. Bartholomew, 61 L. J., M. C. 63; [1892] 1 Q. B. 161; 65 L. T. 677; 40 W. R. 63; 56 J. P. 262.

—— Mandamus—Time.]—Justices dismissed an information on the ground that it was too late. No case was applied for within seven days. Upon an application for a mandamus:—Held, that an application for a case to be stated was a more convenient remedy, and the rule for a mandamus was refused. Reg. v. Wisbech JJ., 54 J. P. 743.

E. APPEAL.

1. To High Court.

By Special Case—Application to whom.]—An application for a rule calling upon justices to shew cause why a case should not be stated under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, should be made to the Court of Queen's Bench Division, and not to the Divisional Court of Appeal. Ellershaw, In re, Longbottom, Ex parte, 45 L. J., M. C. 163; 1 Q. B. D. 481.

Semble, that a judge at chambers can grant an order upon justices to state a case. Smith, Ex parte, 27 L. J., M. C. 186.

Time of Application to state Case.]—When the last of the three days falls on a Sunday, it is to be computed as one of the days, and an application made on the Monday is too late. Wynne v. Ronaldson, 12 L. T. 711; 13 W. R. 899. S. P., Peacock v. Reg., 4 C. B. (N.S.) 264; 27 L. J., C. P. 224; 6 W. R. 517.

Application for in Writing—Service thereof.]—An application in writing under s. 33 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict. c. 49), and r. 18 of the Summary Jurisdiction Rules, 1886, for the justices to state a case for the opinion of the Queen's Bench Division, must be served on all the justices constituting the Court of Summary Jurisdiction, and it is not sufficient to serve it on two of them only; and under such circumstances the superior court has no jurisdiction to hear the appeal. Westmore v. Paine, 60 L. J., M. C. 89; [1891] 1 Q. B. 482; 64 L. T. 55; 39 W. R. 463; 17 Cox, C. C. 244; 55 J. P. 440.

Under Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, s. 33.]—A court of summary jurisdiction has no power to state a special case under the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict. c. 49), s. 33, unless an application has been made to the court in writing, and unless a copy of such application has been left with the clerk of the court within seven days from the date of the proceeding to be questioned, according to the Summary Jurisdiction Rules, 1886, r. 18. South Staffordshire Waterworks Co. v. Stone, 56 L. J., M. C. 122; 19 Q. B. D. 168; 57 L. T. 368; 36 W. R. 76; 16 Cox, C. C. 300; 51 J. P. 662.

When justices stated a case under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, they may be taken to have stated it under all their powers, including those of 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49. Rochdale Building Society v. Rochdale Corporation, 51 J. P. 134.

—— Oral Demand — Service of Notice on Clerk.] — There is no right of appeal from justices by case stated under the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, s. 33, unless the directions of the rules made under that section with regard to the mode of application for a case have been observed. Therefore in a case where no notice of application for the case in writing had been given to the justices making the order appealed against, though a notice of application in writing had been served on their clerk:—Held, that there was no power to state a case, and that the appeal must be dismissed. South Staffordshire Waterworks Co. v. Stone (19 Q. B. D. 168), approved and followed. Lockhart v. St. Albans Corporation, 57 L. J., M. C. 118; 21 Q. B. D. 188; 36 W. R. 800; 52 J. P. 420—C. A.

—— "Person Aggrieved"—Leaving Package on Footway in Metropolis—Freeholder.]—In the metropolis, a tenant of D. left a package on the pavement of a court (in the city) 141 feet long and 25 feet wide, with two foot-pavements, and was charged, under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 134, s. 6, with leaving the package longer than necessary. D., the freeholder, contended that the court was private property for the sole use of the tenants, and was not a street. On the tenant being convicted:—Held, that D. was not "a person aggrieved," and was not entitled to have a special case stated under 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49, s. 33. Drapers Co. v. Hadden, 57 J. P. 200.

When Granted.]—Justices are not bound to state a case when the application discloses no point on which a case ought to be granted. Reg. v. Rutlandshire, JJ., 13 L. T. 722.

The court will not entertain an appeal from a decision of a magistrate, upon a question of fact. Newman v. Baker, 8 C. B. (N.S.) 200.

Justices under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, are not bound to state and sign a case on demand unless they think that it involves some doubtful or difficult point of law. Crick v. Crick, 6 W. R. 594.

The court refused a rule to justices, ordering them to state a special case for the opinion of the court when the objection was that they had improperly received evidence. To enable the court to interfere it must appear that the determination of the justices was wrong. Reg. v. Macclesfield JJ., 2 L. T. 352.

Where a power is given to justices to determine, it is final unless an appeal is expressly given. Parson v. Blundy, Wightw. 22.

The 129th section of the Metropolitan Management Act, 1855, provides that the justices' decision as to what is or what is not trade refuse, shall be final and conclusive. A metropolitan police magistrate decided that ashes and clinkers from furnaces which supplied an hotel with electric light were not trade refuse, and that the parish vestry was bound to remove them without payment. He refused to state a case, on the ground that the question was one of fact alone and not of law:—Held, that the magistrate was bound to state a case. Reg. v. Bridge, 59 L. J., M. C. 49; 24 Q. B. D. 609; 62 L. T. 297; 38 W. R. 464; 17 Cox, C. C. 66; 54 J. P. 629.

—— Where Formal Determination.] — No case can be stated under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, for the opinion of one of the superior courts, unless the determination of the parties was upon an information or complaint; and therefore, where an application was made to justices for a certificate for a licence to keep a beerhouse, and upon their refusal a case was demanded and stated under this act:—Held, that no such case could be stated. Garatty v. Potts, 23 L. T. 410; 19 W. R. 127.

An appeal lies where the justices have dismissed the information or complaint. Davys v. Douglas, 4 H. & N. 180; 28 L. J., M. C. 193; 7 W. R. 327.

On an information before justices at petty sessions, the evidence was partly heard, when on objection, the justices decided that they had no jurisdiction, because one of them was interested in the subject-matter, and they stopped the further hearing. They then granted a case for the opinion of a superior court, as to whether such justice was interested or not:—Held, that it was not competent to grant such a case, because there had been no hearing and determination of the information or complaint. Wakefield Local Board v. West Riding and Grimsby Ry., 6 B. & S. 794; 35 L. J., M. C. 69; 10 Cox, C. C. 162.

—— Point not Raised.]—A magistrate cannot refuse to state a case on a point which, though it has not been formally raised before him, goes to the root of the whole matter, and must have been considered by him in determining the case. Markham, Ex parte, 21 L. T. 748; 18 W. R. 258.

Jurisdiction to Grant.] — The power of appeal to the quarter sessions given by 20 & 21 Vict. c. 83, does not take away the jurisdiction of a magistrate under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, to state a case under that act for the opinion of a superior court on a point of law arising under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 83. Steele v. Brannan, 41 L. J., M. C. 85; L. R. 7 C. P. 261; 26 L. T. 509; 20 W. R. 607.

—— Of Alderman.]—The power of an alderman to state a case under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, is not taken away by the Metropolitan Building Act (18 & 19 Vict. c. 122), s. 106. Power v. Wigmore, L. R. 7 C. P. 386; 27 L. T. 148.

—— Vaccination.]—A special case may be stated by justices for the opinion of the High Court upon an order made by them to procure vaccination of a child. Holloway v. Coster, 66 L. J., Q. B. 293; [1897] 1 Q. B. 347; 76 L. T. 57; 45 W. R. 319; 18 Cox, C. C. 487; 61 J. P. 218.

—— Under Public Health Acts.] — Where application was made to justices under s. 305 of the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), for an order authorising the entry, for the purposes of that act, of a local authority upon the lands of a person who had refused to permit such entry, and the justices after hearing declined to make an order:—Held, that the justices had no power to state a case under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, s. 2, their decision not being the determination of a complaint within that section, and the application being one wholly within their jurisdiction to grant. Diss Urban Sanitary Authority v. Aldrich, 46 L. J., M. C. 183; 2 Q. B. D. 179; 36 L. T. 663.

If a party charged with obstructing the works of a local board of health sets up the defence of an assertion of a private right, the justices, under such circumstances, are not warranted in refusing as frivolous an application to state a case. Reg. v. Pollard, 14 L. T. 599.

—— Rate under Public Health Act.] — Justices, sitting as a court of summary jurisdiction to hear an application to enforce payment of rates under s. 256 of the Public Health Act, 1875, have power to state a case in respect of matters arising out of such application under s. 33 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879. Sandgate Local Board v. Pledge, 14 Q. B. D. 730; 52 L. T. 546; 33 W. R. 565; 49 J. P. 342.

—— Surcharge by Surveyor.]—A refusal by justices to make an order for the disallowance of a particular item in the accounts of a surveyor of highways, is ground for an appeal. Townsend v. Read, 30 L. J., M. C. 223; 10 C. B. (N.S.) 308; 4 L. T. 447; 9 W. R. 659.

—— Highway Rate.]—An appeal does not lie upon the refusal of justices to issue a summons to enforce payment of a highway rate, on the ground that the land assessed was not liable to highway rates. Walker v. G. W. Ry. 2 El. & El. 325; 29 L. J., M. C. 107.

—— Validity of Paving Rate.] — D. was assessed, under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, to a special district rate, which was good upon the face of it, and had not been appealed against. Upon a summons for nonpayment, he objected that the rate, which was for paving, was invalid, on the ground that paving was not a work of a permanent nature, within the meaning of s. 86:—Held, upon a case stated by justices, that the justices were not justified in inquiring whether the rate was invalid upon a ground which was matter of appeal to the quarter sessions, and that they ought to have issued their warrant. Luton Local Board v. Davis, 2 El. & El. 678; 29 L. J., M. C. 173; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 580; 2 L. T. 172; 8 W. R. 411.

—— Poor Rate.]—By 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96, s. 6, justices hold special sessions to hear objections to the poor rate on the ground of inequality, unfairness, or incorrectness in the valuation; and their decision is binding, unless notice of appeal to the quarter sessions is given within fourteen days:—Held, that a case could not be stated upon the application of a party dissatisfied with their decision. Wheeler v. Burmington Overseers, 29 L. J., M. C. 175, n.; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 698; 2 L. T. 171; 8 W. R. 412.

On a summons before justices to enforce a contribution order under 2 & 3 Vict. c. 84, s. 1, it was objected that the section was retrospective only, and that the balance from the parish to the union was not within it:—Held, that a case upon this objection could not be stated. Sparrow v. Impington Overseers, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 953.

—— Sewers Rate.] — At the hearing by justices of an information laid against A. for nonpayment of a sewers rate to which he had been assessed by commissioners acting under a local act, which incorporated the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, he disputed his liability to the rate, on the ground that the premises in respect of which he was rated were drained by a private sewer, and derived no benefit from the sewers under the control of the commissioners. The justices made an order upon him to pay the rate, and refused his application to them to state a case for an appeal from their decision:—Held, that the justices were right in their refusal; for that 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, was inapplicable, since an appeal against the order of the justices would in effect be an appeal against the rate; which appeal, by s. 135 of the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, lay only to the quarter sessions. Reg. v. Gloucestershire JJ., 2 El. & El. 420. S. C., nom. Reg. v. Newman, 29 L. J., M. C. 117; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 293.

A special case under s. 33 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, may, by the operation of s. 7 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1884, and notwithstanding s. 10 of the latter act, be stated by a justice sitting to hear a proceeding for the recovery of a sewers rate under s. 194 of the City of London Sewers Act, 1848. Reg. v. London Corporation, 57 L. T. 491; 52 J. P. 70.

—— Benefit Society.]—The decision of justices under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 101, s. 5, of a dispute which had been referred to them, pursuant to one of the rules of a benefit society, is a determination of a complaint which the justices have power to determine in a summary manner, and they ought, on application by the unsuccessful party, to state a case. Reg. v. Lambarde, L. R. 1 Q. B. 388 ; 14 W. R. 680. S. C., nom. Watts v. Kent JJ., 35 L. J., M. C. 190 ; 14 L. T. 448. Overruled by Callaghan v. Dolwin, 38 L. J., M. C. 110 ; L. R. 4 C. P. 288 ; 21 L. T. 827 ; 17 W. R. 733.

—— Private Act—"Court of Summary Jurisdiction."]—Justices sitting in special or petty sessions, and hearing and determining an appeal from "the deputies" under s. 46 of the Freemen of the Borough of Leicester Act, 1845, form a "court of summary jurisdiction" within the Interpretation Act, 1889, s. 13, sub-s. 11, from which an appeal by special case under s. 33 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, lies to the High Court of Justice. Leicester Freemen v. Hewitt, 62 L. J., M. C. 51 ; 5 R. 211 ; 68 L. T. 201 ; 57 J. P. 344.

—— Refusal of Renewal of Licence.]—Query, whether justices acting as licensing justices have power to state a case under s. 33 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879. See Reg. v. Glamorganshire JJ., 61 L. J., M. C. 169 ; [1892] 1 Q. B. 621 ; 66 L. T. 444 ; 40 W. R. 436 ; 56 J. P. 437 —C. A. Boulter v. Kent JJ., 66 L. J., Q. B. 787 ; [1897] A. C. 556 ; 77 L. T. 288 ; 46 W. R. 114 ; 61 J. P. 532—H. L. (E.)

—— Separation Order—Husband and Wife.] —There is no power to state a case for the opinion of the Queen's Bench Division on an application by a wife for an order under s. 4 of the Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895. Manders v. Manders, 66 L. J., Q. B. 296 ; [1897] 1 Q. B. 474 ; 45 W. R. 287 ; 61 J. P. 105.

From Quarter Sessions.]—Upon an application to enter and respite an appeal, the quarter sessions have no power to state a special case ; and the Court of Queen's Bench will take no notice of the facts of a case so stated. Reg. v. L. & N. W. Ry., 43 L. J., M. C. 57 ; L. R. 9 Q. B. 153 ; 29 L. T. 840 ; 22 W. R. 324.

The quarter sessions granted an application to enter and respite appeals against poor-rates, subject to a case for the opinion of the Court of Queen's Bench. The court heard the arguments, but, after consideration, and although no objection was raised by either side, declined to express an opinion in a case reserved on such an order. Ib.

The court has no jurisdiction to review the judgment of a court of quarter sessions, unless there is a case sent up for their consideration. Rex v. Carnarvon JJ., 4 B. & Ald. 86 ; 22 R. R. 636.

The court will take no cognizance of a special case reserved, upon the trial of an indictment at the sessions. Rex v. Salop, 13 East, 95 ; 12 R. R. 307.

By 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 90, councils of corporate boroughs are empowered to make by-laws. By s. 91, offences against such by-laws may be punished by summary conviction. By s. 132, the writ of certiorari is taken away. The recorder, upon an appeal against such a conviction for an offence against a by-law, having, with the consent of the parties, stated a case and referred as the only question for the Court of Queen's Bench to determine, the question whether the facts amounted to an offence within the by-law, and the court having granted a certiorari to bring up the case :—Held, that, by virtue of the consent of the parties, the court might receive the case, and determine the question, although the writ of certiorari was taken away. Reg. v. Dickenson, 7 El. & Bl. 831 ; 26 L. J., M. C. 204 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1076 ; 5 W. R. 654.

The court has power to entertain a special case sent by the quarter sessions for their opinion, they having confirmed a conviction appealed against under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 99, s. 21, subject to the opinion of the court. Reg. v. Handley, 9 L. T. 827.

Reception of Evidence.]—The Court of Queen's Bench has jurisdiction to review the decision of a court of quarter sessions as to whether sufficient search has been made for a document to render secondary evidence of it receivable. Reg. v. Hinckley Inhabitants, 3 B. & S. 885 ; 32 L. J., M. C. 158 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1054 ; 8 L. T. 270 ; 11 W. R. 663.

Where the sessions have decided that sufficient search had not been made for an agreement to let in secondary evidence of its contents, the court will not interfere with their decision, unless it sees clearly that the sessions were wrong. Reg. v. Saffron Hill, Liberty, 1 El. & Bl. 93 ; 22 L. J., M. C. 22.

Where it is the practice of the sessions to allow an appeal to be entered against an order of removal, on filing a copy of the order, the jurisdiction of the sessions to try the appeal cannot be disputed on the ground that the copy has been taken as evidence without accounting for the original. Reg. v. Townstall, 2 G. & D. 682 ; 3 Q. B. 357 ; 12 L. J., M. C. 72 ; 7 Jur. 463.

When the quarter sessions have improperly decided against an appeal on a preliminary objection, the court will grant a mandamus to them to enter continuances and hear the appeal ; but where an objection has been made during the trial of an appeal, to the reception of a particular piece of evidence, and the sessions have held such objection valid, in consequence of which the appeal has been dismissed, the court will not interfere unless the sessions send up a case. Rex v. Frieston, 5 B. & Ad. 597.

Entering into Recognizances.]—Where justices convict, and, upon being immediately thereupon applied to for a case, accede at once, it is sufficient that the appellant enters into a recognizance within three days from the determination and before a case is stated and delivered to him, though the recognizance is not entered into "at the time of making such application." Chapman v. Robinson, 1 El. & El. 25 ; 28 L. J., M. C. 30 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 434.

The recognizance need not be given within the three days mentioned in s. 2 ; it is enough if this is done before the case is given out by the justices. Stanhope v. Thorsby, 1 H. & R. 459 ; 35 L. J., M. C. 182 ; L. R. 1 C. P. 423 ; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 374 ; 14 L. T. 332 ; 14 W. R. 651.

Application to justices to state a case was made on September 21, 1893. The case was not stated till December 20 following, and the appellant did not enter into his recognizance till December 21 :—Held, that there had been no compliance with rule 18 of the rules of 1886 under the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879. Walker v. Delacombe, 63 L. J., M. C. 77 ; 58 J. P. 88.

—— Company Appellant.]—Where a limited company appeals against a decision of justices, the recognizance required by s. 3 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1857, before a case is stated, may be entered into by a director or member of the company. Southern Counties Deposit Bank v. Boaler, 15 R. 566; 73 L. T. 155; 59 J. P. 536.

Respondent to Case—Refusal of Licence.]—Where a case was stated under 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49, s. 33, in reference to the refusal of a licence, the superintendent of police of the division, who had appeared to oppose the licence before the justices, and to whom notice in writing of the appeal had been given by the appellant, in accordance with 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, s. 2, was rightly constituted respondent. Price v. James, 61 L. J., M. C. 203; [1892] 2 Q. B. 428; 67 L. T. 543; 41 W. R. 57; 56 J. P. 471—C. A.

—— Railway Company.]—In a case stated with reference to the offence of placing stones on a railway and thereby obstructing the free passage of the same, the person lodging the complaint is rightly constituted respondent. Roberts v. Preston, 9 C. B. (N.S.) 208.

Service of Case and of Notice of Appeal.]—The sending notice, with a copy of the case, to the respondent, is a condition of the right to appeal. Woodhouse v. Wood, 29 L. J., M. C. 149; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 421; 1 L. T. 59.

Service upon the respondent of a copy of the case stated for the superior court is not sufficient notice of appeal under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, s. 2; notice in writing of the appeal should be given. Little v. Donnelly, Ir. R. 5 C. L. 1.

The notice of appeal, together with a copy of the case, must be given to the respondent before the case is transmitted to the superior court. Ashdown v. Curtis, 31 L. J., M. C. 216; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 511; 6 L. T. 331; 10 W. R. 667.

A case was delivered to an appellant on the 7th February. On the 8th he transmitted it to the crown office, and on the same day sent by post to the respondent a notice of appeal, with a copy of the case, which was received in due course of post on the 9th:—Held, that the notice of appeal, with a copy of the case, was given too late. Ib.

The respondent not being to be found, notice of appeal and a copy of the case were served on the attorney within three days after the appellant received the case, and they afterwards, and before hearing, came to his hand:—Held, a sufficient compliance with the statute. Syred v. Carruthers, El. Bl. & El. 469; 27 L. J., M. C. 273; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 949; 6 W. R. 595.

By s. 2 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1857 (20 & 21 Vict. c. 43), it is provided that "the appellant shall within three days after receiving such case transmit the same to the court named in his application, first giving notice of such appeal with a copy of the case . . . to . . . the respondent." The appellant entered a special case stated by justices under the above section, and on the following day sent a copy of the case and notice of appeal to the respondent:—Held, that the section had not been complied with, and that the case must be struck out. Edwards v. Roberts, 60 L. J., M. C. 6; [1891] 1 Q. B. 302; 55 J. P. 439.

Copy sent to Respondents' Solicitors and not to Respondents.]—An appeal from justices was brought by way of case stated. A copy of the case had been sent by the appellants to the respondents' solicitors, but not to the respondents themselves:—Held, that the provisions of s. 2 of 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43 (which requires that a copy of the case shall be sent to the respondent) had not been complied with, and that therefore the court could not hear the appeal. Hill v. Wright, 60 J. P. 312.

—— Waiver.]—By 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, the transmitting the case to the court, and the giving notice with a copy of the case to the respondent within the time named, are conditions precedent to the right of the appellant to have the case heard; and an objection arising from the omission to do so cannot be waived. Morgan v. Edwards, 5 H. & N. 415; 29 L. J., M. C. 108; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 379.

Transmission of Case.]—A party convicted by justices, on an information, applied to them for a case for a superior court. The case was delivered by the justices' clerk to the appellant's attorney on the 31st December, 1862, who gave notice of appeal and a copy to the opposite attorney; and on the 1st January, 1863, sent by post the original to his London agent, to be lodged in court. The London agent received the case the next day, but did not lodge it until the 10th:—Held, that the case had not been duly transmitted to the court. Banks v. Goodwin, 3 B. & S. 548; 32 L. J., M. C. 87; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 891; 7 L. T. 740; 11 W. R. 309.

After a case has been stated and signed by the justices, and delivered to the appellant, it becomes wholly inoperative, and no appeal can be had upon it, unless the appellant transmits it to the court within three days after he has received it from the justices. If after the expiration of the three days the case remains in the appellant's hands, and he takes it back to the justices, the justices have no power of amending it; and if they do so in fact, the appellant does not gain a further period of three days from the date of the amendment for transmitting the case to the court. Gloucester Local Board v. Chandler, 32 L. J., M. C. 66; 7 L. T. 723.

Sunday is to be included in the three days within which, after receiving a case, the appellant is to transmit it to the court named in his application. Pennell v. Uxbridge Overseers, 31 L. J., M. C. 92; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 99; 5 L. T. 685; 10 W. R. 319.

An appellant's London attorneys instructed a country attorney to appear for the appellant at the hearing before the justices in the country. The appellant himself applied to the justices to state and sign a case. A case being granted, it was sent to the country attorney:—Held, that the three days must be calculated from the time the country attorney received it. Ib.

An appellant having applied to justices to state a case, received the case from them on Good Friday, and transmitted it to the proper court on the following Wednesday:—Held, that, as the offices of the court were closed from Friday until Wednesday, the appellant had transmitted the case as soon as it was possible to do so, and therefore had sufficiently complied with the requirements of the statute, which directs that the case shall be transmitted by the appellant within three days after he has received it. Mayer v. Harding, 9 B. & S. 27, n.; L. R. 2 Q. B. 410; 16 L. T. 429; 15 W. R. 816.

A case stated by justices under s. 2 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1857, and s. 33 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, must, in order to satisfy the provisions of s. 2 of the former act, be lodged at the crown office within three days after its receipt by the appellant. Aspinall v. Sutton, 63 L. J., M. C. 205; [1894] 2 Q. B. 349; 10 R. 465; 58 J. P. 622.

Time of Delivery by Justices — Condition precedent.] — The appellant demanded from justices a special case under s. 33 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, on September 29. On getting a draft case, he asked for alterations, and, without any fault on his part, the case was not finally stated till February 19, when he duly lodged the case in the crown office. The respondents moved to strike out the case as it had not been stated within three months, pursuant to rule 18 of the Summary Jurisdiction Rules, 1886:—Held, that the three months for stating the case were not a condition precedent, but only directory, and the court had jurisdiction to hear the case. Hughes v. Wavertree Local Board, 58 J. P. 654.

Settling Case.]—Where it has been referred to the chairman at sessions to state a case, and a case has afterwards, on certiorari, been returned to the court by the clerk of the peace, purporting to be signed by the chairman, the court will not send it back to be restated, or quash the certiorari, on the ground of the chairman having said that he did not recollect signing the case, and upon a suggestion by the attorney for one of the litigating parties, in an affidavit, that such case does not agree with the facts proved, and that deponent believes the chairman did not settle the case. Rex v. Matlock, 5 B. & Ad. 883.

Special cases should be drawn by counsel. Rex v. Woolpit, 5 N. & M. 526; 1 H. & W. 483.

Form.]—The quarter sessions should state the conclusion of fact which they draw from the evidence, and not the evidence itself. Rex v. St. Cuthbert, Wells, 3 N. & M. 100; 5 B. & Ad. 939; 3 L. J., M. C. 35.

The court will entertain no objection to an order of sessions which upon the face of it does not appear to be necessarily bad, unless the particular facts are brought before the court by a special case. Rex v. Cottingham, 4 N. & M. 215; 2 A. & E. 250; 4 L. J., M. C. 65.

The sessions ought not to direct, that, in any particular event or mode suggested, the case shall be sent back to the sessions for final determination. Reg. v. Worth, 4 Q. B. 132; 3 G. & D. 376. S. P., Reg. v. Kesteven, JJ., 3 Q. B. 810; D. & M. 113; 1 New Sess. Cas. 151; 13 L. J., M. C. 78; Reg. v. Marton-cum-Grafton, 10 Q. B. 971; 16 L. J., M. C. 159.

The court refused to hear a case which concluded thus, "If the court shall be of opinion, &c., then the order to be confirmed; but if the court shall be of a contrary opinion, then the appeal to stand respited until the next sessions after the judgment of the court," because the sessions had at the same time asked the court to decide the case, and had reserved the power of afterwards deciding it themselves. Reg. v. Wistow, 1 G. & D. 681.

Justices ordered an appeal to be entered and respited subject to a case for the opinion of the Court of Queen's Bench. The case left for the decision of the court whether the sessions were right in making the order; if not, the appeal was to be struck out. The court refused to look at a case reserved on such an order, on the ground that its decision would not finally dispose of the appeal, and that a point not finally disposing of an appeal ought not in any form to be brought before the court on a case. Reg. v. L. & N. W. Ry., 43 L. J., M. C. 57; L. R. 9 Q. B. 153; 29 L. T. 840; 22 W. R. 324.

Where the quarter sessions, without hearing the merits, quashed a conviction under 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 106, s. 4, for a defect in form, subject to the opinion of the court upon the point of form:—Held, that the order quashing the conviction might be quashed, and the appeal sent down to be tried on the merits; although there was nothing on the face of the proceedings to shew that the conviction was quashed for form, or that the sessions desired the opinion of the court upon the point. Rex v. Ridgway, 1 D. & R. 132; 5 B. & Ald. 527.

The sessions ought to decide provisionally with reference to what the opinion of the court may be upon the question submitted to it. Reg. v. Stoke-upon-Trent, 13 L. J., M. C. 41; 8 Jur. 34.

The sessions ought not simply to state facts, and ask the opinion of the court, as a jury, upon them; but, having drawn their own conclusions from the facts, they may ask whether, in the opinion of the court, the facts will warrant their finding. Reg. v. Pilkington, 1 New Sess. Cas. 90; 13 L. J., M. C. 61; 8 Jur. 267.

But they should not ask questions with a view to a rehearing of the case. Reg. v. West Houghton, 13 L. J., M. C. 41; 8 Jur. 106.

Agreement for Entry of Judgment according to the Opinion of the Court.]—A case stated for the opinion of the Queen's Bench Division, under s. 11 of 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, should contain a statement of the agreement of the parties that judgment in conformity with the decision of the court may be entered at quarter sessions in the manner provided by the section. Peterborough Corporation v. Thurlby Overseers, 8 Q. B. D. 586.

Setting down Special Case—Practice as to.]—The practice as to setting down special cases stated by justices is the same as that in setting down demurrers under Ord. XXVII. r. 6; and if the special case is not set down for argument within ten days after it is lodged, it cannot afterwards be set down or appear in the list for argument. South Dublin Union v. Jones, 12 L. R., Ir. 358.

The proper place for the delivery of paper books is judges' chambers; and where a party delivered his paper books duly as regards the time for delivery, but unduly as regards the place (he delivering them to the judges' clerks at Westminster), the court visited him with the penalty inflicted by the rule, making him pay for the copies delivered in his default by the other side. Howells v. Wynne, 32 L. J., M. C. 241; 8 L. T. 577; 11 W. R. 807.

Hearing and Argument—Right to begin.]—On an appeal against the determination of justices, the party in support of the information or complaint is entitled to begin. Bennett v. Blackpool Local Board, 4 H. & N. 127; 28 L. J., M. C. 203. S. P., Shackell v. West, 29 L. J., M. C. 46, n.

The appellant begins in the Common Pleas, though it is otherwise in the Queen's Bench and Exchequer. Gardner v. Whitford, 4 C. B. (N.S.) 665.

By the practice of the Common Pleas (unlike that of the Queen's Bench and Exchequer), an appellant, upon the hearing a case stated, under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 11, is entitled to begin. Sheppard v. Bradford Overseers, 16 C. B. (N.S.) 369; 33 L. J., M. C. 182; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 799; 10 L. T. 421; 12 W. R. 867.

On an appeal against the decision of justices dismissing the complaint, the appellant begins. Ellis v. Kelly, 6 H. & N. 222; 30 L. J., M. C. 35; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1113; 3 L. T. 331. S. P., Jones v. Taylor, 1 El. & El. 20; 28 L. J., M. C. 204, n.

A case from quarter sessions comes before the Court of Queen's Bench on a rule to quash the order of sessions, and the party supporting the order of sessions, therefore, begins by shewing cause against the rule to quash. Reg. v. Whitby Union, 39 L. J., M. C. 97; L. R. 5 Q. B. 325; 22 L. T. 336; 18 W. R. 785.

Where a case is stated under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 11, and argued on concilium, the counsel supporting the order of the magistrates is entitled to begin and reply. Reg. v. Holbeck, 16 Q. B. 404; 15 Jur. 271, n.

The parties supporting the affirmative are entitled to begin. Bedford Union v. Bedford Improvement Commissioners, 7 Ex. 777; 21 L. J., M. C. 224.

But the party supporting the order complained of is not entitled to reply. Wigton Overseers v. Snaith Overseers, 16 Q. B. 496.

In cases stated under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, the respondent is to begin. Crick v. Crick, 6 W. R. 594.

Hearing Counsel.]—The court refuses to hear more than one counsel upon either side. Bedfordshire JJ. v. St. Paul, Bedford, 7 Ex. 650.

Upon the argument of a case stated by justices, one counsel only is heard on each side, except when the case is stated upon an order of sessions, when it is brought before the court on an order nisi to quash. Spurling v. Bantoft, 60 L. J., Q. B. 745; [1891] 2 Q. B. 384; 65 L. T. 584; 40 W. R. 157; 17 Cox, C. C. 372; 56 J. P. 132.

—— Counsel appearing for Justices.]—The justices have no right to be heard in support of their decision, upon the argument of a case stated by them for the opinion of the court under the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict. c. 49). Smith v. Butler, 16 Q. B. D. 349; 34 W. R. 416.

—— Absence of Respondent.]—If an appellant, within three days of his obtaining the case from the justice, seeks to find the respondent, but cannot do so, and within such three days gives notice to the attorney who represented the respondent before the magistrate, and after the expiration of the three days gives notice to the respondent, who does not object, under such circumstances, the court will hear the appellant, though the respondent does not appear. Syred v. Carruthers, El. Bl. & El. 469; 27 L. J., M. C. 273; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 949; 6 W. R. 595.

—— On what Points.]—The court will hear and determine questions of law arising on the facts stated by justices under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, s. 6, although they were not taken before the justices, or expressly reserved for the consideration of the court. Knight v. Halliwell, 43 L. J., M. C. 113; L. R. 9 Q. B. 412; 30 L. T. 359; 22 W. R. 689.

The court will not enter into a discussion of the facts on which the quarter sessions have arrived at a conclusion on a question of mere fact. Rex v. St. Columb Minor, 6 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 18.

Points of law not raised before the justices may be considered by the court on a case stated. Karanagh v. Glorney, Ir. R. 10 C. L. 210.

Upon the argument of an appeal from justices, no point can be argued which was not taken before them. Marshall v. Smith, 42 L. J., M. C. 108; L. R. 8 C. P. 416; 28 L. T. 538.

The court has no power to give an opinion on a question asked by the parties to a case, but which the magistrates, by whom the case is stated, have not submitted for the opinion of the court. St. James, Westminster v. St. Mary, Battersea, 6 C. B. (N.S.) 878; 29 L. J., M. C. 26; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 100.

The duty of the court is simply to answer the question of law put to them by the magistrates. Buckmaster v. Reynolds, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 63.

Where certain persons were summoned at petty sessions for maliciously injuring a dwelling-house, and the magistrates deeming the injury trifling, proceeded to deal with the case in a summary manner, although no regular complainant appeared on the summons, and it was not proved that the injury was less than 5*l.*, that being the extreme amount of injury with which the magistrates had power to deal in a summary manner:—It was held, that the defendants not having raised the objection to the magistrate's want of jurisdiction in the court below, the conviction was good, and should not be reversed. Reg. v. Galway JJ., 14 Cox, C. C. 386.

No objection can be relied upon which was not taken before the justices. Motteram v. Eastern Counties Ry., 7 C. B. (N.S.) 58. S. P., Purkis v. Huxtable, 1 El. & El. 780; 28 L. J., M. C. 221; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 790.

When a case had been granted, and the case and certain orders set out therein, and the order of sessions had been brought up by certiorari, the court would not entertain any objection, although it went to the jurisdiction of such orders, which was not raised by the case itself. Reg. v. Heyop, 2 New Sess. Cas. 270: 15 L. J., M. C. 70. S. P., Reg. v. Hartpury, 2 New Sess. Cas. 648; 8 Q. B. 566; 16 L. J., Q. B. 105.

The party at whose instance the case is granted must either proceed with the case received, waiving any other objections to the order of removal, or must abandon the case, and rely on any other objections which may be raised when the order is brought up by certiorari. Reg. v. St. Anne's, Westminster, 2 New Sess. Cas. 517; 8 Q. B. 561; 16 L. J., M. C. 33.

Where fraud is not expressly found by the sessions, the court cannot infer it from any state of facts. Rex v. Llanfihangel-Abercowin, 4 N. & M. 355.

On the argument of the case, it is too late to object, that the order brought up varies from the order required by the certiorari. Reg. v. Fordham, 3 P. & D. 95; 11 A. & E. 73; 9 L. J., M. C. 3.

—— Question of Fact.]—The question whether a person has been guilty of "behaving in a riotous or indecent manner" within the meaning of s. 3 of the Vagrant Act (5 Geo. 4, c. 83), is a question of fact for the justices to determine, and when the justices in quarter sessions have determined the same no appeal lies to the high court. Bonner v. Lushington, 5 R. 180; 68 L. T. 91; 57 J. P. 168.

Sending back Case.]—Where justices omitted to set out a material document, which, as appeared by affidavit, was in evidence before them, the court sent the case back to them for amendment, before the case came on for argument. Yorkshire Tyre and Axle Co. v. Rotherham Local Board, 4 C. B. (N.S.) 362; 27 L. J., C. P. 235; 6 W. R. 443.

The court will not, before argument, send the case to be amended on the ground that it is defectively stated. Christie v. St. Luke, Chelsea, Union, 8 El. & Bl. 992; 27 L. J., M. C. 153; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 734, n.; 6 W. R. 261.

The court will not, on a mere suggestion by an appellant at the argument that there has been misconduct or negligence in drawing a case, send it back to be restated or amended. Townsend v. Read, 10 C. B. (N.S.) 308; 30 L. J., M. C. 223; 4 L. T. 447; 9 W. R. 659.

When justices have deliberately and advisedly adjudicated upon a case before them at petty sessions, the court will not, in exercise of the jurisdiction conferred by the 12 Vict. c. 16, s. 5, send the case back to them, to rehear and determine it. Reg. v. Dublin JJ., Ir. R. 5 C. L. 548.

The justices having, in a case stated by them, omitted inadvertently to set out some documentary evidence which was shewn to have been read before them, the court, on motion, previously to the argument, sent the case back to them to be amended, although no application had been made to the justices to amend. Unkles v. Att.-Gen., Ir. R. 7 C. L. 462.

Where the facts were such as to render it almost certain that the decision of the justices must have proceeded on the ground of fraud, the court sent back the case to be amended. Rex v. Llanfihangel-Abercowin, 4 N. & M. 355.

The court will not send a case down to the sessions to be restated, on a mere formal objection, if enough appears to enable them to decide according to the merits of the case. Rex v. Middlezoy, 2 Term Rep. 41.

—— Duty of Sessions.]—A case sent back to the sessions to be restated must be reheard; and the sessions may receive further evidence, and make a new order on such rehearing. Rex v. Bloxam, 1 A. & E. 386; 3 N. & M. 385; 3 L. J., M. C. 115.

When an order of justices has been quashed on appeal, subject to a case, and the court directs the case to be restated, the sessions have no jurisdiction to hear evidence thereon, or to confirm or quash the order without a notice by one of the parties to the other of an intention to proceed at such sessions, which notice may in such a case be given by the respondents. Reg. v. Barnes, 2 G. & D. 233; 3 Q. B. 437; 6 Jur. 945.

Decision.]—If there is any evidence tending to prove an offence over which a magistrate has a summary jurisdiction by conviction, the court cannot judge of the degree of it, or control the determination of the magistrate upon that evidence. Rex v. Davis, 6 Term Rep. 177.

And if justices of the peace acquit a person against whom an information is laid before them for a penalty, the court cannot reverse the judgment, though the justices state (on a return to a certiorari to remove the proceedings) evidence which, primâ facie, is sufficient to convict, and no contradictory or explanatory circumstances. Rex v. Reason, 6 Term Rep. 375.

The court, however, will not, in such a case, grant costs in obtaining a rule to state a case. Ib.

On an appeal against a conviction under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, there being no evidence set forth by the case to support the conviction, it was held that the court had power to quash it. Watkin v. Fenwick, 7 W. R. 16.

If the facts in a case stated under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43 reasonably warrant the inference that an offence has been committed, the court will not set aside a conviction for such offence although if stated in a special verdict the facts would not support a conviction. Blackpool Local Board v. Fenwick, 4 H. & N. 127; 7 W. R. 382.

—— Power to amend Order.]—On a case stated, by justices who made an order against a pawnbroker, for refusing to deliver up a pledge, the court declined to exercise a power to amend the order, because it would deprive the pawnbroker of his right to appeal to the quarter sessions. Shackell v. West, 2 El. & El. 326; 29 L. J., M. C. 45; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 95; 1 L. T. 28; 8 W. R. 22.

—— Power to reduce Penalty.]—The high court of justice has no power under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, s. 6, to reduce a penalty on a case stated by justices. Evans v. Hemingway, 52 J. P. 134.

A sentence, depending upon time, passed for a period longer than the law authorises, cannot be reduced so as to carry it into effect for the prescribed legal time, it must be reversed. Rex v. Ellis, 5 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 3.

—— Form of.]—The form of judgment on a case sent from sessions is simply to make absolute or discharge the rule for quashing the order of sessions; but, if the rule is discharged, the effect of the judgment is to confirm the order of sessions, and to fix the costs on the party bringing up the case, under 5 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 2. Reg. v. Latchford, D. & M. 290; 6 Q. B. 567; 8 Jur. 1094.

—— Finality of.]—The 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, s. 6, enacts that the decision of the superior court on the question of law raised by a special case stated by justices "shall be final and conclusive on all parties":—Held, that, notwithstanding these words, the Irish court of chancery had jurisdiction to order the party, at whose instance the special case had been stated, to declare in prohibition. Devonshire (Duke), In re, 3 Ir. Eq. R. 412.

Appeal to Court of Appeal—Case stated by Quarter Sessions,]—Where the queen's bench division in the exercise of its original common law jurisdiction affirms or quashes an order of sessions an appeal lies to the court of appeal, although no leave to appeal be given. Reg. v. Savin, 6 Q. B. D. 309; 29 W. R. 638—C. A.

An appeal lies from the judgment of the queen's bench division on a case stated for its opinion by a court of quarter sessions. Walsall Overseers v. L. & N.-W. Ry., 48 L. J., M. C. 65; 4 App. Cas. 30; 39 L. T. 453; 27 W. R. 189.

—— Costs — Jurisdiction.]—The practice in proceedings on the crown side of the queen's bench division is unaltered by the Judicature Act, 1890, and there is, therefore, no power to give costs to a successful appellant in a case stated by quarter sessions. London County Council v. Woolwich Union, [1893] 1 Q. B. 210; 57 J. P. 292—C. A. See London County Council v. West Ham (No. 2), 61 L. J., M. C. 210; [1892] 2 Q. B. 173; 67 L. T. 363; 40 W. R. 662; 56 J. P. 662—C. A. See also Otter v. Edgley, 57 J. P. 457.

—— Case stated by Petty Sessions.] — The court of appeal has no jurisdiction to hear an appeal from a decision of the high court of justice upon a case stated by justices as to an information for contravening the by-laws of a school constituted under the Elementary Education Act, 1874. Mellor v. Denham, 49 L. J., M. C. 89; 5 Q. B. D. 467; 42 L. T. 493; 44 J. P. 472.

An appeal lies to the court of appeal from the judgment of the queen's bench division upon a special case stated under s. 33 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, in proceedings before justices for the non-repair of a highway. Loughborough Highway Board v. Curzon, 17 Q. B. D. 344; 55 L. T. 50; 50 J. P. 788—C. A.

And see APPEAL—TO THE COURT OF APPEAL—CRIMINAL LAW—ERROR AND APPEAL.

Costs.]—Where justices of petty sessions have stated a case, the divisional court upon the hearing does not give to the successful party the costs before the justices. Slaughter v. Sunderland Corporation, 55 J. P. 519.

—— Of Appellant.]—When upon a case stated, a conviction is quashed, the court has jurisdiction to award costs to the appellant. Walsh v. Reg., 16 Cox, C. C. 435.

Quære as to the effect of a superior court deciding in favour of the appellant on a case stated under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, when the appellant was the complainant below, and the justices dismissed his complaint. Potter v. Berry, 6 W. R. 71.

—— Respondent not appearing.] — If the respondent does not appear costs are not given to the appellant. Lee v. Strain, 28 L. J., M. C. 221; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 846; 7 W. R. 432.

The respondent did not appear upon the argument. The court decided in favour of the appellant:—Held, without laying down any general rule, but qualifying the decision in Lee v. Strain (supra), that the appellant was entitled to the costs of the appeal. Wednesbury Local Board v. Stephenson, 33 L. J., M. C. 111; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 151; 9 L. T. 731; 12 W. R. 414.

—— Laches.]—The court will not entertain an application for the costs of an appeal in the term after that in which judgment is pronounced. Burdenberg v. Roberts, L. R. 2 C. P. 292.

Semble, that application for costs should be made immediately upon the disposal of the case. Ib.

In an appeal under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, from a decision of justices, the court gave judgment for the appellant with costs. Four terms afterwards the successful appellant applied to the court to amend, by allowing him the costs of the proceedings in the court below:—Held, that the application was too late. Cook v. Montague, 28 L. T. 494; 21 W. R. 670.

—— Of Respondent.]—The statute 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, s. 6, does not give the court power to award costs to the justices. Luton Local Board v. Davis, 2 El. & El. 678; 29 L. J., M. C. 173; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 580.

The court will not give a respondent costs on dismissing an appeal, where the question is fairly arguable. Caswell v. Cook, 12 C. B. (N.S.) 242.

Where the effect of an order is to decide that an appeal is not properly before the court, costs cannot be given against the appellant. Little v. Donnelly, Ir. R. 5 C. L. 1.

—— Excise Officer.]—On appeal against a conviction of the appellant by two justices on an information laid before them by an officer of the excise, on behalf of the crown for an offence under one of the excise acts:—Held, that the court, on confirming the conviction, had jurisdiction to award costs to the officer, as the statute includes cases in which the crown is, directly or indirectly, a party. Moore v. Smith, 1 El. & El. 597; 28 L. J., M. C. 126; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 892; 7 W. R. 206. See Reg. v. Beadle, 7 El. & Bl. 492; 26 L. J., M. C. 111; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 863; 5 W. R. 498.

—— When Case not Lodged.]—When an appellant has neglected to lodge a case stated by justices within the time specified by 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, s. 2, the court has power to grant the costs of a rule to shew cause why it should not be struck out from the list. G. N. and L. & N.-W. Joint Committee v. Inett, 46 L. J., M. C. 237; 2 Q. B. D. 284; 25 W. R. 584.

—— On Objection not raised below.]—Where a conviction was quashed upon an objection which was not brought to the notice of the magistrates, costs were not given to the successful party. Stinson v. Browning, 1 H. & R. 263; 35 L. J., M. C. 152; L. R. 1 C. P. 321; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 262; 13 L. T. 799; 14 W. R. 395. And see Markham, Ex parte, 21 L. T. 748; 18 W. R. 258.

—— To follow the Event.]—The quarter sessions, on appeal, quashed an order made against the defendant by the petty sessions, subject to a case for the consideration of the queen's bench division, and further ordered that the costs of the appeal then before it should abide the event of the decision of that court. The case, which was dated and signed by the chairman of the quarter sessions, after stating the question submitted to the queen's bench division, contained (inter alia) the following clause: "The court are . . . in all respects to exercise the power of the sessions to confirm, amend, alter, vary, modify, or reverse their decision in such manner and to such extent as to such court shall seem expedient and proper; costs to follow the event." At the hearing of the case, the queen's bench division quashed the order of the quarter sessions, but the judgment was silent as to costs. In an action brought to recover the costs incurred in the argument of the case, and also the costs of certain applications made to the quarter sessions from time to time until the judgment of the queen's bench division in the plaintiff's favour was obtained:—Held, that the words "costs to follow the event" referred, and were intended to refer, to costs such as were claimed by the plaintiff in the action. Lear v. Botting, 44 L. T. 58; 45 J. P. 240.

Held, also, that these words, although contained in a case stated and signed only by the chairman of the quarter sessions, amounted to an agreement which was binding on the parties to the case, and that the defendant was therefore liable to pay the costs so incurred. Ib.

Where points are raised in favour of both sides, and the court confirms the order of sessions, and decides against all the points raised, neither party is entitled to costs, under 5 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 2. Reg. v. Southampton Dock Co., 17 Q. B. 83; 20 L. J., M. C. 228; 15 Jur. 859.

—— Against Prosecutor.]—On an appeal against a conviction by justices, the court quashed the conviction:—Held, that the costs were to be paid by the party prosecuting. Venables v. Hardman, 1 El. & El. 79; 28 L. J., M. C. 33; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1108.

—— Against Justices—Ordinary Rule.]—The usual practice is not to give costs against the justices on a case stated by quarter sessions on appeal from the petty sessions. Reg. v. Abergavenny Union, 29 W. R. 304.

—— Between Party and Party.]—Where a case is stated for the opinion of a superior court, under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 11, the practice is to give costs as between party and party. Clarendon (Earl) v. St. James, Westminster (Rector), 10 C. B. 806; 20 L. J., M. C. 213; 15 Jur. 492.

—— Appeal against Poor-rate.]—Where a case is stated by sessions upon appeal against a poor-rate, the proceeding is a civil proceeding on the crown side of the queen's bench division, within the Rules of 1880, Ord. LXII. r. 2, and the costs are in the discretion of the court under Ord. LV. Clark v. Fisherton-Angar Overseers or Alderbury Union, 50 L. J., M. C. 33; 6 Q. B. D. 139; 29 W. R. 334; 45 J. P. 358.

Where, upon a case reserved on a poor-rate appeal, the order of quarter sessions is quashed, there is no power to give the successful party costs. London County Council v. West Ham Churchwardens (No. 2) ([1892] 2 Q. B. 173) followed. Halkyn District Mines Drainage Co. v. Holywell Union, 9 R. 779; 69 L. T. 705—C. A. See 57 & 58 Vict. c. 16, s. 2.

—— Against Convictions.]—Ord. LVII. does not enable the court to give costs in criminal proceedings on the crown side of the queen's bench division on appeal from sessions. So that where the appeal was from a conviction under the Weights and Measures Act, the court was unable to make any order as to costs. Reg. v. Baxendale, 50 L. J., M. C. 35, n.; 6 Q. B. D. 144, n.; 29 W. R. 335.

—— Rule not mentioning.]—A rule calling on justices to shew cause why a case should not be stated was made absolute, nothing being said about costs:—Held, that the party applying was not entitled to costs on taxing the costs of the case. Wakefield Local Board v. West Riding and Grimsby Ry., 6 B. & S. 794.

—— Case sent back and amended.]—A case was sent back to be restated, and ultimately judgment was given for the appellant, with costs. The master allowed to the appellant the costs of preparing the case beyond the fees allowed to the clerk of the justices by s. 3, and schedule (A.), and also the costs of amending the case:—Held, that the taxation was right. Glover v. Booth, 2 B. & S. 807; 31 L. J., M. C. 270; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 76.

Appeal from Conviction at Quarter Sessions.]—See CRIMINAL LAW (CROWN CASES RESERVED).

2. To Quarter Sessions.

a. What Sessions.

In Middlesex.]—The justices of Middlesex, in addition to the four quarter and four general sessions which they had been in the habit of holding, appointed other original intermediate sessions:—Held, that they had a right so to do. Rex v. Mullaney, 6 Car. & P. 96.

The 7 & 8 Vict. c. 71, s. 2, enacts that the adjourned sessions in Middlesex "shall be general sessions of the peace," and "shall have power to try and determine all appeals, and all other powers which" "belong to the general quarter sessions":—Held, that the jurisdiction thus given was optional only, and that a putative father was not bound to appeal to those sessions, but might wait and appeal to the general quarter sessions. Reg. v. Middlesex JJ., 5 D. & L. 580; 17 L. J., M. C. 111.

In London and Middlesex (which have four general and four quarter sessions), an appeal against an order of removal must be to the quarter sessions. Reg. v. Middlesex JJ., 4 Q. B. 807; 12 L. J., M. C. 134; 7 Jur. 669.

In Boroughs—Separate Court of Quarter Sessions.]—When a pauper becomes chargeable in union, which includes a borough having a separate court of quarter sessions, the guardians may obtain an order for the removal of such pauper to his place of settlement from the justices of the borough, although the particular parish from which he is to be removed is not within the borough, and, in such case, the proper tribunal to hear an appeal against the order is the quarter sessions for the borough, and not the quarter sessions for the county. Reg. v. Staffordshire JJ., 41 L. J., M. C. 78; L. R. 7 Q. B. 288; 25 L. T. 829; 20 W. R. 366.

Where a separate court of quarter sessions has been granted to a borough under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, the recorder, under s. 105, has, in such court, exclusive jurisdiction of appeals against orders of removal made by the borough justices. Reg. v. Suffolk JJ., 2 Q. B. 85; 10 L. J., M. C. 138. S. P., Reg. v. St. Edmund's, Salisbury, 2 Q. B. 72; 1 G. & D. 137.

An order was made by two justices of the borough of B., which is a borough having its own court of quarter sessions, adjudging the settlement of a lunatic pauper to be in the parish of A., the order being obtained by the churchwardens and overseers of the parish of B.:—Held, that an appeal against the order lay under 16 & 17 Vict. c. 97, s. 108, to the quarter sessions of the county in which the borough was situated. Reg. v. Warwickshire JJ., 7 W. R. 529.

The parish of R. was subject to the jurisdiction of quarter sessions of S., but not to those of the county in which it was situate. In 1878 R., with a part of the county called the "added area," was put under commissioners for paving, &c., by a local act, which provided that if a charter were granted to the whole district, the quarter sessions of S. should have jurisdiction over the "added area," and that the "added area" should cease to be liable to county rates. In 1884 a charter was granted, which incorporated the whole district, as the borough of R.:—Held, that the borough of R. was a borough having a separate court of quarter sessions, and that the "added area" was no longer liable to county rates. A separate court of quarter sessions in s. 150 of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, means a court separate from that of the county. St. Lawrence Overseers v. Kent JJ., 51 J. P. 262.

The court of queen's bench have not the power of ordering an appeal against an order of removal to be heard at the sessions of a county next adjoining a city and county of itself, even though all the justices of the latter are interested in the event of the appeal. Rex v. Kent JJ., 5 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 45.

Date.]—The 54 Geo. 3, c. 84, which enacts that the Michaelmas quarter sessions shall be holden in the week after the 11th of October, is merely directory, and those sessions may be legally holden at another time. Rex v. Leicester JJ., 5 D. & R. 772; 7 B. & C. 6; 5 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 95; 31 R. R. 135.

Next Practicable Sessions.]—See cases, post, col. 652.

Presumption as to Intervening Sessions.]—If a court of general quarter sessions, next after an order of bastardy, quashes the order, the court will not intend that a court of general sessions intervened; and unless that appears, the order of sessions will be confirmed. Rex v. Chichester, 3 Term Rep. 496.

Order Altering Arrangement of Parishes.]—Where an order for altering the arrangement of the parishes, townships, &c., of any county for the convenience of holding special sessions, has been made under 9 Geo. 4, c. 43, ss. 2, 4, there is no appeal against it; ss. 8 and 9 apply to orders made under the authority of s. 7 only. Rex v. Derbyshire JJ., 1 D. P. C. 386.

b. Who may Appeal.

Assessment Committee may Appeal in Name of Guardians.]—The assessment committee for the parish of N. raised the gross estimated rental and ratable value of certain property, and, having heard the objection of the occupier, decided against him. The occupier then appealed to the special sessions, under 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96, s. 6, and, at the hearing, the assessment committee appeared as respondents in the name of the guardians, as provided by 27 & 28 Vict. c. 39, s. 2. The justices at special sessions reduced the gross estimated rental and the rateable value of the property. The assessment committee then gave notice of appeal, in the name of the guardians, to the next general quarter sessions, when the justices refused to hear the appeal, on the ground that the assessment committee had no right of appeal:—Held, that the assessment committee had a right to appeal, such right of appeal being one of the "incidents" of other appeals within the words of 27 & 28 Vict. c. 39, s. 2. Llanidloes and Newtown Union v. Price Jones, or Reg. v. Montgomeryshire JJ., 50 L. J., M. C. 52; 44 L. T. 310; 29 W. R. 806; 45 J. P. 407.

"Party Aggrieved."]—By an improvement act an appeal to the quarter sessions was given to any person who should think himself aggrieved by any order made by virtue of the act. At a meeting of the owners of property to consider an application to parliament for an act for the purpose of a better supply of water for the town, the chairman stated that the expenses of such application could not be charged on the rates under the improvement act; but a resolution was passed, in which A. concurred, empowering the commissioners, out of the town's funds, to prosecute such application. An order was afterwards made by the commissioners on the treasurer for the payment of certain sums of money for expenses incurred in such application:—Held, that A. was not a party aggrieved within the act, and therefore could not appeal against the order. Harrop v. Bayley, 6 El. & Bl. 218; 25 L. J., M. C. 107; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 882; 4 W. R. 461.

Any rated inhabitant of the parish to which an order of removal is made may as a party aggrieved appeal against the order under 13 & 14 Car. 2, c. 12, s. 2, and 3 W. & M. c. 18, s. 9. Rex v. Denbighshire JJ., 9 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 109.

Neglect to repair Highway—Order for Expenses.]—A complaint having been made to justices that certain roads alleged to be highways under the jurisdiction of a highway board were out of repair, a summons was issued against such board. Upon the hearing, a land surveyor was appointed to view and report on the state of the roads in question. The report was duly made, and the justices, upon the evidence and admissions before them, ordered the highway board to do the repairs. The highway board neglected to obey this order; and the justices appointed such land surveyor to put the highway in repair, and ordered the board to pay the expenses. At several hearings before the justices the highway board never denied that they were liable to repair the roads in question. The board appealed to quarter sessions against the order upon them for the expenses of repairing the roads. The following were the grounds of appeal:—"1. That the said justices had no jurisdiction to make the said order. 2. That the said order is contrary to law. 3. That the said order is contrary to the evidence. 4. That the justices wrongfully admitted evidence of witnesses other than the person appointed by them under s. 18 of 25 & 26 Vict. c. 61. 5. That at the time of the making of the said order the said highways had been put into a state of complete and effectual repair. 6. That the sum mentioned in the said order to be spent in putting the said roads into repair is excessive. 7. That the said highway board was and is not liable to repair the said highways, and that the liability to repair the said highways was at all the hearings before the said justices recited in the said order, and also at the time of the hearing when the said order was made, and at the time of the making thereof, disputed." Upon the appeal it was contended on behalf of the board that the roads in question were not highways, and the order was quashed on that ground:—Held, that the highway board were entitled to appeal to quarter sessions against the order, but were not entitled on the appeal to raise the question whether the roads were highways—(1) because they were estopped by their admissions before the justices: (2) because their grounds of appeal gave no notice that the point would be taken; and (3) because the question was not open to them when the order appealed against was made. Illingworth v. Bulmer East Highway Board, 52 L. J., Q. B. 680; 48 J. P. 37.

Held, also, that the quarter sessions, by deciding the question, did not thereby necessarily decide that it was open to the highway board to raise it. Ib.

Right of Appeal—Notwithstanding certain Admissions.]—The fact that the appellant, when charged, admitted an act of assault, but asked for the charge to be heard on the ground of mitigating circumstances, is not a simple plea of guilty, debarring him from the right of appeal given under s. 19 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879. Reg. v. Essex JJ., Stark, Ex parte, 61 L. J., M. C. 120.

Summary Conviction of Consenting Adult—Imprisonment without option of Fine.]—Where under s. 12 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, an adult consents to be dealt with summarily by a court of summary jurisdiction, and is convicted and adjudged to be imprisoned without the option of a fine, there is no appeal under s. 19 of the act to quarter sessions against such conviction. Reg. v. London JJ., Lambert, Ex parte, 61 L. J., M. C. 104; [1892] 1 Q. B. 664; 66 L. T. 678; 40 W. R. 575; 17 Cox, C. C. 526; 56 J. P. 421.

c. In what Cases.

Refusal of Guardians to determine.]—By a local act, the management of the poor was vested in the churchwardens, overseers, governors and directors of the poor, and an appeal to them was given to any person thinking himself aggrieved by anything to be done by virtue of the act; and if the appellant should be dissatisfied with their determination, then appeal was given to the quarter sessions. A parishioner, having applied for relief against a rate to the churchwardens, overseers, governors and directors, they, at a meeting, resolved to take no further notice of his application:—Held, that, as they had not come to any determination on the subject-matter of his complaint, the parishioner could not appeal to the quarter sessions, but that he ought first to have applied for a mandamus to compel the churchwardens, overseers, governors and directors to hear the appeal. Rex v. Kent JJ., 9 B. & C. 283.

Within Limited Time.]—Guardians and directors of the poor were incorporated by statute, and were ordered to hold certain courts and meetings, at which any ratepayer might object to their proceedings or accounts, and such objection should be taken into consideration; and if the matter could not at that time be settled to the satisfaction of the complaining party, it should be adjourned to the next court, to be there finally heard and determined. A subsequent clause provided that any person aggrieved by anything done in pursuance of the act, and for which no particular method of relief was already appointed, might appeal to the quarter sessions to be holden within four calendar months next after the cause of complaint should have arisen. A ratepayer appealed to the sessions against an order of the directors for the payment of sums due on annuities, and as interest on loans. The order had been made less than four months back, but the debts had not been incurred, nor the annuities granted within four months:—Held, that the appellant was not confined to the remedy pointed out by the first-mentioned clause of the act, and that the cause of complaint had arisen within four months. Rex v. Salop JJ., 2 B. & Ad. 145; 9 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 111.

Amount of Penalty.]—The 12 & 13 Vict. c. 92, s. 14, enacts that, a party convicted by a justice under the act shall pay such penalty, damage or compensation, as the justice shall adjudge, order or award, together with the costs of conviction, to be settled by such justice; and s. 25 gives an appeal to quarter sessions in all cases where the sum adjudged to be paid on any conviction shall exceed 2*l.*:—Held, that this gives an appeal only where the sum adjudged to be paid as penalty, damage, or compensation, exclusive of the costs, exceeds 2*l.* Reg. v. Warwickshire JJ., 6 El. & Bl. 837; 25 L. J., M. C. 119; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 930; 4 W. R. 650.

Licences.]—No appeal lies against a refusal by justices to grant a billiard licence under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 109, s. 10. Chamberlain, Ex parte, 8 El. & Bl. 644; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 477; 6 W. R. 75.

And see INTOXICATING LIQUORS.

Demolition of Building.]—An appeal to quarter sessions will not lie against the order of a justice directing the demolition of buildings under s. 75 of the Metropolis Local Management Amendment Act, 1862. By s. 231 of the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855, any person aggrieved by any adjudication of a justice "with respect to any penalty or forfeiture under the provisions of the act" may appeal to quarter sessions. By s. 75 of the Metropolis Local Management Amendment Act, 1862 (which, by s. 110, is to be construed as one act with the act of 1855), where a building is erected beyond the general lines of building in a street without the consent of the Metropolitan Board of Works, a justice of the peace is empowered, upon complaint made and after inquiry held as the act directs, to order the owner or occupier to demolish the building, and in default of compliance with the order, the vestry of the parish or board of works for the district shall demolish the building, and may remove and sell the materials, and recover the expenses of so doing from the owner or occupier:—Held, that the order of a justice directing the demolition of a building under s. 75 of the act of 1862, was not an adjudication "with respect to a penalty or forfeiture" within s. 231 of the act of 1855, and therefore that no appeal to quarter sessions would lie against the order. Reg. v. Middlesex JJ., Elsdon, Ex parte, 51 L. J., M. C. 94; 9 Q. B. D. 41; 30 W. R. 657; 46 J. P. 551.

Bastardy.]—An appeal against an order in bastardy may be brought, either on the conditions prescribed by the bastardy acts or on those prescribed by the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879. Sect. 54 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, in applying that act to "an appeal from an order in bastardy," amongst other things, does not apply the appeal sections of that act exclusively of previously existing appeal sections in the bastardy acts, but applies the act generally to orders in bastardy, so as to remove doubts whether they are "orders or convictions." Reg. v. Montgomeryshire JJ., 51 L. J., M. C. 95; 46 J. P. 517.

d. Notice of Appeal.

Time for.]—By the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 48, a court of summary jurisdiction may, under certain circumstances, order the local authority to cleanse offensive ditches and execute permanent or structural works. By s. 269, where any person deems himself aggrieved by any rate made under the provisions of the act, or by any order, conviction, judgment or determination of or by any matter or thing done by any court of summary jurisdiction, he may appeal, subject to the conditions following: 1. The appeal shall be made to the next court of quarter sessions for the county, division, or place in which the cause of appeal has arisen, holden not less than twenty-one days after the demand of the rate or the decision of the court from which the appeal is made. 2. The appellant shall, within fourteen days after the cause of appeal has arisen, give notice to the other party, and to the authority or court of summary jurisdiction by whose act he deems himself aggrieved, of his intention to appeal. An order was made on the appellants under s. 48 on the 6th of September, and served on them on the 24th. They, on the 2nd of October, served on the respondents notice of appeal to the sessions:—Held, that the time for notice of appeal ran from the date of the decision, and not from the service of the order of justices; and, consequently, that the notice was too late. Reg. v. Barnet Rural Sanitary Authority, 45 L. J., M. C. 105; 1 Q. B. D. 558; 35 L. T. 362.

Where a statute empowers justices, on information laid at a special sessions, to make orders on specified parties for the payment of money, notice of the intended information being first given to such parties, and empowers them to appeal, giving notice of such appeal, "within six days after such order" shall be made or given, the time for notice of appeal runs from the making of the order, not from the service. Reg. v. Derbyshire JJ., 7 Q. B. 193; 1 New Sess. Cas. 645; 14 L. J., M. C. 84; 9 Jur. 551.

Fraudulent Removal of Goods.]—An appeal from an order of justices under 11 Geo. 2, c. 19, ss. 4, 5, by a person adjudged guilty of fraudulently removing goods to prevent a distress, is subject to the conditions and regulations prescribed in the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict. c. 49), s. 31, sub-s. 2, and s. 32, and therefore notice of appeal must be given within seven days after the decision appealed against. Reg. v. Shropshire JJ., 50 L. J., M. C. 72; 6 Q. B. D. 669; 29 W. R. 567.

Removal of Pauper.]—By 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 35, orders for the removal of paupers are excepted from the provisions of that act, and therefore the seven days' notice of appeal prescribed by s. 31 of 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49 (which by s. 54 is to be construed as one with 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, and by 47 & 48 Vict. c. 43, s. 6, is made applicable to appeals from convictions or orders made in pursuance of the Summary Jurisdiction Acts), is not required on an appeal against an order of removal. Reg. v. Somersetshire JJ., 58 L. J., M. C. 155; 22 Q. B. D. 625; 60 L. T. 834; 37 W. R. 492; 53 J. P. 470.

Excise Law—Appeal from Conviction.]—The act of 1827 for consolidating and amending the excise laws (7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 53), s. 83, required notice of appeal from a conviction under that act to be given "at and immediately upon the giving of the judgment appealed against." By the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict. c. 49), s. 31, persons authorised to appeal from a court of summary jurisdiction may appeal subject to the condition of giving notice of appeal, if no time is prescribed, within seven days after the day of the decision.—By the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1884 (48 & 49 Vict. c. 43), s. 6, a person authorised to appeal by any act before the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, from a conviction or order of a court of summary jurisdiction made in pursuance of the Summary Jurisdiction Acts, shall appeal subject to the conditions and regulations contained in the act of 1879.—A person convicted of an offence against the excise laws gave notice of appeal four days after the decision:—Held, making absolute a rule for a mandamus to justices to hear the appeal, that the effect of the summary jurisdiction acts was to repeal by implication the provision requiring notice of appeal at and immediately upon the giving of the judgment, and therefore no time was prescribed within the meaning of s. 31 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, so that by that section the time was seven days, and the notice given was sufficient. Reg. v. Glamorganshire JJ., 58 L. J., M. C. 93; 22 Q. B. D. 628; 60 L. T. 536; 37 W. R. 493; 16 Cox, C. C. 593; 53 J. P. 294.

Next practicable Quarter Sessions.]—The true meaning of appealing to the "next sessions" is the next sessions at which, according to the practice of the particular sessions, a notice of trial can be given to try at that sessions. Rex v. Southampton JJ., 7 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 77; Rex v. Devon JJ., 7 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 78.

A poor-rate for the parish of L. was made and allowed on Saturday, the 20th of March, and published on the following day. S. & Son., who are the occupiers of bookstalls at certain railway stations in the parish, were included in the rate. The quarter sessions next after the publication of the rate were held on the 6th of April. A party desirous of appealing against the rate would, therefore, if bound by law to bring his appeal to such April sessions, have had to give notice of appeal upon the 22nd of March, the day immediately succeeding that of the publication of the rate, in accordance with the provisions of 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 1, which requires fourteen clear days' notice to be given to the overseers. S. & Son gave notice of appeal against the rate on the 7th of June for the then next sessions, which were held on the 5th of July. The court of quarter sessions refused to hear the appeal, on the ground that it ought to have been brought to the April sessions:—Held, that an appellant against a poor-rate is entitled to a reasonable time before giving notice of appeal, to allow of his considering whether he shall appeal, and the grounds on which his appeal shall be based, and that one day is not a reasonable time for that purpose; and that, consequently, S. & Son were not bound to give notice of appeal for the April sessions. Reg. v. Surrey JJ., 50 L. J., M. C. 10; 6 Q. B. D. 100; 43 L. T. 500; 29 W. R. 260; 45 J. P. 93.

Held, further, that, under the circumstances, they were not even bound to enter and respite their appeal at the April sessions. Ib.

B., being dissatisfied with the decision of an assessment committee given on 16th June, resolved to appeal to the Kirkdale Sessions of the county of Lancashire. Fourteen days' notice of appeal is required to be given to the overseers, and twenty-one days to the assessment committee. The next quarter sessions for the county of Lancaster were held on the 28th June, and by adjournment at Kirkdale on 13th July. B. duly served his notice of appeal for the Michaelmas quarter sessions, which commenced at Lancaster on 18th October, and were held at Kirkdale by adjournment on 2nd November. The justices having refused to hear the appeal on the ground that B. should have given the requisite notices for the sessions held at Kirkdale on the 13th July:—Held, that the justices were wrong, inasmuch as time for giving notice of appeal must be calculated in reference to the first day of the commencement of the sessions at Lancaster and not to the first day of the adjournment thereof at Kirkdale. Reg. v. Lancashire JJ., 34 L. T. 124.

The Pilot Act, 52 Geo. 3, c. 39, enacted, that persons convicted of offences against the act might within three calendar months after such conviction appeal to the sessions, first giving ten days' notice of appeal to the persons appealed against, and within fourteen days next after such notice entering into a recognizance:—Held, that the party convicted had three calendar months within which to give notice of his intention to appeal to the then following sessions, which were held more than three calendar months after the conviction, and need not appeal to the next immediate sessions after the conviction. Rex v. Middlesex JJ., 6 M. & S. 279.

—— Practice as to.]—Where a district court of quarter sessions is held in each division of a county by adjournment, from one to the other, and the rules of practice made by the court of each division, for the conduct of business in it, assume that the day when the court for that division begins its sittings is the first day of the sessions for that division, an appeal belonging to one of such divisions should be governed by the rules of practice for that division; and it is sufficient, if the grounds of appeal are delivered fourteen clear days before the first day of the sitting of the court for the division in which the appeal is to be tried. Reg. v. Sussex JJ., 4 B. & S. 966; 34 L. J., M. C. 69; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 300; 11 L. T. 740; 13 W. R. 471—Ex. Ch.

Calculation of Time.]—The 4 Geo. 4, c. 95, s. 87, requires notice of appeal to be served within six days after the cause of complaint shall arise:—Held, that, when the last of the six days was a Sunday, notice on the Monday following was too late. Reg. v. Middlesex JJ., 2 D. (N.S.) 719; 12 L. J., M. C. 59; 7 Jur. 396.

A notice of appeal was, according to the regular and ordinary course of post, delivered on a Sunday, and if delivered on Monday there would not have been fourteen days before the first day of the sessions:—Held, that the notice of appeal was void. Asprell v. Lancashire JJ., 16 Jur. 1067, n.

By a statute an appellant was required to give "seven days' notice, at least, of his intention to bring an appeal." Notice of appeal was served on the 31st of December, at half-past nine o'clock a.m. The sessions commenced on the 7th of January, at ten a.m., on which day appeals were to be entered, though, by the practice of the sessions, they were not heard till the 30th January:—Held, insufficient, for that the seven days must be reckoned exclusively both of the entire day of giving the notice and the first day of the sessions, as the fraction of the day is not to be considered in such calculation, and the day of bringing an appeal is the day on which it is entered, not heard. Reg. v. Middlesex JJ., 2 New Sess. Cas. 73; 3 D. & L. 109; 14 L. J., M. C. 139.

Under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 101, s. 4, requiring notice of appeal to be given within twenty-four hours after the adjudication, and making of any order on the putative father, the time for appealing must be calculated from the signature of the order by the justices. Reg. v. Flintshire JJ., 3 D. & L. 537; 15 L. J., M. C. 50; 10 Jur. 475.

The twenty-four hours begin to run from the time of the oral adjudication and order of the justices, and not from the time of the formal drawing up and signature thereof. Johnson, Ex parte, 3 B. & S. 947; 32 L. J., M. C. 193; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1128; 8 L. T. 275; 11 W. R. 620.

Absence of Notice.]—Upon a rule for a mandamus to compel the quarter sessions to enrol an order of petty sessions for stopping up a footway, there being fair ground for believing that many persons had been misled by the published description of the footway, and had therefore neglected to give notice of appeal, the court made a rule to let in the appeal. Rex v. Suffolk JJ., 5 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 27.

Mode of Service—On Justice.]—Notice of appeal against a conviction under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50 (Highway Act), s. 72, is well served on the justice under s. 105, if delivered at his dwelling-house, though not to him personally. Reg. v. Yorkshire, North Riding JJ., 1 New Sess. Cas. 574; 7 Q. B. 154; 14 L. J., M. C. 91; 9 Jur. 425.

Where there is some evidence on the face of a written notice that it was served in due time, the court will not interfere with the decision of the sessions that it was so served. Reg. v. Gloucestershire JJ., 16 L. J., M. C. 57; 11 Jur. 764.

—— On one of several Respondents.]—A. was adjudged, by justices acting under a local dock act to pay 50*l.* to B., for and on behalf of the owners of a vessel, for an injury caused to such vessel by A. A. thereupon appealed, and gave notice of appeal to all the part owners of the vessel at different times between the 23rd September and the 5th October. On the 25th September he entered into the recognizance as required by the act. At the hearing the appeal was dismissed because the recognizance was not entered into within three days after all the notices had been served:—Held, that service on one of the joint owners was good service for all, and that the recognizance therefore was properly entered into. Reg. v. Liverpool Recorder, 31 L. J., M. C. 127; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 642; 5 L. T. 361; 10 W. R. 78.

—— On Solicitor who appeared for Respondent at Petty Sessions.]—In a bastardy case, notice of appeal to quarter sessions having been served upon the solicitor who appeared for the respondent at petty sessions, the solicitor accepted service on her behalf :—Held, that he ceased to be the respondent's solicitor when the proceedings at petty sessions had determined, and that the service was bad. Reg. v. Oxfordshire JJ., 62 L. J., M. C. 156 ; [1893] 2 Q. B. 149 ; 4 R. 482 ; 69 L. T. 368; 41 W. R. 615 ; 57 J. P. 712—C. A.

—— Statutory Notice of Appeal sent, but returned through Dead Letter Office.]—An appeal to quarter sessions from an order made at petty sessions can be brought by the person seeking to appeal, only after a proper notice setting out the general grounds of the appeal has been duly served on the other party as required by s. 31, sub-s. 2 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879. Reg. v. Essex JJ., 43 W. R. 378.

Reasonableness of.]—Semble, that where no notice is prescribed by an act giving an appeal, there must, on principles of common law, be reasonable notice given to the respondents before the appellants are entitled to be heard, though any mode of giving the information on which the respondents could act may be sufficient. Blues, In re, 5 El. & Bl. 291 ; 24 L. J., M. C. 138 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 541 ; 3 W. R. 516.

Return to a habeas corpus setting out a conviction by two justices, under 6 Geo. 4, c. 129, whereby A. was sentenced to six weeks' imprisonment, and an order of sessions, purporting to be made on dismissing an appeal against the conviction, whereby he was ordered to be imprisoned pursuant to the conviction. By affidavits it appeared that he was convicted on a Saturday ; that he entered into recognizances before the convicting justices, which were forfeited on the Friday next after the conviction ; that on the ensuing Monday the sessions were held, and the appeal called on. By a rule of the sessions, in all cases of appeals not otherwise directed by law, notice in writing must be given on or before Saturday se'nnight preceding the sessions. Counsel appeared for the convicting justices as respondents, and on their objection, the sessions dismissed the appeal because the rule was not complied with :—Held, that the sessions, if they thought the notice given not sufficient for a trial then, might have entered and respited the appeal, but were not justified in refusing to hear it under the circumstances. Ib.

After entering into Recognizances.] — The 50 Geo. 3, c. 48, s. 25, provided that a party grieved by any conviction under that act, who shall enter into a recognizance to appear at the next sessions, shall be at liberty to appeal to such sessions :—Held, that this dispensed with the necessity of any notice of appeal, and if the party duly entered into the recognizance, the sessions were bound to hear the appeal. Rex v. Essex JJ., 4 B. & Ald. 276.

By One of Several.]—A., B. and C. were convicted under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 23, s. 34 ; under s. 72, they gave a joint notice of appeal ; at the sessions a separate conviction of A. was produced, and on the objection taken, that the notice of appeal should have been separate, the justices dismissed the appeal :—Held, that the justices were wrong, that the variance was immaterial, and that the justices were bound to have heard the appeal. Reg. v. Oxfordshire JJ., 12 L. J., M. C. 40 ; 7 Jur. 195.

By Solicitor for Appellants.]—Notice of appeal against an order of removal signed by the attorney for the overseers of the appellant parish is sufficient. Rex v. Monmouth JJ., 7 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 95.

By Trustees.]—By a local act it was provided, that if any person should think himself aggrieved by certain assessments, he might appeal to the quarter sessions, first giving notice and entering into a recognizance to prosecute such appeal. By another act, giving powers to certain road trustees, it was enacted, that they might sue and be sued in the name of any one or more of them ; that no action or prosecution so commenced should abate by the death, &c., of such trustee ; and that such trustee, in whose name any action or suit should be commenced or prosecuted in pursuance of the act, should be reimbursed his costs thereby incurred, and also the costs of prosecuting an indictment or other proceedings whatsoever commenced or prosecuted against any person by order of the trustee. A single trustee gave notice by appeal against a rate, beginning "I, A. B., one of the trustees, &c., for and on behalf of myself and the others of the trustees, hereby give you notice, that an appeal will be entered and prosecuted on behalf of the trustees against a certain rate," &c. He also entered into a recognizance (in which no other trustee joined), with the condition "that A. B., or the trustees appointed under a certain act, do appear at the next general quarter sessions, &c., and prosecute an appeal, &c., and abide the order," &c. It did not appear whether A. B. was or was not authorised by the trustees to take these steps, but they had made no disclaimer :—Held, that there was a sufficient notice and recognizance within the first-mentioned statute ; and mandamus issued commanding the sessions to hear the appeal. Rex v. Surrey JJ., 5 A. & E. 701.

Sufficiency of—Grounds of Appeal.]—A notice of appeal against an order for the stopping up of footway under 55 Geo. 3, c. 68, s. 3, must state that the party intending to appeal is injured or aggrieved by the order. Rex v. Essex JJ., 5 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 65 ; Rex v. West Riding of Yorkshire JJ., 1 M. & Ry. 547 ; 6 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 59 ; 7 B. & C. 678 ; 31 R. R. 278.

A notice of appeal must state that the appellant is a party aggrieved or must set out facts which shew that he is so. Rex v. Blackawton (Inhabitants), 8 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 123.

A notice of appeal against overseers' accounts need not state that the party appealing is aggrieved, but it must state the grounds of objection which he is about to take to the accounts. Rex v. Somerset JJ., 6 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 116 ; 7 B. & C. 681.

Notice of appeal pursuant to 57 Geo. 3, c. 94, s. 2, against a county rate need not state the grounds of objection to the rate. Rex v. Westmoreland JJ., 8 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 70.

It is sufficient for a vagrant convicted under 5 Geo. 4, c. 83, s. 4, to state as his ground for appeal that he is not guilty. Rex v. Newcastle-upon-Tyne JJ., 1 B. & Ad. 933 ; 9 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 117.

Where an appeal to the quarter sessions is given by a statute against any conviction under it, to any person aggrieved by such conviction, provided he gives to the respondent a notice in writing of such appeal, and of the cause and matter thereof, and the court of quarter sessions is directed to hear and determine the matter of the appeal, that court can adjudicate only on the matter stated in the notice. Rex v. Boultbee, 6 N. & M. 26; 4 A. & E. 498; 1 H. & W. 713.

A complaint having been made to justices that certain roads alleged to be highways under the jurisdiction of a highway board were out of repair, a summons was issued against such board. Upon the hearing, a land surveyor was appointed to view and report on the state of the roads in question. The report was duly made, and the justices, upon the evidence and admissions before them, ordered the highway board to do the repairs. The highway board neglected to obey this order; and the justices appointed such land surveyor to put the highway in repair, and ordered the board to pay the expenses. At several hearings before the justices, the highway board never denied that they were liable to repair the roads in question. The board appealed to quarter sessions against the order upon them for the expenses of repairing the roads. The following were the grounds of appeal:—"1. That the said justices had no jurisdiction to make the said order. 2. That the said order is contrary to law. 3. That the said order is contrary to the evidence. 4. That the justices wrongfully admitted evidence of witnesses other than the person appointed by them under s. 18 of 25 & 26 Vict. c. 61. 5. That at the time of the making of the said order the said highways had been put into a state of complete and effectual repair. 6. That the sum mentioned in the said order to be spent in putting the said roads into repair is excessive. 7. That the said highway board was and is not liable to repair the said highways, and that the liability to repair the said highways was at all the hearings before the said justices recited in the said order, and also at the time of the hearing when the said order was made, and at the time of the making thereof, disputed." Upon the appeal it was contended on behalf of the board that the roads in question were not highways, and the order was quashed on that ground:—Held, that the highway board were entitled to appeal to quarter sessions against the order, but were not entitled on the appeal to raise the question whether the roads were highways—(1) because they were estopped by their admissions before the justices; (2) because their grounds of appeal gave no notice that the point would be taken; and (3) because the question was not open to them when the order appealed against was made. Illingworth v. Bulmer East Highway Board, 52 L. J., Q. B. 680; 48 J. P. 37.

Held, also, that the quarter sessions, by deciding the question, did not thereby necessarily decide that it was open to the highway board to raise it. Ib.

Signing.]—By 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 1, a notice of appeal to a court of quarter sessions "shall be in writing, signed by the person or persons giving the same, or by his, her or their attorney on his, her or their behalf":—Held, that a notice of appeal signed in the appellant's name by the clerk to his attorney with the appellant's authority was sufficient. Reg. v. Kent JJ., 42 L. J., M. C. 112; L. R. 8 Q. B. 305; 21 W. R. 635.

To Whom to be given.]—In the case of an appeal against a borough rate under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 92, notice of appeal ought to be given to the town clerk, and not to the clerk of the peace. Reg. v. Carmarthen Recorder, 3 N. & P. 19; 7 A. & E. 758; 1 W. W. & H. 222; 7 L. J., M. C. 17.

The addressing of a notice of appeal under s. 31 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, to the clerk to the justices, instead of to the justices personally from whose decision the appeal is laid, is a sufficient and valid form for the notice. Reg. v. Essex JJ., Stark, Ex parte, 61 L. J., M. C. 120; [1892] 1 Q. B. 490; 66 L. T. 676; 40 W. R. 446; 17 Cox, C. C. 521; 56 J. P. 375.

Determination as to Sufficiency of.]—When the quarter sessions have refused to hear an appeal on the ground of the insufficiency of the notices, and a mandamus is applied for to compel them to hear, the court will, upon the argument against the rule, determine the question of the sufficiency or insufficiency of the notices. Curtis v. Buss, 47 L. J., M. C. 35; 3 Q. B. D. 13; 37 L. T. 533; 26 W. R. 210.

The consideration of a notice of appeal is merely preliminary to a hearing of the appeal; therefore if, upon objection taken to the notice, the sessions decide that it is bad, and dismiss the appeal, the court will, if the decision is erroneous, award a mandamus to enter continuances and hear. Reg. v. Surrey JJ., 2 New Sess. Cas. 245; 3 D. & L. 573; 1 B. C. Rep. 12; 15 L. J., M. C. 46; 10 Jur. 410.

Two Notices of Appeal.]—Upon the hearing on an appeal to quarter sessions under the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, it appeared that two notices of appeal had been given within the time limited by the act, and the appellant had elected to proceed upon the second, which was found to be bad for want of the prescribed recognizance:—Held, that the first notice remained good, and that the appellant was entitled to proceed upon it after failing upon the second. Reg. v. Wolverhampton Recorder, 35 W. R. 650.

When Appeal Respited—Practice as to.]—Where a statute gives a party aggrieved a right of appeal, on giving security to a specified amount, he may enter and respite his appeal at the next sessions, after having given such security, without notice to the other side; but after the appeal has been respited, if he does not give the usual notice of trying it, the sessions will be authorised to dismiss it altogether. Rex v. Salop JJ., 2 B. & Ad. 694.

Notice was given of appeal against a poor-rate, and the respondents attended at the sessions and prayed a respite, alleging that they had not had time to prepare their defence to the matters stated as grounds of appeal. The appellant opposed the respite; but it was granted, no notice of appeal having been proved or expressly admitted. An order of respite was made out, embodying the grounds of appeal stated in the notice:—Held, that, at the following sessions, the appellant was entitled to be heard without proving any notice of appeal. Rex v. Hertfordshire JJ., 4 B. & Ad. 561; 1 N. & M. 331; 2 L. J., M. C. 41.

A pauper was removed under an order in March, within fourteen days of the Easter sessions, and the appellants entered and respited an appeal, ex parte, without giving notice to the respondents at the Midsummer sessions, and served notice and grounds of appeal for the October sessions:—Held, that, as the Midsummer sessions had jurisdiction to receive the appeal, the propriety of their adjournment could not be considered. Reg. v. Surrey JJ., 15 L. J., M. C. 1; 10 Jur. 72.

If a regular notice of appeal has been given for one sessions, and the appeal is adjourned at the instance of the appellants, after hearing counsel on both sides, it is not necessary to give a strictly regular notice of trial for the following sessions. Rex v. Gloucestershire JJ., 3 D. P. C. 298.

A rule of practice of the sessions, that whenever an appeal against an order of removal shall be entered respited, due notice thereof shall be given by the appellant to the respondent parish, is void. Reg. v. Surrey JJ., 3 New Sess. Cas 531.

After an appeal entered and respited, and notice of an intention to try at the second sessions, at which sessions the appeal is again respited at the instance of the appellant, the appellant is not bound to give notice of his intention to try at the following sessions, unless such notice is required by the rules of the particular sessions. Rex v. Yorkshire, W. R., JJ., 2 N. & M. 390 ; 5 B. & Ad. 667 ; 3 L. J., M. C. 21.

Where appellants were required to give respondents twenty-eight days' notice of trial in the case of respited appeals, and a respited appeal was dismissed at those sessions, on the ground that the appellants had only given fourteen days' notice of trial, the court refused to grant a mandamus, as the rule, though unnecessary, did not appear to be so unreasonable as to call for its interference. Reg. v. Montgomeryshire JJ., 2 New Sess. Cas. 78 ; 3 D. & L. 119 ; 14 L. J., M. C. 142 ; 9 Jur. 927.

An appeal after hearing at one sessions was respited until the following sessions, in consequence of an equal division of opinion on the bench as to the merits :—Held, that no fresh notice of trial was necessary for the following sessions, although in practice the rule is otherwise as to respited appeals. Rex v. Buckinghamshire JJ., 6 D. & R. 142.

—— Necessity of Notice.]—Fourteen clear days before the sessions next after making a poor-rate, a notice, accompanied by grounds of appeal, was served on the parish officers, of an intention to enter an appeal at those sessions, but not then to try, but to petition for a respite to the next sessions. The respondents informed the appellant that they should oppose a respite. At the sessions the respite was opposed, and the sessions called on the appellant to proceed, and on his declining dismissed the appeal with costs : —Held, that the sessions acted within their jurisdiction, and were not bound to respite after this notice of appeal had been given. Reg. v. Eyre, 7 El. & Bl. 609 ; 26 L. J., M. C. 121 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 910 ; 5 W. R. 532.

Proof of Notice.]—An appeal came on to be heard, when it was adjourned by reason of the press of business at the sessions : on the next appeal day it was again adjourned "by consent of counsel" :—Held, that the respondents, on a subsequent appeal day, were nevertheless entitled to call for proof of the original notice of appeal, or to object that the notice given was insufficient. Reg. v. Middlesex JJ., 2 D. (N.S.) 719 ; 12 L. J., M. C. 59 ; 7 Jur. 396.

Upon an appeal being called on at the sessions, the respondents required the appellants to prove their notice of appeal, and a witness was accordingly examined, who proved service of notice of appeal, which was objected to as improperly signed, and the sessions accordingly dismissed the appeal :—Held, that a mandamus might issue, commanding the justices to hear the appeal, as the decision on the validity of the notice of appeal was only preliminary to the right of the appellants to be heard. Reg. v. Surrey JJ., 1 B. C. Rep. 12 ; 2 New Sess. Cas. 245 ; 3 D. & L. 573 ; 15 L. J., M. C. 46 ; 10 Jur. 410.

e. Recognizances.

Before what Court to be entered into.]—The recognizance required by s. 31, sub-s. 3, of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, need not be entered into before the justices from whose decision the appeal is being taken ; it can be entered into before any court of summary jurisdiction which has before it the notice of appeal in the case. Reg. v. Durham JJ., Newton, Ex parte, 64 L. J., M. C. 187 ; [1895] 1 Q. B. 801 ; 15 R. 319 ; 72 L. T. 465 ; 43 W. R. 423 ; 59 J. P. 264.

Time of Entering into.]—Under s. 31, sub-s. 3, of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, an appellant is required to enter into a recognizance within three days after giving notice of appeal, or the court before whom the appellant offers to enter into the recognizance may order a deposit of money with the justices' clerk instead of entering into a recognizance. Where, therefore, a court, on the same day that a case is heard, and before proper notice of appeal is given, allows a deposit to be made in lieu of a recognizance, the provisoes of s. 31, sub-s. 3, have not been complied with, and the Court of Quarter Sessions has no jurisdiction to hear the appeal, Reg. v. Anglesey JJ., 61 L. J., M. C. 143 ; [1892] 2 Q. B. 29 ; 67 L. T. 322 ; 17 Cox, C. C. 563 ; 56 J. P. 552.

Justices in quarter sessions are right in declining to hear an appeal where the appellant first entered into a recognizance and then gave notice of appeal. Reg. v. Anglesey JJ. ([1892] 2 Q. B. 29) followed. Reg. v. Cheshire JJ., 60 J. P. 585.

Where a statute requires that a recognizance shall be entered into forthwith, after notice of appeal, it means within a reasonable time ; and, therefore, a period of nine days without cause assigned for the delay is too long. Reg. v. Worcester JJ., 7 D. P. C. 789.

Where a party was convicted at a petty sessions, and sentenced to three months' imprisonment for an offence under 6 Geo. 4, c. 129, which, by s. 12, enacts that the person so convicted shall be at liberty to appeal against such conviction, and provides that the execution of such judgment so appealed against shall be suspended in case the person so convicted shall "immediately" enter into recognizances, with sureties, to prosecute such appeal : —Held, that it was not necessary that the required recognizances should be entered into at the time of the conviction, and that the prisoner is entitled to his discharge, if application is made within a reasonable time. Reg. v. Aston, 1 L. M. & P. 491 ; 4 New Sess. Cas. 283 ; 19 L. J., M. C. 236 ; 14 Jur. 1045.

Out of Time—Estreat.]—By s. 31 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, it is provided that, "where any person is authorised by this act or by any future act to appeal from the conviction or order of a court of summary jurisdiction to a court of general or quarter sessions, he may appeal to such court, subject to the conditions and regulations following": (3) "The appellant shall, within the prescribed time, or, if no time is prescribed, within three days after the day on which he gave notice of appeal, enter into a recognizance . . . conditioned to appear at the said sessions and to try such appeal, and to abide the judgment of the court of appeal thereon, and to pay such costs as may be awarded by the court of appeal" :—Held, that a recognizance which has been entered into by the appellant after the expiration of the three days, is not void, and that the court of quarter sessions, although by reason of the recognizance being out of time it has no jurisdiction to hear the appeal, has jurisdiction to estreat the recognizance for non-payment of such costs as may have been awarded upon the dismissal of the appeal. Reg. v. Glamorganshire JJ., 59 L. J., M. C. 150; 24 Q. B. D. 675; 62 L. T. 730; 38 W. R. 640; 17 Cox, C. C. 45; 55 J. P. 39.

f. Hearing and Judgment.

Hearing—Order for Removal made without Corroboration, but Corroboration given on Appeal to Sessions.]—An order for removal was made by justices in respect of an alleged settlement under 39 & 40 Vict. c. 61, s. 34, which provides that an order of removal in respect of a settlement acquired under that section shall not be made upon the evidence of the person to be removed without such corroboration as the justices or court think sufficient. There was no corroboration before the justices who made the order. Upon appeal to quarter sessions against the order corroborative evidence was tendered on behalf of the respondents, and received by the court, who considered the same sufficient :—Held, that the sessions were right in receiving the corroborative evidence. Reg. v. Abergavenny Union, 50 L. J., M. C. 1; 6 Q. B. D. 31; 43 L. T. 602; 44 J. P. 780.

—— Rehearing.]—On appeal from an order of removal the respondents cannot call in aid any of the depositions taken on making the order. The case must be entirely reheard. Rex v. Wisbeach St. Peter (Inhabitants), 5 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 101.

Amendment of Summary Conviction imposing Imprisonment in default of Distress—Striking out "Hard Labour."]—On an information under the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, for disobeying a closing order, the conviction imposed a fine and imprisonment with hard labour in default of distress. The defendant appealed to quarter sessions without paying the fine. The quarter sessions, on evidence that the mention of hard labour in the conviction was due to an oversight on the part of the magistrate's clerk in drawing it up, amended the conviction under Baines's Act, affirmed the conviction as amended, and dismissed the appeal :—Held, on certiorari, that the decision of quarter sessions was right. Reg. v. London JJ., Saunders, Ex parte, 64 L. J., M. C. 273; 72 L. T. 568; 59 J. P. 279.

Appeal against Excessive Punishment—No Appearance by Respondent—Whole Conviction quashed.]—The respondent was convicted before a court of summary jurisdiction for causing a horse to be cruelly ill-treated, and was sentenced to fourteen days' imprisonment with hard labour. He gave notice of his intention to appeal to quarter sessions upon the ground that the punishment was excessive. No one appeared on behalf of the prosecution at the sessions, and the respondent (the then appellant) having proved the service of his notices of appeal, the court quashed the conviction :—Held, that the court of quarter sessions was right in quashing the conviction, as there was no evidence before it upon which it could decide what punishment was right, and it could not leave the conviction standing without some judgment thereon. Reg. v. Surrey JJ., 61 L. J., M. C. 200; [1892] 2 Q. B. 719; 67 L. T. 266; 41 W. R. 79; 17 Cox, C. C. 547; 56 J. P. 742.

Judgment—Division of Opinion.]—If the justices at sessions are equally divided, and no order is made, nor the sessions adjourned, no order can be made at a subsequent sessions. Bodmin v. Warligne, 2 Bro. P. C. 733.

The court will not presume that every justice qualified to attend the quarter sessions was actually present there when any particular order was made. Reg. v. Cartworth, 5 Q. B. 204.

When the justices at quarter sessions being equally divided in opinion, the chairman gave a casting vote in favour of the order, which was confirmed accordingly; and, on the following day, the appellants' counsel protested against the legality of the decision; and the question was then argued on both sides, and the justices then present determined to adhere to the former decision :—Held, that, although the proceeding on the first day was irregular, the court would not assume that the decision on the second day was not a judgment upon the merits. Reg. v. Fladbury, 10 A. & E. 706; 2 P. & D. 471.

Where it was alleged that the assistant judge had given his own opinion on an appeal as the decision of the sessions, though it was contrary to the opinion of the majority of justices present :—Held, that after the order of sessions had been duly recorded it was too late to inquire whether it did or did not represent the opinion of the majority of justices. Reg. v. Middlesex JJ., Slade, In re, 46 L. J., M. C. 225; 2 Q. B. D. 516; 36 L. T. 403; 25 W. R. 610.

The court will not grant a mandamus to the justices at sessions to rehear an appeal against an order of removal after judgment given by them and entered by the clerk of the peace for quashing the order, upon the ground that the justices were divided in opinion and that the judgment was entered by mistake, instead of an adjournment of the appeal. Reg. v. Leicestershire JJ., 1 M. & S. 442; 14 R. R. 494.

The justices at sessions may alter their judgment during the continuance of the sessions. Ib.

Upon an appeal against an order of removal the justices at sessions were equally divided in opinion upon a question of fact on which the settlement of the pauper depended. The sessions, thinking that it lay on the respondent parish to establish their case to the satisfaction of a majority of the court, quashed the order of removal. The court refused a mandamus. Query, whether the sessions ought to have adjourned instead of quashing the order. Reg. v. Monmouthshire JJ., 4 B. & C. 844; 7 D. & R. 334; 28 R. R. 478.

—— Enforcing.]—The provisions of the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 48, s. 18, for removal by judge's order into queen's bench, apply only to orders properly so called, and not to judgments of the court of quarter sessions on indictments tried before them. Reg. v. Bateman, 8 El. & Bl. 584; 27 L. J., M. C. 95; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 301; 6 W. R. 63.

When an order or a rule is made under this provision for the removal of an order of sessions for the purpose of enforcing it, it is not necessary that a certiorari should issue to remove the order. Hawker v. Field, 20 L. J., M. C. 41. Overruling Reg. v. Devonshire JJ., 1 L. M. & P. 520.

An order for the payment of the costs of an appeal against the poor-rate under 17 Geo. 2, c. 38, s. 4, is valid, though it directs the costs to be paid directly to the appellants, and may be removed and enforced under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 48, s. 18. Reg. v. Huntley, 3 El. & Bl. 172; 2 C. L. R. 246; 23 L. J., M. C. 106; 18 Jur. 745.

—— Finality of.]—Upon the hearing of an appeal to quarter sessions against an order of affiliation, it appeared that the respondent and her witnesses were not present, having mistaken the day of hearing, and her counsel applied for an adjournment till the following morning, offering to pay the costs of the day. The appellant having declined to accede to this proposal, the sessions directed the case to proceed, and quashed the order, no evidence having been adduced on the part of the respondent:—Held, that the order of quarter sessions was not a decision upon the merits, and that fresh proceedings in respect of the same matter might be taken before justices. Reg. v. May or Essex JJ., 49 L. J., M. C. 67; 5 Q. B. D. 382; 42 L. T. 772; 28 W. R. 918.

Where an appeal given by parliament is to be final, no other mode of trial can be admitted, unless there is a refusal to admit the appeal when duly offered, in which case the court will give relief. Anon., Lofft, 184.

By 17 Geo. 3, c. 106, a power of appeal is given on certain conditions from a conviction by a justice of the peace to any quarter sessions to be holden within six months from such conviction; if the appellant lodges his appeal, and the court dismisses it without entering into the merits, because the previous conditions have not been regularly complied with, and confirms the conviction, such judgment is conclusive, and the party cannot lodge a second appeal from the same conviction, though within the six months. Rex v. Yorkshire, W. R., JJ., 3 Term Rep. 776.

An appeal to the quarter sessions does not preclude an action. Leader v. Moxon, 2 W. Bl. 926.

Nor is a party appealing to the sessions thereby concluded from afterwards disputing its jurisdiction in the particular case. Lowther v. Radnor (Earl), 8 East, 113. See 20 R. R. 542, n.

When the sessions have decided an appeal without any reservation, they cannot at a subsequent session enter a continuance of the appeal on the ground of perjury having been committed on the hearing, and then proceed to rehear the appeal. Having once finally decided, they cannot at a subsequent session review the decision. Rex v. Middlewich (Inhabitants), 9 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 44.

Justice disqualified from Hearing Appeal.]—See supra, col. 543 et seq.

Operation of Appeal.]—When a person who has been committed under a judgment of imprisonment, appeals against it, he is not entitled to be discharged pending the appeal, because the appeal does not suspend the effect of the judgment. Reg. v. Willmott, 1 B. & S. 27; 30 L. J., M. C. 161; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1053; 4 L. T. 208; 9 W. R. 633.

g. Adjournment.

General Power to Adjourn.]—When a matter is properly before justices at quarter sessions they have a general power to adjourn the consideration of it to a subsequent sessions, and such subsequent sessions need not be the sessions next following. Reg. v. Westmoreland JJ., 9 B. & S. 288; 37 L. J., M. C. 115; L. R. 3 Q. B. 457; 18 L. T. 326; 16 W. R. 753; 11 Cox, C. C. 172.

Although a statute, giving an appeal to the sessions within four months after the cause of complaint shall arise, directs the justices at the said sessions to determine the matter of such appeal, yet it seems they have an incidental power of adjourning it to another sessions upon lawful cause, such as the absence of a material witness, of the sufficiency of which they are to judge. Rex v. Wilts JJ., 13 East, 352.

The general power of a court of quarter sessions to adjourn to the next sessions the hearing of an appeal, where the particular act giving the appeal does not limit the hearing and determination of it to one sessions only, extends to cases where the hearing of the appeal has commenced, and the evidence is partly before the court. The sessions have power, in such a case, to adjourn the further hearing to the next sessions, for the purpose of additional evidence being procured, or for any cause which, in their discretion, may render the adjournment expedient. Reg. v. Cambridge Union, 1 B. & S. 61; 30 L. J., M. C. 137; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1073; 4 L. T. 212; 9 W. R. 599.

—— Where Time for Hearing Limited.]—By 9 Geo. 4, c. 61 (the Licensing Act), s. 27, any person who thinks himself aggrieved may appeal to the next general or quarter sessions of the peace, unless such sessions should be holden within twelve days next after such act shall have been done, and in that case to the next subsequent sessions holden as aforesaid, and not afterwards; and the court at such sessions shall hear and determine the matter of such appeal, and shall make such order therein, with or without costs, as to the court shall seem meet. An appeal against a refusal of justices to grant a licence was heard at the sessions within the time specified by the statute, and the licence refused with costs; but, in order to ascertain the amount of costs, the court adjourned the appeal to the ensuing sessions, when the judgment dismissing the appeal and the order for costs were formally given:—Held, that the power of hearing and adjudicating on the appeal was by this statute confined to one particular sessions, and that such sessions had, therefore, no power of adjourning the appeal, notwithstanding the general power of adjournment at common law inherent in courts of quarter sessions. Reg. v. Belton, 2 New Sess. Cas. 77; 11 Q. B. 379; 17 L. J., M. C. 70; 12 Jur. 392.

An act required by statute to be done at a particular quarter sessions must be perfected at such sessions. The general power of adjournment possessed by courts of quarter sessions does not apply in such a case. Bowman v. Blyth, 7 El. & Bl. 26; 26 L. J., M. C. 57; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 359; 5 W. R. 86. Affirmed on appeal, 7 El. & Bl. 47; 27 L. J., M. C. 21—Ex. Ch.

Refusal to Adjourn.]—Justices are entitled to refuse to enter and adjourn or appeal except on terms. Rex v. Monmouthshire JJ., 9 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 116.

By whom.]—The adjournment of a session must be made by the same number of justices as are necessary to hold it. Rex v. Westrington, 2 Bott's P. L. 733.

A court of quarter sessions cannot be adjourned by the crier without the presence of the justices. Rex v. Middlesex JJ., 3 N. & M. 110; 5 B. & Ad. 1113.

Effect of.]—An adjournment of quarter sessions to a subsequent sessions is a continuation of the original sessions. Rawnsley v. Hutchinson, 40 L. J., M. C. 97; L. R. 6 Q. B. 305; 23 L. T. 843; 19 W. R. 436.

Therefore, where, at the general quarter sessions holden in October, an appeal under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 27, and 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 27, was dismissed with costs, but the amount of such costs was not ascertained by the clerk of the peace until the sessions holden in November:—Held, that an order of sessions for the payment by the appellant of such ascertained amount of costs was good. Ib.

The quarter sessions, whether held before a recorder or ordinary justices, is not an inferior court within the meaning of the rule which prevents issuing a venire de novo to inferior courts, and it is in such case a continuing court, from session to session. Campbell v. Reg., 11 Q. B. 799; 17 L. J., M. C. 89; 12 Jur. 117.

Where the sessions have a power of adjourning, the postponement of the adjournment cannot be impeached. Reg. v. Surrey JJ., 15 L. J., M. C. 1; 10 Jur. 72.

Respiting Judgment.]—The quarter sessions have power to respite a judgment from one session to another, without adjourning the session. Keen v. Reg., 10 Q. B. 928; 3 New Sess. Cas. 25; 16 L. J., M. C. 180; 11 Jur. 1060; 2 Cox, C. C. 342.

Notice—Practice as to.]—See supra, col. 658.

h. Rules of Practice at Sessions.

Discretion as to.]—The court of quarter sessions has a discretionary power to make rules for the governance of the practice of the sessions, but the court of queen's bench, for the purposes of justice, will interfere to control that discretion. Rex v. Lancashire JJ., 7 B. & C. 692. S. P., Rex v. Wilts JJ., 10 East, 404.

A rule of practice at the sessions will not control the express words of an act of parliament. Rex v. Lincolnshire JJ., 5 D. & R. 347; 3 B. & C. 548.

The sessions are the judges of their own rules of practice; and the court will not interfere with their determination respecting them, unless the rules on which they have acted are so unreasonable as to be illegal, manifestly wrong or unjust. Reg. v. Montgomeryshire JJ., 3 D. & L. 119; 2 New Sess. Cas. 78. Rex v. Essex JJ., 2 Chit. 385.

Entry of Appeal.]—On an application for a mandamus to the sessions to enter continuances and hear an appeal, it appeared from the affidavits, that an application to enter the appeal was made on the second day of sessions, and not before, and was refused. It not appearing what the practice was, nor that the sessions had refused on any ground, except that of the practice, the court discharged the rule for a mandamus. Reg. v. Warwickshire JJ., 6 Q. B. 750; 14 L. J., M. C. 39.

Where the sessions have a discretion, the court has no jurisdiction to control it. Reg. v. Derbyshire JJ., 1 B. C. C. 113; 22 L. J., M. C. 31; 16 Jur. 1071.

When, therefore, the sessions have by their practice a discretion as to allowing or refusing the entry of appeals after the time fixed by their rules, and in the injudicious exercise of that discretion refuse to allow an appeal to be entered, the court will not order them to receive it. Ib.

When, however, it was left in doubt what the practice of the sessions on the subject was, and whether it had been acted upon in the particular case, the court granted a rule for a mandamus to the justices to receive the appeal. Ib.

Semble, that the practice of entering an appeal against a rate and adjourning it to the next sessions as a matter of course without notice to either party is not in strict conformity with 17 Geo. 2, c. 38, s. 4, but the court will not disturb the practice, or at least will not allow a party to be precluded from having his appeal heard after he has acted in conformity with the practice. Rex v. Wilts JJ., 6 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 97.

Notice of Appeal.]—Semble, where notice is given that no business will be transacted on the day usually fixed for holding the sessions, but that the sessions will be adjourned for business until a future day, a notice of appeal given in time for that future day according to the practice of the sessions will be sufficient, and even if a notice of appeal should be held insufficient by the sessions, the court will exercise a discretionary power over the sessions, and if they think it reasonable, will order the appeal to be heard. Rex v. Hampshire JJ., 7 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 9.

Hearing of Appeal—Right to begin.]—The court will not interfere with a rule of practice at sessions, whereby the appellant in a rating appeal who disputes only the amount of the rate is called upon to begin. Rex v. Suffolk JJ., 6 M. & S. 57.

Rule of Sessions imposing Condition.]—A certificate for a licence having been refused at licensing sessions, all the preliminaries to an appeal to the next quarter sessions required by 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 27, were duly observed; but at the sitting of the court the quarter sessions refused to allow the appeal to be entered on the ground that by a rule of the sessions an appeal must be entered and grounds of appeal deposited with the clerk of the peace three clear days before the first day of the sessions; and the sessions made an order for 10*l.* costs to the respondents under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 6, as on an appeal which had not been entered or prosecuted. This order having been brought up and a rule to quash it obtained:—Held, that the rule of sessions amounted to imposing an additional condition to the appeal which the statute had not imposed, and was more than a mere rule of practice, which it was incompetent to the sessions to make; and that the order for costs must be quashed. Reg. v. Pawlett, 42 L. J., M. C. 157; L. R. 8 Q. B. 491; 29 L. T. 390.

The sessions are not warranted in refusing to hear an appeal against an order of removal because the appellants do not produce the pauper. Rex v. Cornwall JJ., 9 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 82.

A rule of practice of the sessions, that whenever an appeal against an order of removal shall be entered respited, due notice thereof shall be given to the respondent by the appellant, is void. Reg. v. Surrey JJ., 3 New Sess. Cas. 531.

Return setting out a conviction by two justices, under 6 Geo. 4, c. 129, whereby A. was sentenced to six weeks imprisonment, and an order of sessions, purporting to be made on dismissing an appeal against this conviction, whereby he was ordered to be imprisoned pursuant to the conviction. By affidavits it appeared that he was convicted on a Saturday, that he entered into recognizances before the convicting justices, which were perfected on the Friday next after the conviction, that on the ensuing Monday the sessions were held, and the appeal called on. By a rule of the sessions, in all cases of appeals, not otherwise directed by law, notice in writing must be given on or before Saturday se'nnight preceding the sessions. Counsel appearing for the convicting justices, as respondents, and on their objection the sessions dismissed the appeal, because the rule was not complied with:—Held, that the sessions, if they thought the notice given not sufficient for a trial then, might have entered and respited the appeal, but were not justified in refusing to hear it under the circumstances. Blues, In re, 5 El. & Bl. 291; 24 L. J., M. C. 138; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 541; 3 W. R. 516.

Held, also, that the recognizances having been entered into with reasonable promptitude, the execution was suspended until the appeal was heard, or finally dismissed through the appellant's fault; and that, neither of these events having happened, the conviction did not afford a ground for detention. Ib.

Costs.]—Where it appeared that the sessions, on an application by the successful party for costs of an appeal, considered themselves bound by a former order of sessions, that 40*s.* costs only should be allowed on appeals, and acted thereon, and awarded only 40*s.* costs:—Held, that such general rule was unreasonable, and that the sessions were bound to consider the question of costs irrespectively of the former order of sessions, and to award to the successful party a fair and reasonable sum for the costs incurred in supporting the appeal. Reg. v. Glamorganshire JJ., 4 New Sess. Cas. 110; 1 L. M. & P. 336; 19 L. J., M. C. 172; 15 Jur. 679.

An appeal against an order of settlement was brought before sessions. The hearing of the appeal was adjourned from time to time, till ultimately the appellant declined to proceed, and gave notice of countermand. The justices then, acting upon a rule of their sessions, refused to allow the respondent his costs:—Held, that a mandamus would lie to compel them, as such a refusal, under the circumstances, amounted to a declining of jurisdiction. Reg. v. Montgomeryshire JJ., 19 L. T. 397.

A standing order of a court of quarter sessions, that costs of appeal should follow the event, unless the court should otherwise interfere in any case, may be good as a rule of practice notwithstanding 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 27, and 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 5, although it directs such costs to be paid to the parties. Freeman v. Read, 9 C. B. (N.S.) 301; 30 L. J., M. C. 123; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 546; 3 L. T. 369; 9 W. R. 141.

Barristers.]—The court will not question an order made by the sessions, granting exclusive audience to barristers. Evans, Ex parte, or Reg. v. Denbighshire JJ., 2 New Sess. Cas. 422; 9 Q. B. 279; 15 L. J., Q. B. 335; 10 Jur. 544.

i. Costs.

Against whom—Crown.]—Upon appeal against an acquittal upon an information by an excise officer under 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 120, s. 27, the quarter sessions confirmed the acquittal, with costs. Held, that the quarter sessions had no jurisdiction to order costs to be paid to the respondent by the excise officer, either under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 5, because the crown was not named in it, or under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 90, s. 2, because it was confined to informations to which the attorney-general was a party. Reg. v. Beadle, 7 El. & Bl. 492; 26 L. J., M. C. 111; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 863; 5 W. R. 498. See Moore v. Smith, 1 El. & El. 597; 28 L. J., M. C. 126; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 892; 7 W. R. 206.

—— Justices.]—Three labourers having been convicted by justices of an offence under 34 & 35 Vict. c. 32, appealed to the quarter sessions under s. 3 (repealed), which enacts that any party aggrieved by a conviction made by a court of summary jurisdiction may appeal, subject to certain conditions: (2.) The appellant shall, within seven days after the cause of appeal arose, give notice to the other party and to the court of summary jurisdiction of his intention to appeal, and the ground of it. (5) The court of appeal may make such order as to costs to be paid by either party as the court thinks just. The appellants gave due notice to the prosecutor and to the convicting justices, and the justices, as well as the prosecutor, were named respondents in the appeal; but the justices did not appear. The quarter sessions quashed the conviction, and ordered the respondents, or some or one of them, to pay the appellants' costs. The appellants having brought up the conviction by certiorari, under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 18, in order to enforce the payment of costs, a rule was obtained to quash so much of the order as ordered the justices to pay costs:—Held, that the quarter sessions had no power to award costs against the convicting justices; and the court made the rule absolute with costs. Reg. v. Goodall, 43 L. J., M. C. 119; L. R. 9 Q. B. 557.

An information was laid by M., who was the surveyor of a local board of health, but without reference to his official position, against H., for the violation of a by-law of such local board; and upon the hearing, he was convicted and ordered to pay 7*l.* 10*s.* to the local board for costs. H. thereupon gave notice of appeal to the convicting justices and to M. Both the justices and M. handed their notices over to the attorney for the local board, and he conducted the defence on the behalf of the board. The quarter sessions quashed the conviction with costs; and the clerk of the peace directing the costs to be paid by the respondents, the costs were taxed, and being unpaid, an application was made to justices for a warrant against the goods of M. for the amount:—Held, first, that the order of the quarter sessions was bad in ordering the costs to be paid by the respondents, who were the convicting justices, and M., for that it should have been made upon the local board, who were the parties appealed against. Reg. v. Davidson, 24 L. T. 22.

Held, secondly, that as the order was valid, except as to that part which related to costs, it should be quashed as to that part only. Ib.

By the Criminal Law Amendment Act (34 & 35 Vict. c. 32), s. 3, an appeal to sessions is given against any conviction under the act. By sub-s. 2 the appellant shall, within seven days after the cause of appeal has arisen, give notice to the other party and to the court of summary jurisdiction of his intention to appeal, and of the ground thereof. By sub-s. 5, the court of appeal may make such order as to costs to be paid by either party as the court thinks just. Defendants, having been convicted under the act, gave notice of appeal to the prosecutor and the justices at petty sessions, and made the justices and prosecutor respondents. The justices did not appear, and the conviction was quashed. In drawing up the order of sessions directing the respondents, or some of them, to pay the appellant's costs, the justices were named as respondents:—Held, that a rule to strike out so much of the order as ordered the justices to pay costs must be made absolute, as it was quite clear that under the circumstances there was no power to order them to pay costs. Reg. v. Goodall, 43 L. J., M. C. 119; L. R. 9 Q. B. 557.

W. was charged before justices with selling for new milk an article not of the nature, substance, and quality demanded, contrary to s. 6 of the Food and Drugs Act, 1875. A sergeant of police, acting under H.'s orders, who was an inspector under the act, purchased the milk from W., who, when he was asked for new milk, sold skimmed, and charged a penny a pint, the usual price for skimmed. The justices differed—one being of the opinion that only a penny a pint being asked, the purchaser must have been aware it was skimmed milk he was buying:—Held, that the knowledge of the purchaser was immaterial, and case remitted to the bench to convict. The respondent W. did not appear, but the magistrates did:—Held, that costs in such a case could be given against them. Heywood v. Whitehead, 76 L. T. 781.

—— Prosecutor.]—The 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 5, authorises the quarter sessions on appeal against a conviction under 5 Geo. 4, c. 83 (Vagrant Act), to find that the original complainant was the real respondent in the appeal, and to direct him to pay the costs, although by 5 Geo. 4, c. 83, notice of appeal is required to be given to the justices alone, and their names were entered as the formal respondents on the appeal. Reg. v. Smith, 29 L. J., M. C. 216; 2 L. T. 437; 8 W. R. 589.

Upon an appeal to the quarter sessions against the conviction of an appellant as a rogue and vagabond under 5 Geo. 4, c, 83, the sessions have power to give costs against the prosecutor; and the justices who have convicted the appellant, and who do not appear to support the conviction, are not the parties against whom an order for costs can be made. Reg. v. Purdey, 5 B. & S. 909; 34 L. J., M. C. 4; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 153; 11 L. T. 309; 13 W. R. 75.

Licensing Law—Non-appearance of Objector—Jurisdiction to give Costs against Objector.]—Licensing justices are not a court of summary jurisdiction, and where on appeal to quarter sessions from their refusal, at the instance of an objector, to renew the licence, a renewal has been granted, there is no jurisdiction to give costs against the objector. Reg. v. Glamorganshire JJ. (61 L. J., M. C. 169; [1892] 1 Q. B. 621) overruled. Boulter v. Kent JJ., 66 L. J., Q. B. 787; [1897] A. C. 556; 77 L. T. 288; 46 W. R. 114; 61 J. P. 532—H. L. (E.)

Nature of Order for.]—At the hearing of a respited appeal against a poor-rate, the appeal was dismissed on the non-appearance of the appellants, and the sessions made the following order:—"Surrey, to wit. At the general quarter sessions of the peace, holden at St. Mary, Newington, on &c.: whereas, at the last general quarter sessions of the peace, holden in and for the county of Surrey, appeal was then made at this court." The appeal was then recited, and the entry and respite thereof until the next general quarter sessions to be holden in and for the county of Surrey. It then ordered the appeal to be dismissed, and further that the appellants do forthwith pay to the respondents 115*l.* costs:—Held, that the order was good, although no notice had been given that more than nominal costs would be asked for; that it sufficiently shewed that it was made at the quarter sessions holden in and for the county of Surrey; and that the term "costs" shewed with sufficient certainty that they were costs of the appeal. L., B. & S. C. Ry., Ex parte, 2 B. C. Rep. 265; 5 D. & L. 597; 17 L. J., M. C. 119.

The quarter sessions made an order confirming an order of justices, subject to a case. The order of sessions was silent as to costs. The appellants abandoned the case; the respondents applied to a subsequent session, who made an order, stating that the original order was confirmed, and giving the respondents costs:—Held, that the subsequent sessions had no jurisdiction to deal with the order made by the prior sessions. Reg. v. Staffordshire JJ., 7 El. & Bl. 935; 26 L. J., M. C. 179; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1148.

On an appeal against a conviction under the Alehouse Licensing Act, 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, the sessions affirmed the conviction, and ordered that the appellant should forthwith pay to the respondent justices a certain sum for costs and in case of default should be committed to the house of correction until such sum should be paid:—Held (though conformable to 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 29), a bad order since 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, which by s. 27, enacts that if on appeal against "such conviction or order" as is there mentioned, the sessions shall award costs, their order shall direct the costs to be paid to the clerk of the peace, to be by him paid over to the party entitled, and shall state within what time payment shall be, and that on non-payment within the time and in default of distress the party may be committed for any time not exceeding three months, unless the costs be sooner paid. For the words "such order" apply generally to all orders of magistrates out of sessions and appeals against such orders (unless in cases excepted by the act), and s. 36 repeals all statutes inconsistent with it. Reg. v. Hellier, 17 Q. B. 229; 21 L. J., M. C. 3; 15 Jur. 901.

The 17 Geo. 2, c. 38, s. 4, empowering the quarter sessions upon an appeal against a poor-rate to order costs to be paid to the party in whose favour the appeal is decided, is not affected by 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 5, and the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 27. Reg. v. Huntley, 3 El. & Bl. 172; 2 C. L. R. 246; 23 L. J., M. C. 106; 18 Jur. 745.

On Countermand of Notice.]—The respondents, having received a notice of appeal against an order of removal for the next sessions, and countermand of such notice having been given too late, according to the rules of the sessions, entered the appeal and applied for costs. The sessions confirmed the order of removal, and ordered costs for attending to support the same:—Held, that the confirmation of the order of removal was bad, and that the order for costs, being ancillary to the confirmation, was bad also. Reg. v. Stoke Bliss, D. & M. 135; 6 Q. B. 158; 13 L. J., M. C. 151; 8 Jur. 536. See Reg. v. Green, 20 L. J., M. C. 168.

The justices for the borough of L. made an order for the removal of a pauper from L. to A.; notice of appeal was given by the overseers of A. to the sessions of the county in which L. was situate instead of the borough sessions, and on discovering their error, a letter was written one day before the holding of the borough sessions, abandoning the notice, whereupon the respondents attended at the last-named sessions and obtained an order for their costs:—Held, that the recorder of the borough had jurisdiction to make such order, and that under the circumstances the respondents were entitled to their costs. Reg. v. Leeds Recorder, 3 El. & El. 561; 30 L. J., M. C. 86; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 210; 3 L. T. 699; 9 W. R. 270.

When an appeal against a rate is abandoned, the sessions may confirm the rate quoad the subject-matter of the appeal and award costs (to be taxed by the clerk of the peace) to the respondents to the time of the abandonment. Reg. v. Norfolk JJ., 9 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 73.

Dismissing Appeal for want of Jurisdiction.]—An inhabitant of a parish gave notice of appeal to quarter sessions against the allowance of the surveyor's accounts. At the sessions the court dismissed the appeal for want of jurisdiction, under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, and ordered the appellant to pay the costs:—Held, that the sessions had, under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 5, jurisdiction to order the payment of costs. Reg. v. Padwick, 8 El. &. Bl. 704; 27 L. J., M. C. 113; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 360; 6 W. R. 224.

To whom Payable.]—A mistake in ordering costs to be paid directly to the party to the appeal, instead of to the clerk of the peace, under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 27, is not a defect of jurisdiction, but merely erroneous procedure. Reg. v. Binney, 1 El. & Bl. 810; 1 C. L. R. 236; 22 L. J., M. C. 127; 17 Jur. 854.

An order under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 5, for payment of the costs of appeal made in a court of quarter sessions, directing that the costs be paid to the clerk of the peace instead of the successful party, is good. Gay v. Matthews, 4 B. & S. 425; 32 L. J., M. C. 58; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 716; 7 L. T. 504; 11 W. R. 89. Affirmed on appeal, 4 B. & S. 440; 33 L. J., M. C. 14; 8 L. T. 674; 11 W. R. 922—Ex. Ch.

A party who had applied for a beer licence under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, which was refused, appealed against the refusal to the October quarter sessions, and entered into a recognizance to try the appeal, abide the judgment of the court, and pay such costs as the court might award. The appeal was dismissed, and the court ordered the appellant to pay costs to the respondent forthwith. A blank was left in the order, as to the sum which the clerk of the peace had not time to fix before the sessions adjourned. The sessions adjourned to the next November. Before the adjournment day, the clerk of the peace fixed the costs and filled up the order. After the adjourned sessions had terminated, but before the next sessions, payment was demanded of the appellant, who did not pay:—Held, that it was not necessary that the order should direct the costs to be paid to the clerk of the peace, under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 27. Reg. v. Ely JJ., 5 El. & Bl. 489; 25 L. J., M. C. 1; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1017; 4 W. R. 5.

Taxation of Costs.]—On an appeal to quarter sessions, under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 27, the sessions in October dismissed the appeal with costs. After the court had risen a clerk in the office of the clerk of the peace taxed the costs under protest of the appellant's attorney. The sessions had been adjourned, and before the day of adjournment the costs were certified, and the amount was inserted in the order of sessions. The order was removed into the queen's bench in March, for the purpose of enforcing it:—Held, that the order of sessions purporting on the face of it to be drawn up by the court in the absence of any direct statement that it was not so drawn, will be presumed to have been rightly made; and that there had been a sufficient adoption of the taxation by the adjourned sessions, although no mention of the amount was made in court. Reg. v. Phillips, 29 L. T. 100.

If a court of quarter sessions on hearing an appeal directs costs to be given and adjourns the court, it is sufficient to have the costs taxed by the clerk of the peace between the day of hearing and the adjournment day, and on the adjournment day to draw up the order, inserting a direction to pay the amount of costs ascertained on the taxation. Reg. v. Hampshire JJ., 33 L. J., M. C. 104; 9 L. T. 730; 12 W. R. 441.

If, on the hearing of an appeal against an order of removal, a court of sessions for a borough orders a parish to pay costs, under 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 82, the court must fix the amount of such costs in their order, before the close of the sessions. Reg. v. Long, 1 Q. B. 740; 1 G. & D. 367; 10 L. J., M. C. 124; 6 Jur. 98.

The quarter sessions have no power to make a general order for the costs of an appeal, though they may refer the taxation of the amount to their officers, provided they, during the sessions, adopt his decision, and incorporate it in the order. This rule is equally applicable, whether the sessions have a discretion to award costs or not. Sellwood v. Mount, 1 G. & D. 358; 1 Q. B. 726; 10 L. J., M. C. 121; 6 Jur. 78.

Where the costs of an appeal quashed are directed to be paid by a particular party, but the exact sum is not ascertained during the sitting of the court, but is afterwards taxed by the clerk of the peace, such taxation is not irregular. Reg. v. Westmoreland JJ., 1 D. & L. 178; 12 L. J., M. C. 113; 7 Jur. 898.

An order for costs made by quarter sessions must be taxed and completed before the sessions are ended. Reg. v. Budden, 6 W. R. 213.

Where a court of quarter sessions has confirmed a rate with costs, the taxation of such costs after the end of the sessions is irregular, and payment cannot be enforced. Ib.

It is not necessary that costs should be taxed in court; the justices may adopt the taxation of the clerk of the peace, and insert it in their order, provided all be done by the court before the end of the sessions. Freeman v. Read, 9 C. B. (N.S.) 301; 30 L. J., M. C. 123; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 546; 9 W. R. 141.

If the party against whom costs are given consents that the taxation shall take place after the sessions are over, and the justices give judgment for costs nunc pro tunc, the party so consenting will be precluded from afterwards objecting to their want of jurisdiction. Ib.

Where it appears that the parties to an appeal have consented that the costs of the appeal shall be taxed by the clerk of the peace, the court will not interfere, though the order for payment of costs may not have been made until after that court of quarter sessions has ceased to exist. Reg. v. Shrewsbury Ry., 3 W. R. 373.

The quarter sessions can only order costs of an appeal as ancillary to the giving of final judgment; and where upon a special case nothing of a judicial nature remains to be done by the court, it has no longer power to tax the costs. Reg. v. Hampshire JJ., 32 L. J., M. C. 46; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1212; 7 L. T. 391; 11 W. R. 122.

The court of quarter sessions is a continuing court, and has jurisdiction to construe an order made at a previous sessions. Consent to tax costs out of sessions may be implied from the general practice of quarter sessions and from the conduct of the parties. Semble, the court will not grant a rule to quash an order unless the error is apparent on the face of the order. Midland Ry. v. Edmonton Union, 63 L. J., M. C. 38; 10 R. 604; 70 L. T. 355; 17 Cox, C. C. 731.

Costs awarded by a court of quarter sessions must be taxed in court, unless there is a direction of the court or a consent of the parties to tax out of court (per Lord Halsbury and A. L. Smith, L.J.). The court of quarter sessions is not a continuing court so as to give a court sitting in a subsequent sessions jurisdiction to order taxation of costs awarded by the court at a previous session (per Lord Halsbury and A. L. Smith, L.J.). Midland Ry. v. Edmonton Union, 64 L. J., Q. B. 113; [1895] 1 Q. B. 357; 14 R. 281; 72 L. T. 206; 43 W. R. 309—C. A.

—— Waiving Objections to.]—Where a party objects to an order on the ground that the amount of costs inserted in the order was ascertained after the sessions had expired, he should protest against the taxation before the taxing officer; otherwise, if he attends on and proceeds with the taxation without protesting, he waives the objection. Watkins, Ex parte, 5 L. T. 605; 10 W. R. 249. S. P., Reg. v. Mortlock, 7 Q. B. 459; 14 L. J., M. C. 153; 9 Jur. 621.

Imprisonment for Nonpayment of Costs.]—Upon an appeal to quarter sessions against an affiliation order, the order was quashed, with costs, and the respondent, in default of distress, committed to prison:—Held, that as the word "recoverable" was used by 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, in alluding to the proceedings under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 27, for enforcing the payment of costs, the right to these costs must be taken to be a right to a sum of money recoverable summarily before a justice of the peace, within the exception in the Debtors Act, and the respondent was therefore not protected from imprisonment. Reg. v. Pratt, 39 L. J., M. C. 73; L. R. 5 Q. B. 176; 21 L. T. 750; 18 W. R. 626.

Action for Costs—Taxation by Clerk of Peace—Abandonment of Order.]—An action lies to recover costs which have been taxed by the clerk of the peace, and which arise out of an order made by justices in the case of a pauper lunatic under 16 & 17 Vict. c. 97, s. 97, and subsequently abandoned after notice of appeal to quarter sessions has been given. Dewsbury Union v. West Ham Union, 56 L. J., M. C. 89; 52 J. P. 151.

j. Reference to Arbitration.

Effect of.]—An appeal to the quarter sessions against a rate was referred by consent under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45 (Baines' Act), s. 13. By the order of reference the costs of the appeal and reference were to be in the discretion of the arbitrator. The arbitrator determined the matter of the appeal in favour of the respondents, and awarded them the costs of the appeal and reference. The award was thereupon entered as the judgment of the sessions under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 13, and the costs having been taxed after the sessions, an order of sessions was subsequently drawn up confirming the rate, and ordering the appellants to pay the costs so ascertained by taxation. The appellants objecting that the order was made without jurisdiction, because the costs had not been taxed in sessions:—Held, that it was implied in the terms of the reference that the costs should be taxed out of sessions, and that the order was therefore valid. Southampton Gaslight and Coke Co. v. Southampton Union, 46 L. J., M. C. 238; 2 Q. B. D. 371; 36 L. T. 548; 25 W. R. 671.

Before 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 12, the validity of rates was not a subject-matter of arbitration. Thorp v. Cole, 1 M. & W. 531.

An appeal against a poor-rate was referred to an arbitrator, with a discretion as to costs. The arbitrator having directed the appellant to pay the costs, without ascertaining the amount, the court referred back the award to him to ascertain the amount. The arbitrator declined to hear fresh evidence, and made another award, differing from the original only in the insertion of the amount of costs:—Held, that the arbitrator was justified in refusing to hear the evidence. Huntley v. Binbrook Overseers, 1 El. & Bl. 787; 22 L. J., Q. B. 277; 17 Jur. 571; 1 W. R. 305.

Costs of.]—On an appeal to the quarter sessions it was ordered, under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 13, that the matter in dispute should be referred to arbitration. The arbitrator awarded that the appeal be dismissed, and that the appellants do pay to the respondents their costs of the appeal:—Held, that as the order of reference was silent as to costs, the arbitrator had no power to award costs. West London Extension Ry. v. Fulham Union, 39 L. J., Q. B. 178; L. R. 5 Q. B. 361; 22 L. T. 523.

On a reference to an arbitrator of an appeal at quarter sessions, under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 13, no mention being made of costs, the appeal having been regularly adjourned from sessions to sessions, on the award being made, the subsequent sessions have no power to award any costs either of the reference or of the appeal; their duty being simply to enter the award of the arbitrator as the judgment of the court. Reg. v. Middlesex JJ., 40 L. J., M. C. 109; L. R. 6 Q. B. 220; 24 L. T. 131; 19 W. R. 744.

When an order of reference made by a court of quarter sessions is silent as to costs, the subsequent sessions, whose duty it is to enter the award as the judgment of the sessions in the appeal, have no power to deal with the question, but must leave each party to bear his own costs. Reg. v. Yorkshire, W. R., JJ., 6 B. & S. 531; 34 L. J., M. C. 142; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 810; 12 L. T. 380; 13 W. R. 738.

k. Records.

Correcting.]—Where the sessions have jurisdiction over an appeal against an order of removal, and having quashed the order, make a special entry on their records, "quashed, not on the merits," the court will not interfere and direct a mandamus to erase such entry, although the order was quashed on an objection which went to the merits. Ackworth Overseers, Ex parte, 1 New Sess. Cas. 64; 1 D. & L. 718; 13 L. J., M. C. 38; 8 Jur. 291.

Where the sessions have made a false entry on their records, a mandamus lies to compel the erasure of it, and will be granted where it is essential to the furtherance of justice. Reg. v. Yorkshire, W. R., JJ., 3 G. & D. 170; 3 Q. B. 397; 12 L. J., M. C. 148.

A party found guilty by a jury at a sessions irregularly holden, is entitled to have the record of the proceedings correctly made up according to the fact; and the court will grant a mandamus to the justices to make up such record. Rex v. Middlesex JJ., 3 N. & M. 110; 5 B. & Ad. 1113; 3 L. J., M. C. 32.

The court will not issue a mandamus to a court of criminal jurisdiction, to alter the minutes of a verdict according to the fact, or to cancel an alteration in such minutes, on a representation that the verdict was erroneously entered at the trial. Rex v. Hewes, 3 A. & E. 725; 5 L. J., M. C. 45.

Judgment quashed for Informality.]—Where an order is quashed for informality by the sessions, the court will not compel them to make a special entry of that fact upon the minutes of their proceedings; though it is very convenient that they should do so. Reg. v. Lancashire JJ., 2 G. & D. 714; 3 Q. B. 367; 12 L. J., M. C. 76, 244; 7 Jur. 327.

Compulsory Purchases.]—An act having given power to the trustees of public works to take, on payment of reasonable compensation, lands belonging to an individual, with a clause that, in the event of any disagreement about the price, either party might, after complying with certain preliminaries, cite the other before the court of quarter sessions, where an inquisition relative to the value of the land should be taken by a jury, and an order of sessions should be made and entered on record for its enforcement:—Held, that it was not requisite that such record of sessions should state on the face of it that the preliminaries required by the act had been complied with, as in favour of such order the compliance will be presumed. Reg. v. Swansea Harbour Trustees, 1 P. & D. 512; 8 A. & E. 439; 8 L. J., Q. B. 69; 3 Jur. 85.

F. COMPELLING JUSTICES TO DO THEIR DUTY.

Remedy by Rule—Under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44, s. 8.]—The remedy by rule is not simply for the benefit of justices, and confined to cases in which the jurisdiction is doubtful, but extends to all cases in which they refuse to do an act relating to the duties of their office. Reg. v. Aston, 1 L. M. & P. 491; 19 L. J., M. C. 236; 14 Jur. 1045.

The statute does not give the court power to grant a rule, where before the court could not issue a mandamus. Reg. v. Bristol JJ., 18 Jur. 426, n.; 2 W. R. 154.

Where the object of removing an order of a court of quarter sessions into the Court of Queen's Bench is to enforce such order, the proper course is to apply for a rule under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 18; but if it is sought to quash the order the application should be for a certiorari. Binbrooke Appeal, In re, 1 W. R. 318.

Where justices heard an information and dismissed it on the ground that they had no jurisdiction, at the same time offering to grant a case, the court refused to grant a rule directing them to hear and determine. McLeod, Ex parte, 3 L. T. 700.

—— Need of Protection.]—Under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44, s. 5, it is only when justices would need protection if they proceeded to do "any act relating to the duties of their office," that a rule, calling upon them to shew cause why such act should not be done, can be granted. Reg. v. Percy, 43 L. J., M. C. 45; L. R. 9 Q. B. 64; 22 W. R. 72.

Therefore, when justices had refused to hear a summons against a person for having a board over his door, stating that he was licensed to retail beer, he not being so licensed, contrary to 35 & 36 Vict. c. 74, s. 11, the court refused a rule against the justices under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44, but granted a rule for a mandamus. Ib.

—— Not where Justices have acted.]—The statute does not authorise the court to order justices to draw up one joint conviction instead of two separate convictions against each of two persons against whom a joint information has been laid, and heard and determined by the justices. Clee, In re, 1 B. C. C. 31; 21 L. J., M. C. 112.

It applies only to cases where justices have refused to act; and not where they have acted, although erroneously. Ib.

Refusal to hear Application.]—If on application to justices for a summons for an indictable offence, they have heard and determined the application, and, on the merits, have declined to grant it, the court will not grant a mandamus to compel them to review their decision. Secus, if they have refused to hear the application, or if, after hearing, have refused to grant it from a mistaken view of their duty, amounting to a declining of jurisdiction. Reg. v. Fawcett, Hodson, Ex parte, 11 Cox, C. C. 305; 19 L. T. 396.

Erroneous Construction of Statute.]—Where justices have placed an erroneous construction upon a statute, the court will grant a mandamus to hear and determine the matter. Reg. v. Cloete, 64 L. T. 90; 55 J. P. 310.

Refusal to issue Summonses.]—Upon an application to justices for summonses against certain persons to answer a charge of conspiracy to break the peace and do grievous bodily harm at a public meeting, evidence was given that a disturbance had arisen at the meeting in which the defendants took part, and that one or other of them had previously offered money to different persons if they would commit acts of violence at the meeting. The justices, after hearing the evidence, declined to issue the summonses, and a rule nisi for a mandamus having been obtained, they stated in their affidavit that upon the facts brought before them they did not feel justified in granting the application, but did not say that they thought the witnesses unworthy of credit:—Held, that the rule must be made absolute, for although under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42 (Jervis's Act), s. 9, the justices are to issue their summons "if they shall think fit," it was here evident that they had not exercised a discretion. Reg. v. Adamson, 45 L. J., M. C. 46; 1 Q. B. D. 201; 33 L. T. 840; 24 W. R. 250.

Refusal to issue Warrant.]—Justices have no power in issuing a distress warrant for the recovery of poor-rates to order that there shall be any delay in the execution of the warrant. Reg. v. Handsley, 7 Q. B. D. 398.

And where by an act, power is conferred upon justices to issue a distress warrant "if they shall think fit," they must not refuse to issue it merely because they think the act of parliament does an injustice in giving such power in the particular case. Reg. v. Boteler, 4 B. & S. 959; 33 L. J., M. C. 101; 12 W. R. 466.

Where magistrates have convicted of penalties on matters within their jurisdiction, and the convictions are regular in form, and there is no legal reason shewn why the parties convicted have not paid the penalties, the court will grant a rule to the magistrates to issue warrants to levy the amounts, and have no discretion to refuse to do so on the ground of some supposed hardship in the number of the convictions or the amount of the costs. Hartley, In re, 31 L. J., M. C. 232.

—— Validity of Order.]—The court will inquire into the validity of an order of justices before compelling them (by rule) to issue a distress warrant to enforce such order, and will refuse a rule for that purpose where the order appears to be invalid. Reg. v. Collins or Durham JJ., 21 L. J., M. C. 73; 16 Jur. 422.

—— Highway Rate—Claim of Exemption.]—On application to justices for a distress warrant to levy a highway rate upon an occupier of premises, he claimed to be exempt, by reason of having never contributed to the repair of the highways or been rated, but having always repaired so much of a highway as was within his premises, and half a bridge at the extremity of the highway. He shewed no origin of the exemption, but insisted that he was protected by 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, s. 33. The justices refused a warrant. On application for an order on the justices to issue the warrant, the court held the question too doubtful to justify them in acting under the above statute, and left the applicants to move for a mandamus, or to try the question by having another rate made, and against which the party might appeal (the objection that he ought to have appealed having been waived by consent). Reg. v. Browne, 13 Q. B. 654.

—— New Street.]—By 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, the vestry of a parish may pave any new street, and the owners of the houses forming the street shall, on demand, pay to the vestry the amount of the estimated expenses, such amount to be recovered before two justices on summons, who are to hear and determine the matter, and to make such order as to costs or otherwise as to them seems just. The owner of houses in a street having been summoned before a magistrate to shew cause why an order for the payment of his share of the estimated expense of paving the street should not be made upon him, the magistrate, after hearing the evidence, dismissed the complaint, on the ground that the street having been dedicated to the public as a highway before the act, was not a new street within the meaning of it. On a motion calling on the magistrate to shew cause why he should not hear and adjudicate:—Held (Erle, J., dissentiente), that he had done so, and that the court could not interfere. Reg. v. Dayman, 7 El. & Bl. 328; 26 L. J., M. C. 128; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 744; 5 W. R. 578.

Held, by Erle, J., that the decision by the magistrate was of a fact going to his jurisdiction, and that the court could therefore review his decision. Ib. See Reg. v. Hutchins, 50 L. J., M. C. 35; 6 Q. B. D. 300; 44 L. T. 464; 29 W. R. 724—C. A.

—— Lighting Rates—Validity of Meetings.]—In September, 1853, at a meeting of ratepayers for determining whether so much of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 90, as relates to lighting should be adopted in a parish, the act was not adopted. In December following, at a meeting for determining whether it should be adopted in part of the parish, the act was adopted. S. paid a rate assessed upon him in 1855, but having refused to pay subsequent rates, a summons was taken out against him, at the hearing of which the justices decided that the persons at the two meetings were substantially the same body, and therefore, the second being contrary to s. 16, dismissed the summons. Upon application for a rule on the justices to issue their warrant, semble that the decision of the justices was wrong, but being on a question of fact:—Held, that the court could not disturb it. Reg. v. Dunn, 7 El. & Bl. 221; 26 L. J., M. C. 74; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 341.

—— Poor-Rate—No Paupers in Particular District.]—An extra-parochial place having become a parish, and by order of the Poor Law Board added to a union, a contribution order was made by the guardians of the union upon the overseer. Upon his refusal to pay, the guardians applied to justices for a summons under 2 & 3 Vict. c. 84, s. 1, which empowers them, if they shall think fit, to issue their warrant for levying the amount. At the hearing the only ground which the overseer urged against issuing the warrant was, that, as the parish had not at that time any paupers chargeable to it, it was unjust and unreasonable that the ratepayers should be called upon to pay anything towards the expenses of the union. The justices refused to issue their warrant, adding that they did so in the exercise of their discretion. Upon application for a rule on the justices to issue their warrant, the court made it absolute, with costs. Reg. v. Boteler, 4 B. & S. 959; 33 L. J., M. C. 101; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 798; 12 W. R. 406.

Preliminary Objection.]—A party was summoned before justices upon an information, under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 108, s. 11, charging that he, "being one of the owners and managers" of a colliery, had worked the colliery without providing the boiler with a proper steam-gauge, as required by s. 4. In defence, he contended that, as there were other owners, they ought to be charged with him; but he did not deny that he was resident owner, and took an active part in the management. The justices, upon this objection alone, dismissed the complaint, considering the information to be bad on the face of it, because it shewed that there were other owners. A mandamus was granted, commanding them to hear and determine the information; for, first, the objection was invalid; and, secondly, the justices had not exercised jurisdiction, but had declined it, the objection being preliminary, though taken in defence, and not at the outset. Reg. v. Brown, 7 El. & Bl. 757; 26 L. J., M. C. 183; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 745; 5 W. R. 625. And see Reg. v. Middlesex JJ., infra, col. 680.

Adjournment for Special Case.]—A magistrate, upon a complaint regularly heard before him, gave his opinion against the complainant, but at the request of the complainant he refused to adjudicate, for the purpose of enabling the complainant to take the opinion of the Court of Queen's Bench. The defendant objected, and wished the magistrate to adjudicate and dismiss the complaint:—Held, that there was no such refusal to adjudicate as to entitle the complainant to a rule. Reg. v. Paynter, 7 El. & Bl. 328; 26 L. J., M. C. 102; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 511; 5 W. R. 267.

Interested Justice.]—W. having applied to the licensing justices for a licence for a new hotel, and the three justices who were sitting having refused it, afterwards applied to the court for a mandamus to have the case heard again, on the ground that B., one of the justices, was interested as owner in one of the licensed houses near the proposed hotel. The affidavit shewed that B.'s wife had succeeded to the licensed house, and was tenant for life, but it was a small house without hotel accommodation, and not likely to be injured by the new licence being granted:—Held, (a) that a mandamus could not be granted, because the decision not having been set aside or quashed on certiorari, the case could not be heard again; (b) if a certiorari were applied for, the affidavits ought to state that the party applying and his solicitor did not know at the time that one of the justices was interested. Reg. v. Kent JJ., 44 J. P. 298.

Where justices stopped the further hearing of a case on the ground that one of them was interested, and granted a case for a superior court as to whether such justice was interested or not:—Held, that they had not power to grant such a case, but that they might be compelled to determine the matter before them. Wakefield Local Board v. Yorkshire, W. R., JJ., 6 B. & S. 794; 35 L. J., M. C. 69; 10 Cox, C. C. 162.

Practice on Affidavits.]—Although affidavits are admissible for the purpose of shewing that a magistrate has made an order without jurisdiction, yet as the test of jurisdiction with respect to the right of a magistrate to deal with any particular case is, whether he had power to commence the inquiry, and not whether he has in the course of it come to right conclusions, affidavits are not admissible merely to disprove the existence of any fact stated in the information, because the power of the magistrate to commence the inquiry depends not upon the question whether the statements contained in the information are true or false, but upon the question whether the facts as stated in the information do or do not amount in law to an offence over which he has jurisdiction. Reg. v. Bolton, 4 P. & D. 679; 1 Q. B. 66.

A rule calling upon justices to shew cause why they should not issue a distress warrant was founded upon an affidavit, shewing the refusal only, but not stating the proceedings which took place before them, or the reason why they refused. The party shewing cause against the rule made no affidavit:—Held, that the affidavit must be construed in favour of the party making it, and that the rule should be absolute. Reg. v. Deverell, 3 El. & Bl. 372; 23 L. J., M. C. 121.

Affidavits of Justices.]—Under 35 & 36 Vict. c. 26 (the Review of Justices Decisions Act, 1872), the affidavit must be sworn by the justice himself, and affidavits sworn by persons upon whose evidence the decision of the justice is founded are not admissible. Reg. v. Sperling, 21 W. R. 461.

Costs.]—On motion against a justice of the peace under the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44, s. 5, the general rule is, that the court will order the unsuccessful party to pay costs, and will not on motion for costs enter into the merits of the original application. Reg. v. Ingham, 17 Q. B. 884; 21 L. J., M. C. 125; 16 Jur. 526.

Where no cause is shewn against the rule, the court will not make the rule absolute with costs, unless asked for by the rule. Leamington Priors Commissioners v. Moultrie, 7 D. & L. 311.

Attachment or Information.]—On an application for an attachment or criminal information against a justice of the peace for misconduct in the exercise or under the authority of his office, it must be shewn that six clear days' notice in writing has been given to him. Reg. v. Rae, Ir. R., 8 C. L. 524. And see CROWN OFFICER (CRIMINAL INFORMATION).

Mandamus to Sessions to hear Appeal.]—S. was convicted by a metropolitan police magistrate under 5 Geo. 4, c. 83, s. 4, which makes punishable as a rogue and vagabond "every person . . . . using any subtle craft, means or device, by palmistry or otherwise, to deceive and impose on any of his Majesty's subjects." The conviction described the offence as "unlawfully using certain subtle craft, means and device" (omitting the words "by palmistry or otherwise"). Upon appeal to the Middlesex Sessions, the proceedings commenced with an objection from S. that the omission of the words made the conviction bad. The justices, after hearing the point argued, retired, and on their return the assistant judge gave what purported to be the decision of the sessions, quashing the conviction on the objection taken to it. Upon application for a mandamus to the sesssons to hear the appeal on the merits, it was proposed to shew by affidavits from the justices that the decision given by the assistant judge was contrary to the opinion of the majority of the justices forming the court, and that after such opinion had been communicated to him, he persisted in giving his decision as that of the sessions:—Held, that the order of sessions having been duly recorded, it was too late to inquire whether it did or did not represent the opinion of the majority of the justices, and that the decision upon the form of the conviction was not a decision upon a preliminary matter, but a hearing and adjudication upon the merits, which, upon a mandamus, could not be reviewed. Reg. v. Middlesex JJ., Slade, In re, 46 L. J., M. C. 225; 2 Q. B. D. 516; 36 L. T. 402; 25 W. R. 610.

The court, having quashed an order of sessions which quashed the rate, will not, thereupon, issue a mandamus to the sessions to enter continuances. The proper course for the appellant is to apply to the court for an order to the sessions to hear the appeal. Reg. v. Cheltenham Commissioners, 1 G. & D. 167; 1 Q. B. 467; 10 L. J., M. C. 99.

—— Where Case Stated.]—When the court of quarter sessions dismisses an appeal subject to a case, the court will not grant a mandamus to enter continuances and hear the appeal. Rex v. Suffolk JJ., 1 N. & P. 306; 6 A. & E. 109; W. W. & D. 7; 6 L. J., M. C. 37.

The court will not grant a mandamus commanding the justices in sessions to try an appeal dismissed for want of notice of trial, where the court of quarter sessions has granted a case upon the question whether it had been rightly dismissed, which has been abandoned by the party applying for the mandamus. Rex v. Yorkshire W. R. JJ., 3 N. & M. 757; 5 B. & Ad. 677.

—— Time for.]—On the 5th January, 1844, the sessions dismissed an appeal, giving the appellants the option of stating a case, or applying for a mandamus. No case was brought up, but an application for a mandamus was made on the 30th April following:—Held, that the application was not too late, and a mandamus was granted. Reg. v. Cheshire JJ., 2 New Sess. Cas. 420; 1 B. C. Rep. 164; 15 L. J., M. C. 114; 10 Jur. 808.

G. LIABILITY OF, TO ACTION.

1. LIABILITY, IN RESPECT OF WHAT.

Acts done in Execution of the Office.]—A justice of the peace is entitled to the protection of the 7th and 8th sections of the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 16, with respect to any act done by him under the bonâ fide belief in the existence of a state of facts which, if existing, would have justified the act as an act done by him in the execution of his office. The reasonableness of such belief, though an element in determining its bona fides, is not essential to his right to claim the benefit of these provisions. Chamberlain v. King (L. R. 6 C. P. 474) followed. Rochfort v. Rynd, 8 L. R., Ir. 204. Affirmed in C. A.

Upon an application under these sections to set aside proceedings in an action against a justice of the peace for an act alleged by him to have been done in execution of his office, the affidavit in support of the motion must shew, not only that he bonâ fide believed that he was authorised as such justice to act as he did, but must also allege facts shewing that such a belief might have been entertained. An allegation that the act complained of was done bonâ fide without malice, and in ignorance of any cause against the doing thereof, and was done in execution of his office as such justice, is insufficient. The affidavit should state the facts proved before the justice, and the belief formed by him on such facts. Ib.

A magistrate who commits a party in a case where he has no jurisdiction is liable to an action of trespass; but where, supposing the facts alleged to be true, the magistrate has jurisdiction, his liability to be sued, or his exemption from such liability, on the ground of jurisdiction, cannot be affected by the truth or falsehood of these facts, or by the sufficiency or insufficiency of the evidence adduced for the purpose of establishing them. Carr v. Mountain, 1 Man. & G. 257; 1 Scott (N.R.) 132; 9 L. J., M. C. 90.

A magistrate is not justified in removing a driver from one part of a cart to another to obtain the name of the owner. Jones v. Owen, 2 D. & R. 600; 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 139.

An information brought before a magistrate, which charges an offence within his cognisance, is sufficient to give the magistrate jurisdiction, and to protect him from an action for false imprisonment, although the information discloses no legal evidence against the alleged offender, and even although it purports to be founded upon inadmissible hearsay evidence. Carr v. Mountain, supra.

Knowledge on the part of the committing magistrate that the prisoner would be subject to restriction unnecessarily severe, in the gaol to which the commitment is made, does not make the magistrate a trespasser, unless he expressly directs such treatment to be adopted in the particular case. Ib.

An action will not lie against a magistrate for anything done by him in the discharge of his duty, unless he is made acquainted with every fact necessary to enable him to determine when called upon to act. Pike v. Carter, 10 Moore, 376; 3 Bing. 78; 3 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 169.

Thus an action of trespass does not lie against justices acting upon a complaint made to them on oath, by the terms of which they have jurisdiction; though the real facts of the case might not have supported such complaint, if such facts were not laid before them at the time by the party complained against having notice of such complaint, and being properly summoned to attend. Lowther v. Radnor (Earl), 8 East, 113. See 20 R. R. 542, n.

If a person is charged on oath before a magistrate with an offence amounting to felony, and he issues his warrant; and, on the party being brought before him, the charge is substantiated, and the offender is committed to prison, the magistrate committing is not liable in trespass for false imprisonment, although the charge turns out to be unfounded. Mills v. Collett, 3 M. & P. 242; 6 Bing. 85; 7 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 97; 31 R. R. 355.

Justices who have issued a warrant of distress against a person occupying lands within the limits of their jurisdiction for non-performance of statute duty under 13 Geo. 3, c. 78, ss. 34–37, cannot be proceeded against by action. Fawcett v. Foulis, 6 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 44.

A justice cannot justify the committing of a party charged to the custody of a constable, in order that he may compromise with the complainant until the party has been actually convicted. Bridget v. Coyney, 6 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 42.

—— Protection under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44, ss. 1, 2.]—These sections must be read together, and therefore, where, in the course of a matter transacted before a justice, there has been an excess of jurisdiction, the 2nd section does not apply unless the action in which it is sought to be applied is brought for an act done in respect of that part of the matter, or some part of it, which was beyond the jurisdiction. Barton v. Bricknell, 13 Q. B. 393; 20 L. J., M. C. 1; 15 Jur. 668.

The statute 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44, s. 2, which provides that a conviction shall be quashed before an action can be brought against the committing magistrate, applies only to cases where there has been a conviction. When a person has been taken into custody and remanded on a charge which turns out to be false, the court will not grant a certiorari for the purpose of quashing the warrant under which he was remanded preliminary to his bringing an action against the justice who signed it. Reg. v. Ely JJ., 4 W. R. 13.

—— Negligence in building Police Station.]—The building of a police station is an act done by justices in the execution of their office; and the justices, if sued for negligence in the building or maintaining thereof, and for damage arising therefrom, are entitled to the protection afforded by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44. Hardy v. North Riding JJ., 50 J. P. 663.

Protection of Provincial Magistrates in India.]—The 21 Geo. 3, c. 70, s. 24, protecting provincial magistrates in India from actions for any wrong or injury done by them in the exercise of their offices, gives them only the same measure of exemption as that which is given to magistrates in England under similar circumstances, that is, an exemption in cases where they have acted bonâ fide. Where they have exceeded their jurisdiction, the onus of shewing that they knew, or had the means of knowing, the want of jurisdiction, lies upon the party complaining. Calder v. Halket, 3 Mont. 28.

Express Malice.]—A justice of the peace may be acting maliciously and without reasonable and probable cause, and yet be acting in the execution of his duty as such justice; as, for instance, where maliciously and without reasonable and probable cause he excites a person to bring a complaint before him. Kirby v. Simpson, 10 Ex. 358; 2 C. L. R. 1286; 23 L. J., M. C. 165; 18 Jur. 983.

A count stated that the defendant, being a justice of the peace, unlawfully and maliciously, and without reasonable or probable cause, took an information of W. against the plaintiff, and wrongfully, wilfully, maliciously and without reasonable or probable cause, as the defendant well knew, convicted the plaintiff, and he was thereby compelled to pay a sum of money; and that upon appeal to the quarter sessions, the conviction was afterwards quashed. A verdict having been found for the plaintiff, the court refused to arrest the judgment. Gelen v. Hall, 2 H. & N. 379; 27 L. J., M. C. 78; 5 W. R. 757.

Quære, whether an action is maintainable against a justice of the peace for wilfully and maliciously, and without reasonable and probable cause, convicting a person in a penalty in a matter in which he has jurisdiction, and which penalty is paid, but the conviction has been subsequently quashed. Ib.

Where a justice of the peace maliciously grants a warrant against a person without any information upon a supposed charge of felony, the remedy against the justice is trespass, and not case. Morgan v. Hughes, 2 Term Rep. 225.

Reasonable and probable Cause.] — Where means of knowledge, as distinguished from knowledge actual or imputed, is relied upon to sustain an action against a justice of the peace, acting judicially, for an act done without jurisdiction, the action will lie only when he has acted maliciously and without reasonable and probable cause. Johnston v. Meldon, 30 L. R., Ir. 15.

Absence of Malice—Excess of Jurisdiction.]—In an action against justices for acting in excess of jurisdiction, a declaration without any allegation that they acted maliciously and without reasonable and probable cause is good. Pease v. Chaytor, 1 B. & S. 658; 31 L. J., M. C. 1; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 482; 5 L. T. 280; 10 W. R. 16.

Discretion—Refusing to Admit to Bail.]—The duty of a magistrate in respect of admitting to bail is judicial; and, therefore, an action cannot be maintained against him for refusing to admit to bail a person charged with a misdemeanour, and entitled to be admitted to bail, without proof of malice. Linford v. Fitzroy, 13 Q. B. 240; 3 New Sess. Cas. 438; 18 L. J., M. C. 108; 13 Jur. 303.

Remarking on Conduct of Constable.]—It is the duty of a magistrate to express his opinion of the conduct of police constables, in order that the police commissioners may have proper information on which to proceed in making inquiries to enable them to regulate the force under their direction. Kendillon v. Maltby, Car. & M. 402; 2 M. & Rob. 438.

—— Of Witnesses.]—An action will not lie against a magistrate for words spoken in pronouncing judgment, of a witness in the case. Ib.

Refusal to License.]—An action does not lie against justices of the peace for refusing a licence to keep an inn or an alehouse. Basset v. Godschall, 3 Wils. 121.

Wrongful Appointment of Overseers.]—Seven borough magistrates, including the mayor, assembled to appoint overseers. The mayor drew from his pocket two blank forms, with three seals ready attached; filled them up with the names of two persons of his own political party, handed them to the two magistrates sitting next to himself, and, on their being signed, immediately despatched them by a constable to be served. As soon as the constable had left the room, the four other magistrates, who had not observed the mayor's proceedings, requested him to nominate two other overseers; and, upon his refusing to put the question, appointed them without his concurrence. The mayor afterwards caused a distress to be levied on the plaintiff for refusing to pay a rate made by the overseers appointed by the mayor. The plaintiff sued the mayor in trespass; the jury was directed that they might find for the plaintiff, if they thought the mayor's appointment of overseers to be fraudulent. The jury having found it not fraudulent:—Held, that the action was not maintainable; the appointment of the overseers being a judicial act, performed without fraud, at a meeting competent, in point of jurisdiction, to perform it, and the act being verified by a sufficient number of signatures to satisfy the statute regulating the mode of appointment. Penny v. Slade, 7 Scott, 285; 5 Bing. (N.C.) 319; 1 Arn. 539; 8 L. J., C. P. 221.

Jurisdiction.]—If a party makes a complaint of another to a magistrate in a matter over which he has a general jurisdiction, who thereupon issues his warrant, by force of which an arrest is made, neither the party complaining, nor the magistrate, is liable in trespass; and the only remedy for the party aggrieved is in an action for a malicious prosecution. But if the matter was one in which the magistrate had no jurisdiction at all, then the latter is a trespasser. West v. Smallwood, 3 M. & W. 418; 6 D. P. C. 580; 7 L. J., Ex. 144; 2 Jur. 328.

An action will not lie against a magistrate for anything done under a conviction, unless there is an entire want of jurisdiction. Fawcett v. Foulis, 7 B. & C. 394; 1 M. & Ry. 102; 6 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 44.

A justice who acted without jurisdiction in convicting for an offence was not protected by 43 Geo. 3, c. 141, s. 1, against an action of trespass, although the conviction might have been quashed. Jones v. Gurdon, 2 G. & D. 133; 2 Q. B. 600; 11 L. J., M. C. 45; 6 Jur. 482.

Trespass is maintainable against a justice, if, in the particular act of issuing the warrant, the magistrate acted without, or in excess of, jurisdiction, although he had a general jurisdiction over the subject-matter of inquiry. Lawrenson v. Hill, 10 Ir. C. L. R. 177.

In such a case, the magistrate is not protected, although he bonâ fide believed that he was acting within his jurisdiction. Ib.

Three magistrates, acting under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 60, committed the crier of a borough to the county gaol until he should deliver up the bell, which was stated in the conviction and commitment to be the property of the council of the borough. This conviction was afterwards quashed on appeal:—Held, that the magistrates had jurisdiction to convict; and, there being nothing on the face of the conviction to make it void, that trespass would not lie against the magistrates. Baylis v. Strickland, 1 Scott (N.R.) 540; 1 Man. & G. 591; 10 L. J., M. C. 61; 4 Jur. 823. And see Cave v. Mountain, and cases, ante, col. 681.

Conviction—What is Sufficient Appearance—Summons after Conviction.]—B. had been convicted by a magistrate of an offence under the Copyright of Designs Act (6 & 7 Vict. c. 65), and ordered to pay a penalty. Upon nonpayment he was summoned to shew cause why he should not be committed in default of payment, and be further dealt with according to law. He did not attend to the summons personally, but his counsel and attorney appeared for him. The magistrate refused to proceed in his absence, and issued a warrant for his apprehension to answer to the complaint, and to be further dealt with according to law, under which he was afterwards apprehended and imprisoned. The conviction was afterwards quashed. In an action for false imprisonment against the magistrate:—Held, first, that he was not protected by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44, s. 2, inasmuch as it did not apply to default in appearance to a summons after conviction. Bessell v. Wilson, 1 El. & Bl. 489; 22 L. J., M. C. 94; 17 Jur. 664; 1 W. R. 126.

Held, secondly, that even if the summons had been within the section, the appearance to it by counsel and attorney was sufficient. Ib.

Where Ten Days' Notice not given.]—Where penalties are to be recovered by information before justices, under a statute which directs that they shall summon the person against whom the information is exhibited, to appear and plead to, and to attend the hearing of the information, at a time and place named in the summons, such summons to be served "ten days at the least" before the time appointed:—Held, that there must be ten clear days between the service and the day of hearing; and that, where the conviction shewed on its face that the party was convicted ex parte on default of appearance to a summons appointing too early a day, such conviction was no defence to an action of trespass for enforcing it. Mitchell v. Foster, 12 A. & E. 472; 4 P. & D. 150; 9 D. P. C. 527; 9 L. J., M. C. 95.

Where Appeal pending.]—An order of affiliation having been made on the plaintiff, he gave notice of appeal, and entered into the required recognizance for payment of costs. The quarter sessions confirmed the order, subject to a case. Afterwards, upon nonpayment of the sum ordered to be paid, a justice of the peace issued his warrant to take the plaintiff before two justices. In an action of trespass against the justice:—Held, by Lord Campbell, C.J., and Erle, J., that neither the giving of notice of appeal and entering into the recognizance, nor the confirmation of the order, subject to a case, suspended the jurisdiction of the justice to issue his warrant, under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 101, s. 3; and by Coleridge, J., that the granting the warrant being for the purpose of a judicial inquiry, whether or not the plaintiff ought to pay the money, was within the justice's jurisdiction, notwithstanding the pendency of the appeal, and therefore the action was barred, there being no allegation that the act was done maliciously, and without reasonable and probable cause. Kendall v. Wilkinson, 4 El. & Bl. 680; 3 C. L. R. 668; 24 L. J., M. C. 89; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 538; 3 W. R. 234.

Warrant of Commitment Irregular.]—Justices convicted the plaintiff in a penalty of 2*l.* and costs, or two months' imprisonment; against this decision, which was given orally, he gave notice of appeal, and immediately left the court. A conviction and warrant of commitment were afterwards drawn up, in which blanks were left for the amount of costs to be inserted, and so signed by the justices. The blanks were afterwards filled up by the justices' clerk, and the plaintiff was arrested on the warrant, when he, for the first time, became aware of the amount of costs:—Held, that the signing in blank by the justices was a mere irregularity, and not an excess of jurisdiction; and that the plaintiff, having brought an action for false imprisonment against the justices, was rightly nonsuited under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44, s. 1. Bott v. Ackroyd, 28 L. J., M. C. 207; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1053; 7 W. R. 420.

In an action against a magistrate for false imprisonment, the plaintiff proved a commitment for a certain alleged offence. The defendant proved a conviction of the plaintiff for an offence differing from that recited in the commitment:—Held, that this conviction was no justification of the imprisonment. Rogers v. Jones, 5 D. & R. 268; 3 B. & C. 409; R. & M. 129; 3 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 40.

—— For Indefinite Time.]—A justice's warrant, committing a party in default of his finding sureties to keep the peace, is bad if the commitment is for no definite time, but until he shall find such sureties or be discharged by due course of law. And an action lies against the justices for committing on such warrant; and bona fides is no defence. Prickett v. Gratrex, 8 Q. B. 1021; 2 New Sess. Cas. 429; 15 L. J., M. C. 145; 10 Jur. 566.

Where Two Convictions.]—Where a person had been convicted under the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 34, and committed to prison by justices of the peace, and they had drawn up two convictions, one of which had been returned to the sessions, but the other not:—Held, that in an action of trespass and false imprisonment brought against them by such person, they might rely on both the convictions. Fuller v. Brown, 3 New Sess. Cas. 603.

Order for Possession Reversed.]—Two magistrates having, at a landlord's request, given possession of a dwelling-house as deserted and unoccupied, pursuant to 11 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 16, the judges of assize of the county, on appeal, made an order for the restitution of the farm to the tenant, with costs. The latter brought an action of trespass for the eviction, against the magistrates, the constables, and the landlord:—Held, that the proceeding before the magistrates was an answer to the action on behalf of all. Ashcroft v. Bourne, 3 B. & Ad. 684; 1 L. J., K. B. 209.

Invalid Orders.]—A justice is liable in trespass if he commits a person for disobedience to an order which turns out to be invalid. Wilkins v. Hemsworth, 3 N. & P. 55; 7 A. & E. 807; 7 L. J., M. C. 28; 2 Jur. 94, 301.

Goods Seized upon Irregular Warrants.]—If goods are seized upon a warrant founded on a conviction improperly framed, the magistrates issuing the warrant are liable in trespass. Newman v. Hardwicke (Earl), 8 A. & E. 124; 3 N. & P. 368; 7 L. J., M. C. 101.

A local act prohibited the exposing for sale of goods on the footway of a street, under a penalty of 10*s.*; and justices had a summary jurisdiction to enforce the payment of the penalty. By a subsequent act, the section in the first act creating the offence was repealed and re-enacted, with this difference, that the penalty was made 20*s.* instead of 10*s.* There was no clause in the last act as to the mode in which the penalty should be enforced:—Held, that, as the first act was repealed by the second, the justices, having granted a distress warrant for the purpose of enforcing payment of a penalty imposed by this latter act, were liable to an action of trespass. Ward v. Stevenson, 1 New Sess. Cas. 162.

Cost of Removal of Pauper.]—A lunatic having a settlement in J., but having the status of irremovability from M., was, in 1851, sent to an asylum from M., which was not comprised in any union; and an order for the expenses was made on J. The 16 & 17 Vict. c. 97, having afterwards passed, J. refused to pay any expenses incurred subsequently to 29th September, 1853. Two justices issued a distress warrant to levy the arrears under which the goods of one of the overseers of J. were seized:—Held, that the justices had no jurisdiction to issue the warrant; the order on J. being by implication annulled by 16 & 17 Vict. c. 97, and there being no obligation on J. to take any steps to get rid of it. Knowles v. Trafford, 7 El. & Bl. 144; 26 L. J., M. C. 188; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1018; 5 W. R. 741—Ex. Ch.

Payment of Church-rates—Validity of Objections.]—Justices are not liable to an action if they honestly, though erroneously, decide that an objection to the validity of a church-rate made at the hearing of a complaint for non-payment of arrears, is not made bonâ fide, and proceed to adjudicate and issue their warrant to enforce payment. Pease v. Chaytor, 3 B. & S. 620; 32 L. J., M. C. 121; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 664; 8 L. T. 613; 11 W. R. 563.

—— Within what Time.]—An order for payment of a church-rate was made by two justices more than six months after there had been a demand and a refusal, and was therefore bad. An action was brought against the justices, but in the declaration there was no allegation that the justices had acted maliciously in issuing the order:—Held, that, without such an allegation, the declaration was bad, as the justices were not liable for issuing an order which they bonâ fide believed they had power to do. Sommerville v. Mirehouse, 1 B. & S. 652; 3 L. T. 294; 9 W. R. 53.

Poor-rate — Amount — Form of Warrant.]—A warrant by two justices of a county, after reciting the making of a rate, the assessment of the plaintiff in 17*l.* thereto, and his refusal to pay the same, and that two justices had issued their warrant to levy 17*l.* 19*s.* 6*d.*, and the further sum of 6*s.* for costs incurred in the premises, making in the whole 18*l.* 5*s.* 6*d.*, by distress, commanded the constable to apprehend and take the plaintiff to the house of correction, there to remain "until payment of the said sum":—Held, bad in toto, and trespass lay against the justices and the constable for the arrest and imprisonment under it. Clark v. Woods, 2 Ex. 395; 3 New Sess. Cas. 253; 17 L. J., M. C. 189.

A party having been arrested under the foregoing warrant, and having paid under protest the money specified in it, is entitled to recover back the whole of the money so paid, although the sum of 17*l.* 19*s.* 6*d.* was really due from him in respect of the rate. Ib.

—— Places Liable.]—The poor-law commissioners, by an order directed nine parishes, townships and places to be formed into a union, to be called the Pately Bridge Union, for the administration of the law for the relief of the poor. In the margin of the order were enumerated eleven townships; first Beverley; second, Dacre; and the commissioners ordered that a board should be constituted, fourteen to be the number of guardians, three for Beverley and two for Dacre, treating them as separate townships. They then directed them to contribute to a common fund for providing a workhouse, and afterwards fixed the proportions payable by each township or place. The chairman and guardians of the union made an order on the plaintiff and three others, as overseers of the parish of Dacre-cum-Beverley (treating the two as one township), for payment of 500*l.*, by way of contribution towards the relief of the poor. This order having been disobeyed, the magistrates issued their summons to the plaintiff and the other overseers, as overseers of Dacre-cum-Beverley, and afterwards issued a warrant of distress, under which his goods were taken. In trespass against them for a seizure of these goods under the warrant:—Held, that 2 & 3 Vict. c. 84, s. 1, gave to the magistrates a power similar to that exercised by them in enforcing a legal poor-rate, but that, in the absence of a legal obligation to pay the contribution by the party whose goods had been seized, the magistrates had acted without jurisdiction, and were liable in an action of trespass, and that 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44, s. 1, which in certain cases makes a magistrate liable in an action on the case only, did not therefore apply. Newbould v. Coltman, 6 Ex. 189; 20 L. J., M. C. 149.

Liability for Repair of Bridge.]—By a local act, the owners and occupiers of lands in the district were empowered to rate the owners and occupiers of abbey lands, for the purpose of raising funds for the repair of bridges. It enacted, that if any owner or occupier of any land in respect of which a rate had been imposed by virtue of the act should refuse to pay the same, a justice, on proof of demand, might summon, and on due proof issue a distress warrant. By subsequent sections, an appeal was given to any person claiming exemption, on the ground that the lands rated were not abbey lands; and the decision of the quarter sessions on such appeal was final. The plaintiff having been rated in respect of lands which the jury found not to be abbey lands, and having refused to pay upon summons, a magistrate issued a distress warrant, under which his goods were seized:—Held, that he was not protected by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44, s. 1, or by a similar clause in the local act. Pedley v. Davis, 10 C. B. (N.S.) 492; 30 L. J., C. P. 374; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 263; 5 L. T. 253. See Allen v. Waldegrave, infra, col. 690.

Criminal Proceedings.]—A magistrate cannot be proceeded against criminally until the action against him is discontinued. Rex v. Fielding, 2 Kenyon, 386; 2 Burr. 720.

2. Action Against.

Parties—Individual Liability on Contracts.]—A single magistrate is not liable to pay for the expenses incurred in preparing plans for a county gaol, advertised for by the sessions of which he was one. Tuck v. Ruggles, 5 Esp. 237.

By an act of parliament for rebuilding a bridge, justices of the peace were empowered to contract for its erection, and the contractor was to give sufficient security for the due performance of his contract to the clerk of the peace; and the justices were empowered to appoint superintending justices at a general quarter sessions. The expenses of rebuilding the bridge were to be charged on the county rates, and all actions or proceedings at law, to be prosecuted or defended in pursuance of the act, were to be brought in the name of the clerk of the peace, who should be deemed the plaintiff or defendant, and be reimbursed all such costs and expenses as he should have paid, out of the money arising by virtue of the act. The superintending justices at the general sessions covenanted by deed with the plaintiff, who undertook to rebuild the bridge, that the justices or the treasurer of the county should pay him a certain sum by instalments, until the bridge was completed. In an action brought against such justices by the plaintiff for nonpayment of two of the instalments:—Held, that they were not individually liable; and that his remedy was by action against the clerk of the peace. Allen v. Waldegrave, 2 Moore. 621; 8 Taunt. 566; 20 R. R. 560.

By 8 & 9 Vict. c. 126, s. 17, a select number of the justices for a county or a borough, called the committee of visitors, were empowered to contract for plans for the erection of a lunatic asylum for the county, and by s. 16 they were enabled to sue and be sued in the name of their clerk:—Held, that an action was maintainable against the committee of visitors in the name of their clerk, in respect of a contract so entered into by them, although the plaintiff might have no means of enforcing judgment when obtained. Kendall v. King, 17 C. B. 483; 25 L. J., C. P. 132; 4 W. R. 389.

—— In Replevin.]—An action of replevin may be maintained against magistrates alone, who issue improperly a warrant of distress against the goods of a party. Jones v. Johnson, 5 Ex. 862; 20 L. J., M. C. 11.

Change of Venue.]—In an action against justices for falsely imprisoning the plaintiff on a charge of feloniously beginning to demolish a house contrary to the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 41, the court granted a rule to change the venue, on a suggestion that a fair trial could not be had in the county. Thomas v. Saunders, 5 B. & Ad. 462.

Brought in County Court.]—Where a magistrate who has been sued in a county court for an act done in the execution of his office has given notice of his objection to be sued in such court, he is not entitled to remove the plaint by certiorari into a superior court. Weston v. Sneyd, 1 H. & N. 703; 26 L. J., Ex. 161; 5 W. R. 317.

Payment into Court.]—In an action against a magistrate, after issue joined, he may move to withdraw the general issue, pay money into court, and plead de novo. Devaynes v. Boys, 2 Marsh. 356; 7 Taunt. 33. S. P., Nestor v. Newcome, 4 D. & R. 776; 3 B. & C. 159; 2 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 211.

Justices are not bound to state in the plea the character in which they make the payment. Aston v. Perkes, 3 D. & L. 655; 15 M. & W. 385; 15 L. J., Ex. 241.

Where a notice of action given to a justice of the peace for an act done by him in the execution of his office, does not clearly and explicitly contain the cause of action, a tender of amends will not cure the defect. Martins v. Upcher, 1 D. (N.S.) 555; 6 Jur. 582.

Evidence — Justifying Warrant.] — After a summons issued, information was given before the magistrate, that the party against whom the summons had been granted was going out of the magistrate's jurisdiction, who thereupon issued his warrant, and the person was taken into custody, and afterwards brought his action against the magistrate for false imprisonment. At the trial the summons was put in, and the warrant, but not the information:—Held, that the evidence was not sufficient, and that the magistrate must put in the information to justify his warrant for apprehension, for that without the proper information the magistrate is guilty of an act of false imprisonment in issuing his warrant. Stevens v. Clark, Car. & M. 509; 2 M. & Rob. 435.

Damages.]—Before 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44, s. 13, when a party was committed for non-payment of a penalty, in a case where the magistrate had no jurisdiction, and after a part of the imprisonment, he was discharged on the penalty being paid, the jury might, in an action for false imprisonment against the magistrate, include the amount of the penalty in the damages, if satisfied that the plaintiff paid it, or that it was paid in such a way that he was liable to repay the amount to the person who actually advanced the money. Mason v. Barker, 1 Car. & K. 100.

If a magistrate commits a person to prison in a case in which he has no jurisdiction, he is liable for all the circumstances that usually attend the execution of a warrant of commitment, such as the party being handcuffed, having his hair cut short at the prison, and his being put in a bath there; but not for any violence or excess of the officers. Ib.

Limit of Time.]—Where to a certiorari to bring up an order of justices they returned that there was no order in writing, and the six months within which an action must be brought would elapse before cause could be shewn against the present application, the court made absolute the rule to quash the return and granted a rule nisi to draw up an order and return it with the warrant issued upon it. Reg. v. Trafford, 4 W. R. 55. And see LIMITATION (STATUTES OF).

Costs.]—The 43 Geo. 3, c. 141, s. 2, which deprived a plaintiff of his costs of suit against a magistrate, if the latter proved at the trial that the plaintiff was guilty of the offence imputed, only applied to cases where the conviction had been quashed. Rogers v. Jones, 5 D. & R. 268; 3 B. & C. 409; R. & M. 129; 3 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 40; 27 R. R. 389. S. P., Gray v. Cookson, 16 East, 13.

Notice of Action and Form of.]—See PRACTICE (NOTICE OF ACTION).

H. CLERKS TO JUSTICES.

Appointment.]—A clerk to justices of a borough, appointed under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 102, holds only during the pleasure of the justices, and therefore a quo warranto will not lie for his office. Reg. v. Fox, 8 El. & Bl. 939; 27 L. J., Q. B. 151; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 410; 6 W. R. 282.

A clerk to justices in petty sessions, appointed by order of such sessions, has no legal hold upon his office, nor will the court interfere if he is dismissed summarily and without any cause being assigned. Sandys, Ex parte, 1 N. & M. 591; 4 B. & Ad. 863.

Re-appointment.]—If a clerk to justices of a borough, who was such at the time of the passing of the Municipal Corporations Amendment Act (24 & 25 Vict. c. 75), and has not ceased to hold the office, is appointed clerk of the peace of the county in which such borough is situate, the justices of the borough may re-appoint him as their clerk, and will be protected by the proviso to s. 5 from liability to any penalty for so doing. Brown v. Evans, 35 L. T. 877; 24 W. R. 937—C. A.

Clerks to Borough Justices.]—See CORPORATIONS (OFFICERS).

Liability for Salary.]—See LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

Fees—Penalty for Excessive.]—In an action under 26 Geo. 2, c. 14, s. 2, to recover a penalty against a clerk to justices of the peace for extorting excessive fees, the venue is local by 31 Eliz. c. 5, s. 2; for 26 Geo. 2, c. 14, s. 2, gives a right of action for the penalty to any person, and not to the party aggrieved alone. Lewis v. Davis, 44 L. J., Ex. 86; L. R. 10 Ex. 86; 23 W. R. 635—Ex. Ch.

—— Table of.]—Semble, that the power given by 26 Geo. 2, c. 14, to justices of the peace from time to time to make a table of fees may be exercised, although no table was made in 1753 as required by the statute. Ib. See now 40 & 41 Vict. c. 43.

If a clerk to justices demands and receives a fee for the taking of recognizances, as for a principal and two sureties, there being in fact only one surety, he is not guilty of an offence or liable to a forfeiture, under 26 Geo. 2, c. 14, s. 2, if he actually believed that there were two sureties. Bowman v. Blyth, 7 El. & Bl. 26; 26 L. J., M. C. 57; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 359, 886; 5 W. R. 86.

A table of fees to be taken by the clerks of justices was made at the June quarter sessions, and submitted for approval to the next October quarter sessions, when the further consideration thereof was adjourned to the next Epiphany sessions; and at these last-mentioned sessions the table (with some alterations) was approved of, and the same was afterwards ratified and confirmed by the judges at the next following assizes:—Held, that the table was not duly approved, ratified, and confirmed, under the 26 Geo. 2, c. 14, s. 1, as the approval ought to have been at the October sessions, and such sessions had no power to adjourn the consideration thereof. Ib.

—— Agreement as to—Indictable Offence.]—A clerk to the justices of a borough, which had no separate quarter sessions, was in partnership with A., who was clerk of the peace for the county. By arrangement between him and A. the former was entitled to receive, and did receive, one-half of the fees taken by A.:—Held, that such clerk was liable to an indictment, under the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 102, as being interested in the prosecution of offenders within the proviso in that section. Fox v. Reg. (in error), 1 El. & El. 729; 29 L. J., M. C. 54; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1248; 1 L. T. 216; 8 W. R. 93—Ex. Ch.

—— Who Liable for.]—A railway station-master gave a person into the custody of a police constable on the charge of picking pockets at the railway station, and he afterwards appeared and gave evidence before two justices, who convicted the prisoner under the Vagrant Act (5 Geo. 4, c. 83), of frequenting a place of public resort with intent to commit a felony:—Held, that the station-master was not liable for the fees payable to the clerk of the justices in respect of such conviction. Reddish v. Hitchinor, 48 L. J., M. C. 31; 40 L. T. 65.

—— Payment by Superintendent of Police.]—An order under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 109, s. 17, and 12 & 13 Vict. c. 20, s. 2, on overseers, requiring them to pay a sum of money to the superintendent of police, for fees due to him, is not supported by evidence that the fees were those really due to the clerk of the justices in vagrant cases, and had been paid in the first instance to him by the superintendent, who sought the order as a means of reimbursing himself. Neithrop Overseers v. Whitecoat, 9 L. T. 383.

—— Deducting from Payment to Receiver—Police Summonses.]—By 10 Geo. 4, c. 44, s. 37, all sums adjudged by justices of the peace to be paid for any offence against the act, are to be paid to the receiver of the metropolitan police district, who is to apply all moneys applicable to the payment of salaries of the police force, and all other charges and expenses in carrying the act into execution. By 2 & 3 Vict. cc. 47 and 71, and 3 & 4 Vict. c. 84, penalties inflicted by the magistrates within the metropolitan police district are to be paid over to the receiver, who is directed to pay salaries, expenses, and charges attending the metropolitan police courts, and in carrying the acts into execution, and to apply the sums which he receives to the purposes of the act. And the clerks of the magistrates within the district are to keep account of such fines and penalties to be rendered to the receiver quarterly, and the magistrates are to cause the amount to be paid to him. The clerks of the justices of a part of Surrey within the metropolitan police district for which no police court had been established, claimed to deduct from the amount payable to the receiver the amount of their fees for summonses granted on the application of officers of the police force:—Held, that the clerks were entitled to such fees; but that they were not entitled to deduct them from the amount payable to the receiver, or in any way to recover them from him, the payment of such fees not falling under the description of carrying the acts into execution. Wray v. Chapman, 14 Q. B. 742; 19 L. J., M. C. 155; 14 Jur. 687.

Books relating to Office—Delivery.]—When certain books relating to the office of justices' clerk were in the possession of the clerk at the time of his death, and the executor refused to deliver them up to the justices upon the ground that they contained private entries, that there was a lien upon them for fees, and that they had been purchased with the clerk's money, a mandamus to compel the delivery was granted. Reg. v. Rastrick, 6 W. R. 654.

Acting as Solicitor.]—The clerk to the justices should not act as solicitor for one of the parties on a prosecution before his own bench of justices, but such an interest in the clerk does not affect the jurisdiction of the bench. Reg. v. Brakenridge, 48 J. P. 293.

I. CLERK OF THE PEACE.

1. Appointment.

By Parol.]—The appointment may be by parol. and without deed. Saunders v. Owen, 2 Salk. 467.

By Whom.]—The appointment to the office of clerk of the peace is in the custos rotulorum of each county. Harding v. Pollock, 6 Bing. 25; 1 Dow & Cl. 453; 3 Bligh (N.S.) 161.

In 1819, the plaintiff, who was then under age, was appointed clerk of the peace for the county of Kerry, by the custos rotulorum of the county, and acted by himself as well as by deputies, till 1824. In that year, the defendant, as appointee of the crown, obtained possession of the office under a mandamus, and continued to hold the possession and receive all the fees and emoluments till 1829, when the plaintiff was restored to the office. The plaintiff then brought an action against defendant for the fees received by him whilst clerk de facto:—Held, that the action was maintainable, as the mandamus did not decide the title, but merely enabled the defendant to try the right, and the right being settled upon principles of law to be in the custos and not in the crown; secondly, that the letters patent of the custos, under the 55 Geo. 3, c. 78, need not be stamped; thirdly, that the fact of the plaintiff having for a considerable time acted as clerk of the peace, was sufficient evidence of his admission to the office. Crosbie v. Hurley, 1 Alcock & Napier, 431.

Clerk of Peace for Westminster.]—A person appointed since the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 71, to the office of clerk of the peace for Westminster is not entitled to the emoluments of the office of clerk of the peace within the city and liberty of Westminster. Nicholson v. Ellis, El. Bl. & El. 267; 28 L. J., Q. B. 238; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 385—Ex. Ch.

Penalty for appointing Clerk of Peace to be Clerk of Borough.]—In June, 1845, P., who was a partner in the firm of P. & F., solicitors, in the borough of Newport, Monmouthshire, was appointed clerk to the borough justices. In March, 1848, P., being still a member of the firm, was appointed, and acted as clerk of the peace of the county of Monmouth, and he filled the appointment until his death in June, 1874. P., soon after his appointment, appointed F., his partner, deputy clerk of the peace, and from 1870 until P.'s death F. discharged all the duties of the office. Upon the passing of the Municipal Corporations Act Amendment Act, 1861, the borough justices appointed F. their clerk, and he continued to act as such. On P.'s death F. was, on the 24th June, 1874, appointed clerk of the peace of the county of Monmouth, and has continued to act in that capacity. On the 9th November, 1874, the justices of the borough held a meeting, and passed the following resolution: "If, and so far as it may be necessary in accordance with the provisions of s. 5 of the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 75, Mr. F. be re-appointed clerk to the said justices of the said borough." F. afterwards continued to fill the offices of clerk of the peace of the county, and clerk to the borough justices. A borough justice took part in the meeting of the 9th November, 1874, and voted for the resolution. The plaintiff brought a qui tam action against him to recover the 100*l.* penalty under s. 5 of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 75, for appointing and continuing F. clerk to the borough justices, he being at the same time clerk of the peace of the county:—Held, that, on the true construction of the proviso attached to s. 5 of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 75, he was not liable. Brown v. Evans, 35 L. T. 877; 24 W. R. 937—C. A.

Deputy—Penalty for Practising at Sessions.]—In an action on the 22 Geo. 2, c. 26, s. 14, against an attorney for practising at sessions where he executed the office of deputy clerk of the peace, evidence that he was appointed deputy town clerk, and that his principal, and the preceding town clerks for a considerable period of time discharged the duties of town clerk and clerk of the peace also, without any separate appointment, is sufficient proof that he executed the office of deputy clerk of the peace. Faulkner v. Chevell, 2 P. & D. 262; 10 A. & E. 76; 8 L. J., Q. B. 186; 3 Jur. 1148.

Effect of—Justice of the Peace.]—A person holding the commission of the peace was appointed clerk of the peace and acted in both capacities for the same county:—Held, that the appointment to the clerkship of the peace did not vacate the commission of the peace. Forbes v. Lloyd, Ir. R. 10 C. L. 552.

2. Duties and Emoluments.

Levying Fines.]—It is the duty of the clerk of the peace to put the law in motion to levy all recognizances forfeited at quarter sessions. Reg. v. Yorkshire, W. R., JJ., 2 N. & P. 457; 7 A. & E. 583; 7 L. J., M. C. 9.

The duty of the sheriff with respect to the roll of fines sent to him by the clerk of the peace, pursuant to 3 Geo. 4, c. 46, is not purely ministerial, and the sheriff is not justified in levying a fine stated in the roll to be unpaid, when the amount has been paid to the sheriff himself before receiving the roll. Wildes v. Morris, 22 L. J., M. C. 4; 16 Jur. 1115; 1 W. R. 65.

A deputy clerk of the peace is authorised to receive the amount of fines imposed at the quarter sessions, and if he receives the money, and omits to notify the receipt in the roll, and damage accrues in consequence to the party fined, the latter may maintain an action against the deputy clerk of the peace for negligence. Ib.

Deputy—Certificates of Conviction and Sentence.]—Under 5 Geo. 4, c. 84, s. 24, the certificate of conviction and sentence of transportation may be made out and given by the deputy clerk of the peace, he being proved to have been appointed and to act as such, and it being also proved that the clerk of the peace did not usually act. Reg. v. Parsons, 35 L. J., M. C. 167; L. R. 1 C. C. R. 24; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 436; 14 L. T. 450; 14 W. R. 662; 10 Cox, C. C. 243.

Fees.]—The 8 & 9 Vict. c. 114, abolishing certain fees, does not apply to defendants convicted, or to fees payable upon traverses. Reg. v. Coles, 8 Q. B. 75; 15 L. J., M. C. 10.

Assignment of Profits.]—An assignment to trustees of all the emoluments and profits which, during the life of A. and his continuing to hold the office of clerk of the peace, should arise or become due to him as clerk of the peace, or in respect of his office, after deducting the salary or allowance of his deputy for the time being, to pay the interest arising on certain debts due from A., and from time to time to render the surplus, after satisfying the trusts to A., is invalid. Palmer v. Bate, 2 Br. & B. 673; 23 R. R. 535.

Agreement to procure Prosecutions for Another.]—An attorney, town clerk, and clerk of the peace for a borough, upon the dissolution of a partnership which had existed between him and two other persons, entered into an agreement to pay to one of them a certain sum of money, and use his endeavours to procure for him one fourth of the prosecutions arising in the town clerk's office. In an action by him on this agreement it appeared that the magistrates of the borough committed some offenders to be tried at the borough sessions, others at the county sessions, and others at the county assizes:—Held, that the defendant as clerk of the peace of the borough could not legally enter into such an agreement. Hughes v. Statham, 6 D. & R. 219; 4 B. & C. 187; 3 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 179.

Compensation for.]—The court of quarter sessions had no jurisdiction under 55 Geo. 3, c. 51, s. 16, to make a prospective order for a compensation thereafter to be made to the clerk of the peace. Rex v. Williams, 3 B. & Ald. 215; 22 R. R. 352.

3. Removal.

For Misdemeanour in Office.]—By 1 Will. & M. c. 21, s. 6, if a clerk of the peace misdemean himself in the execution of his office, and a complaint and charge in writing be exhibited against him to the quarter sessions, they may upon examination and due proof thereof, openly in their quarter sessions discharge him from his office, quo warranto. Plea: That a complaint and charges in writing of having misdemeaned himself in the execution of his office were duly exhibited against the relator to the quarter sessions; that upon examination and due proof of the complaint and charges, an order was duly made by the quarter sessions and entered of record. The plea set out the order, which stated the complaint and charges, viz. that the quarter sessions had ordered a sum of money to be paid to the county solicitor for costs incurred by them in a litigation with the relator and that he had unlawfully and contumaciously refused to record it; and that upon examination of the complaint and charges the quarter sessions adjudged them proved, and that the relator had been guilty of the misdemeanours in the execution of his office, and they therefore openly in court discharged him from his office, and that the defendant was appointed to it:—Held, first, that the complaint and charges against the relator amounted to a charge of misdemeanour in the execution of his office within the statute. Reg. v. Russell, 10 B. & S. 91; 19 L. T. 686; 17 W. R. 402.

Held, secondly, that as the quarter sessions had jurisdiction to inquire into and decide upon the complaint and charges, and the essentials of justice were observed, and there was a record of the sessions that the relator had been discharged from the office and the defendant appointed to it, the court could not review their decision. Ib.

A contumacious refusal by a clerk of the peace to record an order of the court of quarter sessions, is a misdemeanour in the execution of the office of such clerk, within the meaning of

1 Will. & M. c. 21, s. 6, and for which, therefore, the justices may dismiss him from such office. Wildes v. Russell, 35 L. J., M. C. 241; L. R. 1 C. P. 722; 16 L. T. 478; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 645; 14 W. R. 796.

In Boroughs.]—The power of removal of the clerk of the peace of a borough for misbehaviour is vested in the recorder by 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, ss. 103, 105, and not in the town council. Reg. v. Haward, 2 B. & S. 585; 31 L. J., M. C. 177; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 45; 6 L. T. 285; 10 W. R. 558.

A. BY WHOM LEASES OR AGREEMENTS FOR LEASES MAY BE GRANTED.

By Agent.]—An agreement for a lease made with an agent who acts under a power of attorney, and a lease executed by such agent in pursuance of the agreement, effectually binds the principal. Hamilton v. Clanricarde (Earl), 1 Bro. P. C. 341.

If a man describes himself, in the beginning of an agreement to grant a lease, as making it on behalf of another, but in a subsequent part of it says that he will execute the lease, he is personally liable. Norton v. Herron, 1 Car. & P. 648; R. & M. 229; 28 R. R. 797.

By Steward.] — A steward has no general authority to enter into contracts for granting leases of farms for a term of years. Collen v. Gardner, 21 Beav. 540.

But a power to a land agent to "manage and superintend estates," authorises him, on behalf of his principal, to enter into an agreement for the usual and customary leases, according to the nature and locality of the property. Peers v. Sneyd, 17 Beav. 151.

By Farm Bailiff.]—A farm bailiff or an agent accustomed to let farms upon the ordinary terms, and receive the rents, has no authority in law to let upon unusual terms unknown to the owner, and the question was left to the jury as one of fact, whether he had express authority, or had been held out by the owner as having it. Turner v. Hutchinson, 2 F. & F. 185.

By Tenant from Year to Year.]—A tenant from year to year may make a lease for twenty-one years. Mackay v. Mackreth, 4 Dougl. 213; 2 Chit. 461.

By Tenant for Life.]—A tenant for life, with remainder to A. B. and C., in common in fee, granted a lease of the estates to D. for twenty-one years, which lease was confirmed by A. and C.:—Held, that the lease was good as against A. and C., and that B. could not impeach it in a suit for partition, in which he was a co-plaintiff with A. Story v. Johnson, 2 Y. & C. 586.

A tenant for life having power to grant leases in possession may bind himself by covenant to grant a lease in reversion expectant on the determination of a subsisting term; but a trustee having a similar power cannot, for he is bound to exercise the power for the benefit of the estate. Moore v. Clench, 45 L. J., Ch. 80; 1 Ch. D. 447; 34 L. T. 13; 24 W. R. 169.

A testator devised real estates in strict settlement, and empowered tenants for life (who were unimpeachable for waste) to grant mining leases for such terms, and under and subject to such rents or reservations or agreements, as to them should "seem reasonable and proper." A tenant for life, in 1843, demised mines for a term of ninety-nine years at a peppercorn rent, by way of mortgage, to secure 6,000*l.* and interest:—Held, that this was a valid lease under the power, and binding on the inheritance. Mostyn v. Lancaster, 52 L. J., Ch. 848; 23 Ch. D. 583; 48 L. T. 715; 31 W. R. 686—C. A.

A tenant for life without leasing power demised a plot of building land for the term of sixty years, from the 29th of September, 1834, at the annual rent of sixpence; the lease contained a covenant by the tenant for life for quiet enjoyment. The lessee accordingly erected a house on the plot of land. After the death of the tenant for life the fee-simple ultimately vested in H., who accepted the rent from a son of the original lessee, who was then in possession of the house. H. afterwards conveyed the house and land to the plaintiff by indenture: the grant was made expressly subject to the supposed term of sixty years. No notice to quit had been given, and the annual value of the house and land was about 6*l.* The plaintiff having sued to recover possession of the house and land:—Held, that as the representatives of the original lessee, under the indenture of the 29th September, 1834, could not have sued H. for breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment, the void lease afforded no defence against the plaintiff claiming under the grant of the fee-simple subject to it; that a tenancy from year to year had not been created by the payment of rent at the rate of sixpence a year; and that the plaintiff was entitled to immediate possession of the house and land. Smith v. Widlake, 47 L. J., C. P. 282; 3 C. P. D. 10; 26 W. R. 52—C. A.

By Tenant in Tail.]—A., tenant in tail, made a lease for years to B., not conformable to 32 Hen. 8, c. 28. A. died, and C., the next in tail in remainder, applied to B. to attorn, and demanded rent from him. B. did not attorn; and, after some negotiation, refused to pay any rent, on the ground that D. was entitled to the estate:—Held, that B. did not become tenant to C., and that C. could maintain ejectment against B. without serving him with notice to quit; and that the setting up the title of D. amounted to a disclaimer of the title of C. Doe d. Phillips v. Rollings, 4 C. B. 188; 17 L. J., C. P. 268.

If a tenant in tail makes an agreement, not under seal, to let land for fourteen years, and then dies, the issue in tail cannot be compelled specifically to perform the agreement by granting a lease under 32 Hen. 8, c. 28. Osborn v. Marlborough (Duke), 12 Jur. (N.S.) 559; 14 L. T. 789; 14 W. R. 886.

If tenant in tail reserves an entire rent upon a farm, in which some leasehold lands are mixed with the entailed lands, the lease is not good against the reversioner. Rees v. Philip, Wightw. 69.

A tenant in tail in remainder during the lifetime of the tenant for life, demised for several terms of ninety-nine years, at different dates, to commence immediately. In ejectment by one of the posterior lessees:—Held, that by virtue of 4 Anne, c. 16, s. 9, the leases, without entry of the lessees, operated not by way of interesse termini, but as grants of estates or interests out of a remainder to which the tenants of the preceding estates had attorned. Doe d. Agar v. Brown, 2 El. & Bl. 331; 22 L. J., Q. B. 432; 17 Jur. 1161.

By Remaindermen.]—When a demise is determined by the expiration of the landlord's estate, and the tenant continues to hold under the remainderman, paying the same rent, the question, whether a term contained in the former tenancy is adopted into a new contract of demise is a question of fact. If such a tenant continues to hold under the remainderman, and nothing passes between them except the payment and receipt of rent, the new landlord is not bound by a stipulation contained in the former tenancy, which is not known to him in fact, nor is according to the custom of the country. Oakley v. Monck, 4 H. & C. 251; 35 L. J., Ex. 87; L. R. 1 Ex. 159; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 253; 14 L. T. 20; 14 W. R. 406—Ex. Ch.

A tenant for life granted a lease containing a covenant that he would, at the expiration of the term, pay and allow the lessee, a nurseryman, for all fruit trees and shrubs then on the premises which had been planted by him. At the expiration of the lease the lessee continued in possession, and paid rent, and upon the death of the tenant for life he paid the same rent to the remainderman, who was not aware of the covenant in the lease:—Held, that there was no evidence that the tenancy continued upon the terms of the lease, so as to bind the remainderman by the covenant. Ib.

Donee of Leasing Power under Will—Construction of Will.]—A testator who had lands in a mining county, devised them to his daughter, who was his only child, for life, without impeachment of waste, otherwise than thereinafter provided, remainder to her sons in tail, remainder to her daughters in tail male, remainder in tail male to one of three relations to be named by her, remainder to P. in tail male, remainder to the heirs of the testator. The testator thereby empowered his daughter and all possessed of his real estates under the will, to grant leases of them for twenty-one years, but with a clause therein reserving a right to his daughter and her successors, when in possession, to search for and carry away minerals "or for the purpose of cutting down or grubbing up any wood or underwood." There was then a direction in the will that neither the testator's daughter nor her successors should under a penalty of 100*l.* grub up or cut down any wood or underwood except for necessary reparations of houses belonging to the estates, until twenty years after testator's death. This direction was immediately followed by a clause authorising the testator's daughter "to work or contract for, lease or let out to be worked or wrought, all the coal," &c., or any other mines or minerals whatsoever then discovered, or thereafter to be discovered; "and that all the issues, net proceeds, and profits arising therefrom" should be paid over by his said daughter to trustees, for the payment of the testator's debts, and afterwards for the purchase of estates to be settled to the trusts and limitations of the will:—Held, by Erle, C.J., and Willes, J., first, that the will gave the testator's daughter a power to lease the coal mines under the devised lands without limit as to duration, and without condition, to be exercised by the said daughter, at her discretion, according to her fiduciary duty; secondly, that a lease of such mines by the daughter for sixty years was therefore a valid exercise of such power, and vested the term in the lessee, so as to be an answer to an action of ejectment by the remainderman against a person claiming under that lease, notwithstanding such lease might contain licences to the lessee as to the use of the mines which were ultra vires. Held, by Byles, J., and Montague Smith, J., that such lease was void, as the testator's daughter had no power under the will to lease the mines for a term extending beyond her own life, the meaning of the will being that she might get the minerals in her own time, or the value of them, in any way she pleased; disposing of the proceeds, however, as prescribed by the testator. Jegon v. Vivian, 35 L. J., C. P. 73; L. R. 1 C. P. 9; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 184; 14 W. R. 227.

Under 13 Eliz. c. 10.]—By 13 Eliz. c. 10, s. 3, all leases made by spiritual persons other than for the term of twenty-one years, or three lives, whereupon the accustomed yearly rent or more shall be reserved are void:—Held, that in order to render a lease valid under this statute it must be made of land which had been previously let, or on which some rent had been reserved. Doe d. Tennyson v. Yarborough (Lord), 7 Moore, 258; 1 Bing. 24; 25 R. R. 575.

By Warden of Hospital.]—A new lease made by the warden and poor of a hospital, under their corporation seal, before the expiration of a former lease, to a lessee, who had then only a part interest in the first lease, but to whom the entire interest was assigned within three years afterwards, is binding on the succeeding warden and poor of such hospital. Grumbrell v. Roper, 3 B. & Ald. 711; 22 R. R. 533.

By Churchwarden.] — Churchwardens only cannot execute leases as a body corporate of parish lands under 59 Geo. 3, c. 12, s. 17. Phillips v. Pearce, 8 D. & R. 43; 5 B. & C. 433; 29 R. R. 284.

Leases by the churchwardens of A., in which the demised tenement is described as parcel of the lands of the parish church of A., and payment of the rent to them, are primâ facie evidence that the tenement is parish property. Doe d. Higgs or Hobbs v. Cockell, 6 N. & M. 179; 4 A. & E. 478.

By Dean and Chapter.]—Leases granted by deans and chapters for long terms of years, not in conformity with the disabling and restraining statutes, are not void, but voidable only. Pennington v. Cardale, 3 H. & N. 656; 27 L. J., Ex. 438; 6 W. R. 837.

By Corporation—Statute prohibiting Conveyance except pursuant to "Resolution."]—By 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 100 (passed in August, 1836), no conveyance of lands in certain corporations, of which D. was one, was to be made unless pursuant to a covenant, contract, or agreement made, or a resolution of the corporation duly entered in the corporate books, before 16th February, 1836. This provision was continued by successive statutes, and incorporated into 3 & 4 Vict. c. 108 and c. 109. The corporation of D. had from time to time passed resolutions as to the granting of leases of the corporate property, and on 20th April, 1801, passed a resolution (duly entered in the corporate books), directing that, "the auditors and viewers should on reporting on petitions for the renewal of leases, take into consideration the value of the premises, and value the same at full value between man and man, and that the petitioner so applying shall be then entitled to a renewal" on the terms therein mentioned, "and that all reports shall hereafter be received at one assembly, and taken into consideration not sooner than the then following quarter assembly." A lease had been granted in 1785 for sixty-one years; in 1841 a petition was presented for its renewal; the petition was referred to the auditors and viewers, whose report was presented on 7th January, 1842, and on the same day, a resolution ordering the renewal was passed:—Held, that this was not a resolution which brought the case within the exceptions in the statute; for it merely bound the corporation to receive the report, and afterwards to consider the propriety of acting upon it. The resolution need not be a contract. Per Lord St. Leonards: This resolution was insufficient, although it might not be necessary that the resolution should be such as would form a binding contract, enforceable in a court of equity; and, further, the resolution such as it was had not been complied with, for the lease was granted at the same meeting at which the report of the auditors and viewers was presented. Drogheda (Mayor) v. Holmes, 5 H. L. Cas. 460.

Joinder of Owner of Equitable Interest.]—A. agreed to demise premises to B. There was an outstanding equitable interest vested in C.:—Held, that B. was bound to accept a demise from A., in which C. joined, and was not justified in insisting on A. obtaining a release from C. in order to enable him alone to make a valid demise. Reeves v. Gill, 1 Beav. 375.

By Mortgagor.]—See MORTGAGE.

B. COMMENCEMENT AND DURATION OF TERM.

Commencement—Generally.]—A lease from a certain day commences on the next day. Anon., Lofft, 275.

The words "from the day of the date" mean either inclusive or exclusive, according to the context and subject-matter; and the court will construe them so as to effectuate the intention of the parties. Pugh v. Leeds (Duke), Cowp. 714.

A lease of lands by deed, to hold from the feast of St. Michael, must be taken to mean from New Michaelmas, and cannot be shewn by extrinsic evidence to refer to a holding from Old Michaelmas. Doe d. Spicer v. Lea, 11 East, 312.

Where a lease was dated 25th March, 1783, habendum "from the 13th March now last past," and the deed was not executed until some time after the date:—Held, that the term commenced on the 25th March, 1783, and not on the 25th March, 1782. Steele v. Mart, 6 D. & R. 392; 4 B. & C. 272; 28 R. R. 256.

By an agreement dated the 31st August, 1838, W. agreed to let, and R. to take, a house, at a yearly rent, payable quarterly, "to commence from the 29th September next, and the first quarter's rent to become due and payable on the 25th December next." Though not so stated in the agreement, the house was, at the time of making the agreement, in the occupation of C., as tenant to W., who quitted on the 26th of September :—Held, that, under this agreement, the tenancy commenced on the 29th September. White v. Nicholson, 4 Scott (N.R.) 707 ; 4 Man. & G. 95 ; 11 L. J., C. P. 264.

By indenture of lease, of the 28th April, 1834, the lessor of the plaintiff demised to E. a messuage, to hold from the 1st May then next, for forty years, at the rent of 25*l.* a year. E. covenanted not to underlease without the consent in writing of the lessor ; and there was a proviso for the forfeiture in case he should be adjudged bankrupt. With the lessor's consent in writing, E. underleased three rooms in the messuage to the defendant for twenty-one years, by a lease dated the 25th March, 1839. In January, 1840, E. was adjudged a bankrupt, and the lessor of the plaintiff brought ejectment for the whole of the messuage, except the rooms leased to the defendant, and entered under a writ of possession on the 12th May, 1841. The defendant continued to occupy the three rooms ; and in February, 1843, an execution having issued against him, the lessor of the plaintiff served the sheriff with notice that there was a sum of 25*l.*, being one year's rent, due in November, 1842, in respect of the premises occupied by the defendant as his tenant, and requiring the sheriff to pay the same to him. The sheriff accordingly paid over to the lessor of the plaintiff 25*l.* out of the levy. On the 24th April the defendant was served with a six months' notice to quit :—Held, that the tenancy must be considered as commencing on the 12th May, 1844, and that a demise on the 4th May was before title had accrued to the lessor of the plaintiff, and, therefore, the ejectment was not maintainable. Doe d. Lloyd v. Ingleby, 14 M. & W. 91 ; 14 L. J., Ex. 246.

—— "Immediate Possession if Required."]—Semble, in a contract for a lease, the words "immediate possession if required" do not fix the commencement of the term. Rock Portland Cement Co. v. Wilson, 52 L. J. Ch. 214 ; 48 L. T. 386 ; 31 W. R. 193.

—— Of New Lease.]—Agreement in writing between landlord and tenant, signed by the landlord, for a new lease, to be granted at any time after the completion of repairs to be made by the tenant with all convenient speed, but blanks were left for the day of the commencement. The repairs being completed, the landlord tendered a lease, to commence from that time, and, on refusal, filed a bill ; the answer admitted that the agreement was accepted, and insisted that the new lease was not to commence till the expiration of the old ; and so it was decreed, parol evidence being refused. Pym v. Blackburn, 3 Ves. 34.

—— Where no Time Specified.]—A memorandum of agreement for a lease did not specify the date when the lease was to commence :—Held, that the lease was to commence on the date of the agreement itself, and specific performance of the agreement was ordered accordingly, with damages. Jaques v. Millar, 47 L. J., Ch. 544 ; 6 Ch. D. 153 ; 37 L. T. 151 ; 25 W. R. 846.

Action for specific performance of an agreement to take a lease of a house. In order to take the case out of the Statute of Frauds the plaintiff relied on a letter, written by the defendant, in which "the term" was stated to be for "twelve years," but the day of the commencement of the term was not mentioned ; and in the same letter, referring to certain covenants, the defendant "suggested that they be similar to those contained in A.'s lease" :—Held, that there never was any concluded agreement between the parties. Cartwright v. Millar, 36 L. T. 398.

Specific performance will not be enforced of an agreement to grant a lease where no time for the commencement of the lease is fixed by the agreement, and the mere fact that the agreement itself is dated does not fix the time for such commencement. Jaques v. Millar (6 Ch. D. 153) disapproved of ; Blore v. Sutton (3 Mer. 237) explained. Marshall v. Berridge, 51 L. J., Ch. 329 ; 19 Ch. D. 233 ; 45 L. T. 599 ; 30 W. R. 93 ; 46 J. P. 279—C. A.

The plaintiff offered to take a lease of furnaces from the defendant conditionally upon his being able to make arrangements with other persons as to ore. A loosely-drawn memorandum was shortly afterwards signed by the parties, substituting certain other rents for the rents mentioned in the letter, which in other respects was to form the basis of the agreement. The defendant, understanding that the lease was to begin immediately, offered possession to the plaintiff at once, but the plaintiff refused to take it as he had not yet made arrangements for ores, and continued to treat the agreement as conditional on his making those arrangements. Ultimately the parties differed as to the covenants to be inserted in the lease, and the plaintiff commenced his action for specific performance : —Held, that although where an agreement is clear the court must act upon its own view of the construction without regard to the view entertained by the parties, yet where a party has throughout insisted on one construction of an obscure agreement, he cannot get specific performance on the footing of the opposite construction. Ib.

An executory agreement in writing to grant a lease for a term of years, which does not state the date from which the term is to commence, is not sufficiently definite to satisfy the Statute of Frauds, and cannot be enforced, and the mere fact of the agreement being dated does not shew from what date the lease is to run. Wyse v. Russell, 11 L. R., Ir. 173.

Where in an agreement for a lease, no time for commencement and no term were specified, a demurrer, for insufficiency of the agreement within the Statute of Frauds, to a bill for specific performance was allowed with costs. Dolling v. Evans, 15 W. R. 394.

Where an undated written contract for a lease omits to state the period of commencement, and contains nothing from which it may be inferred, a specific performance of it cannot be enforced as a written contract. Gilbert v. Hall, 1 L. J., Ch. 15.

In the absence of any evidence to the contrary, the tenancy under a written agreement for the hire of premises at a yearly rental, from year to year, must be taken to begin from the day on which that agreement professes to have been executed ; and that question is for the judge, and not for the jury. Bishop v. Wraith, 2 C. L. R. 287.

The defendant was owner of a piece of land, which he held subject to restrictions as to the buildings which should be erected on it. He received 5*l.* from the plaintiff, for which he signed a receipt, which contained an agreement for a lease of the land for ninety-nine years, at a rent of 20*l.*, payable quarterly. It also stated that ground-rent was to be payable from a certain date, but did not fix any time for the commencement of the term:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to a lease for ninety-nine years from the date at which the ground-rent was to commence, and that the use of the words "ground-rent" did not import a stipulation that the ground was to be built on, and therefore did not imply that a building lease was to be agreed on and executed by the parties. Wesley v. Walker, 38 L. T. 284; 26 W. R. 268.

And see cases sub tit. CONTRACT, ante, vol. iv., cols. 37 et seq.

Duration—From Year to Year.]—The defendants entered into an agreement "that they should become tenants of the premises, at 37*5l.* a quarter, the tenancy to commence on the 14th June, they paying a quarter's rent on that day; and that they should give security to pay one quarter's rent in advance as long as they should continue tenants":—Held, that, under this agreement, the defendants did not become tenants from year to year, but from quarter to quarter only, and therefore that proof of such an agreement did not support an allegation that the defendants held "as tenants for a term of years, from year to year, for so long," &c., or "for the residue of a certain tenancy for a term of years," &c. Wilkinson v. Hall, 4 Scott, 301; 3 Bing. (N.C.) 508; 3 Hodges, 56; 6 L. J., C. P. 82.

A general parol demise, at an annual rent, where the bulk of the farm is inclosed, and a small part in the open common fields, is only a lease from year to year, and not for so long as the usual round of husbandry extends. Roe d. Bree v. Lees, 2 W. Bl. 1171.

A demise for one year, and so on from year to year, until the tenancy should be determined, as after-mentioned, with a proviso that either party might determine the tenancy by giving a three months' notice in writing, is a demise for two years certain. Doe d. Chadburn v. Green, 9 A. & E. 658; 8 L. J., Q. B. 100; 1 P. & D. 454.

A tenancy from year to year, so long as both parties please, is determinable at the end of the first as well as of any subsequent year unless in creating such tenancy the parties use words as shewing that they contemplate a tenancy for two years at least. Doe d. Clarke v. Smarridge, 7 Q. B. 957; 14 L. J., Q. B. 327; 9 Jur. 781.

A., being seised in fee of a moiety of lands, and B. being seised for life of the other moiety, they in 1805, by deed, reciting that they were entitled thereto as tenants in common, and that they had agreed to grant a perpetual lease to C., his heirs, &c., granted and demised the same to C., his heirs, executors and assigns, for ever, to hold from a day past unto and to the use of C., his heirs, executors, administrators and assigns, for ever; yielding and paying therefor yearly to A. and B., their heirs, &c., the clear yearly rent of 120*l.* half-yearly. The deed contained all the covenants usually found in an ordinary lease:—Held, that, in the absence of proof that at the date of the deed the premises were in the occupation of tenants, so that a reversion only could pass, and the expressed intention of the parties precluding the court from presuming that there had been livery of seisin, the deed could not operate as a conveyance of the fee, subject to a rent-charge, but created only a tenancy from year to year. Doe d. Roberton v. Gardiner, 12 C. B. 319; 21 L. J., C. P. 222.

A tenancy from year to year is considered as recommencing every year. Tompkins v. Lawrence, 8 Car. & P. 729.

A tenancy from year to year is not to be considered as a continuous tenancy, but as recommencing every year. Gandy v. Jubber, 5 B. & S. 78; 33 L. J., Q. B. 151; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 652; 9 L. T. 800; 12 W. R. 526. See 9 B. & S. 15; 13 W. R. 1022—Ex. Ch.

—— From Year to Year—Effect of Death.]—A lease to A., his executors, &c., for a year, and so on from year to year, for so long a time as it shall please the lessor and A., his executors, &c., does not expire on the death of A., but vests in his executors. Mackay v. Mackreth, 4 Dougl. 213; 2 Chit. 461.

Under a parol demise from year to year by a tenant for life, with power to lease by deed, &c., the interest of the lessee determines with the life of the lessor, and the rent is apportionable. Smyth, Ex parte, 1 Swanst. 337. S. P., Clarkson v. Scarborough (Lord), id. 354.

Under a parol demise from year to year, by a tenant for life, with power to lease by deed, &c., and under written agreements for leases not exceeding three years, signed by the lessees but not by the tenant for life, though witnessed by his agent, the interest of the lessee determines with the life of the lessor, and the rents are apportionable. Symons v. Symons and Powell, 6 Madd. 207.

—— Year to Year—For a Term if Licence granted.]—Demise by copyholder for one year, and at the end of that term from year to year, for the term of thirteen more, in all fourteen, if the lord will give licence, and so as there shall be no forfeiture, with usual covenants. The licence is a condition precedent, and not being granted, there is no lease at law further than from year to year; and there is no equity upon the evidence that the lord purchased his tenant's interest with notice of demise, and an express exception of all subsisting leases or agreements of leases. Lufkin v. Nunn, 11 Ves. 170.

—— For Year or Quarter.]—Where the defendant agreed by letter to occupy certain furnished apartments of the plaintiff from the 4th March to the 4th September for fifty guineas, and afterwards to take them from 4th September to 4th December on the same terms, viz., twenty-five guineas for the three months, or to take them unfurnished at the rate of eighty guineas per annum:—Held, that in the event of defendant not occupying the apartments furnished, there was a taking of the unfurnished apartments for the quarter, and not for the year. Atherstone v. Bostock, 2 Man. & G. 511; 10 L. J., C. P. 113.

—— For such Term as Tenant Desires.]—A. agreed, in writing, to let to B. premises at a rent of 36*l.*, payable quarterly; and not to raise the rent or give B. notice to quit so long as he continued to pay the rent when due. A., who had only a leasehold interest to expire in 1881, had also agreed verbally with B. to let him remain in the premises for such term of years, not exceeding A.'s term therein, as B. might desire to continue tenant. A railway company contracted to purchase the interest of B. in the premises, which he described as "held for any term at tenant's option, but not beyond the term and interest of A., which term will expire in 1881." The company disputed B.'s title to the interest described, and paid the purchase-money into court:—Held, that the relation of landlord and tenant made B. a purchaser for valuable consideration to the extent of his lease; that the Statute of Frauds was no bar in equity to B.'s claim; that B. was not a mere tenant from year to year, but had a right to retain possession as long as his landlord's interest existed, and to enforce that right in equity; and that he was entitled to the purchase-money. King, In re, East London Ry., Ex parte, L. R. 16 Eq. 521; 29 L. T. 288; 21 W. R. 881.

—— "So long as Rent is paid, and I (the Landlord) am in Possession."]—By a written contract of tenancy, not under seal, the landlord agreed that the tenant should not be disturbed in his holding "so long as the rent for which he has stipulated is paid, and so long as I (the landlord) am in possession of the premises myself." The agreement did not otherwise specify the nature or duration of the tenancy. In an action by the executors and devisees of the landlord to recover possession, after the deaths of both landlord and tenant:—Held, that the agreement created a tenancy for the lessee's life, if the landlord's estate continued so long. Wood v. Davis, 6 L. R., Ir. 50.

—— While Lessor continues Vicar.]—A lease of tithes, or other matter which lies in grant, for all the time the lessor should continue vicar is good and conveys a freehold. Brewer v. Hill, 2 Anstr. 414; 3 R. R. 596.

—— For Years, "If Lessee lives so long"—Remainder.]—A lease for years, if the lessee so long lives, with a remainder to another for the residue of the term, must be construed to give the remainderman a power to enjoy during all the residue of the years to come. Wright d. Arm v. Cartwright, 1 Burr. 282; 1 Ld. Ken. 529.

—— Covenant "not to molest, disturb, or raise the Rent of" Tenant.]—G. S., a lessee of a house for a term of eighty years, which had fifty-nine years to run, agreed to let the same to R. K. at a fixed rent. The duration of the underlease was not specified; but the agreement went on to say that G. S. agreed to let R. K. have a lease at the same rent "at any period he may feel disposed"; and further agreed "not to molest, disturb, or raise the rent of" R. K. "after his having laid out money in improving the said premises." R. K. did not at the time of the agreement know the nature of the interest of G. S. in the property. R. K. having gone into and remained in possession, and having laid out money in improving the premises, and the lease having over twenty years to run—held, by Bacon, V.-C., that R. K. was entitled to an underlease for the whole of the residue of the term, less one day. Held, on appeal, by Jessel, M.R., and Bramwell, L.J., dubitante Baggallay, L.J., that he was entitled only to an underlease for the residue of the term, less one day, if he should so long live. Kusel v. Watson, 48 L. J., Ch. 413; 11 Ch. D. 129; 27 W. R. 714—C. A.

—— Life of Lessee.]—Where a lessor covenanted that upon or at any time before the expiration of the term granted by the lease, he would at the request of the lessee, his executors, administrators, or assigns, grant a new lease "for and during the life of the lessee or his nominee, or for and during such a period or number of years as the lessee, his executors, administrators, or assigns should think fit":—Held, on it appearing that it was the intention of the lessor to renew the lease only for the life of the lessee, and that at the time of the execution of the lease he was kept in ignorance of the full effect of the covenant, that the lessee could only enforce a renewal for life. Price v. Power, 19 L. T. 442.

—— Use of Portion of Premises after Termination of Tenancy.]—Upon a demise "until Michaelmas next, and no longer," with the privilege of using part of the premises for specific purposes till Lady-day following, ejectment may be brought for those parts to which the privilege does not extend, in the interval between Michaelmas and Lady-day. Doe d. Waters v. Haughton, 1 M. & Rob. 208.

—— Error in Lease.]—By an indenture of lease dated in 1784 and executed by the lessor, he demised certain premises to hold to the lessee and his assigns for the term of ninety-four and a quarter years, yielding and paying therefor during the said term of ninety-one and a quarter years hereby demised a yearly rent. The number of years was not mentioned in any other clause of the lease. But the counterpart, executed by the lessee, which was otherwise identical with the lease, had ninety-one in the habendum as well as in the reddendum. In an action by the assignee of the reversion to recover possession against the assignee of the lessee after the lapse of the ninety-one and a quarter years:—Held, that, there being a manifest clerical error in the lease, the counterpart might be looked at to ascertain where the mistake lay, and that, on the true construction of the lease and counterpart taken together, "the ninety-four" in the lease must be rejected, and the lease read as a grant for ninety-one and a quarter years only. Burchell v. Clark, 46 L. J., C. P. 115; 2 C. P. D. 88; 35 L. T. 690; 25 W. R. 334—C. A.

Perpetual injunction granted against persons claiming a reversion upon the expiration of a lease, made for a term of years shorter than was contracted for by the parties to the lease. Wilde v. Ashley, 2 Jur. 679.

—— Shewn in Habendum.]—The habendum in a lease only marks the duration of the tenant's interest, and its operation as a grant is merely prospective. Shaw v. Kay, 1 Ex. 412; 17 L. J., Ex. 17.

—— Of Lands for different Terms.]—Demise of freehold and copyhold lands, at an entire rent, habendum so much as was freehold for twenty-one years, and so much as was copyhold for three years, warranted by the custom, and covenant for renewal of the lease of the copyhold every three years, toties quoties, during the twenty-one years, under the like covenants; and that in the meantime, and until such new leases should be executed, the lessee should hold the land, as well copyhold as freehold:—Held, that this was only a lease of the copyhold for three years, and that the lessor after the three years might recover the premises in ejectment against the lessee, there not having been any fresh lease granted. Fenny d. Eastham v. Child, 2 M. & S. 255.

—— Of Same Land for Longer Term to other Tenant.]—Tenant in fee demises to A. for twenty-one years; during that time he demises, not by deed, to B. for ninety-nine years. The second lease, though not by deed, shall take effect at the expiration of the first, for as many years as remain of the ninety-nine. Doe d. Thomas v. Jenkins, 1 L. J., K. B. 190.

—— Enlarging Term on Happening of Event inconsistent with original Agreement.]—The plaintiffs, a railway company, let premises, through an agent, to the defendants on the terms, which were reduced to writing and signed by both parties, of a weekly tenancy, to be determined by a week's notice on either side. At the same time the agent wrote, signed and handed to the defendants the following memorandum:—"Messrs. Lewis & Co. You may have the premises as per agreement until the railway company require to pull them down." The defendants took possession of the premises, and the plaintiffs, who subsequently required them for their own occupation, but had no intention of pulling them down, gave the defendants a week's notice to quit, and after the notice had expired brought ejectment. The defendants pleaded that the plaintiffs did not require the premises in order to pull them down, and, by counter-claim, asked for a declaration that the representation by the agent was binding upon the plaintiffs, and for an injunction restraining them from acting upon the notice, or determining the tenancy, until they required the premises for the purpose of pulling them down:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to maintain the action, and that the defendants were not entitled to any of the equitable relief claimed. Cheshire Lines Committee v. Lewis, 50 L. J., Q. B. 121; 44 L. T. 293; 45 J. P. 404—C. A.

—— Where not Specified.]—One possessed of a term for 2,000 years in land, grants the land to A. without mentioning any term:—Held, void for uncertainty. Kirsley v. Duck, 2 Vern. 684.

—— When Tenancy Terminates.]—Where a lease is to commence from the 25th March then next, for twenty-one years fully to be completed and ended, the term does not end until the last moment on the 25th March in the last year. Ackland v. Lutley, 1 P. & D. 636; 9 A. & E. 879; 8 L. J., Q. B. 164.

By indenture of 21st March, 1828, a lessor demised a messuage to the tenant, habendum from 25th March then instant, for the term of seven years then next ensuing, wanting seven days, yielding and paying yearly and every year during the term the yearly rent of 285*l.* by four equal quarterly payments, on 25th March, 24th June, 29th September, and 25th December in every year, commencing from 25th March then instant; and the lessee covenanted to pay the yearly rent of 285*l.* on the days and in the manner appointed:—Held, that 285*l.* was payable for each year; and that either the first payment was to be made on the 25th March, 1828, or a payment on 25th March, 1835, though after the expiration of the term. Hopkins v. Helmore, 3 N. & P. 453; 8 A. & E. 463; 1 W. W. & H. 386; 7 L. J., Q. B. 195; 2 Jur. 856.

Cognisance that the plaintiff was tenant to H., at a certain rent, and that the defendant distrained for the rent of a half-year ending the 29th of September, 1841. Plea, that, after rent became due, H., by indenture purporting to be made the 1st of February, 1841, but made after the 29th of September, 1841, released the rent. The defendant, in his replication, set out the indenture, dated the 1st of February, 1841, being a demise to the plaintiff of the premises, to hold from the 30th of July, 1840, for fourteen years; the first payment of rent to be made on the 25th of March then next:—Held, that the indenture had not the effect of releasing the tenant from payment of the rent due under a parol contract before its execution. Cooper v. Robinson, 10 M. & W. 694; 12 L. J., Ex. 48.

Premises were demised for three lives and for twenty-one years after the death of the last survivor. The lessor covenanted with the lessee that if he should lose a life and think proper to have a new life put in, then, within six months after the death of the first life, and so on, continuing the term and estate thereby demised, the lessor would put in a new life:—Held, that the lessee had power to introduce one new life only, and that one in the place of the first life dropping, but with a new term of twenty-one years, commencing with the death of the survivor of the two survivors and the new life. Walmesley v. Pilkington, 35 Beav. 362.

—— Lease to a Specified Date and Rent payable thereafter.]—An instrument by which A. agrees to let, and B. to take certain premises on the terms that A. shall pay certain specified rents, varying in amount, at the end of every three years, up to a specified date, and which provides that from and after that date "he shall pay the clear annual rent of 9*l.* till the end of the lease," but does not mention any time at which the lease is to determine, is good only for the time previous to the date at which the 9*l.* is to commence. Gwynne v. Mainstone, 3 Car. & P. 302.

—— Grant of Easement by Tenant in consideration of Rent—Claim for Rent after Termination.]—The plaintiff was occupier under a lease of a farm and mill. The mill was supplied with water which flowed along a natural watercourse through the farm. The works of the defendant's slate company were contiguous to the farm; and the defendants sought to utilise the flow of the watercourse for the slate works. Accordingly, in 1871, the plaintiff and defendants entered into an agreement by which the plaintiff gave permission to the defendants to use the watercourse, trough and landers on the farm, and from time to time cleanse, scour and keep the same free for the passage of the water and in repair, the defendants having full liberty of ingress or egress on to the said farm. The parties further agreed that the agreement might be terminated at the expiration of three months' notice, to be given on either side. The rent reserved for the use of the water was 1*l.* per week, which was afterwards increased to 3*l.* per week. In 1876 the plaintiff's interest in the farm expired by effluxion of time, but he retained his occupation of the mill. The farm was subsequently leased by the freeholder to one Darbishire. The position of the mill was lower down the stream or watercourse than the farm. The defendants continued to pay the rent down to April, 1885, when Darbishire claimed to exclude them from that portion of the farm which was in his occupation. No notice was given by either party to the agreement to terminate the arrangement. The defendants then refused to pay any more rent to the plaintiff. The plaintiff brought his action to recover seven quarters' rent in arrear. The action was tried, and the point of law reserved:—Held, on further consideration, that under the circumstances, the defendants were entitled to judgment, because, though there had not been any regular notice to terminate the agreement between themselves and the plaintiff, yet its operation was limited in point of time to the occupation of the farm by the plaintiff, and that on the determination of its occupancy by him his right to the rent for the use of the water ceased. Jones v. Dorothea Co., 58 L. T. 80.

—— Agreement to Determine.]—On the 4th of November, 1858, A. let premises to B. for a term of four years, from Michaelmas preceding, at a yearly rent, payable quarterly, the agreement containing the following condition: "The condition of this agreement being binding on B. is that A. shall make good and support the floor of the warehouse of the premises within twenty-eight days of the date of this agreement; if not done, this agreement to be void." Within the twenty-eight days A. entered with workmen, and afterwards departed, stating that he had made all secure. B. paid rent at Christmas and at Lady-day. Early in April, 1859, the warehouse floor having broken in, the attention of the commissioners of sewers was called to the state of the premises, and the result was that in May an order was made upon A. under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 122, directing him to secure and repair the same. At the end of April A. informed B. that he was about to pull down the premises, and offered to assist B. in removing his printing-presses and plant. After the date of the commissioners' order A. entered the premises, and pulled down the ground-floor storey (including the warehouse floor) and took no steps to replace or repair it. B. thereupon obtained other premises, and he and his under-tenants went out, and on the 23rd of June B. sent A. the key, with a letter, stating that he had been forced out of the premises by A.'s wilful and unnecessary destruction of the warehouse floor, &c. A. received the key, read the letter, and said nothing, and a few days afterwards entered and pulled down the whole house for the purpose of rebuilding it:—Held, that these facts shewed an agreement for a determination of the tenancy on the 23rd of June, and consequently that A. could not sue for the quarter's rent. Furnivall v. Grove, 8 C. B. (N.S.) 496; 30 L. J., C. P. 3.

Optional Number of Years.]—A lease for one year, and so for two or three years, as the parties shall agree, means for two years, and after every subsequent year begins is not determinable till that is ended. Harris v. Evans, 1 Wils. 262; Amb. 329.

But it is a lease for one yearly only, without such subsequent agreement. Ib.

A lease was granted to A. for fourteen years, with a proviso for terminating the lease at the end of the first seven years, if the landlord should so desire, on his giving notice of his desire in writing; B. joined in the covenant as surety. The landlord gave a notice, in terms a notice to quit, not expressing in terms his desire to terminate the tenancy under the proviso, but referring to the lease and its determinable quality:—Held, that this was a termination of the lease under the proviso, and discharged the surety. Giddens v. Dodd, 3 Drew. 485; 25 L. J., Ch. 451; 4 W. R. 377.

A lease for twenty-one years, determinable at the end of seven or fourteen, if the parties so think fit, is not determinable without the joint assent of lessor and lessee. Powell v. Tranter, 3 H. & C. 458; 34 L. J., Ex. 6; 11 L. T. 317; 13 W. R. 145.

A demise for seven years, with a proviso that, notwithstanding anything before contained, if notice should not be given to determine the lease at the end of the seven years, it should be considered a lease upon the same covenants, from year to year, until notice to determine it, continues after the seven years until put an end to by notice, and the covenants continue binding. Brown v. Trumper, 26 Beav. 11.

B., by an indenture dated and made 19th July, 1851, granted, demised and leased to A. premises, habendum to A. from 25th December, 1849, for and during and until the full end and term of fourteen years thence next ensuing, determinable as therein mentioned: proviso that it should be lawful for either B. or A. to determine the demise at the expiration of the first seven years thereof, by six months' notice, and thereupon that demise, and every covenant therein contained, should cease and determine accordingly:—Held, that the seven years were to be reckoned from 25th December, 1849, and that the lease might be determined on 25th December, 1856. Bird v. Baker, 1 El. & El. 12; 28 L. J., Q. B. 7; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1148; 7 W. R. 8.

—— Who has the Option.]—A. agreed to let premises to B. for three years, and, at the expiration of that term, to grant him a lease for an extended term. A. died, and three years having expired, B. continued to hold on under his executors for four years without asking for a lease. He then required a lease:—Held, that B.'s option had not determined, and that he was entitled to the extension of the term. Moss v. Barton, 35 Beav. 197.

It is a settled rule of law that an agreement for a lease for seven or fourteen years means a lease for fourteen years determinable by the lessee, but not by the lessor, at the end of seven years. Powell v. Smith, 41 L. J., Ch. 734; L. R. 14 Eq. 85; 20 W. R. 602.

An agreement for a lease for seven, fourteen or ——— years entitles the lessee, in the absence of other stipulations, to a lease for fourteen years determinable at the end of seven years at his option only, though the lessor proves that he supposed such an agreement gave to him, as well as to the lessee, the option of determining it at that time. Ib.

A land agent having no power to grant leases without reserving to his principal the power of determining them at the expiration of every seven years entered into an agreement for a grant to an intending tenant of a lease for seven or fourteen years. The tenant was put into possession of the farm, and took the stock on it from the outgoing tenant at a valuation. The lessor, who did not know the rule of law above mentioned, refused to grant a lease without reserving to himself the right to determine it at the end of seven years, as well as giving such right to the tenant:—Held, that the lessor was not entitled to have a power of determining the lease at the end of seven years; for his ignorance of the law was no excuse, and he could not repudiate his agent's act after letting the tenant take possession of the farm on the faith of it. Ib.

A lease for seven, fourteen, or twenty-one years, as the lessee shall think proper, is a good lease for seven years, whatever it may be for the fourteen or twenty-one years. Ferguson v. Cornish, 2 Burr. 1032; 3 Term Rep. 463, n.

Lease of lands by indenture for twenty-one years, with proviso that it should be determinable by the lessee or the lessor at the end of the first seven or fourteen years, and a memorandum indorsed six years after the execution of the lease, "of its being agreed between the parties, previously to the execution, that the lessor shall not dispossess, nor cause the lessee to be dispossessed, of the said estate, but to have it for the term of twenty-one years from this present time"; which memorandum was signed by the parties, and stamped with a lease stamp, but not sealed:—Held, that the lessor might, notwithstanding, determine the lease at the end of the first fourteen years; for the memorandum did not operate as a new lease and surrender of the first lease. Goodright d. Nicholls v. Mark, 4 M. & S. 30.

A lease in 1785, for three, six or nine years, determinable in 1788, 1791, 1794, is a lease for nine years, determinable at the end of three or six years, by either of the parties, on giving reasonable notice to quit. Goodright d. Hall v. Richardson, 3 Term Rep. 462.

If a lease is granted for seven, fourteen or twenty-one years, the lessee only has the option at which of the above periods the lease shall determine. Dann v. Spurrier, 3 Bos. & P. 399, 442; 7 R. R. 797; 7 Ves. 231; 6 R. R. 119. S. P., Price v. Dyer, 17 Ves. 363; 11 R. R. 102.

So, where the lease was for fourteen or seven years, on the ground that every doubtful grant must be construed in favour of the grantee. Doe d. Webb v. Dixon, 9 East, 16; 9 R. R. 501.

Where there was an agreement that a tenant should be at liberty to quit at Lady-day, in which case the landlord engaged to take the fixtures at a valuation, or to permit the tenant to let the house:—Held, that the construction of this agreement was, that the tenant had an option in the event of his quitting. Colton v. Lingham, 1 Stark. 39.

And a letting by the tenant to an under-tenant until Lady-day is not an exercise of his right of option. Ib.

An agreement that a house should be held for a term of thirty-one years, with liberty to have the same determined at the end of the third, sixth, ninth, twelfth, fifteenth, eighteenth, twenty-first, twenty-fourth, or twenty-seventh year, should it be so desired, in which case six months' notice to be given; and should the tenant be desirous to have a lease executed for the remainder of the term, he was to be at liberty to require it, subject to the conditions as therein, and the usual covenants; does not give the landlord the option of determining the tenancy. Fallon v. Robins, 16 Ir. Ch. R. 422.

A proviso in a lease for twenty-one years, that, if either of the parties should be desirous to determine it in seven or fourteen years, it should be lawful for either of them, his executors or administrators, so to do, upon twelve months' notice to the other of them, his heirs, executors or administrators, extends, by reasonable intendment, to the devisee of the lessor, who is entitled to the rent and reversion. Roe d. Bamford v. Hayley, 12 East, 464; 11 R. R. 455.

A letting, in 1845, to a yearly tenant, and if he should wish a lease, that the lessor will grant the same for seven, fourteen or twenty-one years, at the same rent, is sufficiently certain to be specifically performed. It is to be construed an optional lease for twenty-one years from 1845, determinable at the end of seven or fourteen years, at the option of the tenant. Hersey v. Giblett, 18 Beav. 174; 23 L. J., Ch. 818; 2 W. R. 206.

Under such a contract, the landlord might call on the tenant to exercise his option, and, in default, might determine the tenancy, but this might afterwards be waived by a receipt of rent. Ib.

—— When Option may be Exercised.]—A person entitled to leasehold premises for a long term of years agreed to underlet them to a tenant for three years, and, whenever called upon to do so by the tenant, to grant to him a lease for three years, seven years, or the remainder of the term that he had it in his power to grant, such lease to contain all the usual covenants for protecting the interests of the grantor. The three years expired without the option being exercised. The tenant, however, continued in possession until he became bankrupt, and his interest in the premises was sold by his assignee to a purchaser, who entered into possession and filed in equity a bill for specific performance of the agreement:—Held, that the option might be exercised at any time during the tenancy. Buckland v. Papillon, 36 L. J., Ch. 81; L. R. 2 Ch. 67; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 992; 15 L. T. 378; 15 W. R. 92.

C. EXTENT OF PREMISES INCLUDED.

1. GENERALLY.

Outer Wall—Lease of Floor.]—A lease of the rooms on a floor is a lease of a separate dwelling, and includes the outer wall so far as it is solely appropriate to the rooms let. Carlisle Café Co. v. Muse, 67 L. J., Ch. 53; 77 L. T. 515; 46 W. R. 107.

Fascia—Adjoining Tenement—Common Landlord.]—The plaintiff was lessee of a house numbered 152 in A. Street, but which lay behind Nos. 151 and 153 in that street, and at the bottom of a court approached by a passage from A. Street, half of which passage was under the first floor of No. 151, and the other half under the first floor of No. 153. The passage was closed by a gate in the plane of the front of 151 and 153, which was hung on the wall of 153, but was admitted to be part of the plaintiff's premises. All three houses belonged to the same landlord. Above the gate was a fascia of cement eight feet long, half of which was on the wall of 151, and the other half on that of 153. The fascia had existed from about 1845, and the number of the plaintiff's house and the name and business of the occupier for the time being had always been painted on it. No. 153 was demised to the defendant in 1874 without any express reservation of the fascia, and the plaintiff became lessee of No. 152 in 1876:—Held, that the fascia must be held to be a parcel of the property demised to the plaintiff, and that he was entitled to prevent the defendant from interfering with it. Francis

v. Hayward, 52 L. J., Ch. 291; 22 Ch. D. 177; 48 L. T. 297; 31 W. R. 488; 47 J. P. 517—C. A.

Gateway under Premises.]—Under a lease of "all that messuage or tenement, called, &c., now or late in the occupation of C.," the boundaries given not accurately defining the premises:—Held, that a gateway under a portion of the messuage, and leading to a yard behind, in which were some small houses not included in the demise, the tenants of which had always used the gateway, did not pass, in the absence of evidence to shew that it had been in the exclusive occupation of C. Dyne v. Nutley, 14 C. B. 122; 2 C. L. R. 81.

Room Separated by Partition.]—Under a demise of a messuage with all rooms and chambers, with the appurtenances thereto belonging, is to be understood all that is occupied together as an entire messuage at one and the same time; therefore, such a demise will not comprehend a room which had once formed part of the messuage, but which had been separated from it by means of a wooden partition, and had not been occupied with it for many years previously to the demise. Kerslake v. White, 2 Stark. 508; 20 R. R. 731.

Stable—Not included in Original Lease—Whether included in Reversionary Lease.]—Two adjoining plots of ground, A. and B., were let on building leases to separate tenants. On plot A. a house and stables were built, and on plot B. a house, the stable being situated between the two houses. The leases of both premises having become vested in P., he in the year 1795 blocked up the communication between the stables and A., and attached them to B., with which premises they continued to be occupied until the present action. P. then made an assignment of the lease of A., excepting the stables, but including stables under them. In 1823 the owner of the reversion in both premises granted to the defendant, in whom P.'s estate in the unassigned premises was vested, a reversionary lease of B., by a description and plan corresponding both in measurement and boundaries with the original lease, but with the addition, among the general words, of the following, "with all stables . . . to the said premises belonging or appertaining," and with a covenant to surrender at the end of the term, inter alia, "the racks, mangers, &c., affixed or belonging to the premises," there being no such words in the corresponding covenant of the original lease. There were no other stables belonging to or occupied with B.:—Held, that the stables did not pass under the lease of 1823. Maitland v. Mackinnon, 1 H. & C. 607; 32 L. J., Ex. 49; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 255; 7 L. T. 427; 11 W. R. 237.

Gas Works erected by Tenant before Agreement for Lease.]—Agreement for lease of factory, with engines, gas-houses, and appurtenants, to contain usual covenants:—Held, that the lease properly added the words "gas works," though the retorts and other gas works had been erected by the tenant when in occupation before the agreement. Thorpe v. Milligan, 5 W. R. 336.

Right of Way.]—Under a lease of premises, "together with all ways appertaining, or with any parts thereof used or enjoyed," a right of way passes, although not expressly mentioned, upon proof that it is used with the premises at the time the lease is granted. Kooystra v. Lucas, 1 D. & R. 506; 5 B. & Ald. 830; 24 R. R. 575. But see Harding v. Wilson, 3 D. & R. 287; 2 B. & C. 96; 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 238; 26 R. R. 287; Morris v. Edington, 3 Taunt. 24; 12 R. R. 579; Crisp v. Price, 5 Taunt. 548.

A piece of land having been conveyed, together with a right of way from it over a new road to a high road; the person to whom it was conveyed demised the piece of land by parol to a yearly tenant; the demise being general, and making no mention of the right of way:—Held, that the right of way having been made appurtenant to the land, it passed by the parol demise to the yearly in the tenant, although not expressly mentioned parol demise. Skull v. Glenister, 11 W. R. 368.

Before the date of the deed, A. was owner of a row of houses running from north to south, with a garden at the back of each to the east. In the rear of the gardens, and divided from them by a wire fence, was a shrubbery with a gravel walk, which was used in common by the occupiers of all the houses. This shrubbery was bounded on the east and north by the fence of S. By the instrument the premises demised to B. were described as the first house south in the row called, &c., with the garden and shubbery to the rear and north side thereof, and extending to S.'s fence, either way, and also liberty of way and passage to and for such persons for the time being occupying the premises intended to be hereby demised, in, along and over the walk in the rear of the houses, inclosed by a wire fence from the garden ground, or ground occupied with such several houses. The fence of S. ran along the south side of the garden belonging to the house demised to B., as far as the wire fence dividing the garden from the shrubbery. Afterwards A., by an indenture, demised to C. another house in the same row, with a reservation of a similar right of way:—Held, that the premises demised to B. included at least some portion of the angle of the shrubbery at the back of his garden, between the wire fence and the fence of S. to the east; and therefore that C. had no right to walk over the whole of the land comprised in that angle. Curling v. Mills, 6 Man. & G. 173; 7 Scott (N.R.) 709; 12 L. J., C. P. 316.

Soil of Road.]—It is to be collected from the recitals of a lease what is intended by the parties to be demised; and where a lease referred to a former demise of premises described as "fifty-nine acres, provincial measure," and after reciting an intention to demise the "said estate," went on to demise "the same, being forty acres, statute measure":—Held, that the soil of a road, which was set out and made between the times of making the first and second leases, and was part of the premises demised by the first lease, passed by the second. Doe d. White v. Osborne, 9 L. J., C. P. 313; 4 Jur. 941.

Bed of River.]—By an indenture of lease, lands therein described as "bounded on the west by the river Shannon," and as containing thirty-one and a-half acres or thereabouts, and delineated upon a map annexed (which, however, did not shew any boundary either on the bank or middle of the river), were demised at an acreable rent:—Held, that, in the absence of anything in the lease to rebut the ordinary presumption, it carried to the lessee half of the bed and soil of the river. Dwyer v. Rich, Ir. R. 6 C. L. 144—Ex. Ch.

Meadow—Lease of House—Parol Evidence.]—On an agreement for a lease of "a furnished house and premises, with gardens, pleasure-grounds, coach-house, and stabling thereto belonging":—Held, that, by these words, a meadow adjoining the premises did not pass to the lessees, and that evidence to shew that it was the intention of the parties that the meadow should so pass was inadmissible. Minton v. Geiger, 28 L. T. 449.

Waste Land.]—Premises were demised by the description of "all that cottage or tenement, with the garden thereto adjoining and belonging, situate, &c.; and also a piece or parcel of land lying near to the cottage or tenement, containing by estimation three-quarters of an acre (more or less), lately used as garden ground":—Held, that, under such description, an adjoining piece of waste land would not pass, unless it had been theretofore used as an outlet of the garden. Kingsmill v. Millard, 11 Ex. 313; 3 C. L. R. 1022.

Where Acreage less.]—The plaintiff offered to take a lease of a farm belonging to the defendant at a rent of 500*l.* per annum, specifying in his tender the closes which he wished to take, with their acreage, which amounted in the whole to 249 acres. The defendant's agent desired to let only 214 acres with this farm, but he accepted the plaintiff's offer without looking at the acreage included in it. He had in fact already let one of the closes to another person. Another tender had been made by a former tenant for the same farm, as comprising 235 acres, and the defendant's agent admitted in examination that he thought the plaintiff had tendered for the same quantity of land as the former tenant. The plaintiff commenced an action for specific performance against the defendant, and was willing to take a lease of the 214 acres at a proportionately reduced rent:—Held, that the defendant must grant the plaintiff a lease of 214 acres at a rent reduced from 500*l.*, in the proportion of 214 to 235. M'Kenzie v. Hesketh, 47 L. J., Ch. 231; 7 Ch. D. 675; 38 L. T. 171; 26 W. R. 189.

Bog.]—By a lease made in 1719 the lessor demised, for three lives, renewable for ever, all that part of the townland of B., containing 509 acres arable, meadow and pasture, bounded on the south by D., on the north and east by L. N., and on the west by T.'s and W.'s land, with all rights thereto belonging, excepting and reserving all mines, quarries of stone and coal, and all royalties, and all timber above and under ground. There were several renewals of the lease in the same terms as to the contents and boundaries of the demised premises:—Held, that 400 acres of bog and land reclaimed from bog, situated within the ambit of the specified boundaries passed under the lease and the renewals thereof in addition to the 509 acres arable, meadow and pasture. Jack v. M'Intyre, 12 Cl. & F. 151.

Inclusion of Part which cannot Legally be Demised—Effect.]—Where there is a demise of premises, and an entire rent reserved, if any part of the premises could not be legally demised, the whole is void. Doe d. Griffiths v. Lloyd, 3 Esp. 78; 6 R. R. 813.

Falsa demonstratio.]—A lease of land, described by admeasurement "with the houses now erected or being erected thereon" (it being found as a fact, that at the time the lease was executed the foundations of the houses had been laid), is in effect the same as though the lease had been of a specific house, and though the dimensions considerably exceeded those stated:—Held, that it was merely falsa demonstratio. Manning v. Fitzgerald, 29 L. J., Ex. 24. See also Magee v. Lavell, 43 L. J., C. P. 131; L. R. 9 C. P. 107; 30 L. T. 169; 22 W. R. 334.

Fixtures.]—See FIXTURES.

2. RESERVATIONS AND EXCEPTIONS.

Of Part of Land Demised.]—By a lease, purporting to demise a close containing five acres, at a yearly rent of 10*l.*, the lessor purported to reserve one acre of the close for himself, for such time as he might require it, for his own use, allowing to the lessee 2*l.* out of the thereinbefore specified rent, as long as the lessor should hold the one acre:—Held, that the clause could not be construed as an exception to the lessor of that acre, and that his representatives were not entitled to its possession after his death. Moroney v. Macnamara, Ir. R. 6 C. L. 181; 20 W. R. 905.

Demise of a whole territory or precinct of land commonly called A., containing in itself by estimation thirty-two poles of land, more or less; the whole territory or precinct of land commonly called B., containing in itself by estimation six poles of land, more or less; the whole territory or precinct of land commonly called C., containing in itself by estimation two poles of land, either more or less; being in all forty poles of land, save and except two poles of G., lying in the manor of A.:—Held, that the exception of the two poles of G. was good. Ellis v. Lord Primate, 16 Ir. Ch. R. 184.

—— Uncertain Specification of Acres.]—An incumbent agreed to grant, at a future period, a lease of his glebe, containing about 437 acres, "except thirty-seven acres thereof," which were not specified:—Held, that the contract was not void for uncertainty; that the right of selecting belonged to the lessor, he having the first act to do; but that if a lease had actually been granted in the uncertain form of the contract, the right of selecting would then have belonged to the tenant. Jenkins v. Green, 27 Beav. 437; 28 L. J., Ch. 817; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 304; 7 W. R. 304.

Held, also, that this right of selection must not be exercised oppressively, so as to interfere with the beneficial enjoyment of the rest of the farm. Ib.

Bog.]—A demise was in these words, "all that part of the lands of G. marked in the map Nos. 10 and 11 and called the Lough Farm, containing twenty-seven acres of green pasture and improvable ground and thirteen acres of bog, reserving and excepting the thirteen acres of bog":—Held, that the words of grant ended with "Lough Farm," the rest being mere description and that, therefore, the exception was good as being of a particular thing out of a general. McCleary v. Cochrane, Ir. R. 4 C. L. 145; 18 W. R. 362—Ex. Ch.

By a demise of the tract of land called D., "excepted and reserved out of said demise all royalties, minerals, fullers' earth, clay for bricks, coal pits, quarries of lime, slate, or stone, and bogs and turf mosses whatsoever, together with all woods and underwoods, by whatsoever name or names called or known, then or thereafter standing, lying, or being within or upon the premises, with ingress, egress, and regress to dig for, fell, and carry away all and every the before excepted premises; saving always, and reserved out of this exception, to the lessee, his heirs and assigns, liberty to dig, cut, and take lime, slate, or other stone, and turf-moss, to be spent and employed on the premises, and not elsewhere; and the same not to be cut or digged out without the order and appointment of the lessor, his heirs, and assigns," the soil of the bogs and turf-mosses is excepted, and remains vested in the lessor, his heirs and assigns. Boyle v. Olpherts, 4 Ir. Eq. R. 241; 1 Longf. & T. 320.

Running Water and Soil.]—A reservation in a lease of "the free running of water and soil coming from any other buildings and lands contiguous to the premises demised in and through the sewers or watercourses made or to be made within, through, or under the premises," extends to water and soil coming to and from—though not actually first arising upon or out of—the contiguous lands or buildings, but does not extend beyond such water and soil as are the product of the ordinary use of the land and buildings for habitation. Chadwick v. Marsden, 36 L. J., Ex. 177; L. R. 2 Ex. 285; 16 L. T. 666; 15 W. R. 964.

Mines and Minerals—Pre-historic Chattel found beneath the Surface.]—In land demised to a gas company for ninety-nine years, with a reservation to the lessor of all mines and minerals, and covenants under which the lessees were authorised, under the inspection of the lessor's surveyor and according to plans to be previously approved, to erect a gasholder and other buildings, a pre-historic boat, embedded in the soil six feet below the surface, was discovered by the lessees in the course of excavating for the foundations of the gasworks:—Held, that the boat, whether regarded as a mineral, or as part of the soil in which it was embedded when discovered, or as a chattel, did not pass to the lessees by the demise, but was the property of the lessor, though he was ignorant of its existence at the time of granting the lease. Elwes v. Brigg Gas Co., 55 L. J., Ch. 734; 33 Ch. D. 562; 55 L. T. 831; 35 W. R. 192.

Building Lease—Right to remove Soil.]—The holder of a building lease where minerals are reserved has a right to dig foundations for buildings about to be erected, and dispose of the materials dug out, but not to do so in order to improve the surface as a building site. Robinson v. Milne, 53 L. J., Ch. 1070.

Royalties—Right to Raise Limestone.]—The lands of A., on which there was an open quarry of limestone at the time of the demise, were demised for the term of three lives, renewable for ever, reserving to the lessor and his heirs all royalties. The lessee was restrained by injunction from raising the limestone for sale. Parcell v. Nash, 1 Jones, 625.

Tithes.]—Exception of the tithes of particular lands in a lease, seems to import a claim in the lessor to the tithes excepted; but the parol declaration of a former owner, that he was not entitled to the tithes, gives a construction to the exception in the lease. Norbury v. Meade, 3 Bligh, 261.

Shooting Rights—Regrant.]—The defendant demised to the plaintiff a large landed estate in Ireland ("excepting and always reserving out of this demise" to the lessor, timber and other trees, mines, minerals and quarries, "and also reserving to the lessor, his heirs and assigns, and his and their servants, agents and workmen, liberty of ingress," &c., to cut, work and take away the trees and minerals; "and also by way of grant, and not of reservation, the exclusive right of hunting, coursing and shooting upon and over the said demised premises, or otherwise to destroy the game and wildfowl thereon being"), to hold the said demised premises with the appurtenances (except as before excepted) to the lessee for a term of years at an annual rent:—Held, that the right of shooting was regranted to the lessor, and that the words "and also by way of grant, and not of reservation," were not a resumption of the parcels of the lease so as to pass the right of shooting to the lessee. Houstoun v. Sligo (Marquis), 55 L. T. 614—H. L. (E.)

Right to use Slip—"Assigns."]—To trespass for entering plaintiff's land, described as land on each side of a certain slip, defendant pleaded that before plaintiff was possessed of the land, in which, &c., a certain railway company were the owners in fee of the said land and slip, and that they demised the land in which, &c., "excepting and reserving thereout the said slip, &c., the dues payable for the use thereof, and excepting and reserving to the said company, their assigns, officers, servants and workmen, free access to and from the said slip, for the purpose of using and working the same or otherwise," and that the company granted their licence to defendant, to work and use such slip, and the plea justified the trespass as being committed in the exercise of such licence:—Held, a good defence, as the reservation in the demise enabled the company to use the slip by themselves or their licensees, and the word "assigns" was not to be construed as limited to persons taking an estate in the land. Metcalfe v. Westaway, 34 L. J., C. P. 113; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1202; 11 L. T. 673; 13 W. R. 181.

Right to do Acts in Respect of Premises—Pleading.]—What is excepted in a lease does not pass to the lessee at all; but where the lessor reserves a right to do certain acts in respect of the demised premises, he must in pleading set out the terms of the reservation, and of the instrument by which it was created. Fancy v. Scott, 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 305.

Timber and Trees.]—See post, M. 12.

3. Enclosures and Encroachments.

Presumption of Occupation as Part of Holding.]—When an encroachment by a tenant is on land of which his landlord is not owner, and the power to make it is derived from the tenancy, and it is occupied with and for the purposes of the demised premises, the presumption at the end of the lease is, that the land so encroached upon is part of the demised premises, not that the encroachment was made for the benefit of the landlord. Andrews v. Hailes, 2 El. & Bl. 349; 22 L. J., Q. B. 409; 17 Jur. 761; 1 W. R. 366.

When a tenant takes in and incloses adjoining land during his tenancy, the presumption of law that he does it for his landlord, so that the land gained by such encroachment will have to be given up at the end of the tenancy as part of the originally demised premises, is not rebutted by the fact that the landlord expressly assented to the inclosure being made; and where such presumption exists the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 7), does not apply until the original tenancy has ended. Whitmore v. Humphries, 41 L. J., C. P. 43; L. R. 7 C. P. 1; 25 L. T. 496; 20 W. R. 79.

A tenant taking in land adjacent to his own by encroachment must, as between himself and the landlord, be deemed primâ facie to take it as part of the demised land, but that presumption will not prevail for the landlord's benefit against third persons. Doe d. Baddeley v. Massey, 17 Q. B. 373; 20 L. J., Q. B. 434; 15 Jur. 1031.

Where, by a deed reciting that several persons had encroached on a common and inclosed land and built cottages, those parties conveyed all their interest in the land and cottages to trustees for the commoners, reserving to themselves the right to occupy the premises for the lives of themselves and their wives, paying 1*s.* a year to one of the trustees; and A., after the execution of the deed, and while in possession of his part of the encroachment conveyed, made a fresh encroachment on the waste which adjoined the other, and he occupied the two together for thirty-eight years, but five years before his death conveyed to B. the latter encroachment for a good consideration:—Held, in ejectment by the trustees against B., that as A., when the fresh encroachment was made, was a tenant (for life at most) to the trustees, and occupied it with the land of which he was tenant, it must be assumed that he made the fresh encroachment for the aggrandisement of the estate, and that therefore it was part of the holding when the tenancy expired. Doe d. Croft v. Tidbury, 14 C. B. 304; 2 C. L. R. 347; 23 L. J., C. P. 57; 18 Jur. 468.

Where a tenant incloses land, whether adjacent to, or distant from, the demised premises, and whether the land be part of a waste, or belong to the landlord or a third person, it is a presumption of fact that the inclosure is part of the holding, unless the tenant during the term does some act disclaiming his landlord's title. Kingsmill v. Millard, 11 Ex. 313; 3 C. L. R. 1022.

The presumption of law, that where a tenant for years encroaches on land in the neighbourhood of that which he holds, he does so for his landlord's, not for his own, benefit, is not rebutted by the fact, that the land taken by encroachment is separated by a brook from that which the tenant occupies; for, in order to fall within the rule, it need not be immediately adjacent; it is sufficient for it to be near. Lisburne (Earl) v. Davies, 1 H. & R. 172; 35 L. J., C. P. 193; L. R. 1 C. P. 259; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 340; 13 L. T. 795; 14 W. R. 333.

Encroachments made by a tenant upon the waste adjoining the demised premises belong to the landlord and not to the tenant, at the end of the term, however long; the possession of the tenant during the term not being adverse against the landlord. Nor does the fact of the landlord being also lord of the manor in which the waste is situate render the possession of the tenant adverse to the lord of the manor in his character of landlord. Doe d. Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge v. Stopford, 9 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 171.

Action of Trespass by Landlord.]—The tenant under a lease for years encroached upon and occupied a piece of land belonging to his landlord and adjoining the demised premises, for a period of more than twelve years. The landlord during the term brought an action for an injunction and damages for trespass:—Held, that the action would not lie. The tenant must be deemed to have occupied the piece of ground as part of the holding, and he was entitled so to occupy it during the remainder of his lease. Tabor v. Godfrey, 64 L. J., Q. B. 245.

Building on Adjoining Land—By Tenant.]—A tenant under a lease which contained a covenant to repair, and leave in good repair, all buildings and erections then standing or to be erected during the term, built a farmhouse, partly on the land demised, and partly on the waste adjoining belonging to the lessor:—Held, that his acquiescence in the act of the tenant prevented his dispossessing him of the premises built on the waste, and that it must be assumed by implication that the covenant to repair extended to the whole building, and that the landlord was entitled in a suit for the administration of the tenant's estate, to establish a claim for dilapidations. White v. Wakley, 26 Beav. 17; 28 L. J., Ch. 77; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 988; 6 W. R. 791.

So, if a tenant builds on his landlord's land, he does not, in the absence of special circumstances, acquire any right to prevent the landlord from taking possession of the land and buildings when the tenancy has determined. Ramsden v. Thornton, L. R. 1 H. L. 129; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 506; 14 W. R. 926.

—— By Stranger.]—If a stranger begins to build on land supposing it to be his own, and the real owner, perceiving his mistake, abstains from setting him right, and leaves him to persevere in his error, a court of equity will not afterwards allow the real owner to assert his title to the land. Ib.

But if a stranger builds on land knowing it to be the property of another, equity will not prevent the real owner from afterwards claiming the land, with the benefit of all the expenditure upon it. Ib.

Duty of Tenant in respect to Boundaries.]—See infra, N. 6.

D. AGREEMENTS FOR LEASES.

1. CONTRACT WHEN CONCLUDED.

Correspondence.] — In a correspondence between lessor and lessee respecting the granting of a new lease to the lessee; the latter having spoken of the renewal of the old lease, the lessor did not object to this expression, but adverted to other topics connected with the subject. On a bill filed for the specific performance of the agreement for renewal alleged to be contained in these letters:—Held, that they were so far evidence of such agreement as to warrant the continuance of an injunction against an action of ejectment brought by the lessor against the lessee. Price v. Assheton, 1 Y. & Coll. 82; 4 L. J., Ex. Eq. 3.

The defendant, being owner of a public-house, wrote to the plaintiffs, who were a firm of brewers, and offered it to them on lease, at a certain rent, and begged to be informed, at their earliest convenience, if the offer suited them, "as I am giving all the brewers who have left cards the offer in rotation." Subsequently, a clerk of the firm met the defendant on the premises, and discussed the terms of the lease; and afterwards, one of the plaintiffs wrote to the defendant, "I have viewed the premises, having had my clerk's report, and we are willing to take them of you":—Held, first, that such letters constituted a valid agreement for a lease. Wood v. Scarth, 2 Kay & J. 33; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1107; 4 W. R. 31.

Held, secondly, that primâ facie, the terms on which the lease was to be granted, must be taken to be those expressed in the first letter. Ib.

A party against whom it was sought to enforce specific performance of an agreement said to be contained in a voluminous correspondence, swore that the alleged agreement, even if otherwise valid, was understood by him to be made on certain conditions, of which the other party denied the existence, and on that ground sought to resist specific performance. The court, however, being of opinion that there were no such conditions:—Held, that there should be a specific performance of the agreement. Baumann v. James, 16 L. T. 165; 15 W. R. 685.

C., a lessee, sub-demised to W. Both the lease and sub-lease were determinable on notice. C. died, leaving the plaintiff his widow. A correspondence between her and W., with reference to a new sub-lease, extended from the 24th December, 1867, to the 4th February, 1869. By the earlier of those letters she distinctly stated the terms on which the new sub-lease was to be granted; and by the latter W. returned certain plans, approved on his part, and asked for, and received, a draft agreement for the new sub-lease. In the meantime, viz. on the 29th September, 1868, the original lease had been duly determined by notice from the plaintiff's lessor, of which fact the defendants were informed, though no notice to determine the under-lease was given. On the 5th of March, 1869, W. returned the draft agreement approved on his behalf, but without prejudice to his rights against the estate of the plaintiff's late husband in respect of not having received notice determining the under-lease. On the 4th of June, 1869, she obtained a new lease of the property at an improved rent, and called upon W. to accept and execute the sub-lease at the increased rent, according to the contract contained in the correspondence. W. refused to do so, on the grounds that the original sub-lease to him was still subsisting; that he was, therefore, entitled to remain in possession at his original rent; that he had never agreed to take a new lease; and that the whole transaction had been carried on under a mistake of the true position of the parties. The plaintiff then filed a bill for the specific performance of the contract:—Held, that there was a concluded agreement between her and W., and that she was entitled to a decree with costs. Cayley v. Walpole, 39 L. J., Ch. 609; 22 L. T. 900; 18 W. R. 782.

Sending Draft Lease.]—The lessee having signed the memorandum of agreement, gave the names of certain persons as referees for his capabilities. The lessor, without accepting the lessee as tenant, either in writing or by parol, sent him the draft lease for approval. The lessee refused to complete:—Held, upon demurrer to a bill for specific performance, that there had been no unconditional acceptance. Demurrer allowed, but without costs. Warner v. Willington, 3 Drew. 523; 25 L. J., Ch. 662; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 433; 4 W. R. 531.

The defendant having proposed to take a lease of premises for the term of seven years, a draft lease was prepared, to which the defendant made some objections. He ultimately took it away, to be settled by his solicitors. His solicitors returned the draft to the plaintiff's solicitors, with the following letter:—"We have seen our client, and have altered the draft lease in accordance with his instructions. We trust there will be no impediment to prevent an early completion, and shall be glad to receive the draft as soon as you can, that we may engross the counterpart." The plaintiff's solicitors replied, returning the draft and engrossment of the lease and counterpart, stating that, according to the practice, where there is no definition on the subject, the lessor's solicitor invariably prepares both lease and counterpart:—Held, that there was no evidence of any contract binding the defendant to take the lease, and no memorandum of any contract sufficient for that purpose, within the 4th section of the Statute of Frauds. Forster v. Rowland, 7 H. & N. 103; 30 L. J., Ex. 396; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 998.

In 1870, A. furnished to B., who had agreed shortly before to take from him a lease for thirty-one years of lands, a memorandum embodying its proposed terms. B., having struck out a clause binding him to keep the fences in repair, returned the draft as accepted. A., in acknowledging its receipt, described that cancellation as "the only thing I now see likely to cause any difference between us," adding, "such a point should not cause any difference between us, as I believe it is the usual custom for a tenant to keep the fences in repair." A. having subsequently filed a bill for specific performance:—Held, that there was a concluded agreement for a lease including the cancelled clause, and that he was entitled to a decree. Blakeney v. Hardie, Ir. R. 8 Eq. 381.

Subject to Approval of Solicitor.]—A., the defendant, wrote to his solicitor, who was also the solicitor of E., the plaintiff:—"You may make Mr. E. an offer of the T. hotel at 150*l.* per annum from Lady-day, 1881; tenant to pay all rates and taxes, except property tax, and do internal and external painting and repairs; the roof and walls to be kept in repair by the landlord. Term, ten years; a proper lease to be drawn up with all proper clauses, and to be approved by me and my solicitor." This letter was forwarded to the plaintiff, who at once wrote and accepted the offer. There was some evidence that the defendant knew the plaintiff was a brewer:—Held, that the words "to be approved by me and my solicitor" did not prevent the letters forming a complete contract, and that the defendant was not entitled to insist on the lease containing a covenant against underletting. Eadie v. Addison, 52 L. J., Ch. 80; 47 L. T. 543; 31 W. R. 320.

By a letter which contained all essential terms of a contract, the defendant offered to take a lease of a number of houses from the plaintiff, but there was this provision at the end: "Such lease to be approved in the customary way by my solicitor." The offer contained in this letter was accepted by the plaintiff. The defendant's solicitor subsequently refused to approve the lease, or to complete:—Held, that there was a binding, and not a conditional, contract, which must be specifically enforced. The meaning of the provision was, that the defendant's solicitor was to see that nothing irregular or unusual was inserted in the formal lease which was to carry out the agreement. Chipperfield v. Carter, 72 L. T. 487.

Subject to Preparation of Formal Contract.]—A paper sent to a solicitor as instructions to prepare a lease, may be treated as a final agreement for the lease, if the evidence shews that it was only so sent to be put into a formal shape; but the act of so sending it is evidence to raise a primâ facie presumption that it did not contain all that the parties meant, but might afterwards be modified by either of them. Ridgway v. Wharton, 6 H. L. Cas. 238; 27 L. J., Ch. 46; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 173; 5 W. R. 804.

If contracting parties agree on terms of which there is sufficient evidence, but contemplate in addition a more formal document, it becomes a question of intention merely whether they intend it as a memorial of the terms already agreed on, or as the instrument by which alone they meant to be bound. Ib.

An agreement for a lease signed by the parties, but expressed to be "subject to the preparation and approval of a formal contract," is not a final agreement, and is not binding within the Statute of Frauds, so that specific performance can be enforced thereof. Winn v. Bull, 47 L. J., Ch. 139; 7 Ch. D. 29; 26 W. R. 230.

The defendants by letter agreed to take on lease property on terms mentioned, "provided the terms of the draft lease are reasonable in our estimation":—Held, that some terms of the draft lease sent being unreasonable, the defendants were at liberty to decline the contract, without specifying to which particular terms they objected; and an action for performance by the lessor in which he offered to withdraw certain terms mentioned in the defendants' pleadings as unreasonable, was dismissed. Wilcox v. Redhead, 49 L. J., Ch. 539; 28 W. R. 795.

Subject to Assent of Principal.]—On the treaty for the underlease of a house, the agent for plaintiff tendered an unconditional agreement to be signed, to which the defendant attached his name and initials in pencil, subject to the condition of there being nothing unusual in the covenants of the original lease. The defendant subsequently discovered that there was a nuisance which would prevent his occupation of the house, but which was unknown to the plaintiff, and he therefore abandoned the treaty:—Held, that under these circumstances the court would try the case strictly between the parties, and in the absence of actual evidence that the agent had direct or implied authority to accede to the pencil additions, would not bind the plaintiff, and that until the latter had assented to the alterations, the agreement was only a proposal, and might be abandoned by the defendant. The bill was dismissed with costs. Lucas v. James, 7 Hare, 410; 18 L. J., Ch. 329; 13 Jur. 912.

Vagueness and Uncertainty.]—See infra, col. 759 et seq.

What Sufficient to create Relation of Landlord and Tenant.]—By an agreement between the defendant, as a brewer, and the plaintiff, reciting that the defendant was in possession of premises whereon the sale of beer had been for some time past carried on by A. on the defendant's account, and that the plaintiff was desirous of carrying on such trade for the defendant, to which he had agreed, it was witnessed that the defendant had agreed, for the consideration therein stated, that the plaintiff should enter upon the premises and carry on thereon such trade for the defendant in the place and stead, and in the same manner and with and on the same privileges and terms as A. had done, until the agreement should be determined by notice. And the plaintiff agreed during all the time he should carry on the trade for the defendant, that all beer sold by him should be had by him from the defendant, and that the plaintiff should not part with the premises to any person without the licence of the defendant; and that, when either party should be desirous of putting an end to the agreement, the plaintiff should, on receiving from the defendant a month's notice to quit the trade, deliver up possession of the premises, and should be at liberty to leave the trade, and quit the occupation of the premises on giving one month's notice to the defendant:—Held, that this did not create the relation of landlord and tenant between the parties, but that the occupation of the plaintiff was that of servant to the defendant. Mayhew v. Suttle, 4 El. & Bl. 347; 3 C. L. R. 59; 24 L. J., Q. B. 54; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 303; 3 W. R. 108—Ex. Ch.

Agreement in 1859, by M., that he would, by indenture, to be forthwith prepared, grant unto A. a lease of a house and premises, to hold the same for the term of three years from the 25th May, at the yearly rent of 84*l.*, payable by four quarterly payments (stating the days and what covenants should be contained in the lease); "and it is mutually agreed that these presents shall operate as an agreement only, and that, until a lease shall be executed, the rent, covenants, and agreements agreed to be therein reserved and contained shall be paid and observed, and the several rights and remedies shall be enforced, in the same manner as if the same had been actually executed." A. entered, and continued in possession until a quarter's rent became due, but no rent was paid:—Held, that the agreement constituted a tenancy, with a rent reserved, or made payable, within 11 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 1; and therefore there was a right in M. to follow goods fraudulently removed by A. Anderson v. Midland Ry., 3 El. & El. 614; 30 L. J., Q. B. 94; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 411; 3 L. T. 809.

See further Cases, post, col. 808.

—— Notice to pay Rent to Mortgagee—Possession of Tenant after Notice.]—A mortgagor let the mortgaged premises subsequently to the mortgage. The mortgagees gave a notice to the tenant informing him of the existence of the mortgage, and requiring him to pay to them the rent thereafter to accrue due. The tenant continued in possession after the receipt of the notice, but there was no other circumstance from which an agreement for a tenancy could be inferred :—Held, that the mere fact of the tenant remaining in possession after notice to pay rent to the mortgagees was not evidence of an agreement that he should become tenant to the mortgagees. Towerson v. Jackson, 61 L. J., Q. B. 36 ; [1891] 2 Q. B. 484 ; 65 L. T. 332 ; 40 W. R. 37 ; 56 J. P. 21—C. A.

2. Statute of Frauds.

a. Interest in Lands.

Furnished Lodgings.]—A contract to let furnished lodgings is a contract for an interest in land. Edge v. Strafford, 1 C. & J. 391 ; 1 Tyr. 293. S. P., Inman v. Stamp, 1 Stark. 12 ; 18 R. R. 740.

Secus, as to board and lodgings. Wright v. Stewart, 2 El. & El. 721 ; 29 L. J., Q. B. 161 ; 8 W. R. 413.

Fixtures and Alterations.] — The plaintiff agreed to let a house to the defendant, and to sell him the furniture and fixtures therein, and to make alterations and improvements in the house ; and the defendant agreed to take the house and pay for the furniture and fixtures and alterations :—Held, an agreement relating to an interest in land. Vaughan v. Hancock, 3 C. B. 766 ; 16 L. J., C. P. 1.

Rent free in Consideration of Share of Crops.]—A. agreed with B. to let him land rent free on condition that A. should have a moiety of the crops ; such an agreement need not be in writing. Poulter v. Killingbrick, 1 Bos. & P. 397. See Waddington v. Bristow, 2 Bos. & P. 452 ; 2 N. R. 355.

Contract for Use of Dock.]—A corporation, being the owner of a graving dock, issued regulations for its use, that the dock would "be let to parties requiring the same for the repair of vessels" at certain rates ; that a book would be kept by the borough treasurer for the entering of the names of vessels intended for repair, and that as far as practicable priority would be given to vessels in the order of entry. A sum of three guineas was to be paid to the borough treasurer on entering each vessel, which "entrance money, and the right of turn for the use of the dock," were to be forfeited if the vessel did not take her turn at the specified time ; and the corporation was to have a lien for dockage upon the vessel, with a power to detain the vessel for the same. In an action by a shipowner against the corporation for not allowing his vessel, for which the entrance fee had been paid, to enter such dock in her turn, according to these regulations : —Held, that the contract for the use of the dock did not amount to an interest in land within s. 4 of the Statute of Frauds, and that it did not require to be under seal. Wells v. Kingston-upon-Hull Corporation, 44 L. J., C. P. 257 ; L. R. 10 C. P. 402 ; 32 L. T. 615 ; 23 W. R. 562.

Contract to Procure Assignment of Lease.]—A contract to procure for a person the assignment of a lease of a house is a contract for an interest in or concerning land within the Statute of Frauds (29 Car. 2, c. 3), s. 4, and must therefore be in writing, although it is made by one who has not the lease himself, or any interest under it. Horsey v. Graham, 39 L. J., C. P. 58 ; L. R. 5 C. P. 9 ; 21 L. T. 530 ; 18 W. R. 141.

Collateral Agreements—To Destroy Game.]—A party agreed to hire of the owner grass land on the terms of a lease which was to be signed at some future time. The tenant having entered on the land, found it was overrun with rabbits, and, on the lease being presented to him for signature, declined to sign it unless the landlord would promise to destroy the rabbits. The landlord refused to put a term in the lease binding him to do so, but agreed by parol that he would destroy them. The tenant thereupon signed the lease, which provided that he should not shoot, hunt, or sport on the land, or destroy any game, but would use his best endeavours to preserve it, and would allow the landlord or friends at any time to hunt, shoot, or sport on the land. Afterwards, the rabbits not having being destroyed by the landlord, the tenant sued him in the county court for the damage done by them to the grass and crops on the land demised. The judge on the trial admitted evidence of the parol agreement, and asked the jury to say whether it had been made, and whether the lease had been signed on the faith of it. They found for the tenant on both points. Upon appeal on the ground of the misreception of evidence :—Held, that the parol agreement was collateral to the written lease, and that the evidence was properly admitted. Morgan v. Griffith, 40 L. J., Ex. 46 ; L. R. 6 Ex. 70 ; 23 L. T. 783 ; 19 W. R. 957.

A. leased a farm to B. ; before taking it, B. complained to A. of the quantity of game upon it, and A. thereupon told B. that he was about to kill and to keep down the game, and to dismiss most of his keepers, and discontinue letting the shooting, but said that he did not wish this arrangement to be inserted in the lease. The lease was accordingly drawn up and executed, without containing any reference to A.'s undertaking, but it reserved to A., his friends and agents, the game and right of sporting over the farm. The shooting was afterwards re-let during B.'s lease, and a large head of game kept up. A. died, and in a suit to administer his estate, B. brought in as a creditor a claim on account of damage done to his crops by the game :—Held, that the evidence established the fact that there had been a parol agreement collateral to the lease, and upon the faith of which the lease had been executed ; that such agreement was valid, and B.'s claim must be admitted. Erskine v. Adeane, Bennett's Claim, 42 L. J., Ch. 849 ; L. R. 8 Ch. 756 ; 29 L. T. 234 ; 21 W. R. 802.

—— As to Improvements.]—A landlord, who had demised premises for a term of years at 50*l.* a year, agreed with his tenant to lay out 50*l.* in making certain improvements upon them, the tenant undertaking to pay him an increased rent of 5*l.* a year during the remainder of the term (of which several years were unexpired), to commence from the quarter preceding the completion of the work :—Held, that the landlord, having done the work, might recover arrears of the 5*l.* a year against the tenant, though the agreement had not been signed by either party ; for that it was not a contract for any interest in or concerning lands within the statute. Donellan v. Read, 3 B. & Ad. 899.

A landlord demised to a tenant a messuage in an unfinished state by a written agreement. Before and at the time of the tenant's signing the agreement, the landlord verbally promised the tenant to put the messuage into a condition fit for habitation. Amongst the things which he so undertook to do upon the messuage was the construction of a water-closet. In an action for the breach of his promise to put the messuage into a condition fit for habitation :—Held, that his verbal promise to finish the messuage was collateral to the written lease ; that evidence of the promise was admissible at the trial ; and that his undertaking to build a water-closet in the messuage was not a contract for an interest in land within the 4th section of the Statute of Frauds, and therefore need not be in writing. Mann v. Nunn, 43 L. J., C. P. 241 ; 30 L. T. 526.

—— To Send in Furniture.]—A declaration alleged that before the making of the agreement thereinafter mentioned, the plaintiff and the defendant had been negotiating for the letting by the defendant to the plaintiff of a messuage and premises, together with the use of the furniture therein ; that the plaintiff had objected to becoming tenant on the ground that the messuage and premises were insufficiently furnished. It further alleged that the defendant, in order to induce, as he did in fact thereby induce, the plaintiff to become tenant, without requiring him to send in furniture previously to the commencement of the tenancy, verbally promised the plaintiff that he, the defendant, would, within a reasonable time after such commencement, send in such additional furniture as might be found necessary ; and thereupon, in consideration that the plaintiff, at the request of the defendant, had become tenant, without requiring him previously to the plaintiff so becoming tenant to send in the furniture, the defendant promised the plaintiff that he would within a reasonable time send in such furniture. Breach, that he did not perform his last-mentioned promise :—Held, that the declaration was good ; that the promise to send in the furniture was collateral to the agreement relating to the tenancy of the house ; and that it was not required by the 4th section of the Statute of Frauds, to be in writing, as not being an agreement for an interest in land. Angell v. Duke, 44 L. J., Q. B. 78 ; L. R. 10 Q. B. 174 ; 32 L. T. 25 ; 23 W. R. 307.

—— To Pay Amount of Rent.]—By articles of agreement not under seal the plaintiff agreed to grant to the defendant a lease at a certain rent for ninety-nine years of a piece of land so soon as the latter should have erected upon it a messuage, and the defendant undertook until the execution of the lease to "hold the said piece of land and other the premises at the rent and subject to the conditions to be contained" in the lease. The defendant never entered upon or took possession of the piece of land :—Held, that although the articles of agreement did not operate as a demise, yet the defendant by a collateral contract to the intended lease had undertaken to pay the amount of the rent, and that it was immaterial that he had never entered upon possession of the land. Adams v. Hagger, 4 Q. B. D. 480 ; 27 W. R. 402—C. A.

—— To Enlarge Premises.]—Where a lease was granted to one who afterwards took another into partnership, and both applied jointly to the landlord to enlarge the premises, agreeing to pay 10*l.* per cent. per annum on the money laid out, which was accordingly done, and the tenants afterwards dissolved partnership :—Held, that the agreement was only collateral to the lease, and not a new demise. Hoby v. Roebuck, 2 Marsh. 433 ; 7 Taunt. 157 ; 17 R. R. 477.

b. Memorandum.

i. Contents.

Names of Parties.]—An offer in writing to take a lease of a theatre, signed by the intending lessees and attested by the lessor's agent, but not naming the lessor and only addressed to him as "Sir," followed by an acceptance in writing by the agent, addressed to and received by the intending lessees but likewise not naming the lessor, which letter was not signed by them nor referred to in any other writing, is not an agreement in writing within the Statute of Frauds so as to entitle the lessor to have the same specifically performed. Williams v. Jordan, 46 L. J., Ch. 681 ; 6 Ch. D. 517 ; 26 W. R. 230.

A memorandum of agreement for a lease was signed by the lessee, but the name of the lessor did not appear in any part of the memorandum :—Held, that a letter written by the lessee subsequently to the memorandum, referring to the lessor by name, was sufficient to satisfy the statute. Warner v. Willington, 3 Drew. 523 ; 25 L. J., Ch. 662 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 433 ; 4 W. R. 531.

By a memorandum of agreement the plaintiff agreed to let a certain brickfield for five years, "the tenant" to pay a certain rent and royalty. Only the name of the plaintiff appeared in the body of the agreement, but it was sold by the defendant and plaintiff :—Held, that it could not be reasonably inferred that the defendant signed the agreement in any other capacity than that of tenant, and therefore so far as regarded the Statute of Frauds the agreement was valid. Stokell v. Niven, 61 L. T. 18—C. A.

Property.]—An agreement for a lease, in order to be sufficient within the Statute of Frauds, must state the property, the price paid, and the interest to be parted with. Dolling v. Evans, 15 W. R. 394.

Term—Commencement.]—Agreement, in substance, as follows :—"Proposals for letting the M. & G. farms in H., quantity, 130 acres, term, 12 years, determinable," &c. "Rent, 162*l.* To farm the arable land upon the four-course system," &c. "All other covenants, except as above altered, contained in a draft lease dated December 1st, 1824, granted by W. P. to J. W." —"June 3rd, 1835 : Agreed to the above rent, provided the house and buildings are put into tenantable repair on a plan to be mutually determined upon and finally settled within one month from the above date." Though signed by the landlord and the party intending to take, this is not a present demise, because the terms were to take effect only upon the performance of a condition, and it was not ascertained when the tenancy was to commence. Doe d. Wood v. Clarke, 7 Q. B. 211 ; 14 L. J., Q. B. 233 ; 9 Jur. 426.

The following letter was written by E. to the plaintiff (after taking the defendant over a house belonging to the plaintiff) : "I have at length let Town Walls House, subject to certain alterations and repairs, at 40*l.* per annum. A list of repairs I herewith send you. I think they are so absolutely necessary and reasonable that I have at once set Mr. B. upon the work, so as to bind the person who has taken it." The defendant had previously offered to take the house :—Held, that the letter was not such a memorandum of the bargain as to satisfy the 4th section of the Statute of Frauds, inasmuch as it was a mere proposal, and did not specify the commencement or the duration of the term, so as to amount to evidence of a contract. Clarke v. Fuller, 16 C. B. (N.S.) 24; 12 W. R. 671.

A bill for specific performance alleged a verbal agreement for the lease of a house by the plaintiff to the defendant for seven years from Michaelmas, 1870, followed, first, by a letter from the defendant to the plaintiff, which did not state when the term was to commence; and secondly, by another letter of the defendant to the plaintiff in which, after referring to the previous letter, the defendant stated that he thought it best to say that it was clearly understood, on his part, that the plaintiff agreed to let the house for seven years from Michaelmas, 1870, upon certain conditions therein mentioned, some of which the plaintiff did not admit to form part of the alleged verbal agreement:—Held, that neither the first letter, nor the two together, constituted a memorandum in writing of the alleged agreement sufficient to satisfy the requirements of the Statute of Frauds. Nesham v. Selby, 41 L. J., Ch. 173; L. R. 13 Eq. 191; 26 L. T. 145. Affirmed, 41 L. J., Ch. 551; L. R. 7 Ch. 406; 26 L. T. 568.

Action for specific performance of an agreement to take a lease of a house. In order to take the case out of the Statute of Frauds the plaintiff relied on a letter, written by the defendant, in which "the term" was stated "to be for twelve years," but the day of the commencement of the term was not mentioned; and in the same letter, referring to certain covenants, the defendant "suggested that they be similar to those contained in A.'s lease":—Held, first, that there never was any concluded agreement between the parties. Cartwright v. Millar, 36 L. T. 398.

Held, secondly, that if there had been an agreement, there was no memorandum of the agreement, in writing, sufficient to satisfy the Statute of Frauds, as the commencement of the term was not stated. Ib.

A memorandum of agreement to grant a lease, not stating any time for the commencement of the lease, construed as an agreement for a lease to commence immediately from the date of the agreement, and held sufficient under the Statute of Frauds. Jaques v. Millar, 47 L. J., Ch. 544; 6 Ch. D. 153; 37 L. T. 151; 25 W. R. 846.

An executory agreement for a lease does not satisfy the Statute of Frauds unless it can be collected from it on what day the term is to begin, and there is no inference that the term is to commence from the date of the agreement in the absence of language pointing to that conclusion. Jaques v. Millar (6 Ch. D. 153) overruled. Marshall v. Berridge, 51 L. J., Ch. 329; 19 Ch. D. 233; 45 L. T. 599; 30 W. R. 93; 46 J. P. 279—C. A. See also May v. Thomson, 20 Ch. D. 705.

A lessee, D., wrote to his landlord's agents, asking for an extension of his term for twenty-one years from the termination of his present lease, and offering a premium. The landlord wrote to his agents declining D.'s offer, but adding, "As the lease will not run out for the next two years, I think there is plenty of time to think over the matter. However, if Mr. D. is very urgent, I will consent to grant him a lease for twenty-one years at 50*l.* a year, and a premium of 100*l.*" The latter part of the letter was communicated to D., who accepted the offer:—Held, that D. was entitled to a lease for twenty-one years at a rent of 50*l.* a year, and a premium of 100*l.*, commencing from the expiration of his existing lease. Wood v. Aylward, 58 L. T. 662—C. A.

An agreement for a lease of a public-house, dated 1st April, provided for a term of three years with an option to renew for another seven years, and for possession to be given "within one month from this date":—Held, that the commencement of the term could be collected from the agreement as a whole, and that the day possession was given—a fact on which evidence was admitted—was the date from which the lease was to commence, and consequently that there was a valid contract. Marshall v. Berridge (19 Ch. D. 233) discussed and applied. Lander and Bagley's Contract, In re, 61 L. J., Ch. 707; [1892] 3 Ch. 41; 67 L. T. 521.

Where a tenant agreed to surrender an existing lease in consideration of his lessors granting him a new lease, but no date was fixed for the surrender or for the commencement of the new term, such agreement cannot be specifically enforced. Oxford Corporation v. Crow, [1893] 3 Ch. 535; 8 R. 279; 69 L. T. 228; 42 W. R. 200.

On the 28th March, 1894, the plaintiff and defendant signed a memorandum of agreement, by which the defendant was to take an underlease of a house on certain terms. The date from which the underlease was to commence was omitted in this agreement, but it was understood by the parties, at the time, that it was to be the 7th April, 1894. This date was specifically agreed to in writing by subsequent letters:—Held, that there was a contract made on the 28th March, 1894, sufficiently evidenced in writing to satisfy the Statute of Frauds. White v. Hay, 72 L. T. 281.

Where an agreement in writing for a lease for a term of years did not expressly state the date at which the term was to commence, but contained a reference to circumstances from which such date could be clearly ascertained:—Held, sufficient to satisfy the Statute of Frauds, and specific performance of the agreement was decreed. Phelan v. Tedcastle, 15 L. R., Ir. 169.

The plaintiff made a proposal in writing to the defendant as follows:—June 7th, 1886, to rent same (i.e., licensed house), with fixtures, &c., at 2*l.* 10*s.* a week. This tenancy to be for two years certain. The plaintiff to have the option of purchase at any time within that term, at a sum of 1,200*l.*, to give solvent security in the sum of 500*l.* for the preservation of the retail licence attached to said premises, and for payment of above weekly rent. The defendant accepted the above proposal in the following terms:—"I accept the within proposal, provided Mr. M. C. is the security." An action being brought by the plaintiff to recover possession of the premises, and for specific performance, the statement of claim alleged that M. C. was ready and willing to become security, as the defendant was aware, and that the plaintiff went into possession of the premises under the proposal and continued therein until the defendant resumed possession. The defendant pleaded (inter alia) the Statute of Frauds:—Held, that the proposal and acceptance did not satisfy the requirements of the statute, as no date was fixed expressly or by reference from which the term was to run; also that the acceptance was conditional, and that as performance of the condition was not averred the documents could neither constitute a present demise nor a complete agreement, entitling the plaintiff to specific performance. White v. McMahon, 18 L. R., Ir. 460.

An agreement in writing between A. and B., that on paying 20*l.* B. was to get possession of a farm of land, and also a lease for twenty-one years, at the yearly rent of 16*l.* a year; and that B., on giving up possession at the end of twenty-one years, having done no injury, was to get his money returned:—Held, to constitute a valid agreement for an executory demise for twenty-one years from the date of the payment of the 20*l.* Erskine v. Armstrong, 20 L. R., Ir. 296—C. A.

—— Duration.]—One paper, referring to another in which the terms of an agreement are stated, will constitute a contract sufficiently executed according to the provisions of the Statute of Frauds; but where the first paper was in these words: "I agree to let the premises in G. L., containing three stables, &c., for the same rent, and subject to the same conditions that I hold them myself":—Held, that this paper, even though ratified by the proposed lessee, as it did not state the duration of the term, did not contain enough to constitute a memorandum of agreement sufficient to satisfy the statute. Fitzmaurice v. Bayley, 9 H. L. Cas. 78; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1215; 3 L. T. 69; 8 W. R. 750.

Essential.]—There must be a signing, either by an actual signature of the name, or something intended by the writer to be equivalent to a signature; such as a mark by a marksman. Selby v. Selby, 3 Mer. 2; 17 R. R. 1.

Position of.]—Provided the name is inserted in an instrument, in such a manner as to have the effect of authenticating it, the requisition of the act with respect to signature is complied with and it does not matter in what part of the instrument the name is found. Ogilvie v. Foljambe, 3 Mer. 53; 17 R. R. 13. See also Propert v. Parker, 1 Russ. & M. 625.

The signature must be inserted in such a manner as to govern or have the effect of authenticating the whole instrument. Caton v. Caton, 36 L. J., Ch. 886; L. R. 2 H. L. Cas. 127; 16 W. R. 1.

The mere circumstance of the name of the party being written by himself in the body of a memorandum of agreement for a lease will not constitute a signature within the meaning of the statute. Stokes v. Moore, 1 Cox, 219; 1 R. R. 24.

Pencil.]—See Lucas v. James, 7 Hare, 410; 18 L. J., Ch. 329; 13 Jur. 912.

Authority of Solicitor.]—Negotiations having commenced between the plaintiffs and the defendant respecting a lease of a house by the plaintiffs to the defendant, they forwarded a draft lease, which defendant sent to his solicitors, intimating that he would leave the matter in their hands. After a correspondence between the solicitors of each party with reference to the terms of the lease, the defendant's solicitors wrote to the plaintiffs' solicitors, "We have just seen our client, and have altered this draft lease in accordance with his instructions. We trust there will be now no impediment to prevent an early completion; and we shall be glad to receive the draft as soon as you can, that we may engross the counterpart. R. & B." To this the plaintiffs' solicitors replied by letter, forwarding the draft and engrossment of lease and counterpart, claiming, as solicitors to the lessors, to be entitled to engross both at the expense of the lessee, and requesting the defendants' solicitors, when they had compared, to return the engrossments of the lease and counterpart, when they (the plaintiffs' solicitors) would be prepared to exchange. The defendants' solicitors objected to this, the negotiation went off, and the plaintiffs, having brought an action against the defendant for the breach of an agreement to accept a lease on terms previously agreed upon:—Held, that there was no evidence of an authority from the defendant to his solicitors to sign an agreement to accept a lease on terms previously agreed upon; and that, supposing there had been such authority, the letter of the defendants' solicitors was only a proposal, which was not accepted in its entirety, the claim to engross the counterpart lease being a substantial part, and not a consequence of the agreement, and that therefore there was no signed agreement or memorandum thereof to satisfy the 4th section of the Statute of Frauds. Forster v. Rowland, 30 L. J., Ex. 396; 7 H. & N. 103; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 998.

A person, who was in treaty for taking the lease of a house, stated, in a letter to the owner, that he had authorised his solicitors to settle the terms of the agreement. They subsequently sent the owner a draft agreement, signed by them, stating that its provisions were approved by their client, who afterwards refused to sign or acknowledge it:—Held, in a suit for specific performance, that the solicitors were agents in what they did, and that a defence under the Statute of Frauds failed. Also, that an alteration made by the owner in the terms of the agreement, but not insisted on by him, did not vitiate the contract. Jolliffe v. Blumberg, 19 W. R. 784.

Of Agent's Clerk.]—A. is a tenant for life, with a power to lease by deed, duly executed under her hand and seal, reserving the best yearly rent. Plaintiff enters into possession, and expends money in building, under an agreement for a lease evidenced only by the memorandum in writing, entered in the book of A.'s authorised agent, signed not by the agent himself, but by his clerk, although in evidence to have been approved by him, and according to the usual course of business. A. dies, and on a bill for specific performance against the remainderman:—Held, first, not sufficient agreement in writing; secondly, the plaintiff not entitled to compensation from A.'s representatives for money laid out by him on the faith of the alleged agreement. Blore v. Sutton, 3 Mer. 237; 17 R. R. 74.

After Death of Principal.]—After some negotiations, a landlord, by his agent, stated, in a letter to the tenant, the terms on which he would renew his lease, but added, he would expect an answer within a month. The landlord died seven days afterwards, and on the following day the tenant and agent, both of whom were then ignorant of the death, met, and the tenant signed his acceptance of the terms:—Held, that there was no binding contract. Carr v. Levingston, 35 Beav. 41.

See further CONTRACT, ante, vol. iv., cols. 32 et seq.

iii. Connected Documents.

A tenant applied to the landlord's solicitors as to the renewal of his lease. The solicitors sent him a report by a surveyor, who recommended the granting a lease for fourteen years at a given rent if certain repairs were done by the tenant. The tenant wrote back assenting to the repairs and rent, but asking for a term of twenty-one years. No final agreement was come to, but some months afterwards, a negotiation having proceeded between the tenant and landlord without the intervention of the solicitors, the landlord wrote a letter promising the tenant a lease for fourteen years "at the rent and terms agreed upon," to which the tenant wrote back an unqualified acceptance:—Held, that parol evidence was admissible to connect the report and the tenant's previous letter with the subsequent letters; and that, it being conclusively established that there had never been any other rent or terms agreed upon than those mentioned in the report, there was a sufficient memorandum in writing to satisfy the Statute of Frauds. Baumann v. James, L. R. 3 Ch. 508; 18 L. T. 424; 16 W. R. 877.

The report provided for the tenant doing certain specified works and "other works" upon the property, and estimated the expense from 150*l.* to 200*l.* The specified works being such as must evidently cost nearly that sum:—Held, that there was no such uncertainty as to prevent specific performance. Ib.

The person entitled to the reversion in fee of a house, expectant upon a term vested in a lessee, who had demised the premises for a portion of his term to a sub-lessee, agrees by one letter to grant that sub-lessee an extension of lease at a certain yearly rent, and in another letter fixes a time when the term, which he thus proposes to grant, is to expire:—Held, a valid agreement within the Statute of Frauds, and under it the sub-lessee has a right to a lease which shall commence from the expiration of the existing term. Verlander v. Codd, Turn. & R. 352.

The defendant entered into a verbal agreement with the plaintiff to grant him the lease of a house for a term of years. A draft for the proposed lease was furnished by the plaintiff's solicitor to the defendant's solicitors, and returned by them approved of on behalf of the defendant. The defendant subsequently wrote a letter to the plaintiff complaining that the lease had not been engrossed. Upon the defendant declining to carry out the agreement, the plaintiff applied for a decree for specific performance:—Held, that the letter contained a sufficient reference to the draft of the lease to admit parol evidence to shew that there was such a draft, and thus to connect the draft with the letter signed by the defendant; and that these papers so connected constituted a sufficient writing to satisfy the requirements of the Statute of Frauds. Craig v. Elliott, 15 L. R., Ir. 257.

Specific performance of an agreement for a lease decreed against the owner of the estate, though not originally binding on him, he having by a letter subsequently written constituted it an agreement, by which, under the provisions of the Statute of Frauds, he was bound. Powell v. Dillon, 2 Ball & B. 416.

iv. What Documents amount to.

Indorsement on Draft Lease.]—An indorsement on the draft of a lease signed by the lessee, and stating that, as circumstances prevented him from performing his agreement, he wished the lessor to let the premises, will satisfy the statute. Shippey v. Derrison, 5 Esp. 190.

Draft corrected by Counsel.]—A., by parol, agrees with B. for a lease, which is drawn and then perused and corrected by his counsel, and afterwards engrossed and executed by B. Whether this is within the Statute of Frauds. Lowther v. Carill, 1 Vern. 221.

Steward's Entry.]—The bare entry of a steward in his lord's contract-book with his tenants is not an evidence of itself that there is an agreement for a lease between the lord and tenant, so as to bring it within the Statute of Frauds. Charlewood v. Bedford (Duke), 1 Atk. 497.

Where therefore a steward and land agent, whose powers were specially limited, had in the absence of the owner entered into a written agreement with a farmer, to grant him a lease for twelve years, but without communicating to him the fact that his power was specially limited:—Held, that the agreement did not bind the owner. Ib.

Entry in Rent Roll.]—R. agreed to become tenant of certain premises to one S., who instructed an agent, J., to prepare a lease. J. caused his clerk to make an entry in his rent-roll of "lease for 200 years, from 25th March, 1880; yearly rent 100*l.*" S. died, and the lease was never made; but R. went into possession, and expended 3,000*l.* on the premises:—Held, a sufficient agreement for a lease, and specific performance was decreed. Sullivan's Estate, In re, 23 L. R., Ir. 255.

Letter of Agent—Answer in Chancery.]—A., having agreed by parol to grant a lease to B., the lease, as agreed upon, was engrossed. A. was afterwards induced not to grant the lease, and his agent wrote to B., informing him that A. had gone away "without executing the lease," and that the matter must stand over; and in another letter A.'s agent wrote declining to carry out "the agreement to grant a lease which your client alleges he has entered into." The answer in the suit admitted the parol agreement and the engrossment of the lease, but insisted on the Statute of Frauds:—Held, that neither the expressions used in the letters of A.'s agent, nor the answer in the suit, constituted a memorandum of the contract in writing within the Statute of Frauds. Jackson v. Oglander, 2 H. & M. 465; 13 L. T. 16; 13 W. R. 936.

v. Construction.

When Conditional.]—The following words in an agreement for letting do not create a condition:—"A. (the tenant) hereby agrees that he will not underlet the premises without the consent in writing of the landlord." Shaw v. Coffin, 14 C. B. (N.S.) 372.

Rent — Whether Payable before End of Year.]—"Memorandum of an agreement entered into this 31st of January, 1840, between R. of the first part, and T. of the other part. The said

T. hereby agrees to become the tenant of the farm G. at the customary time of entry under the following conditions, viz., that the sum of 260*l.* annual rent shall be paid at the usual time for the house, premises and lands, as agreed upon; and the said R. agrees to lay out in improvements and alterations of the farmhouse and new sheds a sum not exceeding 200*l.*, with the understanding that spars for rafters should be found from the estate; cartage for all materials except stones for walls to be done or found by T. (Signed) R. and T." :—Held, the meaning of this agreement was not that the rent should become payable at the end of the year from the day of entry, but that the contemporaneous or subsequent conduct of the parties might be adduced to shew that they intended the rent to become payable at an earlier date. Gore v. Lloyd, 13 L. J., Ex. 366; 12 M. & W. 463.

3. DAMAGES OR COMPENSATION ON BREACH.

Lessor not granting Lease.]—To an action for breach of a contract to grant the plaintiff a good and valid lease, the defendant pleaded payment into court, and no damages ultra :—Held, that the plaintiff might recover damages beyond his expenses, for the loss he had sustained by reason of the non-performance of the contract. Robinson v. Harman, 1 Ex. 850; 18 L. J., Ex. 202.

Held, also, that evidence to shew that the plaintiff knew the defendant had no title was inadmissible, after the plea of payment into court, which admitted the contract. Ib.

Granting Lease to Another.]—A. agreed with B. to grant the latter a lease of a house as soon as he became possessed thereof, to bear date from the 21st December, 1825, for fourteen or twenty-one years. At the date of the agreement the house was under a lease which would not expire till Midsummer, 1827, the legal estate being in trustees, first to pay debts, and secondly, to pay an annuity to T., and subject thereto to the use of A., if he attained twenty-four. In June, 1825, after A. had attained twenty-four, but before the outstanding lease expired, he and the trustees joined in a fresh lease to C. for twenty-three years :—Held, that A. was liable to an action before the expiration of the lease, which would not be out until Midsummer, 1827, but that the measure of damages would only be the value of a lease for so much of the term as upon a calculation of the probable period of the annuitant's death would be likely to be subsisting at the arrival of that period. Ford v. Tiley, 9 D. & R. 443; 6 B. & C. 325; 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 169; 30 R. R. 339.

Former Term still Existent.]—By an agreement between A. and B., reciting that B. had, as he was advised and believed, legally and effectually put an end to a lease granted to C., of a farm, by entry thereon under a power therein contained, by reason of the bankruptcy of C., and that B. had agreed to grant a lease of the farm to A. for twenty-one years, at the same rent as the same had been held by C.; it was agreed, that B. should grant, and A. accept, a lease at a certain rent, payable quarterly; the lease to commence on the 29th of September, 1844, if B. could then legally make and execute the same, or so soon after as he should be in a situation to grant the same; that such lease should contain the same covenants as the lease to C.; and that A. should pay to B., on possession being delivered to him, 500*l.* as a premium for the lease so to be granted. A. was let into possession, and occupied the farm for about two years, paying the rent; and he also within that time paid B. 250*l.*, in part of the 500*l.* premium; but the fiat against C. having been superseded, B. was unable to grant the lease to A. A. thereupon brought an action for the breach of contract, alleging in his declaration, that he had always been ready and willing to accept a lease :—Held, that the recital in the agreement, and proof of a declaration made by B. that C.'s lease was void and good for nothing, were primâ facie evidence as against B. that he had power to grant the lease, but that it appearing also by the recitals in the agreement that the lease to C. was supposed to be void by reason of C.'s bankruptcy, such primâ facie case was rebutted by proof of the supersedeas of the fiat against C., and consequently that B. was entitled to the verdict upon an issue as to his ability to grant the lease. Wright v. Colls, 8 C. B. 150; 19 L. J., C. P. 60; 13 Jur. 1056.

Held, also, that A. was entitled to recover back the 250*l.* as money paid upon a consideration which had failed. Ib.

An agreement for a tenancy in these terms, "Mr. T. engages to complete the whole work necessary by the 14th June next." Then followed an enumeration of the matters to be done by T.; and the agreement concluded, "In consideration of these conditions being fulfilled, Mr. M. engages to take the house, No. 51, B. park, for three years, at the annual rent of 130*l.*, to be paid quarterly. Rent to begin from Midsummer next":—Held, that the completion of the "work necessary" by the day named for that purpose was a condition precedent to the landlord's right to sue M. for not becoming tenant. Tidey v. Mollett, 16 C. B. (N.S.) 298; 33 L. J., C. P. 235; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 800; 10 L. T. 380; 12 W. R. 802.

Lessor having different Interest—Improvements.]—A. entered into possession of premises under an agreement with B., under which he was to hold them as tenant for two years, at the yearly rent of 50*l.*, with liberty to make, at his expense, such alterations in and additions to the premises as he might think proper, the same being improvements, and A. to have the option of purchasing the premises at any time during the two years for 600*l.*, "it being understood between the parties that B. was possessed of the premises for his own life and the life of C., and of the survivor of them." It being, however, discovered that B. had not the precise interest mentioned in the agreement, A. brought an action to recover damages for the breach of contract, and also compensation for the money expended by him in improvements :—Held, that he was only entitled to recover the value of the proposed lease, and not the value of the improvements. Worthington v. Warrington, 8 C. B. 134; 18 L. J., C. P. 350.

Not giving Lessee Possession.]—A party who lets premises agrees to give possession, and if he fails to do so the lessee may recover damages against him, and is not driven to bring an ejectment against a wrongful occupier who refuses to quit. Coe v. Clay, 5 Bing. 440; 3 M. & P. 57; 7 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 162; 30 R. R. 699.

By an agreement in writing, the defendant agreed to let to the plaintiff premises for the term of one year from the 29th September, 1854, and so on from year to year so long as the parties should agree :—Held, that there was an implied contract on the part of the defendant to give the plaintiff possession of the premises. Jinks v. Edwards, 11 Ex. 775 ; 4 W. R. 303.

The plaintiff agreed in writing to take of the defendant a farm at a yearly rent, the plaintiff paying all rates and taxes, and agreeing to keep the buildings in repair, the defendant agreeing to find bricks, &c., for such repairs, and to lay out a sum of money in repairs, "the tenancy to commence from the 29th of September next, for a term of eight years, subject to a lease," to be drawn up by the defendant's solicitor :—Held, no breach of this agreement, that the defendant did not before or on the 29th of September, or at any time subsequently, give to the defendant possession of the farm, or enable him to enter thereon. Drury v. Macnamara, 5 El. & Bl. 612 ; 25 L. J., Q. B. 5 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1163 ; 4 W. R. 50.

Agreement to enter into Agreement—Damages.]—An agreement was made between W. and F., that W. would enter into an agreement with O. for a lease at a certain rent for such term and subject to such covenants as O. should approve, and would accept such lease and execute a counterpart :—Held, that F. was entitled to recover damages from W. for breach of the agreement between them. Foster v. Wheeler, 57 L. J., Ch. 871 ; 38 Ch. D. 130 ; 59 L. T. 15 ; 37 W. R. 40—C. A.

Inquiry by Landlord as to Sufficiency of Tenant—Question for Jury.]—If an agreement to let certain apartments and fixtures be delivered over after signature, with an understanding that the result shall be subject to the landlord's inquiries as to the sufficiency of the tenant, in an action for not performing the agreement, it is a question for the jury to say, whether the answer given by the parties referred to was not sufficient to satisfy the condition, notwithstanding the landlord has deemed them insufficient, and refused to permit the tenant to enter, semble. Ward v. Smith, 11 Price, 19.

In Action for Specific Performance — Lease decreed for Less than agreed Term.]—Under special circumstances, the plaintiffs, who had entered into an agreement with the defendants for a lease of thirty-one years, were decreed to accept a legal lease for twenty-one years and a covenant for a further term of ten years with compensation for the difference in pecuniary value. Although the bill was framed with a view to a different relief, yet inasmuch as upon the whole statement of the bill such appeared to be the equity between the parties, the court, in order to avoid future litigation, made the decree accordingly, under the prayer for general relief. Hanbury v. Lichfield, 2 Myl. & K. 629 ; 3 L. J., Ch. 49.

In 1863 C., being tenant for life of fisheries (subject to a lease, made in 1811, which would expire in 1872), agreed to grant to L. a lease of a portion of those fisheries, to commence on the expiration of the lease of 1811, and to be for the term of three lives, or thirty-one years. It subsequently appeared that C. had no power to lease for any time beyond his own life, and he declined to fulfil his agreement ; but offered to grant a lease for his own life, but without compensation. L. filed a petition for specific performance of the agreement, or for such a lease as C. could legally execute, and for compensation. The court decreed that C. should, so far as was possible, specifically perform the agreement, and should give compensation for any difference in value between the terms which he had agreed to grant and that which his leasing power enabled him to grant. Leslie v. Crommelin, Ir. R. 2 Eq. 134.

—— Building Stipulations.]—An agreement for a lease of premises, containing a stipulation that the lessees should execute certain building works, and that the lessors should advance 1,000*l.* on mortgage to a limited company, was executed by the directors and secretary of the company as lessees. The money was advanced, and the lessor had in correspondence treated the company as liable to perform the stipulations of the agreement, and evidence was given that the directors and secretary were trustees of the benefit of the agreement for the company :—Held, nevertheless, that the directors and secretary who signed the agreement were personally liable, and decree made for specific performance of the agreement to take a lease, but specific performance of the building stipulations refused, and an inquiry as to damages granted in respect thereof. Kay v. Johnson, 2 Hem. & M. 118.

—— Delay—Loss of Trade.]—The plaintiff agreed with the defendant to take a lease of premises belonging to the defendant for the purpose, as the defendant knew, of carrying on a trade which the plaintiff was about to commence. In consequence of his wilful refusal to fulfil his agreement, the plaintiff was unable for fifteen weeks to commence his trade :—Held, that, in addition to judgment for specific performance of the agreement, damages must be awarded in respect of the loss of profits from his trade during the fifteen weeks ; and 250*l.* damages were awarded. Jaques v. Millar, 47 L. J., Ch. 544 ; 6 Ch. D. 153 ; 37 L. T. 151 ; 25 W. R. 846.

—— Not Building House.]—A plaintiff agreed to grant a lease to the defendant when and as soon as he, the defendant, should have built a new house on the land ; and the defendant agreed to accept such lease when required, and by a certain day to pull down an old house standing on the land, and build a new one on the site :—Held, that the 21 & 22 Vict. c. 27, applied, and that the plaintiff was entitled to damages for the nonbuilding of the house, and to specific performance of the contract to accept the lease. Soames v. Edge, 1 Johns. 669.

—— Not making Alterations and Repairs.]—A. agreed to grant to B. a lease of a public-house, and to make and form therein a spirit vault, and put in plate-glass windows, and do everything therewith necessary at his own expense, and paint new the outside of all the woodwork, as well as put the slates, chimney-pots and roofing in thorough repair. A decree directing specific performance of the agreement to grant the lease, and directing an inquiry as to damages for the nonperformance of the agreement with respect to the vault, windows, painting and repairs, was affirmed on appeal. Middleton v. Greenwood, 2 De G. J. & S. 142 ; 3 N. R. 694 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 350 ; 10 L. T. 149.

—— Account of Rents and Profits—Lessee Ejected.]—Bill for specific performance of an agreement for a lease for twenty-one years, and for an account. It appeared that the defendant held the lands for one life, that the agreement was executed by the agent of the defendant, and possession given under it, and money expended in improvements, but the defendant swore that the agent had no authority from her to do so. There was also evidence of her having subsequently recognised the agreement, and promised to execute a lease pursuant thereto. It appeared that a civil bill ejectment was served upon the plaintiff, and another upon two of his under-tenants; the former was dismissed, but the latter being undefended, a decree was obtained thereon, under which he was turned out of possession. In about three years afterwards this bill was filed. Pending the proceedings, the cestui que vie in the defendant's lease died:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to an account of the rents and profits of these lands which the defendant had received, or which, without wilful default, she might have received from the day of the execution of the civil bill decree, up to the day of the death of the cestui que vie. Callaghan v. Pepper, 2 Ir. Eq. R. 399.

Semble, in this case the court would decree a specific performance, if the defendant's interest had not expired. Ib.

—— Landlord having only partial Interest—Abatement.]—By a memorandum in writing, defendant agreed to let, and plaintiffs agreed to take, business premises for one year, with an option for plaintiffs at the end of the year to have a lease for seven, fourteen or twenty-one years. Plaintiffs, having gone into possession under the agreement, and having laid out money in alterations, at the end of the year gave notice of their intention to exercise the option, but when the defendant's title came to be investigated it was found that she was possessed of only a moiety of the premises, the other moiety being vested in her son, a minor. The defendant was decreed to perform specifically so much of the contract as she was able to perform, with an abatement of one moiety of the rent. An inquiry as to damages was refused, there being no evidence that the plaintiffs had sustained any damage. Burrow v. Scammell, 51 L. J., Ch. 296; 19 Ch. D. 175; 45 L. T. 606; 30 W. R. 310; 46 J. P. 135.

4. Specific Performance.

a. Contract when Concluded.—See supra, 1.

b. Parol Variation.

Alleged by Plaintiff—In his own Favour.]—Agreement for a lease of a farm, referred to a paper containing the terms; bill for specific performance according to such clauses as had been read to the plaintiff; parol evidence to prove that was refused, and the bill dismissed. Brodie v. St. Paul, 1 Ves. Jun. 326.

Agreement in writing was entered into between landlord and tenant, signed by the landlord, for a new lease to be granted at any time after the completion of repairs to be made by the tenant with convenient speed, but blanks were left for the day of the commencement. The repairs being completed, the landlord tendered a lease to commence from that time, and on refusal filed a bill; the answer admitted that the agreement was accepted, but insisted that the new lease was not to commence till the expiration of the old, and so it was decreed, parol evidence being refused. Pym v. Blackburn, 3 Ves. 34.

Parol evidence not admissible (in support of a bill for specific performance) to prove from conversations before and at the time of signing an agreement for a lease, that the intent of the parties was apparent from the memorandum, though the same was written by the lessee, and the words "clear of all taxes" (which was the purport of the conversation) were omitted in the memorandum. Rich v. Jackson, 4 Bro. C. C. 514; 6 Ves. 334, n.

Specific performance of a written agreement varied by writing decreed; not with a variation by parol. Robson v. Collins, 7 Ves. 130; 6 R. R. 92.

An extension of the term according to a variation of the agreement, also in writing, was refused on the ground of want of consideration. Ib.

A suit for the specific performance of an agreement with a variation cannot be supported. Nurse v. Seymour (Lord), 13 Beav. 254.

By an agreement in writing, A. agreed to demise to B. premises which were then in lease to C., and B. undertook to procure a surrender of the existing lease from C., and to accept the new lease. C. having afterwards refused to surrender, A. filed a bill against B. for specific performance, with a modification:—Held, upon demurrer, that the bill could not be sustained. Beeston v. Stutely, 27 L. J., Ch. 156; 6 W. R. 206.

An agreement to grant a lease had been executed by the lessor and lessee, in which it was stipulated that the lease should be granted "so far as the lessor can grant the same." The allegations in a bill by the lessee were to the effect that the agreement was that the lessor should grant a lease in more ample terms than those which by the written agreement he had engaged to do:—Held, that the lessee could not set up the parol agreement against the written one; and that if the lessee had required production of the lessor's title, he would have seen what the powers of the lessee as to granting leases were. Londonderry (Marchioness) v. Baker, 3 L. T. 546.

A written and signed agreement for a lease from the defendant to the plaintiff was entered into in June, and possession was given and rent paid. Afterwards it was discovered that there were errors as to the nature of the tenures and rentals of the property, and in December a fresh written and signed agreement was entered into. This was afterwards again varied by parol. A bill by the tenant for specific performance of the varied agreement was dismissed. Price v. Salusbury, 32 Beav. 446. Affirmed, 32 L. J., Ch. 441; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 838; 8 L. T. 810—L.JJ. And see 14 L. T. 110—H. L.

—— In Favour of Defendant.]—Where the defendant agreed in writing to grant a plaintiff a lease at a specified rent and for a specified term, subject to the same covenants, clauses and agreements as were contained in an expiring lease under which he then held the property, and the plaintiff then filed a claim for specific performance, stating the above agreement and that it was further agreed that he should pay a premium of 200*l.*, which by his claim he offered to do :—Held, that this additional term did not render the Statute of Frauds a valid defence to the claim. Martin v. Pycroft, 2 De G. M. & G. 785 ; 22 L. J., Ch. 94 ; 16 Jur. 1125.

Where intended lessors, in executing an agreement for a lease, acted partly upon a representation by the lessee as to what had taken place between their own solicitor and him in its preparation, and their attention was immediately afterwards directed to the point whether this representation was correct ; but they took no step to question it for three years afterwards :—Held, that the delay was strongly confirmatory of the fairness of the transaction. Ib.

A. agreed to grant a lease of a public-house to B. upon certain terms ; in addition "the lessor, to make certain alterations suggested, and to make and form a spirit vault, and put in plate-glass windows, and do everything therewith necessary at his own expense, and paint new the outside of all the woodwork, as well as put the slates, chimney-pots and roofing in thorough repair." B. by his bill offered to waive the performance of the agreement so far as regarded any alterations not specifically mentioned therein :—Held, that he was entitled to a decree for specific performance, minus the waiver. Middleton v. Greenwood, 9 L. T. 572. See S. C., 2 De G. J. & S. 142 ; 3 N. R. 694 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 350 ; 10 L. T. 149.

Alleged by Defendant.]—Specific performance of an agreement in writing, for a lease of sixty years, refused, upon parol evidence of an alteration stipulated for at the same time, and upon the faith of which the party executed. Distinction between the case of a defendant refusing and a plaintiff seeking the execution of an agreement under such circumstances. Clarke v. Grant, 14 Ves. 519 ; 9 R. R. 336.

S. agreed to grant to B. a lease of the lands of T. The agreement contained a provision that the lease should give "exclusive shooting and coursing, but not fishing." B. had previously held T. under a lease from S., which contained an express exception of fishing, fowling and shooting, and there was evidence that S. had intended to retain the exclusive right of fishing in the premises agreed to be demised ; but S. had himself drawn up the agreement :—Held, that the evidence of intention was admissible in favour of S., in a suit instituted by B. for specific performance of the agreement ; and that B. was not entitled to specific performance of the agreement without giving to S. the exclusive right of fishing. Browne v. Sligo (Marquis) 10 Ir. Ch. R. 1.

Specific execution of a written agreement for a lease decreed at the suit of the tenant, with several additions contemporaneously agreed on by parol, set up by the answer but omitted in the bill, the plaintiff paying the costs of the suit. Warner v. Thunder, 9 Ir. Eq. R. 371.

The plaintiff agreed to take a lease of a public-house from a brewer, but the written contract said nothing as to the restrictive covenants of a brewer's lease. The plaintiff instituted a suit to obtain an unrestricted lease. The restricted parol agreement being established by extrinsic evidence :—Held, that the bill must be dismissed. The plaintiff having then elected to take a brewer's lease, a decree was made, the plaintiff paying the costs of the suit. Barnard v. Cave, 26 Beav. 253.

Upon a treaty for a lease of a house, the lessor sent to the lessee a letter, specifying the terms on which he would let it. The lessee immediately took possession, but he signed no contract. The lessor having instituted a suit for specific performance, the lessee insisted that, in addition to the terms contained in the letter, the lessor had verbally promised to put the house into thorough repair ; this the lessor denied. The court doubted whether the specific performance could be enforced, and gave the lessee the option, either of a decree for specific performance on the terms of the letter, or a decree to deliver up possession, and to pay an occupation rent. But if he refused to exercise the option, the court directed a decree in the latter branch of the alternative. Chappell v. Gregory, 34 Beav. 250.

An agreement to grant a lease of a house was contained in three letters, which specified the term and the amount of rent, and stipulated that the intended lessee was to do all repairs, painting, decorating, &c. The intended lessor refused to grant a lease on the footing of the agreement, on the ground that the lessee had at the time of entering into the agreement also verbally undertaken to expend 1,000*l.* on the premises in a particular manner, and to allow covenants to compel him to do so to be inserted in the lease ; that the lessee had not performed that part of his agreement, and had objected to such covenants ; and, further, that the agreement as contained in the letters was too uncertain for the court to enforce :—Held, on a bill filed for specific performance of the agreement as contained in the letters, that the alleged parol collateral agreement was not substantiated by the evidence, and that there was no ground for saying that the terms of the letters were uncertain, and therefore that the lessee was entitled to a decree, with costs. Dear v. Verity, 38 L. J., Ch. 297. Affirmed, 38 L. J., Ch. 486 ; 21 L. T. 185 ; 17 W. R. 716—L.JJ.

Quære, whether evidence of a prior agreement that no rent shall be paid till a certain act has been done by the landlord can be given when there is a written agreement of tenancy reserving a rent at stated intervals. Carter v. Salmon, 43 L. T. 490—C. A.

c. Part Performance.

i. Generally.

Principle on which Court acts.]—In enforcing contracts of which there has been a part performance, courts of equity proceed upon the ground that it is a fraud in such cases to set up the absence of a binding agreement, and the equity arising from part performance operates against a company in like manner as against an individual. Wilson v. West Hartlepool Ry., 34 L. J., Ch. 241 ; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 124 ; 13 W. R. 361.

The enactments of the Companies Clauses Act of 1845, prescribing the mode in which contracts may be entered into on behalf of a company, are affirmative only, and do not preclude the enforcement against a company of the ordinary equity, based on part performance. Ib.

Must be referable to the Agreement.]—Parol agreement not enforced, upon the ground of part performance, when the act is equivocal and easily admits compensation, as by a tenant rebuilding a party wall. So a tenant's possession and cultivation of the land would not sustain a parol agreement to purchase. The act must be unequivocal, and such of itself as to infer some agreement, the terms of which may then be proved by parol. Frame v. Dawson, 14 Ves. 386; 9 R. R. 304.

Any act which may be referred to a title distinct from the verbal agreement of which specific performance is sought cannot be considered as a part performance thereof, to take the case out of the Statute of Frauds. Brennan v. Bolton, 2 Dr. & War. 349.

A court of equity will enforce an agreement in writing modified by parol, and partly performed, if the terms of the contract can be established with sufficient certainty, if the part performance is clearly referable to the contract proved, if the plaintiff's contract throughout has been perfectly correct, and if the contract is fair and honest. Price v. Salusbury, 14 L. T. 110.

When Doctrine Inapplicable.]—The doctrine of part performance of a parol agreement is not to be extended by the court, and it is inapplicable in a case where a trustee has a power to lease, at the request in writing of a married woman, which has not been made. Phillips v. Edwards, 33 Beav. 440.

Land was vested in a trustee for the separate use of Mrs. E., a married woman, and the deed gave the trustee a power to lease at the request in writing of Mrs. E. The trustee and Mrs. E. agreed by parol to let the property to the plaintiffs, and a lease was prepared, approved of and executed by the trustee and by Mrs. E.; but before their solicitor had parted with it, and before the plaintiffs had executed it, Mrs. E. recalled her assent to it. She had made no request to the trustee in writing:—Held, that there was no contract binding on Mrs. E. and no part performance, and that the plaintiffs could not enforce the agreement. Ib.

Of one Side.]—A performance only of one side is not a dispensation of the Statute of Frauds, but a casus omissus against which there is no provision. Charlewood v. Bedford (Duke), 1 Atk. 497.

Mere Parol Agreement not Enforceable.]—Lord-keeper said he would not give help to lease claimed by parol only. Anon., Cary, 7.

ii. Possession or Outlay.

Not Necessarily Sufficient.]—The plaintiff and defendant entered into an agreement, that when a certain house belonging to the plaintiff should be completed and finished fit for habitation, the plaintiff would grant to the defendant a lease of such house for twenty-one years. The defendant took possession before the house was completed, and occupied it for a year, but refused to pay rent or execute the lease. The plaintiff filed a bill for specific performance, and moved that the defendant might be ordered to pay the year's rent into court:—Motion refused with costs. Faulkner v. Llewellin, 31 L. J., Ch. 549; 10 W. R. 378.

Specific performance of a contract partly by parol, though possession had been given, and rent paid, refused on the ground that it would be violating two rules regulating the exercise of the jurisdiction in specific performance; first, that a written agreement cannot be varied by parol; and secondly, that when a parol agreement is sought to be enforced, on the ground of part performance, it must be shewn, plainly and distinctly, what the terms of the agreement are, and that the acts of part performance done are referable to that agreement alone. Price v. Salusbury, 32 Beav. 446. Affirmed, 32 L. J., Ch. 441; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 838; 8 L. T. 810—L. JJ. And see 14 L. T. 110.

Possession given, and payment of rent under one agreement, cannot be considered as a part performance of that agreement as substantially varied subsequently. Ib.

The owner of an estate, consisting of freeholds, leaseholds for years and leaseholds for lives, agreed to demise the same in consideration of receiving a year's rent in advance. He signed notices requesting the tenants to attorn to the lessee, but he did not, in the first instance, clearly understand the boundaries, limits and rental of the several estates. The agreement was subsequently added to by a further agreement and by verbal communications, and a sum for the year's rent was paid in advance. These arrangements still left the subject and the terms and conditions indefinite, and difficulties arose in carrying the agreement into effect. Upon a bill by the lessee for specific performance:—Held, that there had been no part performance which had reference to the agreement alleged; that it was too vague and uncertain to be enforced; and that the bill must be dismissed; but, under the circumstances, without costs. Ib.

Bill by tenant of a farm for a specific performance of a parol agreement for a new lease, stating improvements made at a considerable expense, and continuance of possession after the expiration of the old lease and payment of an increased rent under the agreement; plea of the Statute of Frauds, ordered to stand for an answer with liberty to except. Wills v. Stradling, 3 Ves. 378; 4 R. R. 26.

Bill for an execution of a parol agreement for a lease of a house to plaintiff, who in confidence of the agreement had laid out money. Defendant pleaded the Statute of Frauds, &c.: plea allowed. If it had been said to be part of the agreement that the agreement should be put into writing whether defendant must not be answered, quære. Hollis v. Whiteing, 1 Vern. 151.

Upon a verbal agreement between the plaintiff and one of the defendants (who was the agent of the other defendant) for a lease for three lives, or thirty-one years, of certain lands, at 1*l.* 5*s.* per acre, the plaintiff was put in possession by defendant's bailiff, by the defendant's direction, and the plaintiff paid to the defendant three guineas, entered into possession, stocked the lands and enclosed part of them. The agent subsequently, in a letter to a third person, admitted the agreement, but refused afterwards to execute the leases. To a bill filed for a specific performance of this agreement, a plea of the Statute of Frauds was allowed. Palmer v. White, Wall. Lyn. 10. And see Ib., 17, n.

Sufficient when Referable to the Agreement.]—Possession by a lessee continued after, though taken previously to, a parol agreement for a lease exceeding three years, is a sufficient act of part performance to take the case out of the Statute of Frauds, provided the continuance in possession is unequivocally referable to the agreement. Hodson v. Heuland, 65 L. J., Ch. 754 ; [1896] 2 Ch. 428 ; 74 L. T. 811 ; 44 W. R. 684.

Agreement for lease, in part performed by possession taken, though without express assent, acquiesced in and expenditure permitted ; specific performance, according to the plaintiff's evidence, against the assertion of a right of resumption by the answer, and one witness not proving that it was admitted. Gregory v. Mighell, 18 Ves. 328 ; 11 R. R. 207.

Specific performance of a parol agreement to grant a lease, decreed on the testimony of one witness, confirmed by circumstances, against the denial in the answer, after part performance by delivery of possession. Morphett v. Jones, 1 Swanst. 172 ; 1 Wils. Ch. 100 ; 18 R. R. 48.

Where possession delivered under an agreement, and money expended in permanent improvements, parol evidence admitted to prove the agreement. Toole v. Medlicott, 1 Ball & B. 393.

Parol agreement proved by one witness, corroborated by others, and not denied by answer, enforced upon the ground of part performance. Ib.

If possession be distinctly referable to the contract alleged in the pleadings, it is considered as part performance. Kine v. Balfe, 2 Ball & B. 348.

An agreement in writing for a lease not signed by the party sought to be charged, specifically executed, on the ground of part performance, viz. possession taken and rent paid, according to the terms of the agreement. Ib.

Where the agreement was to grant a lease without binding the other party to accept it, yet where he had been in possession under the agreement, so as to bind himself by part performance, the agreement was held valid. Dowell v. Dew, 1 Y. & Coll. C. C. 345 ; 12 L. J., Ch. 158 ; 7 Jur. 117.

A. B. offered in writing to grant a lease of a coal mine upon certain terms. C. D. verbally accepted the offer. A draft lease was sent to him, and returned with the approval of C. D.'s solicitor. C. D. laid out money in driving shafts towards the coal mine through the adjoining property. Before any lease was executed, and something more than a month after the return of the draft lease, A. B. died :—Held, that the parol acceptance of the written offer of the lessor, coupled with the subsequent acts in the lifetime of A. B., entitled C. D. to specific performance of the agreement from the representatives of A. B. Benecke v. Chadwicke, 4 W. R. 687.

A parol agreement was entered into for a lease on terms which, by direction of the proposed lessor, the proposed tenant instructed a solicitor to reduce to writing. The solicitor took down the terms as stated by the tenant, and afterwards prepared from them a draft agreement, embodying these and other terms, and sent it to lessor, who afterwards, and without objecting to it, let the tenant into possession, and directed the solicitor to prepare a lease in conformity with the draft agreement, but subsequently objected to the lease so proposed, and gave the tenant notice to quit :—Held, that the delivery and taking of possession were a sufficient part performance of the agreement as expressed in the draft, to exclude a defence founded on the Statute of Frauds. Pain v. Coombs, 1 De G. & J. 34 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 847.

Possession and expenditure on the faith of a parol agreement to grant a lease of a farm are sufficient to entitle the tenant to a lease, although the agreement is denied by the landlord. Farrall v. Davenport, 3 Giff. 363. Affirmed, 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1043 ; 5 L. T. 436—L.JJ.

A bill was filed for specific performance of an agreement to grant a lease. There had been an unstamped agreement for a lease signed by the lessee, but which had been mislaid. The terms were subsequently embodied in a printed form, the blanks of which had been filled up in pencil by the lessor, but the document was unsigned and unstamped. It was alleged that the lessee took possession with the consent of the lessor, under the terms of this agreement :—Held, that there had been a sufficient part performance of the unsigned agreement to support a decree for its specific performance. Miller v. Finlay, 5 L. T. 510—L. C.

R. took four houses and land of J., it being agreed by J. to grant a lease for forty years, at 185*l.* a year, and R. agreeing to erect certain buildings within three years. This agreement being embodied in a short memorandum, a more extended agreement in a legal form was drawn up by J.'s solicitor, but neither document was ever executed. R. remained in possession for twenty-five years, and erected some of the buildings, not being able to erect the remainder owing to J. failing to give possession of the requisite land. R. having regularly paid the rent, and there being documentary evidence to shew that J. considered that R. was in possession on the terms of the unsigned agreement, on a bill filed by R. for specific performance of the contract to grant the lease :—Decree made without costs. Reddin v. Jarman, 16 L. T. 449.

The Statute of Frauds cannot be pleaded to a verbal agreement to allow the occupation of a leasehold house for life on payment merely of ground rent, rates and taxes, if there has been a part performance by possession under the agreement, and the agreement has affected the mode of living of the occupying party. Coles v. Pilkington, 44 L. J., Ch. 381 ; L. R. 19 Eq. 174 ; 31 L. T. 423 ; 23 W. R. 41.

The plaintiff was a lessee of a house and other premises for a term of thirty-one years at a rent of 60*l.*, and was under a covenant to make certain improvements on the property. He was also tenant from year to year of an adjoining meadow, belonging to a different proprietor, at a rent of 9*l.* The lessor of the house became the purchaser of the meadow ; and by arrangement between him and the plaintiff, the improvements were extended, and part of the house was made to project over the field, and part of the field was attached to the demised premises, the plaintiff paying about half of the expense of the alterations, which far exceeded the sum he had originally covenanted to lay out, and also signing a memorandum, which the lessor drew up, to the effect "that, in consideration of advances made to him by B. for the purpose of additions and improvements, the rent for the house and field should be raised from 69*l.* to 80*l.*":—Held, that the extension of the house into the meadow by the plaintiff with the concurrence of his landlord was evidence of, and was sufficient consideration for, a contract to demise the meadow ; that the act of building part of the house upon the meadow, if it was evidence of any right, was evidence of a right which affected the entire tenement, and that it could not be restricted so as to affect only the part of the meadow actually built upon; that the extension of the house part of the demised premises into the meadow, and the increase and consolidation of the rents, was evidence that the meadow was to be held for the same term as the demised premises; that the doctrine with regard to the mutuality of contracts had no application to such a case. Sutherland v. Briggs, 1 Hare, 26; 11 L. J., Ch. 36; 5 Jur. 1151.

Possession of a house, by delivery of the keys. Guest v. Homfray, 5 Ves. 818; 5 R. R. 176.

By Sub-lessee.]—A., a tenant in possession, filed a bill against B. for the specific performance of a parol agreement for a lease of thirty years. A. had contracted to sub-let, and his sub-lessee had expended money in alterations and repairs with the knowledge and approval of B.:—Held, that the outlay by the sub-lessee was as much a part performance of the agreement as if made by A., who was therefore entitled to specific performance. Williams v. Evans, 44 L. J., Ch. 319; L. R. 19 Eq. 547; 32 L. T. 359; 23 W. R. 466.

By Assignee.]—In 1840 a railway company, by an instrument under seal, agreed to grant to G. and P., their executors, administrators, or nominees, a lease of an hotel at one of their stations for a term of ninety-nine years; and it was agreed between the parties that G. and P. should have the occupation of the refreshment-rooms at the same station, subject to the same restrictions and provisions as related to the carrying on the business of the hotel, both as regarded the quality and price of provisions and the management thereof. The lease of the hotel was executed; it made no mention of the refreshment-rooms, which, however, were occupied by G. and P. The plaintiff was the assignee of G. and P. of the lease, and all their interest under the agreement of 1840, and occupied the refreshment-rooms:—Held, that he was entitled to have a deed executed by the company granting him the occupation of the refreshment-rooms, subject to the restrictions and provisions in the agreement mentioned. Flanagan v. G. W. Ry., 38 L. J., Ch. 117; L. R. 7 Eq. 116.

A director of a railway company had entered into an agreement with the company for the occupation by a firm, of which he was a member, of premises belonging to the company, and had assigned his interest under the agreement to the plaintiff:—Held, that the plaintiff was in the same position as the director, and therefore could not maintain a bill for specific performance of the agreement. Ib.

Contract must be clearly Proved.]—Entering into possession under a contract for a lease is a part performance; but the court will not decree a specific performance, unless the terms of the contract are clearly proved. Mortal v. Lyons, 8 Ir. Ch. R. 112.

Therefore, where a tenant paid a fine and entered into possession, but did not claim a performance of the contract for a lease for thirteen years, and until after the death of the agent with whom the contract was said to have been made, during part of which time he paid an increased rent, and there was evidence that the contract was for a tenancy from year to year, the court refused a specific performance. Ib.

Lease not decreed upon expenditure in repairs and improvements, under an alleged agreement, proved by one witness, the answer containing a positive denial of the agreement, which denial was also confirmed by circumstances. Pilling v. Armitage, 12 Ves. 78; 8 R. R. 295.

Specific execution of a parol agreement, for a lease for three lives, proved by one witness, refused; the answer, admitting an agreement for one life only, supported by the testimony of one witness, and not inconsistent with the evidence of part performance by plaintiff. Lindsay v. Lynch, 2 Sch. & Lef. 1; 9 R. R. 54. See also Mortimer v. Orchard, 2 Ves. Jun. 242.

Agreement for New Lease — Continuing in Possession.]—Though a lessee for years on a parol agreement and the credit of a promise of having a lease made to him continuous in possession, yet it is within the Statute of Frauds, and equity will not enforce, especially if no improvements were made by him. Seagood v. Meale, Pre. Ch. 560.

It is not a sufficient part performance to take a case out of the Statute of Frauds, that the plaintiff to whom a verbal promise of giving a lease for twenty-one years had been made, being tenant from year to year of the lands, had continued in possession. Brennan v. Bolton, 2 Dr. & War. 349.

A person occupied part of the business offices of a company as tenant from year to year. An agreement was entered into to grant him a lease for twenty-one years of the premises which he occupied at the same rent and under the same conditions. The agreement did not comply with the Statute of Frauds:—Held, that a continued occupation of the same premises after the date of the agreement on the same terms and conditions as before did not entitle him to specific performance of the agreement Brady, Ex parte, National Savings Bank Association, In re, 15 W. R. 753.

By memorandum in writing, A. granted to B. a lease for the term of three years, and agreed, upon B. giving him notice in writing, within three months after the expiration of the lease, to grant him a new lease for a further term. At the expiration of the three years B. retained possession and applied to A. (but whether or not in writing did not appear) for a new lease, and the solicitors of A. and B. prepared a draft of the intended lease. In consequence of some difference as to terms, B. refused to accept the lease. On bill filed by A. for specific performance:—Held, that B. having by his answer admitted the demand of a lease, but not having expressly set up the Statute of Frauds, was bound to accept a lease, although his demand might not have been in writing. Beatson v. Nicholson, 6 Jur. 620.

iii. Payment of Rent.

Increased Rent.]—A landlord having verbally agreed with his tenant to grant him a lease for twenty-one years at an increased rent, with the option of purchasing the freehold, died before the execution of the lease. Before his death the tenant had paid one quarter's rent at the increased rate:—Held, that this constituted a sufficient part performance of the agreement to take the case out of the Statute of Frauds, and specific performance was decreed. Nunn v. Fabian, 35 L. J., Ch. 140; L. R. 1 Ch. 35; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 868; 13 L. T. 343.

F. was tenant to C., with a promise of a lease for twenty-one years, from September, 1851, to September, 1872, at the rent of 84*l.* 16*s.* Afterwards C. entered F.'s name in his rent-book as tenant of 128 acres at 16*s.* an acre, at the yearly rent of 102*l.* 8*s.*, less 4*l.* for county cess—98*l.* 8*s.* "Tenure thirty-one years from September, 1872, at rent of 16*s.* per acre, allowed 4*l.* for county cess—98*l.* 8*s.*" To which was added the following remark: "F.'s tenure ceased September, 1872. Mr. C. agreed to give a lease of thirty-one years at 16*s.* per acre, and to take the old rent for one year, ending September, 1873, in consequence of failure of potato crop." F. continued in possession, and paid the increased rent from September, 1873. The entry in the rent-book was in C.'s handwriting. In an action after C.'s death by his son, as the owner of C.'s estate, against F. to enforce specific performance of an agreement to take a lease for thirty-one years:—Held, that the continuance in possession of F., and payment of the increased rent being upon the evidence referable solely to the agreement of 1872, were acts of part performance to take the case out of the Statute of Frauds. Nunn v. Fabian (L. R. 1 Ch. 35) followed. Conner v. Fitzgerald, 11 L. R., Ir. 106.

Where a new letting at an altered rent is made to a tenant in possession under a pre-existing tenancy, the payment by the tenant, and the acceptance by the landlord, of the altered rent, if shewn to have been paid and accepted on foot of the new tenancy, is a sufficient part performance to enable either party to sustain an action for specific performance of the contract for such new tenancy. Ib.

The payment of an increased rent, draining, and planting, done by the tenant in pursuance of a concluded parol agreement with his landlord for a lease, are a sufficient part performance to take the case out of the Statute of Frauds. Howe v. Hall, Ir. R. 4 Eq. 242.

But where the rent of neighbouring tenants had been increased at the same time as plaintiff's, the sum expended on improvements was small, and such as a tenant from year to year might have prudently expended, and the tenant had on different occasions given different versions of the agreement, the court, not being satisfied on the evidence that a concluded agreement had been proved, refused specific performance after the landlord's death. Ib.

When a parol agreement for a lease was entered into with the tenant of the lands, and for a number of years after this agreement he continued to hold the land at the rent stipulated by the terms of the agreement, which exceeded the former rent, a specific performance was decreed against the other party. Desart v. Goddard, Wall. Lyn. 347.

A party entering into an agreement, which at the time he cannot perform, must, on the bar being removed, execute his agreement. Ib.

Amount not Specified.]—It was part of an agreement to purchase a farm that the vendor should, for twelve years from the completion, be at liberty to require, at his own expense, and the purchaser agreed to grant him a lease of the farm, at a rent to be estimated at a specified percentage on the outlay in making the purchase. The vendor, just before the completion, wrote a letter to the purchaser, agreeing to pay the percentage on the amount of the purchase-money (which had been already paid), but stating that the letter was a temporary thing until the completion of the purchase, and the execution of an agreement already prepared and intended to be executed. The agreement referred to had been ingrossed, and provided for the payment of a rent calculated on the aggregate amount of the purchase-money and expenses of the purchase and of repairs, but left the amount in blank. It was never signed, but the vendor remained in possession, and paid rent calculated on the aggregate amount:—Held, that there was a sufficient part performance to exclude a defence founded on the Statute of Frauds, to a bill for specific performance of the agreement to take a lease. Powell v. Lovegrove, 8 De G. M. & G. 357; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 791.

Alleged Inadequacy.]—M., a tenant of L., was offered a lease of certain lands, and a written agreement was produced for a term of thirty-one years, at 38*l.* rent, and tendered to her for signature. M. objected to 38*l.* as a mistake for 33*l.* Whereupon L.'s agent said that M. should have the farm for 33*l.*, and wrote a memorandum upon the agreement that M. said her rent was 33*l.* M. then signed the agreement. She paid the 33*l.* and continued in possession for six years, when L. commenced an action to enforce specific performance of the agreement at the rent of 38*l.*:—Held, that there was a complete agreement, partly written and partly verbal, for a lease at the rent of 33*l.*: and that the circumstance of M. being permitted to continue in possession after the expiration of her lease, and the payment of rent by her at the agreed amount, constituted part performance sufficient to take the case out of the Statute of Frauds, and to entitle L. to a decree for specific performance. Lanyon v. Martin, L. R. 13 Ir. 297.

Under a marriage settlement tenant for life, with remainder to his first and other sons by his wife F., in tail, with remainder to himself in fee, had power to grant leases for ninety-nine years in possession at the most improved rent under an indenture of lease to be executed with certain formalities. Twenty-eight years after the marriage, the wife still living, and there being no issue of the marriage, the husband gave a bond conditioned for the granting a lease for ninety-nine years, at a rent of 20*l.* per annum, upon the expiration of a subsisting lease. As soon as the subsisting lease determined, the obligee of the bond entered into possession, and for some years paid a rent of 20*l.*:—Held, notwithstanding some evidence of inadequacy in the rent, that the representatives of the obligee were entitled to a decree for specific performance of the agreement contained in the bond. Butler v. Powys, 2 Coll. 156; 9 Jur. 959.

iv. Other Acts.

Execution of Repairs.]—After an offer had been made by a plaintiff to take a lease of a farm from the defendant, a draft was prepared by the defendant's solicitors, and approved of by the plaintiff with some alterations, and was afterwards altered by the defendant himself, and left by him with his solicitors, for the purpose of its being ascertained whether the plaintiff would agree to the alterations. On their submitting it to him, he agreed to the alterations, but no agreement was signed. A part of the terms was that the plaintiff should execute certain repairs before the lease was granted. The plaintiff was put into possession by the direction of the defendant's solicitors, and executed some repairs:—Held, that, although the plaintiff might have been let into possession without authority from the defendant, there was a concluded agreement for a lease on the part of the defendant, and a sufficient part performance to take the case out of the Statute of Frauds, and a specific performance was decreed. Shillibeer v. Jarvis, 8 De G. M. & G. 79.

Building and Granting Leases.]—B., in consideration of a parol agreement with A. for a lease, pulled down houses, erected new ones, granted leases, received rents and acted as owner. A., when sick, bade B. get leases prepared from a precedent he gave him, and then died. Though this agreement was not in writing, yet it was so far materially executed on B.'s part, that it ought to be performed on the other, and so decreed. Lister v. Foxcroft, Colles, P. C. 108; Gilb. 4, 11.

Equity will relieve in case of a fraud, although there be nothing in writing to charge the party. As if A. agrees with B., by parol, for a lease of ground, B. enters and builds, and then A. refuses to grant him a lease. On a bill by B., to have this agreement executed, A. pleads the Statute of Frauds, the agreement being parol. The court overruled the plea, and afterwards decreed A. to perform the agreement, and to pay the costs. Floyd v. Buckland, 2 Freem. 268. Twyne's Case, 3 Co. 82. Butcher's Case, 1 Eq. Abr. 21, pl. 9; 1 Eq. Abr. 20, pl. 5. S. P., 2 Freem. 285. S. P., Savage v. Foster, 9 Mod. 38.

Preparing Draft Lease.]—Decree for specific performance of agreement to grant a lease, of which only one part signed by plaintiff was found in possession of defendant, upon the circumstances, viz. possession, drafts, prepared and approved, and the execution deferred only till repairs completed. An extension of the term according to a variation of the agreement, also in writing, was refused on the ground of want of consideration. Robson v. Collins, 7 Ves. 130; 6 R. R. 92.

Specific performance of a parol agreement to grant a lease enforced against the intended landlord, on the ground of part performance, and on evidence consisting of a memorandum by the landlord, the parol testimony of a witness present, and the draft of a lease prepared by the landlord's steward, though the draft of the lease provided that the tenant should do an act for the landlord's benefit, which was not mentioned in the landlord's memorandum or the witness's testimony. Observations on part performance as a ground for avoiding the operation of the Statute of Frauds. Mundy v. Joliffe, 5 Myl. & C. 167; 9 L. J., Ch. 95; 3 Jur. 1045. Reversing 9 Sim. 413.

Preparing Deed.] — Specific execution of a contract to grant a lease decreed, the contract having been performed in all respects save the execution of the lease; and time, if of the essence of the contract, not being the ground upon which the landlord refused out of court to execute the lease; but without costs, because of the laches of the plaintiff in asserting his right. Burke v. Smyth, 3 Jo. & Lat. 193; 9 Ir. Eq. R. 135.

Receiving Fines.]—On bill for specific performance of a parol agreement to let lands; evidence that defendant had suffered wife to receive money from the plaintiff in consideration of fines (he being incapable of receiving them), and had written a letter to a third person acknowledging the demise, and stating that he was ready to make leases:—Held, sufficient to take case out of Statute of Frauds. Hartly v. Wilkinson, 1 Ridgw. L. & S. 357.

Change of Place of Business.]—The plaintiff removed his place of business to a house belonging to the defendant, his father-in-law, upon the faith, as he alleged, of a parol promise by the defendant that he should occupy the house rent-free during his life. During the period of his occupation he spent various moneys in repairs, which were chiefly of the ordinary description, except the putting up a new staircase, and a new roof to an outhouse. The defendant brought an ejectment, and the plaintiff filed a bill for relief:—Held, that the change of the plaintiff's place of business did not constitute a sufficient consideration to support the parol agreement. Millard v. Harvey, 34 Beav. 237; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1167; 13 W. R. 125.

Held, also, that he was not entitled to any lien in respect of the moneys spent in repairs. Ib.

The plaintiff's wife, without his knowledge, asked the defendant to sell a field belonging to him. She paid the defendant 150*l.*, but he refused to sell the field, and nothing further was then done. A short time afterwards the defendant let the plaintiff into possession, and the plaintiff, without knowing of the transaction between the defendant and his wife, continued in possession for ten years, without paying any rent. During this time no interest upon the 150*l.* was paid by the defendant:—Held, that there was sufficient evidence of a contract, and a decree was made for specific performance. Ib.

Miscellaneous.]—Bill for specific performance of a parol agreement to grant a lease for twenty years; plea of the Statute of Frauds, and an answer denying that acts alleged as part performance were done in part performance: the plea was saved to the hearing with liberty to except; Lord Chancellor inclining to the opinion that though the agreement is admitted, the statute may be used as a defence to the suit. Moore v. Edwards, 4 Ves. 23.

Bill for specific performance of a parol agreement for a lease within the Statute of Frauds charging possession taken under the agreement, and other acts of part performance. Plea of the statute, and answer, not denying the acts alleged as a part performance, but stating that, being advised he entered as tenant at will, he gave notice to quit. Plea overruled. Bowers v. Cator, 4 Ves. 91.

Tenant for life agrees to grant a lease for lives renewable for ever, having a power to make such leases, and dies. The remainderman will be decreed to execute the contract, though he took his remainder as a purchaser for valuable consideration; but if the contract were by parol, and partly performed, so as to take it out of the Statute of Frauds, though the tenant for life would have been decreed to execute it, yet it seems it cannot be enforced after his death against the remainderman. Lowry v. Dufferin, 1 Ir. Eq. R. 281.

Specific performance decreed of a parol agreement in part performed for surrendering a lease and granting a new lease at a reduced rent. Parker v. Smith, 1 Coll. 608.

In the month of May, 1843, a parol agreement was entered into between A. and B., for a partnership between them, as to certain land intended to be used for building purposes, and a lease of it was afterwards executed by the lessor to B. only, the lessor declining to grant a lease to two persons. Certain acts of ownership were exercised by A., shortly after the agreement was entered into; but afterwards A. permitted B. to lay out his money in the erection of buildings on the land, without interfering therewith. After a lapse of eighteen months A.'s solicitor applied to B. to perform the agreement, which B. repudiated; six months afterwards, A filed his bill against B., seeking specific performance of the agreement:—Held that the circumstances were such as to exclude A. from insisting on the specific performance of the agreement by B.; but, in the order dismissing the bill with costs, directions were given to the master to disallow the defendant the costs occasioned by his setting up the Statute of Frauds, and disputing the parol agreement and part performance thereof. Cowell v. Watts, 2 Hall & Tw. 224; 19 L. J., Ch. 455.

d. Defences.

i. Vagueness and Uncertainty.

As to Rent, or Commencement or Duration of Term.]—Where on an agreement for a lease, the particular rent, commencement and duration of the lease are uncertain, or depend upon the approbation of a third person, a court of equity will direct proper issues to ascertain these several facts, before any specific performance of the contract is decreed. Plunket v. Kingsland (Lord), 1 Bro. P. C. 322.

An agreement between members of a family to grant a lease from year to year at a fair annual rent, for so long as the lessee should choose:—Held, so vague and uncertain that the court could not execute it. Thellusson v. Rendelsham (Lord), 11 Jur. 29.

P. being seised of an estate by lease for life, renewable for ever subject to a rent equal in amount to a rent which a sub-tenant paid him for part of the estate, agreed in writing to let the other part in his own possession to D., his brother, for the lives of D. and two others, and the life of the survivor, free from rent and assessments during D.'s life, to be subject to a rent of 350*l.* during the other lives or life surviving D.: leases to be executed at the request of either party. A memorandum was added of the same date, signed by both parties, stating "rent to be payable half-yearly, every 1st of May and 1st of November henceforward." Prior to the agreement, D. being elected member of parliament for a city, was required to take the members' qualification oath; and a petition was threatened against his return for want of qualification, but was abandoned at the date of the agreement. P. died intestate, without executing a lease or parting with possession:—Held, by the lords (affirming a decree, dismissing a bill filed by D. against P.'s heir-at-law for specific performance), that the circumstances and evidence shewed that the object of the agreement was to give D. a qualification for parliament, that no interest in the property passed, and that the parties never intended that the agreement should be executed, and therefore the execution of it could not be enforced either as an agreement for valuable consideration (which was the case made by the bill) or as a gift. Courts of equity do not decree specific performance of incomplete gifts. The uncertainty which the above memorandum made in the agreement would of itself make it impossible to decree specific performance without paying the rent of 350*l.* from its date. Callaghan v. Callaghan, 8 Cl. & F. 374. And see S. C., 4 Ir. Eq. R. 441.

A plaintiff by her bill alleged that an agreement to take a house had been entered into by the defendant, and charged that though no formal note thereof was ever made, yet that the same was proved and made out of the letters of the defendant and his agent, and that such letters were a sufficient note thereof. A letter of the defendant's was proved, containing an agreement to take the house, and give 50*l.* more of premium, "provided I get the profit rent of the present tenant." Upon evidence aliunde, shewing what, in fact, these words meant, specific performance was decreed. Skinner v. M'Donall, 2 De G. & Sm. 265; 17 L. J., Ch. 347; 12 Jur. 741.

Lease for three Lives—Lives not named.]—Specific performance decreed of an agreement for a lease for three lives unnamed. Kensington (Lord) v. Phillips, 5 Dow. 61; 16 R. R. 96. Fitzgerald v. Vicars, 2 Dr. & Wal. 298. See also Pentland v. Stokes, 2 Ball & B. 68.

As to Subject-matter.]—A contract for a lease of "coals, &c.," or "minerals," is too ambiguous to be carried out by this court. Price v. Griffith, 1 De G. M. & G. 80; 21 L. J., Ch. 78; 15 Jur. 1093.

A contract by the owner of one undivided moiety of a colliery, for a lease of the whole colliery, will not (in the absence of fraud or collusion) be decreed to be specifically carried out as to his own moiety, either with or without compensation. Ib.

Semble, in such case the parties will be left to damages at law. Ib.

Where terms for letting farms provided that all materials required for buildings proposed to be built, or that might thereafter be built, should be led at the expense of the tenant; that the landlord should drain, the tenant leading tiles; that gates, buildings, "&c.," should be left in repair by the tenant, the landlord finding new gates when required; that the landlord reserved to himself all customary rights and reservations, such as liberty to cut and plant timber, search for and work mines or minerals, "&c.," allowing the tenant for any reasonable damages:—Held, that these stipulations did not render the agreement uncertain, so as to be incapable of being enforced specifically. Parker v. Taswell, 2 De G. & J. 559; 27 L. J., Ch. 812; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1006; 6 W. R. 608.

Where an agreement for a lease of mineral property did not clearly define the mineral area to be comprised in the lease, the court refused, at the instance of the proposed lessee, to decree specific performance of the agreement. Lancaster v. De Trafford, 31 L. J., Ch. 554; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 873; 7 L. T. 40; 10 W. R. 474.

A plaintiff, under the power reserved to him in the agreement, had worked the mine on trial, and expended a considerable sum in so doing. The defendant had refused to agree to the limits of the mineral area being fixed, because he considered it a part of the agreement that the plaintiff should associate with himself some responsible person to work the mine, and give security for the performance of the covenants in the lease, which the plaintiff neglected to do. The court, therefore, refused to direct an inquiry as to the amount expended by the plaintiff in working the mine, and dismissed the bill, but without costs. Ib.

A., by contract in writing, agreed with B. to take a lease of "those two seams of coal, known as the two-feet coal and the three-feet coal, lying under lands hereafter to be defined in the Bank End estate," and B. agreed to let to A. "the before-mentioned seams of coal":—Held, that the contract was sufficiently definite to enforce, and that the true construction of it was, that the boundaries of the estate, which consisted of about twenty-seven acres, were to be thereafter defined. Heywood v. Cope, 25 Beav. 140; 27 L. J., Ch. 468; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 227; 6 W. R. 304.

—— Exception.]—An incumbent agreed to grant, at a future period, a lease of his glebe, containing about 437 acres, "except thirty-seven acres thereof," which were not specified:—Held, that the contract was not void for uncertainty. Jenkins v. Green, 27 Beav. 437; 28 L. J., Ch. 817; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 304.

As to Repairs to be Executed by Tenant.]—See Baumann v. James, ante, col. 739.

Condition.]—The defendant by letter offered to take a lease of the plaintiff's house for a certain term, at a specified rent, "if put into thorough repair," stating also, "the drawing-rooms we should require to be handsomely decorated according to the present style. Paint is required both inside and outside, although perhaps for some parts one coat might be sufficient." The plaintiff wrote to accept the offer:—Held, that the conditions as to repairs and decorations made the agreement too uncertain for the court to enforce. Taylor v. Portington, 7 De G. M. & G. 328; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1057; 3 Eq. R. 781.

A lessee of an hotel from a company applied for a renewal of his lease, on the understanding that he would spend money on improvements. A meeting of the company, informally convened, agreed to grant the renewed lease, and the lessee continued in possession, and expended money on improvements:—Held, that the agreement could not be enforced, as the lessee's undertaking to improve the premises was a material part of the arrangement, and was too uncertain to be inserted as a covenant in the lease. Gardner v. Fooks, 15 W. R. 388.

B. agreed with C. to take a lease of a house which C. was building when it was "complete, finished and fit for habitation." B. took possession, but afterwards found various objections to it, contending that it was not properly finished. The matter being referred to an expert, he reported that, although there might be some objections, yet the house was "complete, finished and fit for habitation." A decree for a specific performance of the agreement was granted. Faulkner v. Llewellyn, 9 L. T. 251; 11 W. R. 1055. Affirmed, 9 L. T. 557; 12 W. R. 193—L.JJ.

Bill for specific performance of an agreement to renew a lease, dismissed, the agreement being too vague and uncertain to be executed by the court. Price v. Assheton, 1 Y. & Coll. 441.

Which of Two similar Papers.]—One of two tenants in common entered into a negotiation for a lease, and wrote a letter stating his willingness to grant a lease on the terms of a paper referred to in the letter. There were two papers, each of which, in some respects, answered the description in the letter. In a suit, by the proposed lessee, for specific performance as to the moiety belonging to the tenant in common who had written the letter:—Held, that the paper to which the letter referred was not sufficiently identified. Price v. Griffith, 1 De G. M. & G. 80; 21 L. J., Ch. 78; 15 Jur. 1093.

ii. Inadequacy of Consideration.

Inadequacy of value is not an objection to decreeing specific performance, unless the inadequacy is so great as to prove fraud, or that the parties could not have intended to execute the contract. Callaghan v. Callaghan, 8 Cl. & F. 374. See 4 Ir. Eq. R. 441.

Valuable.]—Specific execution was decreed of the following contract for a lease: "From the love and affection I have for you as my first cousin, I now promise and engage to you, your heirs, or assigns, during my natural life, in reversion, the farm of C., as now in your actual possession, at 1*l.* 2*s.* 9*d.* per acre, as now paid and payable by you." Moore v. Crofton, 3 Jo. & Lat. 438; 9 Ir. Eq. R. 344.

The continuance of the rent which was reserved by the former lease is a valuable consideration for the promise to grant the lease in reversion. Ib.

An engagement by a landlord with an improving tenant is not to be considered as merely voluntary. Pulmer v. Hamilton, 2 Ridgw. P. C. 549. And see Crop v. Norton, 2 Atk. 74; 9 Mod. 233; Barnard. 179.

Lease by Charity.]—A lease by charity for ninety-nine years of a charity farm, as a husbandry lease, cannot stand, without proof of consideration shewing that it is fair and reasonable, and for the benefit of the charity. Att.-Gen. v. Owen, 10 Ves. 555.

Duty of Lessee.]—A lessee, taking an unusual lease, is bound to see that the consideration is fully stated on the face of the instrument. Keating v. Keating, Ll. & G. t. Sugd. 133.

iii. Mistake.

Omission of Term.]—Party held entitled to resist a suit for specific performance of an agreement to let a public-house, by proving that he had made a mistake in his letter of offer. Wood v. Scarth, 2 K. & J. 33; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1107; 4 W. R. 31.

Held, that such mistake was well proved, by shewing that the defendant had previously to writing this letter to the plaintiffs, offered the premises to other brewers upon terms which included the stipulation which he stated had been omitted in such letter by mistake; because such previous offer must be taken to be the offer which he had stated in such letter that he was giving to the applicants in rotation. Ib.

Held, also, that want of memory and inaccuracy on the part of the defendant only affected the credibility of his evidence, and did not prejudice his right to relief, as the mistake was clearly proved by other evidence. Ib.

Where a material ingredient in the terms of a contract has been omitted, equity considering it as only resting in treaty will not decree a specific execution. Bayly v. Tyrrell, 2 Ball & B. 363; 12 R. R. 99.

Although specific performance of an agreement may not be enforced against a defendant who reasonably misunderstood its terms, a mere case of inadvertent omission to propose an intended term is different; and therefore, where an occupant of land under an expiring tenancy had always paid the tithe rent-charge, and afterwards entered into a written agreement with the landlord for a lease at the old rent, but without any stipulation being introduced as to the tithe rent-charge:—Held, that the landlord could not insist on such a stipulation being inserted as a condition of specific performance being enforced against him. Parker v. Taswell, 2 De G. & J. 559; 27 L. J., Ch. 812; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1006; 6 W. R. 608.

As to Extent of Premises.]—Where a tender for a lease of a farm was accepted under the mistaken impression that the quantity of land inserted therein by the person making the tender was the same as that intended to be let, and it was subsequently discovered that the quantity of land inserted in the accepted tender was of larger amount than was intended to be let:—Held, that as the mistake was one which related to quantity only, it did not touch the essential terms of the contract, and that specific performance could be granted with an abatement. McKenzie v. Hesketh, 47 L. J., Ch. 231; 7 Ch. D. 675; 38 L. T. 171; 26 W. R. 189.

Contract by a railway company to grant a lease of the whole of a house No. 1, and part of a house No. 2:—Held, that part of the house No. 1 being evidently intended to be retained by the company, only that other part of it designated in a plan was meant to be included in the lease, and a bill to compel a lease of the whole house dismissed. Richards v. North London Ry., 20 W. R. 194.

Agreement not according to Intention of Principal.]—It was held a ground for refusing specific performance of an agreement by defendant's agent to grant a lease, that such agreement was not, in regard to some restrictions on a particular sort of building, in conformity with the defendant's intentions, which intentions he had communicated to his agent, if he had authorised him at all, which was doubtful. Helsham v. Langley, 1 Y. & C., C. C. 175.

iv. Misrepresentation or Concealment.

Misrepresentation.]—Bill for specific performance of an agreement to take a lease of a limestone quarry. In the course of the treaty the plaintiff had represented that the limestone was of a certain quality; the fact being that a quarry in the immediate neighbourhood had been worked, and the stone ascertained not to be of the specified quality. The result of this trial was not known to either party, but might have been ascertained on inquiry; and it appeared that the plaintiff had no knowledge of the quality of the limestone. The defendant afterwards, and before signing the agreement, made a cursory inspection of the old quarry, and satisfied himself that the stone was limestone, but ascertained nothing as to its quality:—Held, that the misrepresentation was a bar to a decree for specific performance. Higgins v. Samels, 2 John. & H. 460; 7 L. T. 240.

Where a house was described as substantial and convenient, and having five bedrooms; on a bill for specific performance:—Held, that this was no misdescription, although the house was out of repair, and the wall in some places only half-brick thick, and some of the bedrooms extremely small inner rooms, and without fireplaces. Johnson v. Smart, 2 Giff. 151; 2 L. T. 307.

Suppressing Fact.]—Specific performance of an agreement for a lease, in consideration of the surrender of an old lease, refused, the tenant suppressing that the life on which the old lease depended was, when the agreement was signed, in extremis; and as the new lease would, under a power of leasing, at the highest rent, be void, the surrender of the old lease forming part of the consideration. Ellard v. Llandaff (Lord), 1 Ball & B. 241; 12 R. R. 23.

Equity will not direct a lease, void under a power, to be executed, as it would not bind the inheritance, and might embarrass remainderman. Ib., 251.

Reticence—Uninformed Party.]—There being no fiduciary relation between a vendor and a purchaser, the purchaser is not bound to disclose any fact exclusively within his knowledge which might be expected to influence the price of the subject to be sold. Simple reticence does not amount to legal fraud, but a word or a gesture intended to induce the vendor to believe in the existence of a non-existing fact, which might influence the price of the subject to be sold, would be a sufficient ground for a court of equity to refuse a decree of specific performance; and so, à fortiori, would any contrivance on the part of the purchaser, better informed than the vendor as to value, to hurry the vendor into an agreement without giving him an opportunity of being fully informed on that subject, or taking advice as to the terms of the bargain. Walters v. Morgan, 3 De G. F. & J. 718; 4 L. T. 758.

Where, therefore, an intended lessor and lessee of minerals were in the above position as to knowledge, and the intended lessee brought to the lessor a lease ready prepared, without previous negotiation as to the details of it, and induced the latter to sign it, saying that he might trust to the proposed lessee for making a fair allowance if the minerals turned out more valuable than was supposed:—Held, that a bill for specific performance by the intended lessee, offering to make a fair extra allowance, could not be sustained, and its dismissal was confirmed on appeal. Ib.

Unfairness.]—A bill for specific performance of an agreement for a lease signed by the grantor only, and contrary to his leasing power, of which the plaintiff had notice afterwards, amended, praying an execution of the agreement for the life of the grantor, without requiring compensation for the difference of interest, dismissed, the case proved for the plaintiff creating doubts and suspicions of the fairness of the transactions. O'Rourke v. Percival, 2 Ball & B. 58; 12 R. R. 68.

v. Illegality.

When the plain intent of an agreement is unobjectionable, this court will decree specific performance of it according to such intent, though in its terms the agreement was contrary to a statute; thus an agreement for a lease with a covenant by the tenant to pay all composition for tithes, entered into after the 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 119, will be enforced by decreeing a lease to be executed, reserving a rent compounded of the rent agreed upon, and the rent-charge in lieu of tithes, where such is the intention of the parties. Daly v. Duggan, 1 Ir. Eq. R. 311. S. P., Davies v. Fitton, 4 Ir. Eq. R. 612; 2 Dr. & War. 225; Carolan v. Brabazon, 9 Ir. Eq. 124; 3 Jo. & Lat. 200.

vi. Hardship.

Extensive Repairs Necessary.]—A tenant under an agreement to take a lease of a house, then unfinished, but which the lessor agreed to finish, is not bound to accept it if the house, upon a competent survey, is found defective, and finished in such a manner that it is likely to subject the tenant under the covenant to repair, to an unusually large annual outlay to maintain it. Tildesley v. Clarkson, 30 Beav. 419; 31 L. J., Ch. 362; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 163; 6 L. T. 98; 10 W. R. 328.

Specific performance of an agreement to take a lease decreed, where the defendant, knowing that the premises were greatly out of repair, stipulated for certain specific repairs, which were done accordingly, but took possession after being warned that much more extensive repairs were required, and it turned out on examination, after he had taken possession, that it was necessary to take down and rebuild a wall at great expense. Cook v. Waugh, 2 Giff. 201; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 596; 8 W. R. 458.

Rent unfairly Fixed by Umpire.]—Two parties treating for a lease, agreed that the amount of rent should be fixed by two arbitrators, with power to call in an umpire, whose decision, with that of one of the arbitrators, should determine the rent. The umpire being chosen, he and the arbitrator for the lessee fixed the rent, the former stating as the ground of his decision, that the lessee had agreed with the arbitrators to lay out a large sum upon the premises, but which agreement the lessor had no power to enforce. The arbitrator, too, made his valuation at the instigation of the lessee's wife:—Held, that in these circumstances a specific performought not to be granted. Chichester v. M'Intyre, 1 Dow (N.S.) 460; 4 Bli. (N.S.) 78.

Interfering with Enjoyment.]—Bill for specific performance dismissed with costs, where the agreement had been procured by the plaintiff under circumstances of great suspicion. A., B. and C. being jointly interested in certain property, A. contracts with B. to take a lease of the whole of it; and the contract expresses that B. is to be bound by the contract, only so far as it is to be performed by him, but that A. is to be answerable to B., even for what is to be done by C.:—Held, that B. will not be precluded from enforcing the contract against A., by the circumstance that C. has taken proceedings in a court of equity, which deprive A. of that possession and enjoyment of the property, the subject of the contract, which it was the purport of the contract to give him; nor by the circumstance that B., A. having declared his resolution not to perform the agreement, has supported C. in some of the applications which he has made, tending to interfere with A.'s enjoyment and possession of the property. —— v. Ogden, 5 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 104.

Sub-Lease—Expiration of Time for obtaining Consent of Superior Landlord — Liquidated Damages.]—An agreement for an under-lease contained a covenant by the lessee with the intended under-lessees that, if the lessors should refuse to grant a licence to him to underlet to them, or in case such licence should not be obtained before the 24th of June, 1864, the lessee should pay to the under-lessees 1,000*l.* as liquidated damages:—Held, that this clause did not give the lessee a right to abstain from applying for a licence, and to pay the penalty in lieu of granting the lease; and specific performance was decreed, although the time specified for obtaining the licence had, in consequence of his not having applied for it, expired. Long v. Bowring, 33 Beav. 585; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 668; 10 L. T. 683; 12 W. R. 972.

vii. Failure of Condition.

Approval of Plans.]—A. agreed to grant a lease to B. as soon as B. should have built a house, with the necessary outbuildings on the land, of the value of 1,400*l.* at the least, "according to a plan to be submitted to and approved by A." B. agreed to build, and take the lease. No plan had been approved of:—Held, that no decree could be made for specific performance. Brace v. Wehnert, 25 Beav. 348; 27 L. J., Ch. 572; 4 Jur (N.S.) 549; 6 W. R. 425.

Quære, whether, in the absence of the condition as to approval, specific performance would have been decreed. Ib.

See also Cubitt v. Smith, 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1123; 11 L. T. 289.

Formation of Company.]—A lessee wrote to his lessor offering to surrender his lease and to take a fresh lease for twenty-one years to a nominee, or to a company which he intended to form, at an increased rent, but otherwise on the same terms as the existing lease; and by a subsequent letter offered to instruct his solicitor to prepare a draft lease. The lessor telegraphed to him in reply to get the lease prepared. Afterwards correspondence took place between the solicitors as to the form of the lease, and the lessee's solicitor prepared a formal agreement. Differences having arisen, the lessor refused to grant the lease, and the lessee brought an action for specific performance of the agreement to grant a lease and for damages. No company had been formed and no nominee appointed by the plaintiff before the trial of the action:—Held, that assuming that there was a binding agreement for a lease, the formation of a company or appointment of a nominee was a condition precedent, and that the plaintiff could not maintain an action for specific performance of the contract, as he had not performed the condition. Williams v. Briscoe, 22 Ch. D. 441; 48 L. T. 198; 31 W. R. 907—C. A.

But held, also, on the construction of the correspondence, that there was no binding agreement between the parties, and therefore the action entirely failed. Ib.

Non-fulfilment of Promise—Acquiescence.]—When the subject of contract was an agreement to take the lease of a house, and the proposed tenant went into possession at once, and occupied for two years, but, while continuing in occupation, from time to time called on the landlord to fulfil promises which the tenant alleged to have been the inducement for the contract, and paid rent, but always paid it under protest:—Held, that these circumstances did not amount to such acquiescence as to prevent the tenant from ultimately refusing to perform the contract, but that the payments were to be treated as merely made in respect of the actual use and occupation, and in no other character. Lamare v. Dixon, 43 L. J., Ch. 203; L. R. 6 H. L. 414; 22 W. R. 49.

A. was the owner of some land, on which he was about to erect buildings; B. wished to have cellars there for wine vaults. A. promised that they should be made dry, but would not introduce that promise into the written agreement. B., however, confiding in the promise, signed the agreement, by which he undertook to accept from A. a lease of the vaults for a certain term, and at a certain rent. B. was to pay down 100*l.*, and was to pay another 100*l.* on the execution of the lease. B. paid the first 100*l.*, and, for his own convenience, before the day fixed, took possession of the vaults, and placed therein a large quantity of wine, but soon complained that the vaults had not been made dry. These complaints he constantly renewed, and every time he paid the rent paid it under protest; and, finally, after more than two years' actual occupation of the cellars, refused to sign the lease, on the ground that the cellars had not been made fit for his occupation, and he did not pay the second sum of 100*l.*, but removed his stock of wines to another place. On a bill for specific performance, the court granted a decree against B., but accompanied it with a direction that there should be an inquiry whether a certain thing suggested by B. in the course of the long correspondence between the parties, but neglected by A., should not be done:—Held, that the decree in this form was erroneous. Ib.

Held, also, that the taking possession of the vaults, and the payment of the rent, which payment must be attributed to the actual use and occupation of the premises, did not prevent B. from setting up as a defence the non-performance of the promise which had been the inducement to the contract. Ib.

Held, also, that as there had been delay on both sides, though the plaintiff's bill ought to be dismissed, it must be dismissed without costs. Ib.

Disclaimer of Part—Separable Conditions.]—When the conditions of an agreement between landlord and builder, whereby the landlord agrees to grant leases of successive plots of land as the houses upon each of them are built to a certain stage, are by the terms of the contract separable, there is no rule of equity to prevent them from being separately enforced by way of specific performance. Therefore, where the assignee of the builder's interest had completed the houses upon some only of the plots agreed to be built upon:—Held, upon a bill for specific performance, that he was entitled to the leases of those plots, even though disclaiming all interest in the remaining plots. Wilkinson v. Clements, 42 L. J., Ch. 38; L. R. 8 Ch. 96; 27 L. T. 834; 21 W. R. 90.

viii. Inability of Lessor to Grant Lease.

Action by Lessee.]—Contract for a lease conditional on the lessor's ability to grant it. A bill for specific performance by the lessee is premature if filed before he can shew that the lesser is able to grant the lease. Abbott v. Blair, 8 W. R. 672.

But the lessor's acceptance of a deposit on a premium for the lease, and subsequent interest on the balance, sufficiently removes the condition, so as to entitle the lessee to file a bill, and is so far an estoppel. Ib.

A bill was filed for specific performance of a contract to grant a lease of premises. The defendant was unable to grant a lease of the entirety, and offered previously to filing the bill to release the plaintiff, and to reimburse him the amount of the repairs which he had done; the plaintiff claimed, however, to be paid for costs and expenses incurred by him in and about entering into the contract, and for other damage sustained by him. Stuart, V.-C., on account of the offer that had been made previously to the institution of the suit, ordered the plaintiff to pay the costs, and directed an inquiry as to the expenses incurred in respect of the repairs only. On appeal:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to an additional inquiry, as to the costs and expenses incurred by him up to filing the bill; and that the plaintiff ought to have proceeded at law for damages by reason of the breach of the contract; that, as a reasonable offer had been made to the plaintiff before the institution of the suit, he was properly directed to pay the costs. Bauman v. Matthews, 4 L. T. 783—L. C.

Action by Lessor.]—A lessee entered into an agreement to let a part of the premises to the defendant, with the option of taking a lease for twenty-one years. The defendant subsequently discovered that the lessee's own lease was for twenty-one years and a quarter, and that the covenants were such as to prevent him from granting the proposed lease. After some negotiations he broke off the contract. Bill for the specific performance dismissed with costs, although the lessee was able, before the hearing of the cause, to grant the lease on the terms of the agreement. Forrer v. Nash, 11 Jur. (N.S.) 789; 14 W. R. 8.

ix. Defect in Lessor's Title.

If a party agrees to let an estate, and files a bill for the specific performance of the agreement, it will be dismissed, with costs, if, in the course of the suit, it should appear that the intended lessor had a defective title; even though the objections, on which the refusal to take the lease was grounded, were frivolous and untenable. Baskcomb v. Phillips, 29 L. J., Ch. 380; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 363; 1 L. T. 288.

Where it appears from the bill that the plaintiff is unable, from causes which he cannot control, to make a good title, a demurrer will be allowed, and the plaintiff will not be permitted to bring the cause to a hearing on the chance that he may by that time, or before certificate, be enabled to sue the defendant. Reeves v. Greenwich Tanning Co., 2 Hem. & M. 54.

An agreement by the vendors to let to the vendees, for the term of sixty-one years, the premises then occupied by the vendors, "as held under A. B.," does not absolve the vendors from the duty of proving the title of their lessor, A. B. And on its appearing that A. B. was himself only a lessee for three lives, with a covenant for perpetual renewal:—Held, that the vendors could not make a good title to grant a lease for a term of sixty-one years. Held, also, that the fact of other premises (besides those proposed to be let to the vendors) being comprised in the lease to A. B. was a fatal objection to the title. Leathem v. Allen, 1 Ir. Ch. R. 683.

Lease by Tenant for Life—Covenant not binding Successors.]—Agreement to grant a lease for twenty-one years of a house in H.

place, according to proposals, by which it was stipulated that the lease should contain a covenant by the lessor not to let land near H. place for the purpose of making or burning bricks; and that the lease should be in the form of one to be inspected at the office of the lessor's solicitor. The form of lease referred to contained a covenant by the lessor not to let land near H. place for the purpose of making or burning bricks, during the term of twenty-one years, if the lessor should so long live; and it turned out, on inspection of the abstract of the lessor's title, that the lessor was only tenant for life of land near H. place, and unable to bind his successors in the ownership by the covenant not to let:—Held, on exception to the Master's report (finding in favour of the plaintiff's title to grant the lease in a suit by the lessor for specific performance), that this fact, in the circumstances of the case, formed no ground for resisting the performance of the contract. Dawes v. Betts, 12 Jur. 709.

—— Release of Mortgage Charge—Trust for unborn Children.]—The plaintiff was tenant for life in possession, with power of leasing, of certain premises, subject to a mortgage charge in trustees. The trusts of the mortgage were for the plaintiff and wife, for their respective lives, with remainder to their unborn children. To enable the plaintiff to grant a lease of a portion of the property in mortgage, the trustees and the plaintiff and the wife (as cestuis que trustent) joined in releasing that portion from the mortgage; and the plaintiff thereupon agreed to grant a beneficial lease, under the power, of such portion to the defendant. Upon an objection being taken, in a suit for specific performance, to the title to grant a lease, on the ground that the release of the mortgage would be inoperative as against the wife and ulterior cestuis que trustent:—Held, that whether this was or was not a breach of trust on the part of the trustees (there being no legal title by which the position of the lessee could be affected), a court of equity would, under no circumstances, interfere with the title of the lessee, and that, therefore, the objection could not be supported. Ib.

Waiver of Right to call for Title.]—By an agreement of the 12th November, 1853, G. S. agreed to take leases of two houses from Christmas following, but to enter into possession of the premises on the 21st November. The agreement contained no stipulation as to investigation of title or delivery of abstract. The fixtures were to be taken by G. S. at a valuation. G. S. on the 12th November took possession of part and on the 21st November took possession of the remaining part of the premises. On the 25th November G. S. requested the lessor's solicitors to defer the preparation of the leases, "as he had a prospect of finding a partner, who he thought should be included therein." On the 10th December drafts of the leases were sent to G. S. for perusal, and on the 18th January, 1854, he was requested to return them approved. On the 16th March G. S.'s solicitor, for the first time, requested the lessor's solicitors to furnish him with an abstract of title, which being refused, G. S. declined to complete the contract, and he gave notice that he should give up possession of the premises on the 31st March. Whilst in possession, G. S. had, inter alia, advertised the premises to be let, with immediate possession, and had been assessed to and had paid rates and taxes. Upon a claim for specific performance of the agreement:—Held, that G. S. had by his conduct waived his right to call upon the lessor for an investigation of the title, and that the agreement be specifically performed:—Held, also, that the lessor was entitled to recover the amount of rent due, and the amount of the valuation of the fixtures. Simpson v. Sadd, 23 L. J., Ch. 873; 18 Jur. 938; 2 W. R. 578. Affirmed, 3 Eq. R. 263; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 457; 3 W. R. 118—L. C.

—— Disclosure of Defect during Proceedings.]—In a suit for the specific performance of an agreement to accept a lease, the court, considering the defendant (the intended lessee), by his conduct, to have waived all objections to the vendor's title, decreed a specific performance of the agreement, and referred it to the Master to settle the lease. In settling the lease, it became necessary, for identifying the premises, to produce before the Master the original lease under which the plaintiff was entitled to the property, from which lease it appeared that the property in question was held, with other property, at one entire rent, and under some special covenants, no provision with respect to which was made in the agreement between the plaintiff and the defendant. On the hearing for further directions, these facts being brought before the court in the shape of exceptions to the report:—Held, that though the defendant had, by his conduct, waived his right to the production of the lessor's title, yet, as, in the course of the proceedings, it had become necessary to produce that title, and that production shewed that a sufficient lease could not be made to the defendant according to the agreement, the court would not enforce a specific performance, and the bill was dismissed, but without costs. Warren v. Richardson, Younge, 1.

x. Possibility of Forfeiture.

A lease of a theatre, with a covenant for renewal, contained a proviso that the lessee should not let any box, with the exception of forty-one specified boxes, for more than the season, or than from year to year. On assignment of the term, the assignor reserved the right for himself and his nominees, during the existing or any renewed lease, to occupy box No. 124, not being one of the excepted boxes. On a renewal being obtained, a similar covenant as to forty-one boxes was inserted in the renewed lease, but they were not specified. The lessee, under the renewed lease, obtained the renewal by means of the covenant in the old lease, and with notice of the reservation as to box No. 124. He granted long leases of forty-one boxes, exclusively of No. 124:—Held, that the possibility of a forfeiture being incurred, if he performed the agreement as to No. 124, was no defence to a suit for its specific performance. Helling v. Lumley, 3 De G. & J. 493; 28 L. J., Ch. 249; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 301; 7 W. R. 152.

Equity will not decree specific execution of a covenant in a lease violating the restrictions of a prior settlement, of which the lessee had notice. Crafford v. Oliver, 3 Ridgw. P. C. 315.

xi. Breach of Intended Covenant.

Specific performance of articles to grant a lease to the plaintiff decreed, though he had contracted to underlet contrary to those articles. Williams v. Cheney, 3 Ves. 59.

Bill for specific performance of parol agreement to grant farm lease, with usual covenants of neighbourhood, and injunction to prevent ejectment, plaintiff having taken possession. Upon answer stating insolvency of plaintiff, and various breaches of agreement during five years' possession, to the ruin of estate, the injunction was continued on an undertaking to give judgment in ejectment, go to commission, and set down cause for next term, paying rent into court: defendant also insisted on covenant not to assign; that is subject of inquiry as to custom of neighbourhood. Boardman v. Mostyn, 6 Ves. 467.

Tenant having committed breaches of covenant, by waste, treating the land in an unhusband-like manner, &c., not entitled to specific performance of an agreement for a lease. Hill v. Barclay, 18 Ves. 63; 11 R. R. 147.

An injunction, though not to be continued with a view to specific performance of an agreement to grant a lease, if under a clause for re-entry the lease, when granted, would be at an end by the tenant's acts, was maintained upon undertaking to give possession, when required by the court, and paying the rent due, by waiver of the forfeiture if incurred, viz., distraining for subsequent rents. Gourlay v. Somerset (Duke), 1 Ves. & B. 68; 13 R. R. 234.

Whether, even without a right of re-entry, the court seeing a gross case of waste and breach of covenant, not to be indemnified by damages, would leave the tenant to his remedy at law, refusing relief, quære. Ib.

A bill was filed by a person in possession of certain lands, for the specific performance of an illegal parol agreement to grant him a lease for seven years, and for an injunction to restrain an ejectment. The defendant by his answer admitted that he had been disposed to permit, and would have permitted, the plaintiff, if he had been satisfied with his conduct, to remain in possession for the time and on the terms alleged to have been specified in the supposed agreement, and that the plaintiff probably expected to remain in possession for that time and on those terms, but he expressly denied that any such agreement had been made; and he insisted that the plaintiff was tenant only from year to year, and had done many acts which would have been breaches of the covenants of the lease supposed to have been contracted. The court upon this answer refused to make the order nisi absolute, and continued the injunction upon terms. Attwood v. Barham, 2 Russ. 186.

Observations on the landlord's setting up as a defence, in an action for specific performance, that the tenant had done acts which would be breaches of the covenants of the intended lease. Mundy v. Joliffe, 5 Myl. & C. 167; 9 L. J., Ch. 95; 3 Jur. 1045.

The landlord of a workshop, which he held under a lease, agreed, in writing, to underlet it at a yearly rent, with an option to the tenant to take an under-lease upon the same terms for twenty-one years from the previous Lady-day. The tenant continued in possession under this agreement for four years, when he received notice to quit. He then applied to his landlord for a lease for twenty-one years, according to the agreement. Some months afterwards, the landlord obtained possession of the premises under a warrant of possession from a district court. The tenant filed a bill against the landlord for specific performance and an injunction. It appeared, at the hearing, that the tenant had not kept the premises in repair. The court dismissed the bill with costs, and expressed a doubt whether the plaintiff had not, by his delay alone, lost his option to renew. Nunn v. Trustcott, 3 De G. & Sm. 304; 13 Jur. 114.

A. agreed, in 1814, for a lease of building ground for seventy-five years, at a ground rent, containing the usual building covenants to insure, repair, allow lessor to enter and view repairs, &c.; and that in case of non-payment of rent, or breach of any covenant, the lessor was to have the right to re-enter. The lease was never executed, but the tenant entered, and built, at considerable expense, and continued in possession up to his decease in 1843. Up to that time the rent was paid regularly, but the covenants to repair and insure were neglected. Upon the decease of the lessee, dispute arose in the Ecclesiastical Court as to the right to representation to his estate, and probate was not granted until 1847. During these four years the rent was in arrear, and the covenants to insure and repair were totally neglected. The lessor threatened to bring ejectment. A bill was filed to restrain the ejectment, and to have a specific performance of the agreement of 1814:—Held, first, that inasmuch as the lessor, if the lease had been formally executed in 1814, would now have had a right to determine it for breach of covenant, the court would not decree a specific performance of it; secondly, that the disputes in the Ecclesiastical Court, as to the right of succession to the lessee, did not afford sufficient grounds for relief. Gregory v. Wilson, 16 Jur. 304.

The plaintiff claimed, as assignee of four plots of land comprised in a building agreement, that the defendant might be ordered to execute to him separate leases of the plots. It was a necessary part of the plaintiff's case to shew that the houses on the plots of land had been roofed in at the time when he acquired the title, and the statement of claim contained an allegation that the plaintiff's predecessor in title had roofed in the houses by March, 1887. The defendant did not deny this or traverse the allegation by his defence, but alleged, as grounds for resisting the plaintiff's claim, that there had been breaches of the conditions in the building agreement under which the plaintiff's predecessor in title held with regard to building and payment of rent. At the trial of the action it came out in the evidence that small portions of the roofs of the four houses were not thoroughly completed:—Held, that plaintiff was entitled to judgment on the facts. Lowther v. Heaver, 58 L. J., Ch. 482; 41 Ch. D. 248; 60 L. T. 310; 37 W. R. 465—C. A.

Usual Covenant.]—Where there is an agreement for a lease, of such a nature that, in the usual course, a certain covenant would be introduced in it, and the intended lessee has done that which would be a breach of such covenant, he cannot compel the specific performance of the agreement. Tunno v. Lewis, 1 L. J., Ch. 177.

Form of Decree where Breach Doubtful.]—A landlord had in 1827 agreed to grant his tenant a lease, but none had been granted though the tenant had been in possession. On a bill by the tenant for specific performance, the landlord set up by way of defence that the tenant had committed waste. The court directed the lease to be executed and antedated, and the question of waste to be tried at law. Poyntz v. Fortune, 27 Beav. 393. S. P., Browne v. Sligo (Marquis), 10 Ir. Ch. R. 1.

An agreement was made between A. and B. that A. should grant to B. a lease of a farm, upon the same terms as those contained in a lease already granted by A. to C., and that B. should be at liberty to repair and alter the farm buildings, and that A. should find or pay for the requisite materials. B. was let into possession, and paid rent for some years, but no lease was granted, and ultimately he filed a bill for specific performance, and an account of and payment for materials. A. objected that B. had committed breaches of covenant, which would have entitled A. to determine the lease. The court, being of opinion that it was doubtful whether A. could, under the circumstances of the case, have determined the lease for breaches of covenant, decreed specific performance, but ordered the lease to be antedated, so that the question might be tried at law. Lillie v. Legh, 3 De G. & J. 204.

The court does not refuse specific performance of an agreement to grant a lease, because of an alleged breach of covenant, unless the breach is clear, but directs the lease to be antedated, in order that further inquiry may be made. Blachett v. Bates, 2 Hem. & M. 270; 34 L. J., Ch. 515; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 500; 12 L. T. 844; 13 W. R. 736.

Where an award directs a lease to be made containing certain specific covenants, and it is alleged, on the part of the defendants, that the plaintiff has acted in contravention of the terms of the covenant since the date of the award, the court will, if the case is at all doubtful, order the leases to be antedated, so as to enable the defendant to rely on the alleged breaches at law. Ib.

If there has been a breach of an agreement for a lease, or what would have amounted to a breach of the covenants which ought to have been introduced into the lease had it been granted, which would have worked a forfeiture, and that is clearly made out, a specific performance will not be decreed; but if there is a conflict of evidence as to whether any breach has been committed, the proper decree, on a suit for specific performance, is to direct the lease to be dated at a time antecedently to the alleged breach, and to require from the plaintiff an undertaking to agree, in any action, that the lease was executed on that day. Rankin v. Lay, 2 De G. F. & J. 65; 29 L. J., Ch. 734; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 685; 8 W. R. 591.

Nature of Breach.]—The breach must be wilful and deliberate, and such a breach as would work a forfeiture, and render the lease void, had it been granted. Ib.

Where a specific performance of an agreement for a lease is refused, on the ground of waste, or acts amounting to breach of ordinary covenants in a lease, the defence can only prevail on clear evidence of gross breaches of the covenant, without any waiver or acquiescence by the landlord. Pain v. Coombs, 3 Sm. & G. 449; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 307.

Specific performance refused of an agreement to grant a lease for a term expired before the hearing of the cause, the acts of waste committed during the possession of the premises not entitling the plaintiff, in an action on the covenants inserted in the lease, to more than nominal damages. Nesbitt v. Meyer, 1 Swanst. 223; 1 Wils. Ch. 97; 5 W. R. 340.

By Under-lessee.]—A. agreed to grant a lease to B., who knew that A. held under a leasehold title:—Held, that B. must be deemed to have known that A. could only grant a lease with such restrictions as those under which he held. Lewis v. Bond, 18 Beav. 85.

Specific performance of an under-lease refused, the intended lessee having, with notice, committed acts which would have been a forfeiture of the original lease. Ib.

Act amounting to Nuisance to Landlord.]—Specific performance of agreement to grant building lease decreed generally, although plaintiff had erected brewhouse on land, injurious to lessor's property. Gordon v. Smart, 1 Sim. & S. 66; 1 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 36.

xii. Tenancy from Year to Year.

The court refused to enforce specific performance of an agreement for a mere tenancy from year to year. Clayton v. Illingworth, 10 Hare, 451.

xiii. Delay.

Specific performance of agreement to grant lease, refused, plaintiff having delayed to file his bill for more than two years since notice from defendant that he would not perform contract on account of plaintiff's non-fulfilment of his part thereof. Heapy v. Hill, 2 Sim. & S. 29.

Specific performance of agreement to take lease for purpose of trade refused, lessor having long delayed to make title and give possession. Parker v. Frith, 1 Sim. & S. 199.

F., tenant for life, with a power of leasing for thirty-one years, demises in 1749 for three lives to his attorney. M., his son, tenant in tail, four years afterwards, in consideration of 20*l.* executes an agreement, which was indorsed on the part of the lease in the attorney's hands, to confirm the demise, and renew for a further term of three lives. Eleven years after this F. dies, and the articles are then registered. The last of the three lives died in 1817, and the representative of the attorney files a bill for the specific performance of the son's agreement:—Held, that the case was too suspicious to come within the principle of specific performance, and the length of time elapsed under circumstances which did not imply acquiescence. Blakeney v. Baggott, 1 Dow (N.S.) 405; 3 Bli. (N.S.) 237.

A. conveys or assigns his interest in lands to B., in consideration, among other things, that B. shall make or give a lease back again to A. of half a portion of the lands, and in consideration also of a loan of 200*l.* by B. to A. B. covenants to execute the lease accordingly, subject to the repayment of 200*l.*, for which B. has a judgment; no lease actually made, but A. remains in possession of his portion upon his equitable title; B. lends further sums of money to A., and obtains judgment for these sums, and then conveys the lands, and assigns judgment to C. C. issues writs of fi. fa. on the judgments, and in 1781 procures a sale by the sheriff of A.'s equitable interest, and on ejectment brought on the demises of the purchaser and of C., A. is turned out of possession. A., in 1782, files his bill in chancery for relief and execution of a lease to him according to the agreement, but from embarrassment in his circumstances does not further prosecute the suit till 1801; no steps taken between 1782 and 1801 to dismiss the bill. In 1808 the bill dismissed below, but House of Lords reversed decree, and decreed specific performance. Moore v. Blake, 4 Dow, 280. Reversing 1 Ball & B. 62.

A., by an instrument, demised, or agreed to demise, lands to B. for three lives, not named, at a yearly rent, and further agreed that leases should be perfected at the request of either party. As an essential part of the contract, the nomination of the lives, was wanting, this cannot operate as a lease for three lives, nor as a lease for the life of the tenant, that not being the intention of the grantor, but merely as an executory agreement for a lease. B., being in possession under the agreement, on his marriage conveyed his interest in the lands to trustees in strict settlement. A. afterwards served an ejectment for non-payment of rent on B., but not on the trustees or the eldest son of the marriage, and recovered the lands, which he then leased to C., and sold the reversion. Neither B. nor the trustees ever attempted to recover the possession. A bill on the death of B., twenty years after, by the eldest son of the marriage, and for a specific execution of the agreement, dismissed, as the title of the plaintiff, after such lapse of time, and from the circumstances, could not be sustained against a bonâ fide purchaser of the legal interest, accompanied by twenty years' possession. Pentland v. Stokes, 2 Ball & B. 68.

Under an agreement to let a house for three years at a yearly rent, by which the landlord agreed, at the request of the tenant, to grant him a lease for a term from the expiration of the three years' occupancy, at the same rent, the tenant undertaking to keep the house in repair: —Held, that the tenant is entitled, four years after the expiration of the three years' occupancy, to have the agreement for a lease specifically performed, and neither an application made by him two years previously for a lease at a reduced rent (which was refused), nor an application to the landlord for payment of an amount expended in repairs (which has been allowed the tenant), amounts to a waiver of his rights, though the tenant is bound to refund the cost of the repairs. Moss v. Barton, 35 Beav. 197; L. R. 1 Eq. 574; 13 L. T. 623.

Specific performance of an agreement for a lease decreed, after a refusal by the tenant to execute any lease and a delay of six months, though the agreement was to execute a lease on a given day, the landlord having at first insisted on an untenable term, and never prepared or tendered a lease to the tenant according to the usual practice. Burke v. Smyth, 9 Ir. Eq. R. 135; 3 Jo. & Lat. 193.

Possession and Payment of Rent.] — The doctrine of laches does not apply to a bill for the specific performance of an agreement for a lease, which is in point of fact executed, both parties being from the time of the contract in possession of the benefits thereby given them. Clarke v. Moore, 1 Jo. & Lat. 723; 7 Ir. Eq. R. 515.

In cases between landlord and tenant, where the tenant has been in possession under the agreement, and has not been required by the landlord to take out a lease, lapse of time is not a good defence to a suit for specific performance. Curtan v. Bury, 10 Ir. Ch. R. 387.

An agreement to take a lease, the landlord to put the premises in repair. The tenant took possession, and on his application the repairs were made after delay. A lease was then tendered containing certain covenants in the landlord's lease:—Held, that the delay in doing the repairs, and the tenant's previous ignorance of the covenants, would not excuse him from accepting the lease. Nash v. Cochrane, 3 Jur. 973.

In 1855 A. agreed with B. that, "in the event of B. marrying his daughter," he would grant him a ninety-nine years' lease of a shop at C., "should he at any time require it," at a rent of 30*l.* per annum. B. was let into possession of the shop and married A.'s daughter, and duly paid the rent to A. and his assigns until March, 1874, when his then landlord gave him notice to quit. On a bill for specific performance of the agreement:—Held, that B. by his laches and his acts had precluded himself from the relief to which he might have been entitled. Davenport v. Walker, 34 L. T. 168.

The fixed rule of equity that specific performance of an agreement for a lease will not be granted after a long lapse of time will not be relaxed merely on account of possession and payment of rent during the whole of such time. Powis v. Dynevor (Lord), 35 L. T. 940.

In 1844 the plaintiff verbally agreed with the agent of a predecessor in title of D., to build a shop, and hold the same on lease at a rate of 5*s.* per annum. The plaintiff built a shop and occupied and paid rent for it up to the time of action brought, but no lease was executed, nor were negotiations for a lease had. In 1876 the plaintiff sued D. for specific performance:—Held, that specific performance ought not to be decreed. Ib.

At the expiration in July, 1857, of a lease under which by assignment he was in possession of property, B. signed an agreement to accept from A. a new lease for thirty-one years, at the same rent as was reserved by the old lease, and payment of 600*l.* on the day fixed for completion (1st August, 1857), with interest if the lease should not be completed on the day fixed. A draft lease was sent to B. for his approval, but was not returned, and no steps were taken by A. to press for completion. B. remained in possession and paid rent, but no payment of the 600*l.* or interest was ever made or demanded. In 1871 A. died. On a bill by her legal personal representative:—Held, that as B.'s possession and payment of rent must be referred to the new agreement, and not to a holding over after the expiration of the former lease, the lapse of time did not operate as a bar to specific performance, which was accordingly decreed, with interest on the 600*l.* from the 1st of August, 1857. Shepheard v. Walker, 44 L. J., Ch. 648; L. R. 20 Eq. 659; 33 L. T. 47; 23 W. R. 903.

Expense Incurred by Tenant.]—A tenant having entered into possession of a farm, and expended moneys, under an agreement that the landlord would grant a lease for twenty-one years and make such improvements and repairs as he and the landlord should jointly agree:—Held, that the stipulation as to repairs was not of the essence of the agreement; and that the impossibility of the strict performance of that stipulation, in consequence of the death of the landlord, was no sufficient reason for allowing a demurrer to a bill for specific performance, where the tenant had so long a possession, and had expended money on the faith of the agreement. Norris v. Jackson, 3 Giff. 396; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 930; 5 L. T. 576; 10 W. R. 228.

New Tenant Substituted.]—In August, 1856, the plaintiff agreed to let a house to the defendant for seven, fourteen or twenty-one years, the defendant to keep the premises in repair, and paint and paper as therein mentioned, and the defendant was let into possession. In 1859 the plaintiff agreed with the defendant to accept W. as tenant in his room upon the same terms, the defendant guaranteeing the rent. W. had just before this period been let into possession by the defendant, and he paid rent till 1863. In that year the defendant gave a notice to determine his tenancy at the end of the first seven years. W. and the defendant having both denied their liability to paint and paper according to the terms of the original agreement, the plaintiff in November, 1864, filed a bill to compel the defendant to accept a lease:—Held, that the defendant could not be compelled to accept a lease. Moore v. Marrable, L. R. 1 Ch. 217; 13 L. T. 725.

The agreement of 1859 was substitutionary for the agreement of 1856, and although the plaintiff, if he had within a reasonable time called upon the defendant to procure W. to take the lease, would probably, upon the defendant failing to do so, have been entitled to call for performance of the original agreement, he was not so entitled after the time which had elapsed. Ib.

Time Essence of Contract.]—An agreement to let lands contained a clause that the tenants should repair the dwelling-house within two years, and put a new roof on it; the landlord to bear one-half of the expense, the tenants to execute and complete a lease, at their own expense, within six months from the date of the agreement:—Held, that in equity time was not of the essence of the contract. Curtan v. Bury, 10 Ir. Ch. R. 387.

The plaintiff agreed to take certain lands from the defendant, provided the defendant took a store consisting of two parts from the plaintiff for five years, "this agreement to be carried into effect before the 1st of April next, or to be annulled." The plaintiff took possession of the lands, and the defendant of part of the store, but the plaintiff was unable to give possession of the other part until May, and on the 2nd of April the defendant quits. Semble, the time would not have prevented the specific execution of the agreement. Molloy v. Egan, 7 Ir. Eq. R. 590.

—— Distinction between Purchase and Lease for Lives.]—Distinction between a purchase and a lease for lives. As time is not essential in a purchase, any delay may be compensated, either by receipt of the rents and profits, or, in case a title cannot be made out, by interest on the deposit; but in a lease depending on lives where time is most essential, delay does not admit of any compensation. Ormond v. Anderson, 2 Ball & B. 370; 12 R. R. 103.

Mining Lease.]—In contracts for the lease of working mines, time, though not named, is, from the fluctuating nature of the property, considered as of the essence of the contract; and the intended lessee may therefore fix a reasonable time for completion, and, on the lessor's default, may rescind the contract. Macbryde v. Weeks, 22 Beav. 533; 2 Jur (N.S.) 918.

A., on the 4th of October, contracted to grant a mining lease to B., and no time was mentioned for completion. On the 10th of December, B. gave notice to A., that unless he completed the contract within a month, he would rescind the contract:—Held, on A.'s default, that B. was justified in giving the notice; that the time was reasonable; and a bill by A. for specific performance was dismissed with costs, although there were matters essential for the completion, which did not depend on A. but on third parties. Ib.

Lands were conveyed to a trustee in trust to grant a lease of the mines under the same to certain persons for forty-two years, and at the request of the lessees made at any time thereafter to grant a further lease of the same mines for twenty-one years, to commence at the expiration of the first term, the first lease to contain a covenant for renewal or the second term. The lease of forty-two years was made accordingly. Shortly before the expiration of the first term the lessees applied for the renewal, which was refused. No proceedings were taken to enforce the performance of the covenant or trust for upwards of two years after the refusal:—Held, that so far as the title to renewal depended on the covenant, the delay or acquiescence would be a defence in equity. Walker v. Jeffreys, 1 Hare, 341; 11 L. J., Ch. 209; 6 Jur. 336.

In 1850 the defendant agreed to grant the plaintiff a lease of a coal mine. Three months after the defendant gave notice to the plaintiff that, unless he commenced working in a month, he should consider the agreement abandoned. Two years after, the plaintiff entered and commenced working, but was resisted by the defendant; the working however proceeded, but was abandoned in 1853. Five years afterwards, the plaintiff attempted to resume the work, and filed a bill for specific performance. It was dismissed with costs on the ground of delay. Sharp v. Wright, 28 Beav. 150.

The specific day for the commencement of a lease, which a tenant had an option of taking, being uncertain:—Held, although the lease was not applied for until nearly eight years after the date of the agreement and after a notice to quit, that the tenant was entitled to the lease, and that it was to commence from the time when the tenancy commenced. Ib.

A plaintiff filed a bill for specific performance of an agreement to grant a lease of certain coal mines, entered into on the 28th February, 1872. A dispute arose as to the terms of the agreement, and on the 26th September, 1872, the defendant gave the plaintiff notice that, unless he acquiesced in his views, he should rescind the contract, and on the 29th October following, the defendant stated his intention of abiding by that notice. On the 4th November, 1872, the plaintiff's solicitor wrote to the defendant's solicitor that he was instructed to file a bill for specific performance of the contract. The bill was not filed until the 2nd April, 1873:—Held, that the effect of the notice of September, 1872, was to put the parties at arms' length, and that the plaintiff, if he intended to insist on his rights, ought to have proceeded at once, and that the delay in filing the bill was fatal to the application for specific performance. Huxham v. Llewellyn, 28 L. T. 577; 21 W. R. 570.

Lease from Ecclesiastical Corporation.]—Time is, to a great extent, of the essence of contracts entered into with an ecclesiastical corporation. Therefore where A. agreed to take a concurrent lease of a dean and chapter, and to pay the fine in January, but was not ready with the money in March following, a bill filed by him for a specific performance was dismissed with costs. Carter v. Ely (Dean), 7 Sim. 211 ; 4 L. J., Ch. 241.

xiv. Repudiation of Agreement.

By Conduct.]—Specific performance of an agreement for a lease will not be decreed in favour of a tenant, who shews by his conduct and representations that he has abandoned the agreement. Garrett v. Besborough (Earl), 2 Dr. & Wal. 441 ; 2 Ir. Eq. R. 180.

xv. Refusal to Execute Lease.

Refusal of tenant to execute a lease tendered as satisfied with, not as repudiating, the agreement, is no ground for refusing him a specific performance. Gourlay v. Somerset (Duke), 19 Ves. 429 ; 13 R. R. 234.

Waiver of Option to take Lease.]—A tenant under an agreement, with an option of taking a lease :—Held, not to have waived the option by declining to take a lease when asked so to do, no step being taken to determine the tenancy. Hersey v. Giblett, 23 L. J., Ch. 818 ; 18 Beav. 174.

xvi. Expiration of Term.

Whether specific performance of an agreement to grant a lease, will in any case be decreed after the expiration of the term, quære. Nesbitt v. Meyer, 1 Swanst. 223 ; 1 Wils. Ch. 97.

Bill for specific performance of a contract to make a lease to the defendant, dismissed, the plaintiff having after answer given a notice to quit according to a proviso for determining the lease. Western v. Perrin, 3 Ves. & B. 197.

The term in an agreement for the lease of a house expired after a bill was filed for specific performance, but before the hearing of the cause. The bill was dismissed without costs, on the ground that the plaintiff should have moved the court to advance the cause. De Brassac v. Martyn, 9 L. T. 287 ; 11 W. R. 1026.

A lessor agreed with the lessee to grant a lease of certain specified property if within a specified time the lessee erected certain specified buildings, the time having nearly expired and the buildings not having been begun :—Held, at the suit of the lessor, that the court could not decree specific performance of this contract. Female Orphan Asylum v. Waterlow, 16 W. R. 1102.

The plaintiff, under an agreement not under seal with the defendant for a lease of a house and land, and the right to sport during the term over other lands, entered into possession, and enjoyed the right of sporting in accordance with the terms of the agreement. Towards the end of the term the coverts on the lands on which the plaintiff had leave to sport were destroyed by P., who was a tenant under the defendant of part of such lands, and their agent as to the remainder. Upon a bill filed for the execution of a lease by deed for the purpose of enabling the plaintiff to bring an action for damages, and praying for an injunction, and for an inquiry as to damages in lieu of specific performance :—Held, the term having then expired, that the plaintiff had had the enjoyment of all that he had contracted for, and that the court would not decree the execution of the lease, and the bill was dismissed accordingly. Turnor v. Clowes, 20 L. T. 214 ; 17 W. R. 274.

In 1841 a long lease of a coal-mine, pursuant to an agreement, was made by O. to a trustee for a joint-stock company, at a certain fixed rent, and a taleage rent ; the lease was determinable every third year, upon the lessee giving a year's notice. The company worked the mine for a short time, and then ceased to work it. The company was ordered to be wound up in 1850, and in 1852 the official manager, protesting against the validity of the lease as binding upon the company, gave notice to terminate it the following year. Upon a bill filed in 1853 by the party claiming under O. against the company, seeking to have it declared that ten years' arrears formed an equitable debt from the company, and that the company was bound to make compensation for all breaches of covenant :—Held, that looking at the bill as a bill for specific performance of an agreement to take the lease, no relief in the nature of specific performance could be granted, the plaintiff not having taken any steps until just before the expiration of the term. Walters v. Northern Coal Mining Co., 5 De G. M. & G. 629 ; 25 L. J., Ch. 633 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1 ; 4 W. R. 140.

The case must be very special indeed which should induce the court to decree specific performance of an agreement for a lease after the stipulated term has expired. Ib.

Looking at the bill not as one of specific performance, but for the recovery of the rent as an equitable debt due from the company in respect of their past occupation :—Held, that there was no authority for enforcing such an equity. Ib.

The circumstance that there is a relation of an equitable character subsisting between the lessee and the actual occupier cannot give any equitable rights to any person who claims by a title paramount both to the trustee and the cestuis que trustent. Ib.

Recovery of Rent or Damages.]—Where the defendant had agreed to take of the plaintiff a lease of tithes at a certain rent, and had entered into possession under the agreement, and had let the rent fall into arrear ; a bill for specific performance having been filed before the expiration of the stipulated term, but that term having expired before a decree could be obtained :—Held, that the plaintiff was nevertheless entitled to recover in equity the arrears of rent, according to the terms of the agreement, though specific performance could not be granted. Wilkinson v. Torkington, 2 Y. & Coll. 726 ; 7 L. J., Ex. Eq. 30.

A sub-lessee having been evicted on the expiration of the term granted by his lease sued on a covenant to grant an additional term ; but the term covenanted to be granted having nearly expired at the time of the decree instead of a specific performance, an account in the nature of an inquiry quantum damnificatus was directed. M'Nulty v. Hamill, Beat. 541.

e. By what Persons.

Assignee.]—The assignee of an agreement to grant a lease is entitled to specific performance against the lessor, but only upon the terms of giving him the benefit of the personal liability of the party to the agreement. Dowell v. Dew,

1 Y. & Coll. C.C. 345 ; 12 L. J., Ch. 158 ; 7 Jur. 117.

A. agreed to demise certain premises to B., who undertook to build houses thereon, at the rate of so many in each year. A. was to grant a separate lease of each house to B., as soon as it was covered in ; but if the houses were not built within a specified time, A. had a power of re-entry on the demised part of the premises. B. subsequently contracted with C. for the building of some of the houses, and C. was to have two of them conveyed to him as a payment ; A. agreeing, by letter, to grant to C. such leases as B. would be entitled to under the first-mentioned contract. C. had fulfilled his contract, but B. had not satisfied the condition of his contract with A., who had in consequence recovered by ejectment the two houses which were to have formed C.'s remuneration. The bill sought from A. a specific performance of the agreement to grant leases of the two houses to C. And upon a motion for an injunction to restrain A. from granting leases to any person except the plaintiff, the equity of it was discussed ; but held, that the plaintiff had no equity against the original lessor ; and the only right the plaintiff had was, according to A.'s engagement, to such a lease as B. would be entitled to claim. Anon., 1 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 25.

Reversioner.] — Where lessees corresponded with the tenant for life for a new lease which he had not under the will power to grant, the reversioner, though able to grant the lease, was held not entitled to enforce specific performance. Ricketts v. Bell, 1 De G. & Sm. 335 ; 11 Jur. 918.

Trustee for Sale.]—The court will not enforce an agreement for an under-lease at the suit of trustees for sale of a leasehold, as such an agreement is primâ facie inconsistent with the trust, and as, though there may be circumstances to justify it, the court cannot enter into consideration of them in a suit to which the cestuis que trustent are not parties. Evans v. Jackson, 8 Sim. 217 ; 6 L. J., Ch. 8.

Sub-lessee.]— A lessee of a house agreed to sub-let two rooms for a part of his term, taking a fine ; he afterwards became bankrupt and his trustee disclaimed the lease. The landlord commenced an action of ejectment against the sub-lessee. The sub-lessee filed his bill to restrain the action, and to compel the landlord to grant him a lease according to the terms of his agreement with the first lessee. The provisions of the agreement differed from those of the lease :—Held, that the sub-lessee had no equity to enforce the provisions of the agreement against the landlord. Taylor v. Gillott, 44 L. J., Ch. 740 ; L. R. 20 Eq. 682 ; 32 L. T. 795 ; 24 W. R. 65.

Felon.]—The court will not execute an agreement to grant a lease to a man who had committed a felony. Willingham v. Joyce, 3 Ves. 169. See 8 R. R. 372, n.

Insolvent.]—Insolvency is a good ground upon which the court will refuse specific performance of an agreement to grant a lease ; but there must be proof of general insolvency ; and a particular default in the payment of rent to the landlord of the premises last occupied by the person contracting for the lease will not disentitle him to the specific performance of the contract, when there is the testimony of unexceptionable witnesses to his responsibility. Neale v. Mackenzie, 1 Keen, 474.

The subsequent insolvency and continuing embarrassment of the tenant are good grounds for refusing specific performance of an agreement for a lease, especially if there has been also laches. Plunket v. Dease, 10 Ir. Eq. R. 124.

Plea to a bill for specific performance of an agreement for a lease to the plaintiff, and an injunction against an ejectment, &c., that the defendant had, since the bill filed, taken the benefit of an insolvent act, overruled. De Minckwitz v. Udney, 16 Ves. 466.

Upon contract for lease, the solvency or insolvency of the tenant is an objection of weight, depending upon the circumstances ; upon that and other circumstances, an injunction against an ejectment by the landlord was dissolved. Buckland v. Hall, 8 Ves. 92 ; 7 R. R. 1.

The insolvency of the intended lessee is a good ground of objection to a bill brought by him for the specific performance of a contract to renew a lease. Price v. Assheton, 1 Y. & Coll. 441.

In a suit for specific performance of an agreement for a lease the defendant may, by his answer, put in issue any fact tending to shew the insolvency of the plaintiff, however it may impeach the plaintiff's respectability ; but mere imputations on the moral character of the plaintiff are impertinent. Pearson v. Knapp, 1 Myl. & K. 312.

Bill for specific performance of parol agreement to grant farm lease, with usual covenants of neighbourhood, and injunction to prevent ejectment, plaintiff having taken possession. Upon answer, stating insolvency of plaintiff, and various breaches of agreement, during five years' possession, the injunction was continued, on undertaking to give judgment in ejectment, go to commission, and set down cause for next term, paying rent into court. Boardman v. Mostyn, 6 Ves. 467.

An insolvent had previously entered into a contract for a lease at a rent. No creditors' assignee was appointed :—Held, that he could not sue for a specific performance of the contract. McNally v. Gradwell, 16 Ir. Ch. R. 512.

The court will not decree the specific performance of a contract for a lease to an insolvent tenant. Ib.

—— Rights of Tenant's Assignee.]—It is no defence to a bill filed against a landlord for specific performance of an agreement for a farming lease, by a person to whom the benefit of the agreement has been assigned, that the party with whom the landlord contracted has become insolvent, provided the assignee is solvent, and in a condition to enter into the usual covenants, and there is no evidence that the contract was entered into upon considerations personal to the assignor. Crosby v. Tooke, 1 Myl. & K. 431 ; 2 L. J., Ch. 83.

When a landlord agrees to grant a lease to A., his executors and assigns, upon certain conditions, and A. assigns his interest in the contract to B., and then becomes bankrupt, B., on performing the conditions, has a right to enforce the agreement specifically, notwithstanding his assignor's bankruptcy ; and this right is not affected by a proviso, that, in case of the bankruptcy of A., the landlord shall have power to re-enter and sell the benefit of the contract and the premises, and hold the proceeds, subject to his own claims, for the use of A.'s estate. Morgan v. Rhodes, 1 Myl. & K. 435.

Though bankruptcy supersedes an agreement not to assign without licence, that has been held only in favour of general creditors, and where there is no actual lease, but it rests in agreement to grant a lease, an individual cannot have a specific performance in opposition to such provision, and it is very disputable whether the general assignees could obtain it, even if there were no such provision. Weatherall v. Geering, 12 Ves. 504; 8 R. R. 369.

Agreement by Trustee for Insolvent under Secret Trust.]—A., being in insolvent circumstances, suffers another person to become the apparent owner of his farm (though under a secret trust from him). A. shall not have against the landlord a specific execution of an agreement made by him with the trustee, the landlord supposing the trustee to have been the rightful owner, and confiding in his solvency. O'Herlihy v. Hedges, 1 Sch. & Lef. 123; 9 R. R. 23.

The interest which a third party may have against the specific performance of a contract, may preclude the execution of it, as between trustees and cestui que trust; as, where an insolvent tenant made over his lease to another, who treated for a renewal under a secret agreement, in trust for the original tenant. Featherstonhaugh v. Fenwick, 17 Ves. 313; 11 R. R. 77.

f. Against what Persons.

Commissioners of Woods and Forests.]—The commissioners of woods and forests are not, under the 7 Geo. 4, c. 77, entitled to sue or liable to be sued for the specific performance of contracts entered into with and by them. Nurse v. Seymour (Lord), 13 Beav. 254.

The commissioners were authorised, with the consent of the lords of the treasury, to demise, or, previous to any demise, to contract to demise. The bill alleged that the commissioners having first obtained the consent required, determined to demise, and afterwards contracted to demise to the plaintiff, and prayed a specific performance:—Held, on demurrer, that the bill could not be sustained. Ib.

Corporation.]—If regular corporate resolution has been passed, and upon faith of it expenditure has been incurred, the court will compel corporation to make a legal grant, in pursuance of a resolution, although not under corporate seal. Marshall v. Queenborough Corporation, 1 Sim. & S. 520; 24 R. R. 220.

A proposal was made by D. to a corporation, to take out a lease of part of their lands, at a certain rent. The proposal was accepted, and the acceptance entered on the corporation books. This was immediately communicated to D., who soon after took possession, and paid the first year's rent, when due. He then refused to complete his contract by taking out the lease:—Held, in a suit for specific performance, that there were sufficient acts of part performance to take the case out of the general rule, by which corporations can contract only under their common seal. Steevens' Hospital v. Dyas, 15 Ir. Ch. R. 405; 10 L. T. 882.

Married Woman.]—A married woman, with the concurrence and in the presence of her husband, signed an agreement in writing to grant a lease. At the date of the agreement it was believed by all parties that she was entitled to two-thirds of the property for her separate use, and that the remaining one-third belonged to her brother in India, whose concurrence it was represented that she could procure. It was soon afterwards discovered that the wife was entitled to one-fourth only for her separate use; that to another fourth she was entitled absolutely; that another fourth had belonged to a deceased sister of the wife; and that the remaining fourth belonged to the brother in India. The fourth which had belonged to the sister was purchased by the husband soon after the state of the title was discovered. Upon a bill for specific performance against husband and wife:—Held, that there could be no decree against her in personam; and that her agreement did not bind the husband as to the interests in the property which he had at the date of the agreement, or which he afterwards acquired. Aylett v. Ashton, 1 Myl. & C. 105; 5 L. J., Ch. 71.

Infant.]—Tenant for life agreeing to grant lease dies. Next tenant in tail being his son, an infant, and father having a right to appoint testamentary guardian, which he does, the agreement was carried into execution against the son during his minority, it being first modified by court to advantage of son. Brummell v. Clavering, 3 Swanst. 690.

—— Costs.]—A., having agreed to grant a lease to B., died before granting it, leaving an infant heir. B. filed a bill against the infant for specific performance, which was decreed:—Held, that each party should bear his own costs. Longinotto v. Morss, 26 L. T. 828.

A lessor by his will subsequent to the date of the lease devised the property to his infant sons. The right of the plaintiff to maintain the suit was not disputed; the only question in the cause related to the costs:—Held, that the parties should abide their own costs. White v. Beck, Ir. R. 6 Eq. 63; 20 W. R. 275.

Tenant in Common.]—One of two tenants in common of an estate agreed to grant a lease of the mines under it:—Held, that the lessee was entitled to a decree for specific performance, and for a partition of the estate. Heaton v. Dearden, 16 Beav. 147.

Remainderman.]—A written proposal to take lands at a rent of 1*l.* 5*s.* per acre, for three lives or thirty-one years, was sent by F. to a tenant for life. He replied that he had not power to execute such a lease, but "if you choose to take a lease in the usual way, I will allow you 20*l.* to get up a cottage and a lease for your own life." F., who had been previously in possession of the lands, remained in possession, but continued to pay the rent previously payable, which was less than 1*l.* 5*s.* per acre, and never made any claim for the 20*l.*:—Held, that there was not on the proposal, answer, and subsequent occupation, a sufficient agreement to bind the remainderman. O'Fay v. Burke, 8 Ir. Ch. R. 511.

F. entered into an agreement for a lease with a tenant for life, which was not binding on the remainderman. In March, 1854, the tenant for life being dead, F. communicated the contract to the agent for the remainderman, requesting the grant of a lease, which the remainderman refused to execute. In April, 1854, the agent informed F. that he had been directed to serve notices to quit on all the tenants, but that if F. would send a proposal to pay 1*l.* 5*s.* per acre (the rent reserved by the alleged agreement), he would not serve a notice on F. F. replied by setting out the agreement, and stating that he was not tenant from year to year, but saying that he left his case in the agent's hands for the present, "particularly as a lease will not be granted of any part of this property." After this F. expended large sums in the improvement of his farm. Notice to quit was served on F. in 1856: —Held, that F. was not entitled to specific performance, against the remainderman, of the invalid agreement. Ib.

Executors.]—A. leased premises to B. for ten years; and B. covenanted not to assign the premises without A.'s consent. A. agreed to grant to C. a lease for ten years, from the end of B.'s term, subject to the same covenants as were contained in B.'s lease. C. died before the lease was executed to him. A. filed a bill against C.'s executors (who admitted assets) for a specific performance of the agreement, and offered so to qualify the covenants of the lease as that the executors should be no further liable thereon than they would have been on the covenants which ought to have been entered into by the testator in case a proper lease had been made to him. Specific performance of the agreement decreed, with a reference to the master to settle the lease. Phillips v. Eccard, 5 Sim. 102.

Administrator — Insertion of Restrictive Covenant.]—The owner of six leasehold houses agreed in writing to let one of them, numbered 737, to a tradesman, the agreement saying nothing about a restrictive covenant. On the same day he also agreed to let another of the houses, numbered 735, to a grocer, and he agreed with him that the business of a grocer should not be carried on in any of the other five houses. Afterwards he contracted to sell the house No. 737 and a third house numbered 739, to T., also a grocer, and the agreement, which was in writing and dated the 6th of July, 1870, contained nothing about a restrictive covenant, but an under-lease was prepared and engrossed which did contain a covenant that the premises should not be used for a grocer's business. An appointment was made for the execution of the under-lease and counterpart on a certain day; but on the previous evening T. died suddenly intestate. It was stated, but on the plaintiff's evidence only, that after the written agreement of the 6th of July, and before T.'s death, T. verbally agreed to the insertion of the restriction, and there was other evidence that he was prepared to execute a counterpart of the engrossment. It having been shewn that the insertion of such a restriction would considerably diminish the value of the property:—Held, that the administrator of the intestate could not be compelled to execute a counterpart of a lease containing such a restriction. Snelling v. Thomas, 43 L. J., Ch. 506; L. R. 17 Eq. 303.

The written agreement of the 6th of July stipulated that the property should be bought "subject to the existing tenancies." The plaintiff alleged that on the 6th of July the lessee of the house No. 737 was under an agreement to consent to a restrictive covenant, and in proof of this the counterpart of a lease, bearing date the day before the agreement of the 6th of July, was produced, containing such a covenant. It having been shewn that the lease was antedated and was not in fact executed till after the 6th of July, 1870:—Held, that the administrator was not by this clause bound to execute the counterpart of a lease containing the restriction. Ib.

Person not in Possession.]—The contract for a present demise, by a person out of possession, not enforced in equity. Bayly v. Tyrrell, 2 Ball & B. 358; 12 R. R. 99.

Person not Party to Contract.]—A lessee of premises covenanted with his under-lessees of part, that in case he obtained an extension of the term or a renewal of his lease, he would give to the under-lessees a like renewal or extension of his under-term. A lease was subsequently taken from the ground landlord for an extended term in the name of a trustee for the separate use of the lessee's wife. The under-lessees filed a bill against the lessee, his wife, and her trustee, charging that the extended lease had been taken in a trustee's name, in order to defeat their rights under the lessee's covenant, and praying that the wife and her trustee might be decreed to grant an under-lease to the plaintiffs for the extended term:—Held, that the relief sought could not be given, as the suit was virtually one for specific performance against persons who were not parties to the original covenant or contract to renew the under-lease. Lumley v. Timms, 28 L. T. 157; 21 W. R. 319. S. C., 28 L. T. 608; 21 W. R. 494—L.JJ.

Mortgagee.]—A. made an equitable mortgage to B., and afterwards agreed to grant a lease to C., who had notice of the mortgage. B. afterwards purchased the equity of redemption with notice of C.'s agreement, and took a conveyance to himself:—Held, that B. was bound out of his whole interest to grant the lease to C. Smith v. Phillips, 1 Keen, 694; 6 L. J., Ch. 253.

A mortgagee of leaseholds with a power of sale, but no leasing power, entered into a written agreement to grant a lease for the whole term, at a rent and premium. It was the understanding of both parties, although not expressed in the agreement, that it was subject to the concurrence of the mortgagor being obtained. The latter refused to concur:—Held, that the intended lessee could not insist on the lease being granted to him, although he was willing to take it without the mortgagor's concurrence. Franklinski v. Ball, 33 Beav. 560; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 606; 10 L. T. 447; 12 W. R. 845.

Held, also, that it was not a case for giving damages in equity, and the bill was simply dismissed, without any express reservation of leave to bring an action. Ib.

After the date of an agreement for an under-lease the lessee mortgaged his lease by demise to parties who had notice of and took subject to the agreement:—Held, that the mortgagees were not proper parties to a suit for specific performance by the under-lessee. Long v. Bowring, 33 Beav. 585; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 668; 10 L. T. 683; 12 W. R. 972.

Agreement not to raise Rent or give Notice to Quit—Whether Binding on Lessor's Successors.] —The owner of premises agreed to let them by a written agreement, not under seal, specifying a certain rent, and containing the following clause: "I will agree not to increase your rent, and not to give you notice to quit, so long as you desire to continue my tenant":—Held, that this constituted a mere personal agreement between the landlord and tenant, so as not to bind a subsequent purchaser of the landlord's interest, with or without notice. Roberts v. Tregaskis, 38 L. T. 176. But see Kusel v. Watson, ante, col. 711.

Principal, where Contract made with Agent.]—A land agent has not authority to enter into contracts for leases. Mortal v. Lyons, 8 Ir. Ch. R. 112.

In a suit for specific performance, a contemporaneous letter of a deceased agent, with whom a contract for letting land was made, was admitted, to prove the terms of the contract, the tenant having relied on the acts of the agents to establish that he had authority to contract. Ib.

Decree for the execution of a lease to the plaintiffs, according to the terms of an agreement entered into between the two defendants; it appearing that one of the defendants who resisted the decree and claimed the benefit of the agreement for himself, acted as agent of the plaintiffs in negotiating the lease from his co-defendant, so that his own intention was immaterial; and the court being satisfied, moreover, upon the evidence, that the real object and understanding of the contracting parties was an agreement for a lease for the benefit of the plaintiffs. Taylor v. Salmon, 4 Myl. & C. 134.

—— Evidence of Agents' Authority.]—The authority of an agent to contract for a lease of lands need not be in writing. A proposal in writing for a lease to an agent, who has not power to enter into a contract for such lease, may be acknowledged by parol by the principal, so as to be binding on the principal, semble. Cullaghan v. Pepper, 2 Ir. Eq. R. 399.

Specific performance of a covenant to grant, on the death of the survivor of three cestui que vies, a new lease for one life, to be named within twelve calendar months after the death of the first of the said three lives, decreed; though the new life not named within the time prescribed by the covenant: the lessee being surprised by the misinformation of the lessor's agent, and therefore could not name the life at the proper time, and there being no difficulty in ascertaining the compensation; the lessor affected by letters written to lessee by his land agent and receiver of his rents, who had the key of his record chamber; that being sufficient to constitute him agent for the purpose, and to protect the tenants in their fair transactions with such agent. Firman v. Ormond (Lord), Beat. 347.

g. Insertion of Covenants.

Where intending Lessor dies.]—Parties having an equitable estate only agreed to grant a lease to A. B., which was to contain special covenants, both on the part of the lessors and lessee. The intended lessors died before the lease had been granted, and their interest became vested in bankrupt assignees and an heir-at-law, against whom a decree for specific performance was made:—Held, that receiving the benefit of the lessee's special covenants, the assignees and heir were themselves bound to the extent of their interest in the property, to enter into the special covenants which the original intended lessors had contracted to enter into. Page v. Broom, 3 Beav. 36.

Bankruptcy of Party.] — On a bill by the assignees for the specific performance of the agreement, the court decreed that the assignees were entitled to a lease according to the agreement, on personally entering into those covenants which the bankrupt, if solvent, would have been bound to enter into. Powell v. Lloyd, 2 Y. & J. 372; 31 R. R. 598.

Usual Covenants.]—See post, COVENANTS, I.

—— No Provision as to.]—Whether an agreement for a lease does or does not provide that the usual covenants shall be inserted in the lease, each party is entitled to have such covenants inserted as are incidental to and necessary to protect the rights given or reserved to each. Accordingly, under an agreement for a lease of minerals, the payments to be accelerated with an increase in the quantity of work, it was held that the lessor was impliedly entitled to have a right of entry and inspection secured to him by this lease. Blakesley v. Wieldon, 1 Hare, 179; 11 L. J., Ch. 164; 6 Jur. 54.

To Repair.]—Though the court will not ordinarily decree specific performance of an agreement to repair, it is the habit of the court to decree specific performance of agreements involving the execution of leases, or other instruments containing covenants to repair. Paxton v. Newton, 2 Sm. & Giff. 437.

Bill for a specific performance of articles, for a lease of lands in Norfolk, where by custom the landlords repair; but the rent reserved on this lease appearing to be under the value:—Decreed, the tenant should covenant to repair. Burrell v. Harrison, 2 Vern. 231; Pre. Ch. 25.

For Quiet Enjoyment.] — Under a contract in writing for a lease of land, containing no words shewing an intention to exclude the under surface and mines, which did not, in fact, belong to the intended lessor, but containing an agreement for an absolute covenant for quiet enjoyment:—Held, that the lessee was entitled to a lease, according to the contract, with an unqualified covenant for quiet enjoyment. Onions v. Cohen, 2 Hem. & M. 354; 34 L. J., Ch. 338; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 198; 12 L. T. 15.

Not to Assign.]—A. leased premises to B. for ten years, and B. covenanted not to assign the premises without A.'s consent. A. agreed to grant to C. a lease for ten years from the end of B.'s term, subject to the same covenants as were contained in B.'s lease. C. died before the lease was executed to him. A. filed a bill against C.'s executors (who admitted assets) for a specific performance of the agreement, and offered so to qualify the covenants of the lease as that the executors should be no further liable thereon, than they would have been on the covenants which ought to have been entered into by the testator, in case a proper lease had been made to him. Specific performance of the agreement decreed, with a reference to the Master to settle the lease. Phillips v. Everard, 5 Sim. 102.

Not to Sublet—Sublease already granted.]—An agreement to grant a lease subject to such clauses as the landlord chooses to insert will not be specifically performed, where the landlord insists on a clause for avoiding the lease on subletting, and the tenant has already sublet; and although the court would not allow him to specify unreasonable clauses, yet, semble, if he decline to name any, the agreement is too uncertain to be enforced. Plunket v. Dease, 10 Ir. Eq. R. 124.

Against Noxious Trade—Tannery.]—Specific performance of an agreement to take a lease of lands for the purpose of a tannery will not be enforced when the proposed lease contained the usual covenant against carrying on noxious trades, although the defendants had represented that they were about to conduct their business in a way which could not be open to objection on that score. Reeves v. Greenwich Tanning Co., 2 Hem. & M. 54.

That Rent be increased in Proportion to Property Tax—Covenant in Original Lease—New Lease.]—Where an agreement for a lease had been decreed to be specifically performed, and to contain the same covenants and provisions as were in the original lease, one of which covenants was, that so long as any tax upon property or income should be imposed upon the rents, the reserved rent of 690*l.* should be increased in proportion to the amount of the tax:—Held, that notwithstanding the provisions in the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 35, the new lease must contain the same covenants and provisions as were inserted in the original. Beadel v. Pitt, 11 Jur. (N.S.) 152; 11 L. T. 592; 13 W. R. 287.

B., in 1847, became lessee of two farms, held under a lease which expired in 1853. The tenant for life of three undivided parts, on the expiration of the term, agreed that B. should, as to them, continue as tenant from year to year at the same rent; but the owner in fee of one-fourth in possession, and of the three-fourths in remainder, refused to grant a lease, except at an increased rent, which B. agreed to pay, and he continued in possession. In March, 1856, the owner signed a memorandum, whereby he agreed to grant a new lease of his quarter share for fourteen years at the increased rent, to contain covenants and provisions similar to those in the expired lease. In 1861 the tenant for life of the three undivided parts died, and a negotiation was entered upon between B. and the owner for a lease of those three-fourths. The owner, in a letter of March, 1862, acknowledged that B. had a right to hold one-fourth of the property, but required rent at the higher rate for the other three-fourths, which B. agreed to pay. Disputes arose, and in February, 1863, the owner gave B. notice to quit:—Held, that the owner was bound by the memorandum of March, 1856, and that B. was entitled to a lease of the entirety of the farms for fourteen years, at the increased rent, with covenants similar to those contained in the expired lease. S. C., 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1194; 9 L. T. 318.

Rejection of Immaterial Conditions.]—Decree for specific performance of an agreement to grant a lease, rejecting one term (for such conditions, &c., as shall be judged proper by J.), and substituting a reference to the Master, the agency of J. not being of the essence of the contract. Gourlay v. Somerset (Duke), 19 Ves. 429; 13 R. R. 234.

Option of Determining Lease.]—Where lessees of way-leaves (colliery) entered into a correspondence with the tenant for life with power of leasing for a new lease, proposed as a renewal of the former, which contained a usual clause giving the lessees an option of determining the lease on notice, but the correspondence was silent as to the insertion of such a clause:—Held, that the lessees might reasonably have understood (whether it were mutual or not) that the new lease was to contain such a clause, and that they ought not to be compelled to accept the lease without it. Quære, in executory agreements, whether there is a presumption in favour of the insertion of such customary stipulation. Ricketts v. Bell, 1 De G. & Sm. 335; 11 Jur. 918.

And see post, COVENANTS.

5. OTHER REMEDIES AND PROCEEDINGS.

Mandamus.]—The 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 68, which gives an action for a mandamus "to fulfil any duty in the fulfilment of which the plaintiff is personally interested," does not apply to a personal contract, and, therefore, a declaration on an agreement for the lease of a house, claiming a writ of mandamus commanding the defendant to prepare a lease in accordance with the agreement, is bad on demurrer. Benson v. Paul, 6 El. & Bl. 273: 25 L. J., Q. B. 274; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 425; 4 W. R. 493.

Injunction—To restrain Ejectment of Tenant.]—Where proceedings were taken to enforce a legal right, consisting of the residue of a term of which three days only were unexpired, for the purpose of obtaining an improper advantage against a tenant in possession who had contracted for a new lease, the court restrained the proceedings by injunction. Buckland v. Gibbins, 32 L. J., Ch. 391; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 781; 8 L. T. 129; 11 W. R. 483.

—— To restrain Action for Alleged Trespass.]—A., relying upon a formal written agreement, in pursuance of which B. was to accept from him, on the terms therein mentioned (subject to an unsettled question relative to taxes, which was to be left to the decision of a third party), a lease of certain lands, possession of which had accordingly been taken, filed a bill for specific performance, and to compel B. to execute the lease. A few days after, B., adopting as the basis of their agreement a letter which he had written to A. during the progress of their treaty, brought an action against him for breach of contract and trespass, whereupon A., having amended his bill by denying as matter of fact the breaches complained of, and by stating that the alleged trespass consisted of making certain repairs on the premises, in execution of his part of the contract, moved to restrain B. from prosecuting the action:—Held, that A. was entitled to the interlocutory injunction sought. Blakeney v. Hardie, Ir. R. 7 Eq. 472.

Rescission of Contract—Defendant Absconding after Decree for Specific Performance.]—After a decree for specific performance of an agreement by defendant to take a lease and for payment by him of the costs and damages, he absconded:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to an order

Recovering for Work done under an Agreement.]—The plaintiff, in a letter, proposed to take a lease of the defendant's house for a term of years, if the defendant would carry out certain alterations. A correspondence and interviews followed, and it was ultimately agreed that the alterations should be made, the plaintiff to pay 75*l.* towards them. The plaintiff wished to have the drawing-room painted in a particular way, and the defendant consented that the plaintiff should send in his own workmen to paint it, which he accordingly did, and also laid down gaspipes with the defendant's consent. Ultimately the plaintiff was prevented from taking possession of the house owing to the default of the defendant in carrying out the alterations to be performed by him, and brought an action for breach of the agreement, with the common counts for work done. The correspondence disclosed no agreement sufficient to satisfy the Statute of Frauds:—Held, that the plaintiff could, under the common counts, recover for the value of the work done by the defendant's consent. Pulbrook v. Lawes, 45 L. J., Q. B. 178; 1 Q. B. D. 284; 34 L. T. 95.

Granting Lease when a Condition Precedent to Right of Action.]—Defendant agreed with plaintiffs to grant to them a lease of certain land for the term of five years, and to pay to them on the termination of the term, by efflluxion of time, or by notice, a certain sum in respect of fixtures to be put by them on the land during the term. No lease was granted, but the plaintiffs entered and occupied for five years, and during their occupation put certain fixtures on the land:—Held, that the granting of a lease by the defendant was not a condition precedent to the right of the plaintiffs to be paid in respect of the fixtures. Bowes v. Croll, 6 El. & Bl. 255; 4 W. R. 484.

By an agreement between the plaintiff and the defendant, the former agreed that upon payment to him by the latter of 1,440*l.*, by instalments on certain days, he would grant the defendant a lease of a certain parcel of land, and the defendant agreed to accept such lease and execute a counterpart. A declaration assigned for breach non-payment of the moneys:—Held, that the declaration disclosed a sufficient cause of action, the granting of a lease not being a condition precedent to the plaintiff's right to demand payment of the money. Baggallay v. Pettit, 5 C. B. (N.S.) 637; 28 L. J., C. P. 169; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 868.

Pleading — Variance.]—Where a declaration stated, that, in consideration that the plaintiff would procure S. to grant a lease to the defendant, the latter promised to pay the plaintiff 170*l.*, and it was proved that S., having agreed to grant a lease to the plaintiff, the latter originally undertook to assign it to the defendant for the consideration mentioned: but that afterwards a lease, to which the plaintiff was a party and assented, was granted immediately by S. to the defendant, in which the consideration to be paid by the latter to the plaintiff was not mentioned:—Held, that the evidence merely amounted to proof of the substitution of a new contract to procure a lease from S. to the defendant, in lieu of the original contract; and, consequently, that there was no variance. Boone v. Mitchell, 1 B. & C. 18; 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 25.

The plaintiff, in the first and third counts, alleged that, at the time of making the agreement with the defendant, he was possessed of a house, for a certain term of years, to expire on the 25th December, 1826; and, in the second, that he was entitled to the term, under and by virtue of a certain contract. The proof was, that the plaintiff was possessed for a term of only twelve years; and there was no contract or agreement under which he was at that time entitled to an extension of the term:—Held, that this was a variance, although it appeared that he had since become possessed of a lease to expire in December, 1826. Routledge v. Grant, 1 M. & P. 717; 4 Bing. 653; 3 Car. & P. 267; 6 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 166; 29 R. R. 672.

Tender of Lease for Execution.]—In a declaration on an agreement between the plaintiff and the defendant, that the defendant would take a house of the plaintiff and execute a lease for the same term as the plaintiff held, less ten days, an averment that the plaintiff accepted the defendant as tenant, and tendered him a lease for his execution, is sufficient, although there was no averment of the plaintiff's readiness and willingness to grant the lease. Collins v. Willmott, 11 L. T. 340; 13 W. R. 204.

A contract provided that a lease should be drawn, prepared and executed at the sole expense of the lessor. In an action on the agreement by the lessee:—Held, that it was not necessary to aver that a lease was tendered to the lessor for execution. Price v. Williams, 1 M. & W. 6; 1 Gale, 362; 1 Tyr. & G. 197; 5 L. J., Ex. 129.

To an action for breach of an agreement to execute a lease, it is no answer to allege that the intended lessee had not prepared the lease and tendered it for execution to an intended lessor. Cantley v. Powell, Ir. R. 10 C. L. 200.

Cost of Preparing Agreements.]—Lessee of a house and fixtures agreed to pay the expense of preparing the agreements:—Held, that he was liable to pay the costs of preparing, and of copies of an inventory of the fixtures referred to by the agreement. Thomas, In re, 8 Beav. 145.

6. Title of Lessor.

When it can be called for.]—By the terms of a letter from the plaintiff, which was accepted and signed by the defendants, it was agreed that the "plaintiff should set to the defendants or assigns, if preferred, for the longest time he could grant":—Held, on a bill filed for a specific performance, that the defendants were bound to take such title as the plaintiff had at the time the agreement was made, and that under the terms of the agreement, the defendants were not entitled to call upon the plaintiff to shew his lessor's title. Molloy v. Sterne, 1 Dr. & Wal. 585.

Objection to title between vendor and purchaser on the ground of non-production of lessor's title overruled in the case of a bishop's lease. Fildes v. Hooker, 2 Mer. 430.

On a bill by vendor for specific performance of an agreement to take a lease for twenty-one years at a rack-rent, the Master having reported in favour of the title shewn by the abstract, and an exception being taken to the report, the question was, whether, where the agreement is silent, the vendor of a leasehold interest is not bound to produce the title of his lessor; and the exception was allowed. Id. 424.

How far Guaranteed.]—By agreeing to grant a lease, a party does not impliedly engage for a general warranty, nor undertake to deliver an abstract of his title. Gwillim v. Stone, 3 Taunt. 433.

Nor that he has a good title to the fee-simple, and will deliver a written abstract. Temple v. Brown, 6 Taunt. 60.

An agreement to grant a lease contains an implied undertaking on the part of the intended lessor that he has title to grant such lease; and if he has not, he is liable to an action at the suit of the intended lessee. Stranks v. St. John, 36 L. J., C. P. 118; L. R. 2 C. P. 376; 16 L. T. 283; 15 W. R. 678.

Upon a contract for the sale of an agreement for a lease, it is not an implied condition that the lessor has power to grant the lease. Kintrea v. Preston, 1 H. & N. 357; 25 L. J., Ex. 287.

A declaration that the defendant had agreed to let premises to the plaintiff on certain terms, and that, in consideration that the plaintiff, at the request of the defendant, had promised to perform all things in the agreement contained on his part to be performed, the defendant promised the plaintiff that he had good right and title, and full and lawful power and authority, to let the premises to the plaintiff without restriction as to the purpose for which the same should be occupied:—Held bad, inasmuch as the promise alleged could not be implied from the relation of landlord and tenant, and was without consideration to support it. Jackson v. Cobbin, 1 D. (N.S.) 96; 8 M. & W. 790; 10 L. J., Ex. 389.

7. Agreement, how far Equivalent to Lease.

The defendant on the 29th of May, 1879, agreed to grant and the plaintiff to accept a lease of a mill for seven years at the rent of 30*s.* a year for each loom run, the plaintiff not to run less than 540 looms. The lease to contain such stipulations as were inserted in a certain lease of the 1st of May, which was a lease at a fixed rent made payable in advance, and contained a stipulation that there should at all times be payable in advance on demand one whole year's rent in addition to the proportion, if any, of the yearly rent due and unpaid for the period previous to such demand. The plaintiff was let into possession and paid rent quarterly, not in advance, down to the 1st of January, 1882, inclusive, having run, in 1881, 560 looms. In March, 1882, the defendant demanded payment of 1,005*l.* 14*s.* (840*l.* as one whole year's rent for 560 looms at 30*s.*, and 165*l.* 14*s.* as the proportionate part of the rent from the 1st of January last), and put in a distress. The plaintiff thereupon commenced his action for damages for illegal distress, for an injunction, and for specific performance, and moved for an injunction. Fry, J., granted the injunction on the terms of the plaintiff paying the 1,005*l.* 14*s.* into court. The plaintiff appealed:—Held, that since the Judicature Acts the rule no longer holds that a person occupying under an executory agreement for a lease is only made tenant from year to year at law by the payment of rent, but that he is to be treated in every court as holding on the terms of the agreement. Walsh v. Lonsdale, 52 L. J., Ch. 2; 21 Ch. D. 9; 46 L. T. 858; 31 W. R. 109—C. A.

Held, therefore, that the plaintiff holding under the agreement was subject to the same right of distress as if a lease had been granted, and that if under the terms of the lease a year's rent would have been payable in advance on demand a distress for that was lawful. Ib.

Semble, that such lease ought to reserve a minimum rent of 810*l.* (30*s.* apiece on 540 looms), and that the stipulation in the lease of the 1st of May as to payments in advance would be applicable to such minimum rent though not to the whole rent. And the defendant being willing to submit to the injunction on having 810*l.* paid into court, order varied accordingly, the court being inclined to the view that there was a right of distress for that amount though the time had not arrived for finally determining the question. Ib.

See the above case approved in Maughan, In re, 14 Q. B. D., at p. 958, and Allhusen v. Brooking, 26 Ch. D., at p. 565. See also Coatsworth v. Johnson, 55 L. J., Q. B. 220.

Jurisdiction of County Court.]—The defendant entered on premises under an executory agreement for a lease. He subsequently gave six months' notice to quit, as if on a yearly tenancy, and left the premises. An action was brought in the county court for a quarter's rent accruing due after the defendant had given up possession. The value of the premises exceeded 500*l.*, so that the judge had no jurisdiction to decree specific performance of the agreement; but he was of opinion that it was a case in which specific performance would be decreed, and that he was therefore bound to treat the defendant as tenant under the terms of the agreement, and he gave judgment for the plaintiff:—Held, that the equitable doctrine that a person who enters under an executory agreement for a lease is to be treated as in under the terms of the agreement, can only be applied where the court in which the action is brought has concurrent jurisdiction in law and equity, and that the plaintiff could not recover. Foster v. Reeves, 61 L. J., Q. B. 763; [1892] 2 Q. B. 255; 67 L. T. 537; 40 W. R. 695—C. A.

8. Agreement as Distinct from Lease.

An instrument on an agreement stamp, reciting that A., in case it should turn out that he is entitled to certain premises on the death of B., would immediately demise the same to C., declaring that he did thereby agree to demise and let the same, with a subsequent covenant to procure a licence to let from the lord, operates as an agreement for a lease, and not as an absolute demise. Doe d. Coore v. Clare, 2 Term Rep. 739. S. P., Perring v. Brook, 7 Car. & P. 360.

An agreement by which A. agreed to let her house to B. "during her life, supposing it to be occupied by B. or a tenant agreeable to A.," and containing a stipulation that "a clause was to be added in the lease" for a particular purpose, is only an agreement for a lease, and not a perfect lease, the stipulation clearly shewing it to be executory. Doe d. Bromfield v. Smith, 6 East, 530; 2 Smith, 570.

The following instrument is an agreement for a lease, and not a lease:—H. agrees to make and execute to E. a good and valid lease of all that messuage, &c. to hold to E., his executors and assigns, for the term of seven years, from the 24th day of June next, at and under the yearly rent of 105*l.*, clear of all taxes and assessments (except the land tax), payable half-yearly, the first half-yearly payment to be made on the 25th day of December next. And the lease shall contain a covenant on the part of E. to pay the rent, also to keep the premises in repair (damages by fire excepted); also a proviso for re-entry on non-payment of the rent by the space of twenty-one days after the same shall become due, or on non-performance of any of the covenants on the lessee's part to be performed. And E. agrees to accept such lease, upon the terms and conditions above specified, and to execute a counterpart; and E. agrees (when and so soon as the messuages or dwelling-houses on either side of the messuage hereby agreed to be demised shall become tenanted and occupied) to pay to H. an additional yearly rent of 15*l.* during the remainder of the term of seven years. And H. agrees, on or before the 24th day of June next, to erect eight light panels in front of the drawing-room windows, and fence-blind to same windows, to paper the hall and staircase, and all the rooms, save those on the basement and attics. And it is agreed, that by the lease hereby agreed to be granted, the rent therein reserved shall be 120*l.*; and that by a separate deed, to bear date the next day after the indenture of lease, H. shall release to E., out of the annual rent of 120*l.*, the annual sum of 15*l.* E. to prepare lease at his own cost, to be approved of by lessee's solicitor. Rawson v. Eicke, 2 N. & P. 423; 7 A. & E. 451; W. W. & D. 675; 7 L. J., Q. B. 17.

By articles, dated 2nd May, 1838, the defendant agreed with the plaintiff that he would grant him a lease of a messuage, for twenty-one years from Midsummer-day then next, at the rent of 45*l.*, payable quarterly, on the usual days of payment, in every year during the term, the first payment to commence on the 29th September then next; to be entered upon immediately by the plaintiff, he having, on the day of the date, paid 25*l.* to the defendant; and in the lease were to be contained covenants to pay the rent, to repair, &c., and all other usual and reasonable covenants, with a power to either party to determine the lease at the end of seven or fifteen years:—Held, that this instrument amounted to an agreement for a lease only, and not to an actual demise, and that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover as for the breach of an implied promise for quiet enjoyment. Brashier v. Jackson, 6 M. & W. 549; 8 D. P. C. 784; 9 L. J., Ex. 313.

By a memorandum, the plaintiff agreed to let to the defendant, and the defendant agreed to take a house, from the 24th June then next ensuing, for the term of twenty-one years, determinable at seven and fourteen years; that the lease to be granted was to contain a covenant on the part of the defendant to purchase the fee-simple for 600*l.*, at any time within the first seven years of the term to be granted, and a covenant on his part for payment of the rent of 35*l.*, quarterly, clear of all deductions for taxes whatsoever, and that the insurance on 500*l.* was to be paid by the plaintiff, and to be repaid by the defendant, as an increased rent, to lay out within twelve months 100*l.* on the premises, to keep the premises in substantial repair, and all other usual covenants, as in leases of houses in B.; and that the defendant should execute a counterpart of the lease when tendered to him by the solicitor of the plaintiff, and that the expense of the lease and counterpart was to be borne and paid by the defendant:—Held, that this was an agreement for a lease, and not an actual demise, and that the defendant, having entered and paid rent under the agreement, became tenant from year to year, which tenancy could only be determined by a regular notice to quit, or a surrender in writing. Chapman v. Towner, 6 M. & W. 100; 9 L. J., Ex. 54.

Words of present contract with an agreement that the lessee should take possession immediately, and that a lease should be executed in future, operate only as an agreement for a lease, and not as a lease itself. Goodtitle d. Estwick v. Way, 1 Term Rep. 735.

A party possessed of the residue of a term of years in premises, entered into a written agreement with another to grant him a lease of the same, together with certain fixtures, for a definite period, at a certain rent, payable quarterly; the lease to contain certain covenants: and the agreement further contained a covenant by the lessor to execute such lease when required; and that, until then, it should be lawful for the lessor, at any time after the execution of the agreement, to distrain for any rent due in respect of the demised premises:—Held, that this instrument did not amount to an actual demise. Bicknell v. Hood, 5 M. & W. 104; 2 H. & H. 86; 3 Jur. 774; 8 L. J., Ex. 193.

Where A. agreed "that he would by indenture demise to B. a house for fourteen years from the 25th day of December last past, at the yearly rent of 40*l.* payable quarterly; but if B. should pay A. the 40*l.* before the expiration of the first quarter, which would be at Lady-day then next, in that case the rent should be reduced to the rate of 33*l.* per annum, payable quarterly":—Held, that the agreement was no demise. Hegan v. Johnson, 2 Taunt. 148.

An agreement executed on the 24th November upon an agreement stamp, setting forth the conditions of letting a farm, and the regulations to be observed by the tenant, that the term was to be from year to year, the lands to be entered upon on the 3rd February, 1808, and the housing on the 12th May, and that a lease was to be made upon these conditions, with all usual covenants, at the foot of which the tenant wrote, "I agree to take Lot 1 (the premises in question), at the rent, &c. subject to the covenants," is an agreement for a lease, and not a present demise, there being no present occupation, and an express stipulation for a future lease, as well as time given to prepare it. Tempest v. Rawling, 13 East, 18.

A memorandum, dated the 23rd of June, 1842, made between A., as agent for and on behalf of the churchwardens of the parish of St. M. (not naming them), of the one part, and B. of the other part, by which it was agreed (provided a licence could be obtained from the lord of the manor, and upon B. putting the premises into repair) that the churchwardens should grant a lease to B. for twenty-one years from Midsummer-day then next, under the clear yearly rent of 30*l.*, such lease to contain covenants for payment of rent and taxes, and to repair, insure, not to commit waste, and all other usual and proper covenants, and B. agreed to accept such lease, and execute a counterpart, and that until such lease and counterpart should be granted the yearly rent should be payable and recoverable by distress or otherwise, in like manner as if such lease and counterpart had been executed, is properly stamped as an agreement. Doe d. Bailey v. Foster, 3 C. B. 215; 15 L. J., C. P. 263.

"Memorandum of an agreement entered into this 31st of January, 1840, between R. of the one part, and T. of the other part. The said T. hereby agrees to become the tenant of the farm G. at the customary time of entry under the following conditions: viz. that the sum of 260*l.* annual rent shall be paid at the usual time for the house, premises and lands, as agreed upon; and the said R. agrees to lay out in improvements and alterations of the farmhouse and new sheds, a sum not exceeding 200*l.*, with the understanding that spars for rafters should be found from the estate; cartage for all materials except stones for walls to be done or found by T. (Signed) R. and T.": —Held, that the above memorandum was a mere agreement for a future tenancy, and not an actual demise, and therefore required a 1*l.* stamp only. Gore v. Lloyd, 13 L. J., Ex. 366; 12 M. & W. 463.

Where A. agreed under seal to take and hire of B. a house and premises at a certain annual rent, but the instrument contained no words of demise, and there was nothing to shew when the interest was to commence or determine:—Held, that it was no more than an agreement for a lease. Clayton v. Burtenshaw, 7 D. & R. 800; 5 B. & C. 41.

An instrument under seal, whereby A. (tenant for life, with a leasing power) "sets" to B. certain lands for the term of one life (not naming the cestui que vie); lease to be forfeited at the request of A. and the costs of B., with the usual clauses between landlord and tenant; and on which was indorsed a memorandum, stating the name of the cestui que vie, is not an actual demise, but only an agreement for a lease. Clarke v. Moore, 1 Jo. & Lat. 723; 7 Ir. Eq. R. 515.

Although an agreement between an intended lessor and lessee may possibly amount at law to a present demise or assignment, yet if, upon the face of the instrument, it appears that a further instrument is necessary to carry the intention of the parties into execution, a court of equity will treat it as an agreement to be specifically performed in that particular. Fenner v. Hepburn, 2 Y. & Coll. 159.

A., by an instrument, demised, or agreed to demise, lands to B. for three lives not named, at a yearly rent, and further agreed, that leases should be perfected at the request of either party. As an essential part of the contract, the nomination of the lives, was wanting, this cannot operate as a lease for three lives, nor as a lease for the life of tenant, that not being the intention of the grantor, but merely as an executory agreement for a lease. Pentland v. Stokes, 2 Ball & B. 68.

Paper entitled "Memorandum of an agreement between A. and B.," and signed by them, expressing, that in consideration of 40*l.* A. "doth agree to let and B. doth agree to take a messuage," &c., at 40*l.* per annum rent; "and it is further agreed that A. shall not raise the rent, nor turn out" B. so long as the rent is duly paid quarterly, and he does not sell any article injurious to A. in his business. Though the terms do not exclude the construction of actual demise, yet the import of the whole, looking to some future instrument, and a more permanent interest than from year to year, a demurrer to a bill for specific performance against A., who had succeeded in an ejectment, was overruled. Browne v. Warner, 14 Ves. 156; 9 R. R. 259.

Privity of Estate.]—A landlord, creditor for rent against the estate of a deceased tenant, is entitled to rank above the ordinary simple contract creditors, under a decree for administration. But this right arises out of the relation of landlord and tenant, and is founded on the sacred regard which the law of England shews to rights arising from tenure, and does not apply to a debt claimed against the estate of a deceased debtor who had entered upon the land under an agreement of such a nature, that his entry did not create a tenancy at a certain rent. Agreement to grant and accept a lease of property in Jamaica, from the 1st of December, 1847, for twenty-one years, at the clear yearly rent of 2,000*l.*, the lease to contain certain covenants. The tenant entered into possession, and died in August, 1849, without having paid rent:—Held, that this agreement would not have been an actual demise before the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, and that the entry thereunder created no tenancy, so as to give the landowner a right of distress, or to make any privity of estate between him and the intended lessee, and that, therefore, the owner in such case had not the right of priority. Vincent v. Godson, 22 L. J., Ch. 747; 17 Jur. 295; 1 W. R. 254.

This curious result of the law of tenure does not apply to a demise of lands in Jamaica. Ib.

Where there are Words of Present Demise.]—A landlord and tenant, between whom there was a subsisting tenancy, agreed in writing for a letting of the farm upon different terms, the amount of the rent to be settled by valuation, and the tenant to find sureties for his paying the rent. The amount was not settled, the sureties were not given, nor was any rent ever paid:—Held, that the instrument, although it contained words of present demise, did not operate as a lease, or alter the terms of the existing tenancy. John v. Jenkins, 1 C. & M. 227; 3 Tyr. 170; 2 L. J., Ex. 83.

Tenant in Possession.]—Where a tenant was in possession under a memorandum, whereby the lessor agreed to let a house on lease for twenty-one years, at the net clear rent of 63*l.* per annum, the tenant to enter at any time on or before a particular day, on paying 50*l.* on entry; and there was a purchasing clause in the lease:—Held, that this only amounted to an agreement for a future lease, and that no lease had been executed. Dunk v. Hunter, 5 B. & Ald. 322; 24 R. R. 390.

Letters containing Terms.]—The following letters constitute an agreement only, and not a demise. On the 21st February, 1825, the defendant wrote to the plaintiff: "I shall be happy to take a lease of your iron ore at a royalty of 1*s.* per ton, and I will engage to work the several veins of ironstone, limestone, ore and manganese, in such relative proportions as that the average produce of iron shall not exceed the usual average of the common ores (which I believe to be about 40 per cent.), the term to be about forty years from the 24th June next, and the sleeping rent 150*l.* per annum. The relative proportion of the iron ores in weight to be worked together, to be ascertained by a competent person." The plaintiff wrote to the defendant in answer: "I agree to the terms contained in your letter. I shall be ready to grant a lease conformable thereto." Jones v. Reynolds, 1 G. & D. 62; 1 Q. B. 506; 10 L. J., Q. B. 193.

When Conditional.]—G. having agreed to let premises to P. for a term of years, P. paying 100*l.* for the fixtures, a lease by deed was prepared and engrossed on parchment: P. paid down only 50*l.*; it was agreed between G. and P. that P. should be let into possession as tenant from year to year on the terms of the intended lease, until he paid the balance of the 100*l.* At the same time G. signed, sealed, and delivered the deed, which, however, he retained in his own possession. No third person was present. No words qualifying the delivery, or expressly stating that it was an escrow till the payment of the balance, appeared to have been used. G. brought an action for use and occupation against an assignee of P.'s interest; and on those facts appearing, objection was taken that the action ought to have been on the covenants contained in the deed:—Held, that the circumstances warranted an inference in fact that it was agreed by both G. and P., at the time of the execution of the instrument, that it should not operate as a lease until the payment, and that if there was such an agreement by both, though no express words of delivery, as an escrow, it would operate as a deed till then, and consequently P. was tenant from year to year under the terms in the instrument, and not tenant under a deed, and that the action for use and occupation would lie against him or the assignee of his interest. Gudgen v. Besset, 6 El. & Bl. 986; 26 L. J., Q. B. 36; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 212; 5 W. R. 47.

Varied in Performance.]—A declaration stated, that it was agreed between the plaintiff and the defendant that the plaintiff should purchase of the defendant a house and shop fixtures, specified in an inventory, for 150*l.*; that 125*l.* should be paid on taking possession, and the remainder by bills of exchange; and that the defendant should grant, and the plaintiff should take, a lease of the messuage for twenty-one years, at the rent of 60*l.* The indenture tendered by the plaintiff stated that, as well in consideration of 150*l.* paid by the plaintiff to the defendant as of the yearly rents and covenants, the defendant demised and leased all that messuage:—Held, that the consideration was not truly stated, and, therefore, that the instrument was not such a lease as was agreed to be granted by the defendant to the plaintiff. Vonhollen v. Knowles, 12 M. & W. 602; 13 L. J., Ex. 140.

Under the repealed Statute 7 & 8 Vict. c. 76.]—While the act was in force A. and B. entered into a written agreement, not under seal, that A. should let and B. should take premises from a certain day for the monthly rent of 36*s.*, to be paid every four weeks:—Held, that the 4th section prevented this document from taking effect as a lease. Burton v. Reevell, 16 M. & W. 307; 16 L. J., Ex. 85; 11 Jur. 71.

A., who held a long lease of premises, and B., by writing agreed, by words of present demise, for a lease of three years from the 29th of September, 1845, by A. to B., and that if B. should, at the end of the term of three years, desire to renew his tenancy, then, on notice given by B. six months before the end of such term, A. should renew the tenancy for a further term of three years, or grant an under-lease of A.'s term, at the option of B. B. was let into possession, and paid rent, and afterwards gave notice that he desired a renewal of the tenancy, but the renewal was not agreed upon, and the original term of three years expired. A., without giving notice to quit, brought ejectment, laying the demise on the 30th of September, 1848. The 7 & 8 Vict. c. 76, was in force from the 1st of January, 1844, to the 1st of October, 1845:—Held, that the demise, not being under seal, operated as an agreement for a lease, and that by the payment of rent B. became tenant from year to year, subject to the terms of the agreement; that his interest expired of itself at the end of the term of three years first mentioned in the agreement, without any notice to quit; and that his having exercised his option to take a renewed term, and given notice accordingly, gave him no interest in the land. Doe d. Davenish v. Moffat, 15 Q. B. 257; 19 L. J., Q. B. 438; 14 Jur. 935.

In an action by A. against B. for rent on a demise from quarter to quarter, with the rent payable one quarter in advance, a written agreement for this quarterly letting, made while the 7 & 8 Vict. c 76, s. 4, was in force, was put in, which was signed by B., but not by A.:—Held, that this was evidence of a parol demise by A., and that it was put an end to by a parol notice to quit. Bird v. Defonville, 2 Car. & K. 415.

An agreement of demise for three years, executed in March, 1845, in writing, but not by deed, was prevented from operating as a lease by 7 & 8 Vict. c. 76, and was not re-established as a lease by 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, which repealed the former act, but took effect only as from October, 1845. Arden v. Sullivan, 14 Q. B. 832; 19 L. J., Q. B. 268; 14 Jur. 712.

8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 3.]—This statute, which enacts that a lease required by law to be in writing shall be void at law unless made by deed, has made no difference in the interpretation of written instruments. Stratton v. Pettit, 16 C. B. 420; 3 C. L. R. 925; 24 L. J., C. P. 182; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 662; 3 W. R. 549. But see Rollason v. Leon, 7 H. & N. 73; 31 L. J., Ex. 96; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 608.

The intention of the parties, as declared by the words of the instrument, must govern the construction; and where there is an instrument by which it appears that one party is to give possession of premises, and the other to take it, that is a lease, unless it can be collected from the instrument itself that it is an agreement only for a lease to be afterwards made. Ib.

An agreement not under seal between two persons, by which one agrees to let, and the other to take premises for the term of seven years, and by which it is agreed that a good and sufficient lease of the premises shall be prepared, may be good as an agreement; so that an action may lie upon it for not accepting the lease when prepared, although it would be void as a lease, in consequence of the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 3. Bond v. Rosling, 1 B. & S. 371; 30 L. J., Q. B. 227; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 78; 4 L. T. 442; 9 W. R. 746.

What Constitutes an Actual Demise.]—See post, cols. 801–804.

E. LEASES.

1. REQUISITES OF.

Intention of Parties.]—Whether an instrument is to be construed as a lease or an agreement depends upon the intention of the parties, to be collected from the instrument itself, and the nature of the subject-matter, without reference to any extrinsic circumstances or subsequent acts of the parties. Doe d. Morgan v. Powell, 8 Scott (N.R.) 687; 7 Man. & G. 980; 14 L. J., C. P. 5; 8 Jur. 1123. S. P., Morgan d. Dowding v. Bissell, 3 Taunt. 65.

An instrument is not a devise, although it contains the usual words of demise, if its contents shew that such was not the intention of the parties. Taylor v. Caldwell, 3 B. & S. 826; 32 L. J., Q. B. 164; 8 L. T. 356; 11 W. R. 726.

A clause for a future lease does not of itself necessarily intend that the instrument must be only an agreement for a lease, if the intention of the parties appears to be otherwise. Poole v. Bentley, 12 East, 168; 2 Camp. 286.

Power to Lease.]—When it appears, upon the face of an instrument, that the party intending to demise has no power to demise, the instrument is not a lease. Hayward v. Haswell, 1 N. & P. 411; 6 A. & E. 265; W. W. & D. 158; 6 L. J., K. B. 116; 1 Jur. 54.

Lease under power to lease in possession was dated in March to hold from Michaelmas, but not delivered till Michaelmas:—Semble, that it is good. Doe d. Mount v. Roberts, 4 Doug. 306.

Words of Present Demise.]—A memorandum of an agreement to let, which contains words of present demise, and sufficiently ascertains the terms of the intended tenancy, will operate as a present demise, although it provides for the preparation of a future lease. Warman v. Faithful, 3 N. & M. 137; 5 B. & Ad. 1042; 3 L. J., K. B. 114. S. P., Doe d. Jackson v. Ashburner, 5 Term Rep. 163.

B. being wrongfully dispossessed of premises, executed the following deed: "Be it remembered that B. hath let, and by these presents doth demise to F. (the premises), as now held by W. F., for the full term of twenty-one years, to commence the 1st day of May or the 1st day of November, whichever first happens after B. recovers the lands from the heirs, &c., F. covenanting and agreeing, on the foregoing conditions, to pay to B. the sum of, &c. Leases with power of distress, and clauses of re-entry, and all other clauses usual between landlord and tenant, to be drawn and signed at the request of either party as soon as B. recovers the lands," &c.:—Held, that this instrument operated as a present demise. Barry v. Nugent, 3 Dougl. 179; 5 Term Rep. 165, n.

What constitutes an actual Demise.]—An instrument dated in March, 1798, whereby the landlord agreed to let, and also, upon demand, to execute to the tenant a lease of a farm; and the tenant agreed to take, and, upon demand, to execute a counterpart of a lease of the farm from the 5th of April, 1798, for fifteen years, under a certain yearly rent, which lease was to contain the usual covenants, and an agreement for re-entry in case of nonpayment of rent, and also the further covenants, &c.; and the agreement was to bind until the lease was executed, is a present demise, and therefore requires a lease stamp, the agreement for a future lease, with further covenants, being for the better security of the parties. Doe d. Walker v. Groves, 15 East, 244.

Agreement for a lease, with stipulations for the lessee to commence with laying out a considerable sum on the premises (the lease to contain certain specified covenants), "and in the meantime, until such lease shall be executed, to pay rent, and to hold the same premises subject to the covenants above mentioned," amounts to an actual demise. Pinero v. Judson, 6 Bing. 206; 3 M. & P. 497; 8 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 19; 31 R. R. 388.

"G. F. does this day agree to let to J. S. three cottages for ten years; he further agrees to build a brewhouse and make a cellar, at the rent of 35*l.*: he agrees to pay the ground-rent, and has this day received 4*l.* from J. S., in earnest," is an actual demise, and not an agreement for a lease. Staniforth v. Fox, 7 Bing. 590; 5 M. & P. 589; 9 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 175.

A memorandum having a lease stamp, by which A. agrees to let B. lands mentioned in an annexed abandoned lease from A. to C. upon the conditions, agreements, &c., contained in the same lease, and by which A. and B. bind themselves to execute a lease similar to such abandoned lease, is itself a valid lease. Pearce v. Cheslyn, 5 N. & M. 652; 4 A. & E. 225; 1 H. & W. 768; 5 L. J., K. B. 113.

"Sept. 21, 1829.—K. agrees to let, and P. to take a house in its unfinished state, for the term of sixty years, being the whole term that K. has the same leased to him, at the rent of 52*5l.*, payable quarterly, the first payment for the half-quarter at Christmas next: P. to insure the premises, and to have the benefit of an insurance lately paid: a lease and counterpart to be prepared at the expense of P., and to contain all the clauses, covenants and agreements K. entered into in the lease granted to him," is an actual demise, and not a mere agreement for a lease. Doe d. Pearson v. Ries, 8 Bing. 178; 1 M. & Scott, 259; 1 L. J., C. P. 73.

The defendant held premises under a lease from H. at a certain rent; and entered into an agreement with N. for the sale of all the household furniture, &c., on the premises, for a certain sum to be paid by instalments, covenanting, on payment of the whole of the purchase-money, to demise the premises to N. for twenty-five years; the lease to contain the like covenants on the part of N., as were contained in the lease under which the defendant held. The agreement also contained a covenant that N. should, in the meantime, and until such lease should be granted, pay the rent and perform all the covenants which would be to be performed by him in case the lease was actually granted; with a power of distress for nonpayment of the rent. N. was let into immediate possession under this agreement, and paid rent:—Held, that the agreement amounted to a present demise. Hancock v. Caffyn, 1 M. & Scott, 521; 8 Bing. 358; 1 L. J., C. P. 104.

A party seised in fee of premises, agreed, with eight other persons, to convey to them in trust for the inhabitants of a parish, to hold from the Lady-day then next ensuing, for the term of ninety-nine years, at a specified rent, payable half-yearly. The agreement then contained covenants by the lessees to pay the rent, taxes, &c., and to keep the premises in repair, and by the lessor for quiet enjoyment; and also a proviso for the execution of a lease containing the usual covenants, to be executed before a day specified; and another, that the lessees, or their successors, should have the option of purchasing the fee-simple in the soil:—Held, that this instrument amounted to an actual demise, and was not a mere agreement for a lease. Alderman v. Neate, 4 M. & W. 704; 1 H. & H. 369; 8 L. J., Ex. 89; 3 Jur. 171.

The plaintiff, by letter, offered to take a farm of the defendant at a certain specified term and rent; the crops to be valued, and a lease to be prepared at the plaintiff's expense; the whole to be subject to a certificate of the plaintiff's solvency. The defendant, having received the certificate, by letter accepted the plaintiff as tenant, on the terms proposed: the valuation was deferred from time to time; but the plaintiff, on paying 100*l.* towards the amount, was let into possession:—Held, that the letters of the plaintiff and defendant (at all events, as explained by the above circumstances, and some admissions made by the plaintiff after a distress) constituted an actual demise, on which the defendant was authorised to distrain for rent in arrear, and not a mere agreement for a lease. Chapman v. Bluck, 4 Bing. (N.C.) 187; 5 Scott, 513; 1 Arn. 15; 7 L. J., C. P. 100; 2 Jur. 206.

A tenant being in possession under a demise for three years, ending Michaelmas, 1836, at a rent payable at Michaelmas, the landlord and tenant agreed as follows:—"Memorandum of agreement, made 13th December, 1834, P., the landlord, agrees to let the farm to B., the tenant, for fourteen years, determinable at the end of seven years, with twelve months' notice (not stating the commencement), at the yearly rent of 20*l.*, payable half-yearly; a lease to be drawn upon the usual terms by T., and B. agrees to take it upon the said terms":—Held, a present lease, commencing on December 13th, 1834. Doe d. Phillips v. Benjamin, 9 A. & E. 644; 1 P. & D. 440; 2 W. W. & H. 96; 8 L. J., Q. B. 117.

By an instrument under seal, and stamped with a lease stamp, W., in consideration of the rents, covenants and agreements reserved on the part of C., to be paid, performed and observed, covenanted, promised and agreed with C., that she, W., her heirs or assigns, should and would, at any time during the term thereinafter agreed to be demised, upon request made to her or them in writing under the hand of C., for that purpose, grant and execute to C.; and C. consented and agreed to accept and execute a counterpart of a demise or lease of premises therein described, for the term of twenty-one years from a day past, determinable as thereinafter mentioned at a certain rent, payable quarterly; and C. covenanted to lay out a sum in repairing, painting, &c., and it was agreed, that there should be contained in the lease and counterpart, by and on the part of C., a covenant for payment of rent, to repair, &c.; and also a covenant for quiet enjoyment, and a power to C. to determine the tenancy on the lease at the end of the third, seventh or fourteenth year of the term of twenty-one years, on giving notice:—Held, an actual demise, and not a mere agreement for a future lease. Curling v. Mills, 7 Scott (N.R.) 709; 6 Man. & G. 173; 12 L. J., C. P. 316.

On the 28th of October, 1843, the plaintiff, the defendant, and M. entered into an agreement, by which, after reciting that M. was tenant to the defendant of a house at a rent of 25*l.* a year, and had agreed to let it to the plaintiff at a rent of 20*l.* a year from 24th June, 1844, at which time the defendant agreed to exonerate M. from his tenancy on his paying all rent up to that day, and to accept the plaintiff as tenant from that period, at the rent of 20*l.* a year, M. agreed to let and the plaintiff to take the house from the date of the agreement of the 24th of June then next, at the rent of 20*l.* a year, and M. agreed to find all materials except lath, to put up a partition wall, the plaintiff finding lath and labour. And the plaintiff agreed to take the house of the defendant from the 24th of June, at the rent of 20*l.* a year, and to give or take six months' notice to quit, and the defendant agreed to exonerate M. from his tenancy on the 24th of June, on his paying up all rent due to that time. Immediately after the execution of this agreement M. let the plaintiff into possession. On the 4th of March, the defendant agreed to sell the house to the plaintiff, but this agreement was not carried into effect:—Held, first, that the instrument of 28th of October, 1843, amounted to a lease by the defendant to the plaintiff from 24th of June, 1844. Tarte v. Darby, 15 M. & W. 601; 15 L. J., Ex. 326.

Held, secondly, that it was not affected by the subsequent agreement for sale of the premises. Ib.

An agreement on a lease stamp by which A. agreed to let to B. certain premises from Michaelmas next, upon condition that A. should paint, &c., is an actual demise, and may be assigned. Doe d. Green v. Fidler, Peake, Ad. C. 33.

W. being tenant from year to year to J., they entered into an agreement dated 13th December, 1834, whereby J. agreed to let the premises to W. for the term of fourteen years, determinable upon notice at the yearly rent of 20*l.*, payable half-yearly; a lease to be drawn up on the usual terms; and W. agreed to take them on these terms. Held, that this constituted a lease. Doe d. Phillips v. Benjamin, 9 A. &. E. 644; 1 P. & D. 440; 8 L. J., Q. B. 117.

An agreement "between A. and B.," by which "A. agrees to pay B. 140*l.* a year in quarterly payments, for a house, garden, &c. (describing the situation), for a term of seven, fourteen or twenty-one years, at the option of the tenant, the rent to commence from 1st January," &c., is a lease, and not merely an agreement for one. Wright v. Trevezant, 3 Car. & P. 441.

An agreement by which A. agrees to "let" premises to B. "on lease" for a certain term, at a certain rent, "subject to the stipulations and covenants in the original lease under which he holds," and "to keep the said stipulations in every respect until the said lease shall be granted," which lease when required by B. is to be prepared by A.'s solicitor, but at B.'s expense, is a lease, and not an agreement for one. Wilson v. Chisholm, 4 Car. & P. 474.

See also cases ante, cols. 794 et seq.

Incorporeal Hereditament.]—A demise of an incorporeal hereditament can only be valid by deed; a demise by parol of a right of hunting and sporting, together with a messuage, is therefore void. Bird v. Higginson, 4 N. & M. 505; 2 A. & E. 696; 1 H. & W. 61. Affirmed, 6 A. & E. 824; 6 L. J., Ex. 282—Ex. Ch.

An instrument not under seal, by which land is demised, and which also attempts to demise incorporeal tenements, is not void by reason of such attempt. Reg. v. Hockworthy, 2 N. & P. 383; W. W. & D. 707; 7 A. & E. 492; 7 L. J., M. C. 24.

Statute of Frauds—Effect of.]—The 1st section of the Statute of Frauds, as construed by the 2nd, is meant to vacate parol leases, conveying a greater interest in land than for three years, and whereon a rent is reserved. Crosby v. Wadsworth, 6 East, 602; 2 Smith 559; 8 R. R. 556.

Notwithstanding that section, a parol lease for more than three years will create a tenancy from year to year; the intention of the statute being satisfied by its not operating as a term. Clayton v. Blakey, 8 Term Rep. 3; 4 R. R. 575. S. P., Doe d. Rigge v. Bell, 5 Term Rep. 471; 2 R. R. 642.

If under a parol demise for more than three years, void by the Statute of Frauds, the lessee enters and becomes tenant from year to year, he is bound by an undertaking to repair contained in such void demise. Richardson v. Gifford, 3 N. & M. 325; 1 A. & E. 52; 3 L. J., K. B. 122. S. P., Beale v. Sanders, 3 Bing. (N.C.) 850; 5 Scott, 58; 3 Hodges, 147; 6 L. J., C. P. 283; 1 Jur. 1083.

A parol lease for a term not exceeding three years, warranted by the 2nd section of the Statute of Frauds, may be as special in its terms as a written one. Bolton (Lord) v. Tomlin, 1 N. & P. 247; 5 A. & E. 856; 2 H. & W. 369; 6 L. J., K. B. 45.

A verbal agreement to take ready-furnished lodgings for "two or three years" is a contract for an interest in land, and valid as a lease for not exceeding three years. Edge v. Stafford, 1 Tyr. 293; 1 C. & J. 391; 9 L. J. (O.S.) Ex. 101.

Action on an indenture for rent. Plea, that whilst the defendant was in the occupation of the premises, and before the rent became due, it was agreed that the plaintiff should make some alterations, and in consideration thereof the defendant should relinquish his interest under the indenture, and accept a fresh lease for seven years at an increased rent; and until such lease should be tendered to the defendant he should hold the premises as tenant from year to year, at the increased rent; that the plaintiff executed the alterations; that the defendant relinquished his interest under the indenture, and held the premises under the agreement; and that no new lease was executed; by means of which premises the defendant became tenant from year to year, and all his interest under the indenture was surrendered to the plaintiff by act and operation of law:—Held, first, that the plea could only be proved by an agreement in writing, since the stipulation as to the yearly tenancy was part of the agreement for a future lease, and such agreement was required by the Statute of Frauds to be in writing. Forquet v. Moore, 7 Ex. 870; 22 L. J., Ex. 35.

Held, secondly, that, under such an agreement, there would be no surrender of the existing lease by operation of law, until the new lease was granted. Ib.

8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 3—Void unless by Deed.]—By 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 3, a lease required by law to be in writing of any tenements or hereditaments, made after the 1st October, 1845, shall be void at law, unless made by deed.

This statute is retrospective in its operation. Upton v. Towend, 17 C. B. 50.

But it does not apply to agreements for letting turnpike tolls under 3 Geo. 4, c. 126. Shepherd v. Hodsman, 18 Q. B. 316; 21 L. J., Q. B. 263.

By a writing, not under seal, signed by the plaintiff and the defendant, the plaintiff agreed to take of the defendant a farm at a yearly rental, "the tenancy to commence from the 29th day of September next, for a term of eight years, subject to a lease," to be drawn up by the defendant:—Held, that there was no contract by the defendant to give the plaintiff possession of the farm on the day named; for that possession was to be given only on the commencement of a tenancy under a lease for eight years, and this agreement was void as a lease, under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 3. Drury v. Macnamara, 5 El. & Bl. 612; 25 L. J., Q. B. 5; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1163; 4 W. R. 50.

By a written instrument not under seal, and dated the 28th of February, 1872, W. purported to demise a messuage to the defendant as tenant from year to year, for so long as he should keep the rent paid, and as W. should have "power to let the premises"; the rent reserved by the instrument was less than two-thirds of the annual value of the messuage. The defendant entered and paid rent quarterly:—Held, that the instrument was void as a lease, first, on the ground of uncertainty; and secondly, on the ground that, not being within the terms of s. 2 of the Statute of Frauds, it ought to have been under seal pursuant to 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, ss. 2, 3. Wood v. Beard, 46 L. J., Q. B. 100; 2 Ex. D. 30; 35 L. T. 866.

Held, also, that the only estate vested in the defendant was a tenancy from year to year. Ib.

Hand and Hall entered into the following agreement not under seal: "Jan. 26. Hand agrees to let, and Hall agrees to take the large room, &c., from 14th February next until the following Midsummer twelve months, and with right at end of that term for the tenant, by a month's previous notice, to remain on for three years and a half more":—Held, that the agreement was divisible, and contained an actual demise for a term less than three years, with a superadded stipulation that Hall at his option should have a renewal of the tenancy, and that, as to the actual demise, it need not be under seal pursuant to 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 3. Hand v. Hall, 46 L. J., Ex. 603; 2 Ex. D. 355; 36 L. T. 765; 25 W. R. 734—C. A.

—— But Valid as Agreements.]—A. and B., after 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106 came into operation, executed a written instrument, by which A. agreed to let and B. to hire land for a term exceeding three years, at a rent payable monthly. B. entered; and it was afterwards orally agreed that the rent should be paid quarterly:—Held, that 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 3, though rendering the lease void, as not being by deed, still made it void only as a lease, and did not prevent it from indicating the terms on which B. held as tenant from year to year; and that consequently B.'s tenancy might be determined, during the term, by a half-year's notice, but at the end of the term, expired without notice. Tress v. Savage, 4 El. & Bl. 36; 2 C. L. R. 1315; 23 L. J., Q. B. 339; 18 Jur. 680; 2 W. R. 564.

The statute does not prevent an instrument which (as containing words of present demise, and not being under seal) is void as a lease from being enforced as an agreement in equity. Parker v. Taswell, 2 De G. & J. 559; 27 L. J., Ch. 812; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1006; 6 W. R. 608.

An agreement creating a present demise, void as a lease, by the above statute, may still enure as an agreement. Hayne v. Cummings, 16 C. B. (N.S.) 421; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 773; 10 L. T. 341. S. P., Tidey v. Mollett, 16 C. B. (N.S.) 298; 33 L. J., C. P. 235; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 800; 10 L. T. 380; 12

W. R. 802. Bond v. Rosling, 1 B. & S. 371; 30 L. J., Q. B. 227; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 78; 4 L. T. 442; 9 W. R. 746.

The following agreement, made in 1861: "L. agrees to let, and R. agrees to take, the wood-mill, with the house and land adjoining, for the period of three years from Lady-day then next, at the rent of 120*l.* per annum. A lease for the same to be executed and signed as soon as possible, subject to the permission of the landlord of the mill. L. also agrees to let, and R. agrees to take, the mill, house, land, &c., from this date up to Lady-day then next, on the same terms, and at the same rate of rent; R. to have the sole use of the mill, house, and land, and all machinery and utensils therein contained," operates as an actual demise from its date up to Lady-day, and as an agreement for a lease from that time for a term of three years, and consequently is not void for not being under seal. Rollason v. Leon, 7 H. & N. 73; 31 L. J., Ex. 96; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 608.

—— Assignment of Lease.]—A lessee of premises from May till the 13th December, let them by parol to the defendant for the whole of the term, reserving a weekly rent. The parties intended to create the relation of landlord and tenant, and to pass the interest by lease. The defendant occupied and paid rent till June, and then gave a week's notice to quit, and, at the expiration thereof, left the premises. In an action to recover subsequent rent:—Held, that this might operate as a lease, though it passed all the lessor's interest, notwithstanding 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, and, therefore, the lessee was entitled to recover. Pollock v. Stacey, 9 Q. B. 1033; 16 L. J., Q. B. 132; 11 Jur. 267.

—— As to Stamping.]—A lease in writing, not by deed, void under the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 3, does not require a stamp. Mott v. Turnage, 1 F. & F. 6.

Ownership — Lands Clauses Act.]—An agreement to let land at a yearly rent, determinable by six months' notice to quit (no term being mentioned), provided that, in case A. and B. erected any buildings upon the land, they were to have the privilege of removing them at any time during their occupation, or otherwise they were to be allowed a beneficial interest in the same to the amount of the sum expended in the erection of the buildings, such beneficial interest to extend over a period of twenty years; that is to say, if A. and B. were required to give up possession of the piece of ground before the expiration of the term of twenty years, they were to be allowed one-twentieth part of the amount expended for each remaining year of the unexpired term of twenty years:—Held, that this agreement conferred on A. and B. such a beneficial interest in the land as constituted them owners within the interpretation clause of the Lands Clauses Act (8 & 9 Vict. c. 18), and that, therefore, the company was not entitled to enter on the land until it had satisfied A. and B.'s claim, as provided by s. 84. Rogers v. Hull Dock Co., 4 N. R. 249; 11 L. T. 42; 12 W. R. 1101. Affirmed, 34 L. J., Ch. 165; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1245; 11 L. T. 463; 13 W. R. 217.

Part of Land already Let.] — By parol, a dwelling-house and premises were demised for a year. The lessee "accepted the lease, and by virtue of the demise entered upon the demised land." Before and at the time of the demise, eight acres, included in it, had been demised to a third party, in whose possession they were, so that the lessee could not, and did not, enter upon them:—Held, that the demise was altogether void. Neale v. Mackenzie, 2 Gale, 174; 1 M. & W. 747; 6 L. J., Ex. 263—Ex. Ch.

What sufficient to create Relationship of Landlord and Tenant.]—The property of the soil and bed of the Thames, and of moorings fixed to the soil of the river, is vested in the conservators. W. used certain moorings on the river for the purpose of mooring his hulk, as a floating coal depôt, under an agreement with the conservators, to the following effect: "The conservators of the Thames grant to W. W. liberty and licence to fasten, and thenceforth keep fastened, his coal hulk to the moorings placed by the conservators in the river, until either party shall have given the other one calendar month's notice in writing. In consideration whereof W. W. shall pay the conservators, towards the expenses of placing and maintaining and repairing the moorings, the annual sum of 30*l.*" W. was assessed to the poor-rate as an occupier of part of the bed of the river:—Held, that the agreement did not constitute a demise, but only a licence to use the moorings, and that W. was, therefore, not an occupier, and not liable to be rated. Watkins v. Milton-next-Gravesend Overseers, 37 L. J., M. C. 73; L. R. 3 Q. B. 350; 18 L. T. 601; 16 W. R. 1059.

A., an owner of lace-machines, paid 12*s.* a week to B. for permission to place the machines in a room in B.'s factory, and for free ingress and egress to the room for himself and workmen for the purpose of working and inspecting the machines. B. supplied the necessary steam-power for working the machines, payment for which was included in the above sum:—Held, that there was no demise to A. of any part of the room, and no relation of landlord and tenant created between him and B. Hancock v. Austin, 14 C. B. (N.S.) 634; 32 L. J., C. P. 252; 8 L. T. 429; 11 W. R. 833.

By a deed between A. and B., holders of shares in a building society, and C. and D., trustees of the society, reciting the formation of the society, that A. and B. were entitled to a certain sum out of the funds in respect of their shares, and that for the security of all the payments to become due in respect of the shares, A. and B. had agreed to execute the assurance thereby made; A. and B. conveyed premises to C. and D. as such trustees, upon trust to permit A. and B. to receive the rents until default in payment of their contributions, with a power to C. and D. and the trustees for the time being of the society to appoint a person to receive the rents in case of default, and a power of sale in the like event. The deed also contained a clause whereby A. and B. agreed "to become tenants of the parties hereto of the second part, and to the trustees for the time being of the society of the premises demised henceforth during their will at the net yearly rent of 200*l.*, payable on the usual quarter days":—Held, that this deed did not operate as a demise, so as to sustain an avowry alleging a tenancy under the trustees at the yearly rent of 200*l.*, the general scope of the deed being altogether inconsistent with such a construction. Walker v. Giles, 6 C. B. 662; 18 L. J., C. P. 323.

A. let to B. a defined portion of a room in a factory, with steam-power for working lace-machines belonging to B., at a certain sum per annum, payable quarterly; a deduction to be allowed in the event of hindrances in the supply of power beyond seven days in each quarter:—Held, a sufficient demise to entitle A. to distrain. Selby v. Greaves, 37 L. J., C. P. 251; L. R. 3 C. P. 594; 19 L. T. 186; 16 W. R. 1127.

Rule against Perpetuities.]—Although it is competent for a reversioner to execute a lease for lives for a definite ascertained term to commence as soon as an existing lease has expired, the interest to be taken must be capable of ascertainment within the period prescribed by the rule against perpetuities. The law relating to the rule against perpetuities as affecting agreements for future leases considered. Redington v. Browne, 32 L. R., Ir. 347.

Of Ecclesiastical Property.] — See ECCLESIASTICAL LAW.

2. CONSTRUCTION OF.

Omission of Word.]—When a material word appears to have been omitted in a lease by mistake, and other words cannot have their proper effect unless it is introduced, such lease must be construed as if that word was inserted, although the particular passage where it ought to stand conveys a sufficiently distinct meaning without it. Wright v. Dicksons, 1 Dow, 141, 147.

Meaning of Words in—Generally.]—It cannot be inferred as matter of law that words occurring in a lease are used by the parties in a peculiar sense in which they are understood in the district in which the property demised is situate. Clayton v. Greyson, 6 N. & M. 694; 5 A. & E. 302.

It is a question for the jury, in what sense the words were used in the particular case. Ib.

—— "Term."]—The word "term" in a covenant in a lease, may signify either the time, or the estate granted. Evans v. Vaughan, 6 D. & R. 349; 4 B. & C. 261; 3 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 217; 28 R. R. 250.

—— "To be left to the superintendence of, &c."—Condition Precedent.]—A lease contained a covenant by a lessor to do certain work, and at the end of the covenant were these words, "and the whole of which is agreed to be left to the superintendence of the defendant and the plaintiff's son:—Held, that this was neither a condition precedent to nor concurrent with the covenant. Jones v. Cannock, 3 H. L. Cas. 700.

—— "Heirs or Assigns"—Easement—Regrant by Lessee—Surrender—Merger.]—In 1820 A., B. and C., who were tenants in common in fee, demised a strip of land intersecting their estate to T., for a term of 1,000 years for the purpose of making a canal. The lease contained a proviso that nothing therein contained should prevent the lessors, their heirs and assigns, from using all or any of the demised land, or from granting any way-leaves, or roads over or across the same in like manner as they could or might have done if the lease had not been granted, but so as not to injure the canal or the navigation thereof, or the towing-path, or any works for the convenience of the lessee. In 1838 the estate was partitioned between A., B. and C., by deed, the reversion of part of the canal being conveyed to B., and the lands abutting on it to A. and C. respectively. In 1839 B. conveyed his reversion in that part of the canal to the lessee. Upon a claim by A. to exercise over that part of the canal the rights reserved by the lease of 1820:—Held, that the right of way across the canal was reserved to the lessors and their assigns as owners of the reversion and not as owners of the adjoining lands, and consequently that the conveyance by B. in 1839, by causing the term to become merged in the reversion, extinguished the rights of A. and C. over that part of the canal included in that conveyance. Dynevor (Lord) v. Tennant, 57 L. J., Ch. 1078; 13 App. Cas. 279; 59 L. T. 5; 37 W. R. 193—H. L. (E.)

—— "Her Assigns."]—Lease to A., her heirs and assigns, habendum to A. and her assigns, for and during the natural life of B.:—Held, in ejectment by A., the heir of B., that the words "and her assigns," in the habendum, must be rejected as repugnant to the premises. Doe d. Timmins v. Steele, 3 G. & D. 622; 4 Q. B. 663; 12 L. J., Q. B. 272; 7 Jur. 555.

—— "As the same was late in the occupation of C."]—A shop was demised to C., the landlord retaining the right of occupying the flat roof. Shortly afterwards the landlord demised an adjoining house to another person, with the right of walking and sitting on the roof of the shop. C.'s lease having determined, the landlord demised the shop to the plaintiff by the description of "all that shop as the same was late in the occupation of C." The lease of the house having afterwards determined, the landlord relet it to the defendant, with the right to occupy the roof of the shop as a photographic studio:—Held, that the words "as the same was late in the occupation of C." ought to be considered as inserted only for the purpose of identifying the property, and not of limiting the operation of the deed; that the lease to the plaintiff, therefore, gave him a right to the occupation of the roof, and that the erection of a photographic studio by the defendant was an unlawful act. Martyr v. Lawrence, 2 De G. J. & S. 261; 4 N. R. 312; 10 L. T. 677; 12 W. R. 1043.

Words struck out.]—A printed instrument, purporting to be a form of a demise of a farm, originally contained in the habendum words creating a tenancy from year to year, but on producing the instrument in evidence, they were found to be struck through, and were proved to have been so struck through before the execution of the instrument by the party charged. The remaining words of demise were "for the term of one year fully to be complete and ended," and stood immediately preceding those which had been struck out. However, many subsequent stipulations remained in the lease, which seemed to be only applicable to a tenancy for longer than a year, or determinable by notice to quit:—Held, first, that the words struck through might be looked at to ascertain the real intention of the parties in so erasing them, and consequently that the tenancy was for one year only; and next, that the stipulations inapplicable to such a tenancy must be considered as struck out, or as surplusage, unless the tenancy should continue for more than a year. Strickland v. Maxwell, 2 C. & M. 539; 4 Tyr. 346; 3 L. J., Ex. 161.

Covenants in.]—A proviso in a lease, empowering the lessor to resume any portion of the demised land which might be acquired for the purpose of building, planting, accommodation or otherwise will not enable the lessor to resume a portion of the land for the purpose of conveying it to a railway company discharged from the lease. Johnson v. Edgware, Highgate and London Ry., 35 L. J., Ch. 322; 14 L. T. 45; 14 W. R. 416.

By lease of a salt mine made 16th November, 1852, pursuant to agreement of 25th August, 1851, the mine was demised for a term to commence on 25th June, 1851, and the lessees covenanted to get 2,000 tons of salt annually during the term, or pay for the deficiency at the end of each year; and by another covenant they undertook, with reasonable diligence, to sink shafts to the rock salt in order to work and get it. The deed contained a proviso that if the salt during the continuance of the term should fail by any inevitable accident, then on payment of rent due and performance of all covenants, the term was to cease. After the agreement was concluded, but before the deed was made, while the lessees were sinking a shaft, it was found that brine had collected in such quantities as to prevent the getting of rock salt at all:—Held, first, that although the influx of brine would have been an inevitable accident within the proviso for cesser if it had occurred after the demise, yet as it happened before the making of the deed, although after the time from which the term was to be computed, it had no such operation, and the term was a subsisting term; secondly, that notwithstanding it was impossible to work or get the rock salt, the lessees were not excused from sinking shafts according to their covenant. Jervis v. Tomkinson, 1 H. & N. 195; 26 L. J., Ex. 41; 4 W. R. 683.

L. was the holder of a lease of premises from S. for twenty-one years, determinable at the will of either party at the end of the first seven or fourteen years. The first seven years would expire at Christmas, 1863. L. had expended considerable sums on the premises, for which he was to receive 1,800*l.* from R., to whom he agreed to assign the lease. The agreement contained these stipulations:—"If R. is ejected by S., the 1,800*l.* to be repaid to R. If S. exercises the power of determining the lease at Christmas, 1863, and R. leaves the house, 1,100*l.* are to be returned to R. If at Christmas, 1863, the tenancy of R. is continued, the 1,800*l.* to be retained by L." R. entered into possession, and his aunt, Mrs. C., resided with him. In May, 1863, S. gave notice of an intention to determine the tenancy. At Christmas, 1863, Mrs. C. became lessee to S., under a new lease, at a largely increased rent. R. continued to live in the house after his aunt, Mrs. C., had become the lessee. R. claimed the return of the 1,100*l.* under the agreement:—Held, that the agreement must be construed as applying entirely to a legal termination of R.'s tenancy, which having taken place, he was entitled under the agreement to the return of the 1,100*l.* Lucas v. Rideout, L. R. 3 H. L. 153. S. C. in Ex. Ch. 14 L. T. 738, affirmed. See also post, M.

Lease and Memorandum—Read together.]—By a lease reciting that A., one of the lessors, was an original lessee for the term of his natural life, and that B., the other, was a person to whom A. had granted a lease for a term of years certain, seven of which would remain unexpired on the 29th September following the date of the lease, A. and B. demised to the lessee the premises from the 29th day of September, for and during the two several terms thereinbefore mentioned (the rent to be paid to both the lessors and their executors), if the lessee should so long live, and the term and estate of the original lessee should so long continue. Under the lease there was subscribed a memorandum, providing that the rent reserved should be paid during the first seven years to the intermediate lessee, and afterwards to the original lessee, during the term of thirty years, if his interest should so long continue; and that the new lessee, his executors, administrators, and assigns, should have liberty to quit a part of the premises at any time during the term, upon giving twelve months' notice:—Held, that the lease and memorandum must be taken together, and construed as one entire instrument; and that the intention of the parties, expressed by both, was to extend the habendum beyond the term of the life of the lessee, and give him a lease for thirty-seven years, determinable on the death of the lessor. Weak d. Taylor v. Escott, 9 Price, 595.

Lease for 2,000 years.]—A lease for 2,000 years is not to be construed as a lease, but merely as a term to attend the inheritance. Denn d. Bargwell v. Barnard, Cowp. 595.

When an "alienation."]—A lease of seventy-seven years is an alienation within the meaning of the clauses of an entail prohibiting "alienation" and making void "dispositions" of the lands entailed. Elliott v. Pott, 3 Bligh. 134.

Must be Uniform.]—A. being tenant to B. under a lease containing covenants, by which the former was bound to fetch seventy-five bushels of coals from Poole yearly, and deliver them at the mansion-house of the latter, and also to supply him with as much good wheat as he should want in his family at 5*s.* per bushel, it was agreed between them that the lease should be surrendered up, and a new one granted, omitting the above covenants. A new lease was accordingly executed, and at the same time an agreement was entered into, whereby A. agreed with B. that he would fetch and bring to the dwelling-house of B., his heirs and assigns, seventy-five bushels of coals yearly, for twelve years (the term of the new lease), and yearly supply of B., his heirs and assigns, with as much good wheat as he should want in his family, at 5*s.* per bushel. B. having parted with his reversion in the farm, and also quitted the mansion-house in which he resided at the time when the agreement was made:—Held, that he was not entitled to maintain an action against A. for refusing to deliver the wheat at the stipulated price; that the agreement being entire must receive one uniform construction; and as it was clearly local in respect to the delivery of the coals, it could not be deemed personal with respect to the wheat. Coker v. Guy, 2 Bos. & P. 565.

Held, also, that no parol evidence could be admitted to explain the agreement, there being no latent ambiguity. Ib.

When extent of Demise is disputed.]—A., the owner of certain freehold houses and land, with a yard adjoining thereto, demised, by parol, several of the houses. The tenants were in the habit of passing over the yard, and using a common pump and privy there. There was no evidence whether the yard formed part of the demise or not. In an action by one of the tenants against the landlord for excluding him from the yard, the judge left it to the jury to say whether the landlord at the time of the demise had reserved the yard :—Held, that this was a misdirection, the question being whether he had demised it, and not whether he had reserved it. Hebbert or Herbert v. Thomas, 1 C. M. & R. 861 ; 5 Tyr. 503 ; 1 Gale, 53.

A demise was in the following words :—"All that part of the lands of G. marked in the map Nos. 10 and 11, and called the Lough Farm, containing twenty-seven acres of green pasture and improvable ground and thirteen acres of bog, reserving and excepting the thirteen acres of bog":—Held, that the words of grant ended with "Lough Farm," the rest being merely words of description, and that, therefore, the exception was good, as being of a particular thing out of a general. McCleary v. Cochrane, Ir. R. 4 C. L. 145 ; 18 W. R. 362—Ex. Ch.

Agreement as to Supply of Chlorine Waste.]—In an agreement for a lease from the plaintiff to the defendant of the Higher Works, the plaintiff agreed to supply to the defendant the whole of the chlorine still waste as it came from his still, neither adding to nor taking anything from the same, at a given rate per hundredweight, and not to use, or injure or part with any of the still waste, except to the defendant, so long as he should hold the works :—Held, that the defendant was bound to take the whole of the waste which, during his occupancy, came from the plaintiff's still. Bealey v. Stuart, 7 H. & N. 753 ; 31 L. J., Ex. 281 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 389.

Execution and Delivery of Lease Question for Jury.]—In ejectment on the title, the defendant relied upon twenty years' adverse possession, to obviate which the plaintiff gave in evidence a lease, the last life in which died within the twenty years ; but, though both the lease and the counterpart were attested as "signed, sealed and delivered" by the lessor, neither of them was executed by the lessee, and both, being seventy years old, came out of the custody of the lessor :—Held, that though the plaintiff was entitled, under all the circumstances of the case, to have had a question as to the fact of the delivery submitted to the jury, he was not entitled to a direction in his favour, and that the verdict directed for the defendant should stand. Miltown (Earl) v. Goodman, Ir. R. 10 C. L. 27.

Evidence to explain Grant.]—In 1855, S., an owner in fee of two mills, leased one to P., who carried on there the business of a bleacher. The refuse from his works was discharged through a drain, partly open and partly covered, into a natural stream or watercourse, 300 or 400 yards distant, and upon which the other mill was situate. This discharge of the refuse took place about seven times a fortnight, and polluted the stream. In 1858, P. surrendered his lease, and S. granted a new lease to the defendant. In this lease the defendant was described as a "bleacher," and the demise was of the premises "late in the occupation of P." There was a clause that all buildings erected by the defendant for the purpose of bleaching should, at the end of the term, become the property of S. In 1858 the plaintiff purchased both mills. The defendant discharged the refuse from his works through the drain into the stream in the same manner that P. had formerly done. The plaintiff, who carried on in the other mill the business of a paper maker, brought an action against the defendant for polluting the stream : —Held, that the lease might be explained by the state of the premises at the time it was granted, and the mode in which they had been previously enjoyed ; and that, thus explained, there was an implied grant by S. to the defendant to use the stream for the purpose of his business of bleaching, and therefore the plaintiff, who was in the position of S., could maintain no action against the defendant. Hall v. Lund, 1 H. & C. 676 ; 32 L. J., Ex. 113 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 205 ; 7 L. T. 602 ; 11 W. R. 271.

A draft lease was prepared by a lessor, in pursuance of a written contract, which was not objected to by the lessee, who afterwards refused to complete :—Held, that the draft lease could not be used for the purpose of controlling or explaining the contract itself. Heywood v. Cope, 25 Beav. 140.

Admissibility of Parol Evidence.]—Where by a lease the plaintiff had the use of cows to be depastured on lands described as "summerleazes" and "after grass" respectively, from 2nd February to 17th November, evidence was tendered at the trial of a custom in the country that a lessor should, notwithstanding such a lease, put cattle of his own on the lands called "summerleazes" up to 12th May :—Held, that such evidence being in effect evidence of the meaning of the technical word "summerleazes" was admissible to shew what rights passed in the plaintiff under the lease. Tudgay v. Sampson, 30 L. T. 262.

Insertion of Proviso.]—The Goldsmiths' Company entered into an agreement with the plaintiff to grant to him a long lease of ground on which he was about to erect new buildings. The agreement contained a proviso that nothing therein should give the plaintiff any rights of light and air over certain adjoining ground and buildings. A form of lease was annexed to the agreement, and the lease was afterwards granted according to the form, and contained an express demise of lights ; but there was no proviso in the lease similar to the one in the agreement. The Goldsmiths' Company afterwards demised the adjoining ground to the defendant, who commenced building so as to intercept the plaintiff's light :—Held, that the lease must be read as if the proviso in the agreement was inserted in the lease. Salaman v. Glover, 44 L. J., Ch. 551 ; L. R. 20 Eq. 444 ; 32 L. T. 792 ; 23 W. R. 722.

3. Confirmation of.

Acceptance of Rent.—Although, generally, the acceptance of rent by a person who is entitled to set aside a lease will confirm it. Doe d. Jolliffe v. Sybourn, 2 Esp. 667.

Yet acceptance of rent by a tenant in tail, on coming into possession, is no confirmation of a lease made by a tenant for life, which is absolutely void at his death. James d. Aubrey v. Jenkins, Bull. N. P. 96.

Nor can a lease which is void against a remainderman be set up by his acceptance of rent, and suffering the tenant to make improvements after his interest vests in possession. Doe d. Simpson v. Butcher, 1 Doug. 50. S. P., Jenkins d. Yate v. Church, Cowp. 482.

Acceptance by an adult beneficiary, after attaining his majority, of rent accruing under an invalid lease is not a confirmation of the lease or a bar to relief by having the lease set aside. Robson v. Flight, 4 De G. J. & S. 608; 34 L. J., Ch. 226; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 147; 11 L. T. 725; 13 W. R. 393.

By Heir.]—An heir in tail having received, for ten years, rent under a demise for ninety-nine years granted by his ancestor:—Held, a confirmation of the lease. Doe d. Southouse v. Jenkins, 5 Bing. 469; 3 M. & P. 59; 7 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 182; 30 R. R. 700.

Allowing Tenant to make Improvements.]—Where a tenant under a void lease makes great improvements with the knowledge and approbation of the landlord, he is entitled in equity to a valid lease, semble. Hardcastle v. Shafto, 1 Anstr. 185.

Lease by Stranger—Acquiescence by Owner.]—To a bill which alleged (amongst other things) that the plaintiffs, believing themselves to be entitled under a devise to a dwelling house and shop, entered into an agreement for a lease of the premises, then in a dilapidated state, to a tenant, in pursuance of which the tenant expended money in pulling down and rebuilding the premises; that the defendant, who was, as it afterwards appeared, the actual owner of a moiety of the property, knew the true state of the title, and had made a claim to the whole property, which claim he repeated a few days before the improvements were commenced; that he knew also that the improvements were being made, and that the plaintiffs and their tenants were acting under a mistake, and nevertheless permitted the works to be carried on without any objection during their progress; and praying that the defendant might be decreed to confirm the lease, and in the meantime be restrained from evicting the tenant: a demurrer for want of equity was allowed:—Held, also, that in such a case the principle is the same whether the owner and the party making the expenditure by mistake are strangers or tenants in common of the property; that the owner, having once and recently given notice of his claim to the property, was not, in order to exclude any equity in respect of the expenditure on the ground of mistake by the party in possession or of acquiescence on his own part, bound again to assert it when the expenditure began, or while it was going on; that, in order to exclude such equity it was not necessary that the notice of his claim, given by the claimant to the party in possession, should disclose any particulars relating to his title, nor, if the claim, which he made exceeded what he was entitled to, was the party in possession justified in disregarding it, or supposing it to be unfounded. Clare Hall Master v. Harding, 6 Hare, 273; 17 L. J., Ch., 301; 12 Jur. 511.

On Death of Lessor, a Tenant for Life.]—A lease executed by a tenant for life, in which the reversioner, who was then under age, is named, but not executed by him, is void on the death of the tenant for life; and an execution by the reversioner only afterwards is no confirmation of it, so as to bind the lessee in an action of covenant. Ludford v. Barber, 1 Term Rep. 86; 1 R. R. 56. S. P., Doe d. Martin v. Watts, 7 Term Rep. 83; 2 Esp. 501; 4 R. R. 387.

A tenant for life leased premises for twenty-one years, and, before the expiration of that term, died; the trustees of the remainderman, then an infant, continued to receive the rent reserved, and he, on coming of age, sold the premises by auction; in the conditions of sale the premises were declared to be subject to the lease, and in the conveyance to the purchaser the lease was referred to as in the possession of the lessee; and in the covenant against incumbrances that lease was excepted; the purchaser mortgaged, and in the mortgage deeds the like notice was taken of the lease, and the mortgagees for some time received the rent reserved:—Held, that the lease expired with the interest of the tenant for life, and that the notice since taken of it did not operate as a new lease. Doe d. Potter v. Archer, 1 Bos. & P. 531. And see Roe d. Jordan v. Ward, 1 H. Bl. 97; 2 R. R. 728.

The defendant came into possession under a lease from a tenant for life, whom the lessor of the plaintiff succeeded as remainderman: a money rent was to be paid; and, by a further reservation, the tenant was to carry, or cause to be carried, three cart-loads of culm yearly to the landlord's dwelling-house. At the trial this lease was objected to as invalid, but it appeared that the lessor of the plaintiff, at the Michaelmas after the tenant for life died, told his servant to go and look for carts to bring the culm home. The servant went to the tenants, and among others to the defendant, who accordingly brought a load of culm to the dwelling-house, other persons who were tenants doing the same. On the following May-day the defendant sent two other cart-loads of culm to the house where it was received, other loads being sent in by the tenants at the same time. The jury found that the culm was carried by and received from the defendant in the way of rent under the reservation:—Held, that such finding was grounded on sufficient premises, and that, allowing the lease to be void, the receipt of culm was a recognition of the defendant as tenant from year to year. Doe d. Tucker v. Morse, 1 B. & Ad. 365.

By Executrix of Mortgagor.]—Where by lease a mortgagee demised, and the executrix of the mortgagor demised and confirmed, and a power of re-entry was reserved to them or either of them:—Held, that it operated as the demise of the mortgagee, and the confirmation of the mortgagor's representative. Doe d. Barney v. Adams, 2 C. & J. 232; 2 Tyr. 289; 1 L. J., Ex. 105.*

By Infant—On Coming of Age.]—Where a party takes a lease of an infant's lands, and the infant, on coming of age, mortgages the property to the lessee by deed referring to the lease, this is a confirmation of the lease. Story v. Johnson, 2 Y. & C. 586.

When Lease is originally void.]—A lease made by a perpetual curate of a curacy augmented by the governors of Queen Anne's Bounty, without the concurrence of the patron paramount, though confirmed by the ordinary and immediate patron, is void at common law, and consequently is not set up by acceptance of rent by the successor to the curacy. Doe d. Brammall v. Collinge, 7 C. B. 939; 18 L. J., C. P. 305; 13 Jur. 791.

In 1786 a dean and chapter and P. granted a lease of premises for ninety-nine years, reserving a rent to the dean and chapter and another rent to P. This lease purported to be made in pursuance of leasing powers given by a private act of parliament, but was, in fact, not in accordance with them. The rents reserved by the lease had been from time to time regularly paid to and received by the successive deans and chapters, and to and by P. and his representatives. Quære, whether the lease was void or only voidable; but held, that if voidable, it had been set up by acceptance of rent by each successive dean and chapter, and if void, the payment and receipt of rent were evidence from which a demise from year to year by the dean and chapter would be presumed. Doe d. Pennington v. Taniere, 12 Q. B. 998; 18 L. J., Q. B. 49; 13 Jur. 119.

Action for—Parties.]—In a suit to establish a lease, all the tenants should be before the court. Brangan v. Gorges, 7 Ir. Eq. R. 283.

4. Renewal.

a. Covenants for.

i. When Perpetual.

Construction of.]—A lessor demised hereditaments to the lessee, his heirs and assigns, for the natural lives of the lessee and two other persons and the longest liver of them, with a covenant that the lessor, his heirs and assigns (upon the lessee, his heirs or assigns, "surrendering this present demise as hereinafter mentioned") should at any time thereafter at the request of the lessee, his heirs or assigns, "as often as one or two life or lives of and in the said hereditaments" should drop and be determined, renew and grant a further term "for any other life or two lives of any other person or persons to be nominated by the lessee, his heirs or assigns, in the stead of the person's life or lives so dropping or determining"; the lessee, his heirs or assigns, paying to the lessor, his heirs or assigns, "for every such renewal for every life or lives of such person or persons so to be renewed as aforesaid the sum of 40*s.* only, and at the same time surrendering this present demise to be cancelled":—Held, that upon the true construction of the covenant the right of renewal was neither perpetual, nor limited to one renewal for not more than two new lives, but was a right of renewal as often as any of the three original lives should drop, so that any such renewal might take place either on the dropping of any one of the said three lives, or after the dropping of any two of them, as the lessee might from time to time request. Swinburne v. Milburn, 54 L. J., Q. B. 6; 9 App. Cas. 844; 52 L. T. 222; 33 W. R. 325—H. L. (E.)

The habendum of a lease was in these terms:—"To have, &c., to T. S., his heirs, &c., for and during the natural life and lives of J. B., W. B. and E. B., or the longest liver of them, or whatever life or lives shall for ever or hereafter be nominated or appointed, added or inserted on the back of this indenture, or a label affixed thereunto, paying for each and every life so renewed a peppercorn, if demanded, yielding, &c." The lease did not contain any technical covenant for renewal. Semble, the habendum amounted to a covenant for perpetual renewal. Sheppard v. Doolan, 3 Dr. & War. 1; 5 Ir. Eq. R. 6. And see Fl. & K. 598; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 654.

A covenant, "that R., his heirs and assigns, would renew the lease, upon the fall of any of the original cestui que vies, and instead of such life, insert such other life as the lessee should nominate, and that he should do so as often as any of the lives now mentioned, or hereafter to be inserted, shall happen to die," is a covenant for a perpetual renewal. Palmer v. Hamilton, 2 Ridgw. P. C. 550.

T., by indenture dated in 1623, demised to W. lands, &c., in Ireland, together with the mines, timber, &c., to make sale, &c., thereof, without impeachment of waste, the lessee, his executors, &c., planting from time to time five hundred trees of oak and ash in the room, &c., during the lease to hold, &c., for a term of ninety-eight years, at a rent of 15*l.* sterling for the first three years, and 30*l.* sterling for the remainder of the term; and T. covenanted that "he, &c., upon request, would from time to time renew the said lease, and perfect such other further assurances as W. &c., should require," &c. The lease also contained a covenant of warranty of title, &c., and that in case of eviction, or that the premises should be wasted in war or rebellion, &c., that the rent should cease for the time. By an indenture dated in 1739, reciting the original lease, and the covenant for renewal, a further lease for ninety-eight years, recited to be in pursuance of the covenant, &c., was granted, containing a similar covenant. Upon a bill filed in 1827, claiming a further renewal:—Held, that the covenant was to be construed as a covenant for further assurance, and not for perpetual renewal. Browne v. Tighe, 8 Bli. (N.S.) 272; 2 Cl. & F. 396.

A., by lease, covenanted with J., his lessee, "that the said J., his executors, administrators and assigns, shall and may, from time to time, and at all times after the death or determination of any of the said lives, renew his lease by putting in any other life in room and place of the deceased, paying one peppercorn for such renewal, provided such renewal be made, or tendered to be made, within six months after the life drops":—Held, a covenant for a perpetual renewal. Atkinson v. Pillsworth, 1 Ridgw. 449; Vern. & Scriv. 157.

A lease was made for three lives and the survivor of them, and for the lives and life of such other person and persons as should be nominated by the lessee, his heirs and assigns, upon the death of any of the persons for whose lives the premises were granted, or upon the death of any such person or persons as should at any time thereafter be nominated for ever, according to the covenants and agreements for that purpose thereinafter contained. The lease did not contain an express covenant by the lessor to renew; but the lessee covenanted within six months after the decease of each of the cestui que vies therein, and of each person who should thereafter be nominated, to pay, in the nature of a fine for each person so dying, to the lessor and his heir a peppercorn if demanded; and powers of distress and entry, in case the fine should be in arrear, were reserved to the lessor and his heirs; and the lessor covenanted that the lessee and his heirs, paying the rent and fines, might quietly enjoy according to the true intent and meaning of the indenture:—Held, that this was a lease for lives renewable for ever. Chambers v. Gaussen, 2 Jo. & Lat. 99 : 7 Ir. Eq. R. 575.

An agreement in a lease for lives, "that upon the renewal or inserting of any life or lives a certain sum shall be paid by the lessee, his heirs and assigns, to the lessor, his heirs and assigns," does not amount to a covenant for perpetual renewal. Smith v. Nangle, 7 Cl. & F. 405 ; West, 184 ; 4 Jur. 476. Affirming 1 Ir. Eq. R. 119. And see S. C. at law, 1 Jebb. & S. 199.

A lease made before the Statute of Frauds, and now lost, being proved to contain an agreement as to the amount of a fine to be paid "upon the renewing of any life or lives," and having been seven times since renewed—an issue was directed to try whether at or before the making of the lease there was an agreement for a lease of lives renewable for ever. And a second issue to try whether such lease contained any clause or covenant relating to a renewal, and independent of the stipulation as to the amount of fines. S. C., 1 Ir. Eq. R. 119.

Quære. If tenant for life make a lease for lives, in pursuance of a subsisting covenant for perpetual renewal, and dies, has the lessee in such a lease a good defence at law, to an ejectment by remainderman, who has succeeded to the estate. Id. 133.

In 1792 A., seised in fee of the lands of K., demised to B., with liberty to raise and sell limestone, reserving to the lessor and his heirs, and to his tenants on adjoining lands, the right also of raising limestone, to hold for one life or thirty-one years, with covenant by A. to renew, subject to like rents and covenants :—Held, 1. That a devisee for life under the will of A. was bound to execute one renewal only, and having executed a second it did not bind the remainderman. 2. The second renewal did not operate as a surrender of the first, though expressly stated so to do. 3. B. had no right to delegate to more persons than one his right of raising and selling limestone. Swan v. Colclough, Hay. & J. 807.

A. granted a lease and covenanted that he would always, at any time when requested by the lessees, &c., demise the premises for the further term of thirty-one years, in which new lease were to be contained the same rents, covenants, articles, clauses, provisoes and agreements :—Held, that this amounted to a covenant for perpetual renewal. Copper Mining Co. v. Beach, 13 Beav. 478.

A testator covenanted for a perpetual renewal of a lease :—Held, that the proper form of lease to be granted by trustees was a demise for the new term, reciting the original covenant by the testator. Ib.

Although, primâ facie, a lessor shall not be taken to have intended to enter into a covenant for perpetual renewal, yet if there are in the lease expressions indicative of such an intention, the court will give effect thereto. Hare v. Burges, 4 Kay & J. 45 ; 27 L. J., Ch. 86 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1294 ; 6 W. R. 144.

Lease for lives, with a covenant on the death of either of the cestui que vies to execute a renewed lease at the same rent, and subject to the same covenants, "including this present covenant" :—Held, a covenant for perpetual renewal, and lessee entitled to have inserted in the renewed lease a covenant for renewal totidem verbis with that contained in the original lease, but with the name of the new cestui que vie substituted for that of the deceased. Ib.

Distinction as to the form of the renewed lease in this respect, where the reversion has become vested in a trustee. Ib.

Quære, as to right to perpetual renewal from construction of lease. Dowling v. Mill, 1 Madd. 541.

—— By Acts of Lessor.]—A. demised to B., for the life of B., and also for the lives of C. and D., and covenanted that if B., his heirs, &c., should be minded at the decease of B., C. and D., or any of them, to surrender the demise, and take a new lease, and thereby add a new life to the then two in being in lieu of the life so dying, then A., his heirs, &c., upon payment for every life so to be added, in lieu of the life of every of them so dying, would grant a lease for the lives of the two persons named in the former lease, and of such other person as B., his heirs, &c., should appoint in lieu of the person named in the preceding lease, as the same should respectively die, under the same rent and covenants ; there had been successive renewals from the time of a former lease, granted by the ancestor of A., and in each a like covenant for renewal : —Held, that A. and his ancestors had, by their own acts, construed this to be a covenant for a perpetual renewal. Cook v. Booth, Cowp. 819.

A contract for perpetual renewal will be specifically executed if clearly appearing, but is not to be inferred from a general provision for similar covenants. The construction of such a covenant is the same in equity as at law, and is not to be affected by the acts of the parties. Iggulden v. May, 9 Ves. 325 ; 7 East, 237 ; 3 Smith, 269 ; 2 Bos. & P. (N.R.) 449 ; 8 R. R. 623. And see 9 R. R. 104, n.

ii. Tending to a Perpetuity.

Insertion of covenant for renewal of lease in renewed lease enforced, though tending to perpetuity. Bridges v. Hitchcock, 5 Bro. P. C. 6.

By a deed dated 1529, conveying lands to a municipal corporation for charitable purposes, the corporation covenanted that when a term of ninety-nine years in a farm, part of the hereditaments granted, should expire, if any of the heirs of the body of a person named in the grant, becoming of consanguinity and kindred of the grantor, should come, claim and make lawful request of the corporation to have a new grant and lease to him or her, to be made within one year next after it should fortune the same farm to be void and come into the hands of the corporation, that then and as often as any such chance should fall, the corporation, upon such request to them so made, should make or cause to be made a new lease and grant of the farm to such heir, so making request, for thirty-one years, and no more nor less, reserving to them and their successors twenty marks of annual rent during the term. The corporation from time to time granted renewed leases under this covenant, the last lease being granted in 1815. In 1723 a decree was made ordering the corporation to grant a fresh lease according to the covenant, and in 1732 a decree was made for carrying out the former decree, with a variation arising from subsequent circumstances, but on neither occasion was the question of remoteness raised, nor was the attorney-general a party to the proceedings, the suits not being hostile as against the corporation, who did not dispute the right to renewal :—Held, that the covenant did not create a right in the nature of an estate tail, but was intended to confer a right on the persons who at the expiration of each lease should for the time being answer the description of heirs of the body of W., and that it was therefore void as tending to a perpetuity. Hope v. Gloucester Corporation, 7 De G. M. & G. 647; 25 L. J., Ch. 145; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 27; 4 W. R. 138. And see S. C., 1 Jur. (N.S.) 320.

Held, also, that as the question of perpetuity was not raised in, nor was the attorney-general a party to, the old suits for granting fresh leases, the decrees in those suits did not establish the validity of the covenant as against the charity. Ib.

Although presumptions are made in support of long possession and ancient usage, no such presumption could be made as would establish such a right to renewal as was provided for by the covenant in question, semble. Ib.

iii. On Whom Binding.

Assignee of Reversion.]—A., seised in fee, by registered deed conveyed lands to a trustee, upon trust to sell and pay debts and incumbrances, and the residue to himself. Subsequently A., in 1782, for valuable consideration, by registered deed demised the lands to B. (who did not appear to have had notice of the trust deed) for lives renewable for ever, subject to a lease thereof then subsisting. The rent reserved was equal in amount to the rent payable under the sub-lease. In 1789 the lands were sold to N. under a decree in an administration suit instituted before 1782 by a judgment creditor of a former owner of them against A. and his trustee, who joined in conveying the lands to N. It was not shewn that A. had been served with subpœna in that suit before the making of the lease of 1782, when he purchased. The purchase-money was applied in payment of incumbrances created prior to 1782. The last life in the lease of 1782 died in 1835, and the sub-lease determined in 1839, and shortly afterwards a claim for a renewal of the lease of 1782 was for the first time made by the heir-at-law of B.:—Held, that N. having, without notice of the plaintiff's equity, acquired the prior legal estate from the trustee of A., and the entire equitable interest by the application of his purchase-money in payment of prior incumbrances, was not bound to renew the lease of 1782: and also that the laches of the parties deriving under the lease in claiming a renewal, or obtaining a recognition of the title was, under the circumstances, a bar to their suit. Drew v. Norbury (Earl), 3 Jo. & Lat. 267; 9 Ir. Eq. R. 171, 524.

Covenants for perpetual renewal of leases are considered as real agreements, and go with the land, and therefore will affect even the legal interest of those who take the estate, with notice of these leases and covenants. Shelburne (Earl) v. Biddulph, 6 Bro. P. C. 363.

A covenant for perpetual renewal, entered into by a person having a limited interest in lands, does not bind the estate, and therefore, if his assignee acquires the inheritance, it is not bound by the covenant. Brereton v. Tuohey, 8 Ir. Ch. R. 190.

In a suit for renewal, though the defendant be not proved to be the assignee of the reversion, so as to compel him to renew, yet a case may be made for a perpetual injunction to restrain him from executing his habere at law. Hamilton v. Patten, 1 Ir. Eq. R. 341.

Where lease, not warranted by power, is granted by tenant for life, containing covenant for perpetual renewal, the reversioner, by accepting for many years after he comes into possession the rent reserved upon the lease, does not confirm it so far as to make the covenant of renewal binding on him. Higgins v. Rosse, 3 Bligh, 113.

A. demises lands to B. and his heirs, for the lives of O., P. and Q., and the longest liver of them, and grants the reversion to X. In the original demise is a covenant by A., for himself, his heirs, executors and administrators, that if O., P. or Q. shall die, and B. shall within twelve months demand a renewal, and name another cestui que vie, A., or the person entitled to the reversion, would, on the payment of a fine and surrender of the old lease, grant to B., his heirs and assigns, a new lease, for the life of such nominee, and of such of them, O., P. and Q., as shall then be alive, "such new lease to contain all the covenant herein contained, including this covenant." O. died, and six months afterwards B. demanded a renewal from X., for the lives of P. and Q. and R., a new life named:—Held, that B. was entitled to have a renewal. Hare v. Burges, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1294.

A. makes a lease for three years, and in consideration of the lessee's laying out 100*l.* in improvements covenants, at the end of the term, to grant a new lease at the same rent. Purchaser of the inheritance decreed to make good the covenant. Richardson v. Sydenham, 2 Vern. 447.

C., being about to marry, applied to A., his landlord, and requested him to change a cestui que vie in his lease, by inserting in the place of an old life the name of his intended wife, which A., by letter, promised to do; and upon the faith of such promise, the marriage was had, and the demised premises settled upon the wife. Upon a bill by the wife (C. being dead), it was held that she would have been entitled to a specific execution against A., and the estate of A. having been sold to O., who was deemed, under the circumstances, to have had notice of the agreement, he was decreed specifically to perform it. Crofton v. Ormsby, 2 Sch. & Lef. 583; 9 R. R. 107.

Mortgagee of Reversion.]—A. being seised of three denominations of land for three lives, renewable for ever, mortgaged her interest in the entire, to secure the repayment of 1,500*l.*, and afterwards in 1787 sold her interest in one denomination to J., and demised the two other denominations to B. to hold for three lives renewable for ever, at the rent of 140*l.* 9*s.* 3*d.* per annum, payable half-yearly on the 25th March and 29th September. In 1796 C., the mortgagee, filed a bill of foreclosure, to which J., but not B., was made a party; and having obtained a decree for a sale the lands were in 1803 purchased by a trustee for himself, and by whom they were soon after conveyed to him. From 1803 to 1827, the rent reserved by the lease of 1787 was paid from time to time to C., who gave receipts for the amount as falling due in May and November. In October, 1827, the rent being considerably in arrear, a notice was served on B. to quit at May following, and in Trinity Term, 1828, an ejectment on the title was brought by C. on a demise subsequent to the 1st May. In this action C. was ultimately defeated, a point saved at the trial with respect to the gale days having been ruled against him. In 1812 one cestui que vie died, and another in 1823. In October, 1828, B. tendered to C. an engrossed lease, together with the sum of 250*l.* 1*s.* 0*d.*, which, by an account stated, appeared to be the full amount of rent and fines then due, but offering to pay any further sum which might be found due, and demanded a renewal. The renewal was refused on the ground that B. was only tenant from year to year to C., the lease of 1787 being subsequent to the mortgage. But on a bill filed by B. for renewal:—Held, that that lease, though not originally binding on C., was nevertheless by his conduct established against him; and that B. was entitled to renewal of his interest, notwithstanding the arrears into which he had fallen, upon payment of all rent and fines. Lysaght v. Callinan, Hayes, 141.

Devisee of Reversion.]—In 1792 A., seised in fee of the lands of K., demised to B., with liberty to raise and sell limestone, reserving to the lessor and his heirs, and to his tenants on adjoining lands, the right also of raising limestone, to hold for one life or thirty-one years, with covenant by A. to renew, subject to like rents and covenants:—Held, 1. That a devisee for life under the will of A. was bound to execute one renewal only, and having executed a second it did not bind the remainderman. 2. The second renewal did not operate as a surrender of the first, though expressly stated so to do. 3. B. had no right to delegate to more persons than one his right of raising and selling limestone. Swan v. Colclough, Hay. & J. 807.

A copyholder agreed to demise a tenement within the manor for sixty-three years on a building lease, and, as the custom did not allow a lease to be made for more than twenty-one years, the copyholder agreed to execute a lease for twenty-one years with a covenant for himself, his heirs and assigns, to renew the lease for a further term of twenty-one years at the expiration of the first, and for a further term of twenty-one years at the expiration of the second term. The copyholder died before the lease was executed, having devised the premises to a trustee:—Held, on a bill by the lessee against the trustee for specific performance, that the trustee having no beneficial interest in the estate was not bound in the lease for twenty-one years to enter into any covenant for the renewal of the lease at the expiration of that term, and that he could only be required to covenant against his own acts. Whether, if the trustee had brought his bill for specific performance against the lessee, the lessee would have been compelled to perform the contract if the trustee had declined to covenant for renewal, quære. Worley v. Frampton, 5 Hare, 560; 16 L. J., Ch. 102; 10 Jur. 1092.

Heir-at-Law.]—An heir-at-law is not bound by his ancestor having executed an intermediate renewal in pursuance of a supposed covenant. Browne v. Tighe, Hayes, 158.

A. P. and C. P. being seised in fee, as coheiresses of the lands of C. and other lands, A. P., on her marriage with Sir H. C., by indenture of 1730, settled her moiety on Sir H. C. for life, with remainder to his first and other sons in tail male; and thereby Sir H. C. and A., his wife, were empowered to demise or join with the owner of the other moiety in demising the settled land for three lives, or any number of years determinable on three lives. In 1732 Sir H. C., A., his wife, and C.P. demised to H. B. and his heirs the lands of B., for three lives renewable for ever, and covenanted to warrant and defend the premises to H. B. and his heirs, freed from all former gifts, grants, uses, entails, and other charges, whatever, by them theretofore made. In 1757, on the marriage of H. C., the son of Sir H. C., a partition by writ was made between Sir H. C. and C. P., and the lands of B. were allotted to Sir H. C. subject to the lease to A. B., and were, with the consent of H.C., conveyed by C. P. to Sir H. C., subject to the lease. Afterwards Sir H. C. and his son suffered a recovery of the lands, and by deed of August, 1775, settled them to the use of Sir H. C. for life, remainder to H. C. for life, remainder to his first and other sons in tail male. Sir H. C. died, having by his will devised and bequeathed all his unsettled real and personal property to his son, H. C., whom he appointed as his executor. C. P. also died, leaving H. C. her heir-at-law, and as such he became entitled to considerable real estates belonging to C. P. All the lives in the lease of 1732 having died, H. C. refused to renew it, and brought an ejectment on the title for the recovery of the lands thereby demised. The plaintiff thereupon filed his bill, charging that H. C., having derived a considerable estate in right of, and as heir to C. P., was bound to make good her covenants in the lease of 1732, and praying for a renewal of the lease of 1732, or for compensation out of the devised estates of Sir H. C. and of C. P., and for an account of the estates he possessed as heir of C. P. The court decreed a renewal. Beere v. Cavendish, 5 Ir. Eq. R. 472.

Personal Representatives.]—A covenant for renewal is in itself a mere personal contract, and at law the only remedy which lies for the breach of it is a personal action; but a substantive independent covenant binds the covenantor and his representatives in respect of the assets transmitted. Chandos v. Brownlow, 2 Ridgw. P. C. 405.

Lessee of a term for years with a toties quoties covenant for renewal having died intestate, his administratrix, in 1806, subdemised the premises at an increased rent, with a covenant that she, her executors, administrators and assigns, would renew to the sub-lessee at the same rent, as often as she should herself procure a renewal from her head landlord. Upon the death of the administratrix, administration de bonis non was obtained by the defendant:—Held, 1st, upon the evidence in the case, that the sub-lease of 1806 was a due administration of the assets; 2ndly, that the sub-lessee was entitled as against the administrator de bonis non to a specific performance of the covenant for renewal. Hacket v. M'Namara, Ll. & G. t. Plunk. 233.

Specific performance of a covenant in a lease to take a renewed lease decreed against lessee's executors, who had entered and admitted assets. Stephens v. Hotham, 1 Kay & J. 571; 24 L. J., Ch. 665; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 842; 3 Eq. R. 571; 3 W. R. 340.

New Trustees.]—Trustees of a messuage and premises, partly freehold and partly leasehold, for a term, of which fourteen years were unexpired, but which lease was renewable by custom on paying a fine, granted a lease to W. of the whole for fourteen years, and covenanted to use their best endeavours to obtain a renewal of the lease, and thereupon to grant him a lease for a further term of seven years from the expiration of his tenancy, at a like rent. The trustees' power was to lease at a rack-rent for any term not exceeding twenty-one years. Before the expiration of W.'s lease new trustees had been appointed, and the reversion in fee had become vested in other persons, who would not renew the lease on the old fine, the property having much increased in value :—Held, that the trustees had no power to enter into a covenant to grant a further term at a like rent on the renewal of the lease, and that the covenant did not bind the new trustees. Salamon v. Sopwith, 35 L. T. 826 ; —C. A.

Stranger.]—Voluntary agreement to renew indorsed on lease by one not a party to it not binding. Dowling v. Mill, 1 Madd. 541.

Charity.]—The governors of a charity, in consideration of a covenant to lay out 2,000*l.* in building, demised land for the term of forty-one and a half years, and the concurrent term of ninety-nine years, if three lives named in the lease should so long live ; and they covenanted that during the first-mentioned term, when one of the lives should die, they would put in another life for the fine of 5*l.* The lease being void by 13 Eliz. c. 10, as to the excess beyond twenty-one years or three lives :—Held, that the covenant for renewal was not binding on the governors of the charity. Moore v. Clench, 45 L. J., Ch. 80 ; 1 Ch. D. 447 ; 34 L. T. 13 ; 24 W. R. 169.

Inn of Court.]—A bill will not lie against the benchers of an inn of court, relative to their renewal of a grant of chambers. Plea allowed. Cunningham v. Wegg, 2 Bro. C. C. 241.

Lessee—Renewal of Sub-lease.]—A lessee of a house granted a sub-lease to L., in which he covenanted that if he should at any time obtain an extension of the term or a renewal of the lease he would grant to L. an extension or a renewal of his sub-lease for the same period. A renewal of the lease was taken in the name of a trustee for the wife of the lessee for her separate use :—Held, that the lessee was under no obligation to endeavour to procure the renewal to himself ; that the question was whether the trustee was in reality trustee for the lessee or for his wife ; that in the former case the parties to the record would be bound by the lessee's covenant, and L. would have been entitled to have the covenant performed against them, but that as the trustee was in point of fact trustee for the wife, L.'s case failed. Lumley v. Timms, 28 L. T. 608 ; 21 W. R. 494—L.JJ.

Presumption in favour of Right to.]—Every presumption is to be made to support a right of renewal where from leases for twenty-one years at a small rent and fine, certain of the tithes of a parish had been regularly granted by the respective bishops of Ely, who were impropriate rectors of the parish, to the vicars for the time being. Att.-Gen. v. Ely (Bishop), 4 Russ. 102.

iv. Who entitled to Enforce.

Bare Tenant for Life.]—The appellant in this case having claimed the renewal of a lease from the heirs of the covenantor, pursuant to his covenant, they refused, alleging that the covenantee was a bare tenant for life. This refusal is a breach of covenant, for which an action at law will lie against the representatives of the covenantor. Macartney v. Blundell, 2 Ridgw. P. C. 113.

Lessee who has not covenanted to accept a Renewal.]—Although a sub-lease of church lands and tithes, containing a toties quoties covenant on the part of the sub-lessor to renew, does not contain a mutual covenant on the part of the sub-lessee to accept a renewal, the latter is not thereby prevented from filing a bill in equity to obtain a renewal. Morgan v. Gurley, 1 Ir. Ch. R. 482.

Person acquiring Title after Action.]—A plaintiff may rely on a title acquired in point of form after he filed the bill, if it be not inconsistent with his original claim, and is capable of having relation back ; therefore, when the devisee of an insolvent debtor filed a bill for renewal, and, the objection being raised, afterwards procured himself to be appointed assignee, and amended the bill stating that fact :—Held, that he could sustain the bill. Doyle v. Callow, 12 Ir. Eq. R. 241.

Lease obtained by Fraud—Purchase for Value.]—Where A., the heir of lessee, having a right to perpetual renewal, had entered into an agreement with B. respecting the independent lease of land held under renewable lease by ancestor of A., which independent lease B. had obtained from landlord by fraud and circumvention :—Held, that heir of A. and purchasers for valuable consideration claiming under him were entitled in equity to benefit of agreement between B. and A., and that heir of landlord was entitled to benefit of agreement so far as B. took any interest. Butler v. Mulvihill, 1 Bligh, 137.

v. When Fulfilled.

Derogation from Grant.]—A lessee of land with covenant for renewal obtained a renewal of the lease. The new lease did not contain the whole of the land demised by the former lease. Prior to renewal the lessor had given the government a licence to execute certain work by which the land demised was injuriously affected :—Held, that the new lease was a fulfilment of the covenant for renewal, though the subject-matter was not identical, and that the right of the lessee to compensation was not affected by the licence given by the lessor. Att.-Gen. (Straits Settlements) v. Wemyss, 57 L. J., P. C. 62 ; 13 App. Cas. 192 ; 58 L. T. 358—P. C.

vi. Specific Performance.

Agreement affected by Fraud.]—Equity will not decree a renewal claimed on an agreement accompanied with fraud. Davis v. Oliver, 1 Ridgw. P. C. 1.

F. C., tenant for life with a power of leasing for thirty-one years, demises, in 1749, for three lives to his attorney. M. C., his son, tenant in tail, four years afterwards, in consideration of 20*l.*, executes an agreement, which was endorsed on the part of the lease in the attorney's hands, to confirm the demise, and renew for a further term of three lives ; eleven years after this F. C. dies, and the articles are then registered. The last of the three lives died in 1817, and the representative of the attorney files a bill for a specific performance of the son's agreement:—Held, that the case was too suspicious to come within the principle of specific performance, and the length of time elapsed under circumstances which did not imply acquiescence. Blakeney v. Baggott, 1 Dow (N.S.) 405.

Vagueness and Uncertainty.]—Bill for specific performance of an agreement to renew a lease dismissed; the agreement being too vague and uncertain to be executed by the court. The insolvency of the intended lessee is a good ground of objection to a bill brought by him for the specific performance of a contract to renew a lease. Price v. Assheton, 1 Y. & Coll. 441.

Bill for specific performance of a parol agreement to renew, plaintiff having built a house. The only witness for the plaintiff proved an agreement different from that in the bill; two defendants by answer stated an agreement different from both. In strictness the bill ought to be dismissed; but specific performance was decreed according to the answers, with costs against the plaintiff. Mortimer v. Orchard, 2 Ves. J. 242.

Separate Covenants in Lease and previous Indenture—Variation—Alteration in Title.]—S., on the 5th January, 1746, being tenant in fee simple of lands in Tipperary, executed an indenture, which was, two days afterwards, registered under the Irish Registration Act. The memorial represented that S. had, by the indenture, demised, or agreed to demise, these lands to C., for three lives therein named, with "a clause of renewal after the expiration of said lives thereinbefore mentioned," provided that C., his heirs, &c., should, "within six months from the death of the last of said three lives, nominate such life or lives as he would have inserted," and pay all rent, and "the sum of 11*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.* for adding or renewing such life or lives for ever." The memorial was signed by C. alone, and he registered it. In February, 1750, S. executed a settlement in contemplation of marriage, by which he made himself tenant for life only in the estate comprised in the indenture of 1746. In March, 1750, he executed a lease to C., in which the indenture of 1746 was recited, and in consequence of some changes in the lands a change was made in the rent. The lease recited the indenture as a demise to C. for three lives, and the longest liver of them, with a covenant to "renew the same for ever, on payment of 11*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.* for renewing the same on the fall of every life, within six months next after the fall of each life." The habendum in the lease was for the same three lives; and S. covenanted that "upon the death or failure of the aforesaid life or lives, or any or either of them" (naming them), and upon C., his heirs, &c., paying "the sum of 11*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.* above the annual rent, within the space of six calendar months, and immediately after the death or failure of such life," and on nomination, &c., "S. and his heirs," &c., would add the life so nominated; "and so in like manner from time to time successively for ever thereafter on the failure of every other several life or lives in the said lease, or thereafter to be nominated." Renewals had, from time to time, been made by the successors of S. in the estate, sometimes after proceedings in chancery to compel the same, sometimes without such proceedings; but in 1845, G., the descendant of S., having absolutely refused to renew, a bill was filed against him by B., who had become possessed of C.'s lease. The bill prayed for a renewal according to the lease, which B. alleged to have been made in conformity with and under the obligation of the indenture of 1746. This indenture could not be produced, but the memorial was tendered and received in evidence. The defendant alleged that the lease was ineffectual to bind the inheritance, as it was made by a person who was, at the moment of executing it, only tenant for life, and he contended that there was no legal evidence of the indenture of 1746. He also relied on the difference between the terms of renewal contained in the indenture and those contained in the lease:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the renewal as prayed; that the memorial was properly admitted as secondary evidence of the indenture; that that indenture was to be treated as an original lease, containing a covenant, under the obligation of which the lease of 1750 was executed; that the obligation entered into in 1746 being by the tenant in fee simple, his performance of it in 1750 was valid, although he was then only tenant for life; and that the acts of the successive tenants of the estate, though not evidence to prove the existence of the covenant, became, when the covenant had been otherwise proved, evidence of the construction which the parties interested had put upon it. Sadlier v. Biggs, 4 H. L. Cas. 435.

Upon one of the occasions of renewal, the tenant for life against whom a bill had been filed was an infant. The Court of Chancery in Ireland ordered his guardian to execute a lease in conformity with the covenant contained in the deed of January, 1746. Semble, that order was authorised by the Irish statute, 15 Anne, c. 3. Ib.

Laches.]—Where the lessor in a lease of church lands, with a toties quoties covenant for renewal, was, as the court held upon the construction of the lease, entitled to enforce the taking out of a renewal from the tenant, but had neglected for a period of twenty-five years to do so, and permitted the tenant to deal with the holding as an ordinary tenancy from year to year:—Held, that the lessor had so dealt with the property as reasonably to lead the tenant to believe that the covenant for renewal was at an end; and that therefore the covenant should not be enforced in a court of equity. Pilson v. Spratt, 25 L. R., Ir. 5.

Covenant for perpetual renewal. Specific performance refused under circumstances, of laches, and alteration of the property, so that it could not be enjoyed according to the stipulations. London City v. Mitford, 14 Ves. 42; 9 R. R. 234.

Promise by Letter—Past consideration.]—A promise, by letter, to renew a lease in consideration of money already laid out by the tenant, is nudum pactum, and no specific performance will be decreed; nor is it varied by money having been laid out afterwards. Robertson v. St. John, 2 Bro. C. C. 140.

Absence of Consideration—Mistake.]—Bill for a specific performance of a covenant for renewal dismissed, it being either a covenant for perpetual renewal, and if so, obtained without consideration from the lessor, or else inserted by mistake; but there being no proof of its having been improperly obtained, a cross bill, to have it declared void, was dismissed with costs. Redshaw v. Bedford Level Governors, 1 Eden, 346.

Condition for.]—Where there is a lease with a covenant for renewal, the landlord cannot insist that the tenant shall pay collateral debts as a condition for granting a renewal. Fitzgerald v. Carew, 1 Ir. Eq. R. 346.

Unilateral Covenant—Notice by Lessee.]—A tenant of certain premises held them under a lease containing a covenant for renewal upon notice being given by the tenant six months before the expiration of the term. The tenant duly served this notice on the landlord, and the original term expired. The tenant refused to take out a renewal, but continued in possession :—Held, that upon service of the notice, the covenant to renew ceased to be merely unilateral, and could be enforced in an action for specific performance. The fact that the landlord did not commence the action for fifteen months after the expiration of the lease under the circumstances did not constitute laches. Dawson v. Lepper, 29 L. R., Ir. 211.

Informal Notice of Intention to renew.]—A lease of household property was granted in the year 1818 to the trustees of an insurance company for twenty-one years at a rent of 100*l.*, with a covenant that the lessor, his heirs or assigns, would from time to time, at any time before the expiration of the term, and also before the expiration of every succeeding term to be granted by every future or renewed lease whenever required by the lessees or the persons interested in the term, or any succeeding term, and upon payment of a fine or premium of 1,000*l.*, grant a renewed lease for twenty-one years, and in every such new lease there should be a similar covenant for renewal at or before the end of every twenty-one years, it being the intention of the parties that this lease should be renewable for ever at the option of the lessees, their executors, administrators, or assigns; and there was a covenant by the lessees that in case the option to renew was not exercised they would, before the expiration of the term, rebuild or reinstate the buildings and premises as a dwelling-house. There were two renewals of the lease, one in 1839 and one in 1860, which last lease expired on the 24th of June, 1881. The persons then entitled under the original lessor were G. S., who was tenant for life of a moiety of the property, and three trustees, of whom G. S. was one, of the entirety subject to the life interest. Under arrangements made by the insurance company this lease with other property was vested in five trustees upon trust to indemnify a certain class of stockholders and subject thereto for the company. One H. was secretary to these trustees and also to the company, and it was his duty to attend to the renewal of the lease. On the 23rd of June, 1881, G. S. gave notice to H. that the lease would expire on the following day. H. answered that the directors of the company "would of course renew the lease." Subsequently renewal was refused :—Held, in an action for specific performance, that it was not necessary for the lessees to pay the fine of 1,000*l.*, or execute a new lease, before the expiration of the term, but that it was necessary that notice of an intention to renew should be given before the end of the term; and that the informal notice by H. to G. S. was sufficient. Specific performance decreed, with payment of the premium and interest at 5*l.* per cent. from the end of the prior lease. Nicholson v. Smith, 52 L. J., Ch. 191; 22 Ch. D. 640; 47 L. T. 650; 31 W. R. 471.

Power of Leasing—Sanction of Court—"Best Rent."]—A covenant for renewal in a lease executed by a lessor under a power of granting leases in possession at the best rent is good, and may be enforced against the lessor, provided that, at the time for its performance, the new lease reserves the best rent that can then be obtained, and contains only stipulations then authorised by the power. But if at the time when performance of the covenant is claimed, the stipulated rent is not the best rent, the lessee is not entitled either to specific performance or damages, even though the original lease had been sanctioned by the court in the presence of all the beneficiaries. Gas Light and Coke Co. v. Towse, 56 L. J., Ch. 889; 35 Ch. D. 519; 56 L. T. 602.

A private act of 1828, relating to a testator's real estate, empowered his trustees to grant building leases in possession not exceeding seventy-five years at "the best yearly rent." In 1860, under an order in certain suits relating to the estate, the surviving trustee, in pursuance of the power and with the approval of the judge (some of the cestuis que trust being also before the court, and others being represented by trustees), demised certain copyhold land to a gas company (then in occupation under an agreement for the lease, which agreement had also been sanctioned by the court) for thirty years at the yearly rent of 30*l.*, the lessor covenanting to renew at the end of the term for a similar term at the like rent, if the lessees previously signified their desire for renewal by notice in writing delivered to the lessor, "his heirs or assigns, or left at his or their usual place or places of abode." The lessor had obtained from the lord of the manor of which the copyhold land was held a licence to grant leases covering fifty-one years from the date of the lease. Under the agreement for the lease and before the lease was executed, the company spent a considerable sum in erecting a large purifying-house on the land. Before the expiration of the lease the solicitors to a new gas company, the successors to the original lessees, gave notice in writing to the solicitors to the then trustees, the original lessor having died, of the lessees' desire for renewal, but the lessors declined to renew on the grounds (amongst others) that, as the fact was, the value of the property had very largely increased, that the original rent was therefore not now "the best yearly rent," and that the covenant for renewal was not authorised by the power. In an action by the company against the present trustees and their cestuis que trust claiming specific performance of the covenant or damages :—Held, (1) that the covenant was not ultra vires; but (2) that specific performance of it could not be enforced, as the original rent was not now the best rent; (3) that the act 12 & 13 Vict. c. 26, enabling the court to remedy defects in leases in certain cases, did not apply to the present case, there having been no "mistake or inadvertence" on the part of the lessor, nor "ignorance of title on the part of the lessees"; and (4) that on the doctrine of Bain v. Fothergill (L. R. 7 H. L. 158), the lessees could not recover damages for a breach of covenant arising from infirmity of title. Quære, whether giving notice for renewal to the lessor's solicitors was a proper compliance with the terms of the lease as to notice. Ib.

Person out of Jurisdiction.]—Courts of equity in Ireland have no power to direct the Master to execute a renewal of a lease in the name of a person out of the jurisdiction. The 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 17, omits, by an oversight, it would appear, to extend to Ireland the provisions of the 18th section of the 1 Will. 4, c. 65, which gives the court power to order renewals to be executed under these circumstances. Priaulx v. Mackesey, Sau. & Sc. 206. But see id. 208, n.

Against Charity.]—Bill to compel an hospital to renew a lease dismissed. Somerville v. Chapman, 1 Bro. C. C. 61.

Bill to enforce a claim of perpetual renewal upon usage, sanctioned by decrees, and upon expenditure, dismissed; as not supported by the custom of the country, or contract, not within the powers of the lessor, a charitable foundation; nor according to the true construction of the decrees. Watson v. Hemsworth Hospital Master, 14 Ves. 324.

A decree having been made for granting a lease of charity land to J. (who had been at great expense in recovering those lands) for ninety-nine years; if three lives lived so long, at the rent of one-third of the then improved value, and to be perpetually payable without fine; it was now decreed the lease should be renewed toties quoties without fine, but the rent not to be computed according to the value of the land at the time of the first decree, but as it should be when the lease should from time to time be renewed. Att.-Gen. v. Smith, 2 Vern. 746.

Decree against a corporation to grant a new lease according to a covenant for perpetual renewal, though the whole of the reserved rent has been for many years applied uniformly to one charitable purpose. Gozna v. Grantham (Aldermen), 3 Russ. 261.

Defendant to Suit.]—In a suit for the renewal of a lease, a person entitled to a portion of the interest sought to be renewed may be made a defendant. Butler v. Portarlington (Lord), 1 Con. & L. 1; 1 Dr. & War. 20; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 1.

b. Forfeiture of Right to.

Nonpayment of Rent.]—Upon a lease for lives, with covenant for perpetual renewal, more than one year's rent being due, judgment in ejectment was obtained, and an habere executed; but an arrangement was come to, whereby certain bills, at three months, drawn by the tenant, were received, by the direction of the Master, on the part of the landlord, who was a minor and ward of court, in payment of the rent, with a promise, that if the bills were not paid then the forfeiture was to be complete. The bills were not paid:—Held, that the arrangement so made was binding, and that if the bills had been paid when due the plaintiff would have been entitled to relief; but—Held, also, that in consequence of the bills not having been so paid the court had no power to decree redemption. Mulloy v. Goff, 1 Ir. Ch. R. 27.

Permissive waste of a mansion on the part of the tenant is not a sufficient ground for refusing a renewal. Ib.

A. being seised of lands under a lease for three lives, renewable for ever, demised for the same lives to B., with a covenant for perpetual renewal. No renewal fine was payable, and therefore the case was not within the Tenantry Act. The covenant was, to renew upon payment of all arrears of rent, within twelve months after the death of any cestui que vie nominated in the lease or future renewals; and the lease contained a proviso that the lives to be nominated by B. should be the same inserted in the renewals which A. himself should obtain, and a covenant by A. to keep his lease renewed, and give notice to B. within three months of each renewal, to the end that B. might then apply to A. for such renewal, at any time within three months after such notice; and that A. would, thereupon, upon payment of all arrears of rent, renew to her; provided that if B. did not pay all arrears within twelve months after the death of the nominee for the time being, the covenant should be void. Two of the cestui qui vies died in 1799 and 1811, and there was not a year's arrears of rent due after either of their deaths; nor did A. then obtain any renewal to himself. Very large arrears of rent were afterwards suffered to accrue. In 1828 A. obtained a renewal; there were then six years' rent due, but all arrears were paid, and a renewal demanded by B.'s representatives within twelve months after that:—Held, that the covenant to renew was not forfeited under those circumstances, and that the mere neglect to pay his rent, although gross, would not disentitle the tenant to relief in equity, and a renewal was accordingly decreed. Fitzgerald v. O'Connell, 6 Ir. Eq. R. 455; 1 Jo. & Lat. 134.

Semble, a case where nonpayment of rent is not per se such fraudulent conduct on the part of the tenant as will disentitle him to a renewal. M'Donnell v. Burnett, 4 Ir. Eq. R. 216.

Nonpayment of Fine.]—Where the assignor of a lessor of a lease for lives, renewable for ever on payment of a fine certain, gave notice to pay the renewal fines, and of breach of covenants by encroachment, &c., upon the latter of which a long correspondence took place, it appearing that the tenant was always willing to pay the fines, although no tender had been made:—Held, that the neglect to pay them for three years was not, under the circumstances, unreasonable; and that the tenant was entitled to a renewal, reserving the rights of the lessors as to the collateral matters. Trant v. Dwyer, 1 Dow (N.S.) 125; 2 Bligh (N.S.) 11.

Lease for lives of lands in Ireland, renewable for ever, is not absolutely forfeited by extinction of all the lives, and neglect to pay fines for renewal, even after notice from the lessor; under the particular circumstances of case renewal enforced. Butler v. Mulvihill, 1 Bligh, 137.

A., holding by lease for lives renewable for ever, demised to B. for a like tenure; and B. covenants to renew his lease and pay the fines. In 1810 a life dropped, which was the last surviving life of A.'s lease, and one of the lives of B.'s lease. In February, 1818, A. renewed his lease, and in July following he called on B. to renew his lease, and to pay a renewal fine and interest, and a septennial fine. B. refused to pay the septennial fine or interest, and took no further step until 1823:—Held, that the septennial fine was properly demandable, and that

B.'s right was barred. Hunt v. Sayers, Hayes, 590.

A. being entitled to certain premises under a bishop's lease by indenture of lease demised the said premises to C., to hold for the term of twenty years, with a toties quoties covenant for renewal. By the said lease it was provided, that if the said C., &c., did not pay or cause to be paid unto the said A., &c., within the space of three months after the said A. should obtain a renewal of his lease, and after notice thereof should have been given to the said C., the proportionable part of the renewal fine, and the costs and expenses attending the said renewal of such head lease, that then and thenceforth the said C., &c., should be for ever after barred from any right of renewal, and that the said A. might refuse to grant the same. On a bill filed by the personal representative of C., &c., for a renewal :—Held, that as the notice was one of facts peculiarly within the landlord's knowledge, the service of such a notice must be clearly proved, so as to satisfy the court of the intention of the landlord to insist on the forfeiture ; and that although there was a strong suspicion that the notice did reach the tenant, yet that a court of equity could not work out a forfeiture of a tenant's right of renewal on a mere suspicion. Lawless v. Grogan, 1 Dr. & Wal. 53.

Lease to A. for a term of years, at a yearly rent, and under and subject to the payment, at stipulated periods during the term, of certain sums of money in the nature of fines, with a covenant on the part of the lessor, at the end of the term, on due and punctual payment being made of the rent and gross sums or fines, at the times appointed for payment thereof, to grant a further or renewed lease. A. assigned to B. a part of the premises, for the same term and interest as A. himself took under the lease, subject to the payment of a proportional part of the rent and gross sums or fines (the amount of the proportion was not specified). C. afterwards purchased of the lessor the reversion of the premises expectant on the lease to A., and subsequently to acquiring the reversion, purchased A.'s interest in all the premises demised to A. by the lease, and not assigned by him to B. After this purchase by C., one of the gross sums or fines became due, but was not paid, and no proportion of it was demanded by C. from or was paid by B. :—Held, that the double character filled by A. relieved B. from the strict performance of the covenant, and that the nonpayment by B. of the proportion of the gross sum or fine was not, under the circumstances, a refusal to pay, or such a breach of the covenant as to deprive B. of his claim to a renewed lease of the property assigned to him, and a demurrer for want of equity was overruled. Statham v. Liverpool Dock Co., 3 Y & J. 565.

Where A., holding under a lease for lives renewable for ever, containing a covenant that he should within three months after the fall of each life give notice thereof in writing to his landlord, and within six months pay the renewal fine of 40*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.* on the fall of each life, demised to B. at an increased rent for the same term and with a similar covenant to pay the same renewal fine :—Held, that it was not sufficient for A. in order to work a forfeiture of B.'s interest, to shew, that in a conversation about the renewal after the falling of the lives, B. objected to pay the renewal fines until A. should first procure a renewal from his head landlord, but there should have been a distinct demand made upon B., calling upon him to pay the fines. Semble, also, that where there are joint tenants, a demand made upon one only will not be sufficient to work a forfeiture of the interest. John v. Armstrong, Ll. & G. t. Plunk. 392.

The mere non-payment itself of the fine for renewal of lease does not constitute fraud, unless the party has reason to know that the event on which he was bound to pay has taken place. Ib.

In a suit for a renewal, it appeared that in July, 1821, the landlord, upon the death of one of the cestui que vies, the other two being still in esse, served the tenant with a copy of a printed notice, not addressed to him in particular, but to all his tenants generally, calling on them, before the 10th of August, to shew their right to a renewal, and to pay their rents and renewal fines, and to have their renewals completed, otherwise that he would decline to renew. The tenant thereupon entered into a communication with the solicitor of the landlord, as to the renewal of his lease, and in January, 1822, a draft of renewal was served by his solicitor upon the solicitor of the landlord, for his approval. The case made by the bill was, that the solicitor for the landlord stated that he had not then obtained a renewal to himself, and that the renewals would be executed as soon as he obtained such renewal ; that the solicitor of the landlord did not take any steps to have the renewals executed, but kept the drafts in his possession ; and that since that time no further application had been made by or on behalf of the landlord to the tenant, to take out the renewal ; but that matters remained in that state until 1830, when the tenant tendered the fine. The case, as it appeared on the evidence for the plaintiff, and as relied upon by him at the bar, was, that the landlord's solicitor claimed the right of preparing the renewals, and undertook to prepare them, but did not ; and that the solicitor for the tenant, at various times between 1822 and 1830, made repeated applications to the solicitor of the landlord for the renewal, but unsuccessfully. It was proved that the landlord had obtained a renewal of his lease before he served the notice of July on the tenant, and that his land agent made frequent verbal applications to the tenant in the years 1821 and 1822, to take out his renewal, which the tenant declined to do, on the ground that he was not bound so to do. The bill was dismissed with costs. Cullen v. Leonard, 5 Ir. Eq. R. 134.

The substantive duty of the tenant is the payment of the fine ; and to this extent the furnishing of the draft of the renewal is available to him, that if he furnishes it bonâ fide, to enable him to fulfil the essential obligation of paying the fine, a delay in returning it will prevent the time running against him, so long as that delay occurs by the default of the landlord, but it will not exempt the tenant for any length of time from looking after his renewal. Ib.

Breach of Covenant.]—A. granted a lease for twenty-one years to B., with a proviso determining the lease, and giving A. a right of re-entry, on non-performance of any of the covenants in the lease, and A. covenanted that, at the end of the term, if it should not be sooner determined by B.'s acts or defaults, he would grant to B. a lease for a further term of fourteen years. B. paid all his rent, and continued in possession after the term had expired. A. then brought an ejectment against him for breaches of covenant during the term. B. filed a bill for a specific performance of the covenant to renew, and for an injunction to restrain the action. A., in his answer, set up the breaches of covenant, and denied having had notice of them till after the end of the term. Motion for the injunction refused. Thompson v. Guyon, 5 Sim. 65.

Under a covenant to renew a lease, there being no clause of re-entry, the lessor cannot refuse to renew upon the ground of breach of covenant unless there has been a gross breach. Semble, the breach must not only be gross but wilful. Hare v. Burges, 5 W. R. 585.

T., tenant under a lease for nineteen years, perpetually renewable on twelve months' notice before the expiration of each term, instituted a suit to compel L., the landlord, to renew from 1842 to 1861. In defence L. pleaded that the lease had been forfeited for breach of covenants. The suit, however, was allowed to stand still, and the parties then began to negotiate about a draft of a renewal, L. proposing alterations and threatening, if they were not accepted, he would insist on his original defence of forfeiture. Pending these negotiations, and the delay not being caused by T., the time arrived for T. giving notice of renewal of another term, from 1861 to 1880, which T. did not give:—Held, that while the lis pendens as to the existence of the former lease existed, T. was excused from making demand for a further renewal, it being inequitable in L. to insist on compliance with a covenant of which he denied the existence. Hunter v. Hopetoun (Earl), 13 L. T. 130.

A lease to two tenants contained a proviso for re-entry in case the tenants, or either of them, should become bankrupt, or assign the premises without the landlord's consent, or should not observe and perform all the covenants and agreements on their part to be observed and performed; also, joint and several covenants by the lessees to keep the interior of the premises in repair, and a covenant by the lessor that he would, at the expiration of the term, in case the covenants and agreements on the tenants' part should have been duly observed and performed, upon notice, grant to the tenants, their executors or administrators, a new lease for a further term. One of the tenants assigned his interest to the other without the consent of the landlord, and afterwards became bankrupt, and the landlord from that time accepted the rent from the other tenant alone. At the expiration of the lease the remaining tenant—the premises being slightly out of repair—gave notice to the landlord that he required a new lease to be granted to himself alone:—Held, first, that the keeping the premises in repair was a condition precedent which must be strictly performed before the renewal could be called for. Finch v. Underwood, 45 L. J., Ch. 522; 2 Ch. D. 310; 34 L. T. 779; 24 W. R. 657.

Held, secondly, that although the landlord had waived the forfeiture by acceptance of rent after the assignment, he could not be compelled to grant a renewal to one only of the lessees so long as the other was living. Ib.

The lease of a house contained a covenant by the lessee to pay the rent and keep the premises in repair, and to paint the outside and inside at certain fixed periods; and the lessor covenanted that the lessee should be entitled, on giving six months' notice before the end of the term, to have a further lease for twenty-one years "upon paying the rent and performing and observing the covenants" in his lease. The lessee applied for a renewal of his lease, but the lessor refused to grant such renewal, on the ground that the covenants had not been fulfilled either at the date of the six months' notice or at its expiration:—Held, that the performance of the covenants was a condition precedent to the lessee's privilege of having a renewed lease, and the requisite painting and repairs not having been completed, either when the six months' notice was given or when it expired, the lessee was not entitled to a renewal of his lease. Bastin v. Bidwell, 18 Ch. D. 238; 44 L. T. 742.

In a lease of house property for twenty-one years, the lessee covenanted to pay the rent, keep in repair, and insure, and the landlord covenanted that he would, at the expiration of the term (provided all arrears of rent should have been paid, and all the covenants should have been performed and kept), at the request in writing of the lessee, grant a new lease for the further term of twenty-one years, at the same rent and subject to the provisoes and agreements in the lease contained (including the covenant for renewal), and so from time to time upon the expiration of every subsequent term of twenty-one years, provided such request in writing should be given as aforesaid. The lessee expended large sums of money in building houses on the premises, and at the expiration of the first twenty-one years a new lease was granted in the same terms for twenty-one years. In both leases there were clauses for re-entry on breach of the covenants. Before the expiration of the second term, the lessee gave notice in writing that he would require a new lease. At that time one of the houses was much out of repair, and the lessee allowed it to remain out of repair, on the ground that from communications with the lessor it was doubtful whether a new lease would be granted, in consequence of an alleged forfeiture:—Held, first, that the condition precedent to a renewal was twofold—request in writing and compliance with the covenants; and that the double condition was not confined to the first renewal, but applied toties quoties. Job v. Banister, 26 L. J., Ch. 125; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 93; 5 W. R. 177—C. A. Affirming 2 Kay & J. 374.

Held, secondly, that the court would not interfere by injunction to prevent the lessor recovering possession in ejectment, the lessee not having within reasonable time proceeded to repair. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that there is no sound distinction between the principles as to relieving against forfeiture in cases of a covenant for perpetual renewal and ordinary cases. Ib.

By a lease executed in 1747 a member of the Incorporated Society demised to the society a piece of ground, and covenanted to renew the lease for ever. The lease contained a covenant, on the part of the society, to build and maintain upon the demised premises a house fit for the "reception and education of twenty boys and twenty girls, to be nominated by the society, according to the true intent and meaning of their charter": and a proviso for re-entry, in case the society should not continue to do so. Up to the year 1819 the society kept up a female Protestant boarding-school on the premises, but after that only a day-school, to which Roman Catholics were admitted. In 1830 they demised the school-room and land to a person who erected a new house, fit for a day-school merely, and used the rest of the premises for farming purposes :—Held, that as the charter of the society gave them power to make by-laws, those acts were not breaches of the covenant for renewal and formed no ground for refusing a specific performance of it, although the charter was expressed to be granted for the instruction "of the children of the Popish natives in the principles of the Protestant religion." Incorporated Society v. Rose, 3 Ir. Eq. R. 257.

Laches.]—A. and B. covenanted in a lease for sixty-one years, "that at any time within one year after the expiration of twenty years of the term of sixty-one years, upon the request of the lessee, and his paying 6*l.* to the lessors, they would execute another lease of the premises unto the lessee for and during the further term of twenty years, to commence from and after the expiration of the term of sixty-one years ; and so in like manner, at the end and expiration of every twenty years, during the term of sixty-one years, for the like consideration, and upon the like request, would execute another lease for the further term of twenty years, to commence at and from the expiration of the term then last before granted." Under this covenant the lessee cannot claim a further term of twenty years at the expiration of the last term of twenty years in the lease, if he has omitted to claim a further term at the end of the first and second twenty years in the lease. Rubery v. Jervoise, 1 Term Rep. 229 ; 1 R. R. 191.

A lease for sixty-one years of house property contained a covenant that the lessee might renew on certain terms at the end of each and every term of fourteen years on giving ten days' notice of such his desire. The lessee, or those claiming under him, continued in possession after the two first terms of fourteen years each had expired, and then before the expiration of the third fourteen years decided to renew :—Held, that the lessee was not precluded, by his not giving notice earlier, from claiming his right to have a renewed lease in the terms of the covenant. Bogg v. Midland Ry., 36 L. J., Ch. 440 ; 16 L. T. 113.

The houses were required by a railway company, who contended that the court had not jurisdiction to entertain the question of the future rights if it existed, or be compelled to make compensation on that basis :—Held, however, that the court had such jurisdiction. Ib.

T., a tenant under a lease for nineteen years, perpetually renewable on twelve months' previous notice before the expiration of each term, instituted a suit to compel L., the landlord, to renew from 1842 to 1861. In defence, L. pleaded that the lease had been forfeited for breach of covenants. The suit, however, was allowed to stand still, and the parties then began to negotiate about a draft of a renewal, L. proposing alterations, and threatening, if they were not accepted, he would insist on his original defence of forfeiture. Pending these negotiations, and the delay not being caused by T., the time arrived for T. giving notice of renewal of another term from 1861 to 1880, which T. did not give :—Held, that while the lis pendens as to the existence of the former lease existed, T. was excused from making demand for a further renewal, and had not lost his right of renewal, it being inequitable in L. to insist on compliance with a covenant of which he denied the existence. Hunter v. Hopetoun (Earl), 13 L. T. 130.

Lands were conveyed to a trustee, in trust, to grant a lease of the mines under the same to certain persons for forty-two years, and at the request of the lessees, made at any time thereafter, to grant a further lease of the same mines for twenty-one years, to commence at the expiration of the first term, the first lease to contain a covenant for renewal for the second term. The lease of forty-two years was made accordingly. Shortly before the expiration of the first term, the lessees applied for the renewal, which was refused ; no proceedings were taken to enforce the performance of the covenant or trust, for upwards of two years after the refusal :—Held, that so far as the title to renewal depended on the covenant, the delay or acquiescence would be a defence in equity. Walker v. Jeffreys, 1 Hare, 341 ; 11 L. J., Ch. 209 ; 6 Jur. 336.

Semble, that the lessees had an equitable interest in the trust, which would not be divested by the delay alone ; but that the lessees, in support of their title to a decree for performance of the trust, must shew that they had, by performing the covenants on their part, paid the price for which, on the instruments, the lessors had stipulated. Ib.

Covenant for perpetual renewal. Specific performance refused under circumstances, laches, and alteration of the property, so that it could not be enjoyed according to the stipulations. London City v. Mitford, 14 Ves. 42 ; 9 R. R. 234.

Right of renewal forfeited by the laches of the tenant. Baynham v. Guy's Hospital, 3 Ves. 295 ; 3 R. R. 96.

Lessor covenanted to renew the lease at the request of the lessee within the term ; lessee did not request, but executors do within the term ; lessor is compellable to renew. Hyde v. Skinner, 2 P. W. 196.

Lease for twenty-one years at 1*l.* rent, with covenant to tenants to renew from twenty-one years to twenty-one years, to make up ninety-nine years ; at the expiration of the first term, there being an arrear of rent due, and no application for renewal, lessor brought an ejectment and obtained judgment and possession : on bill filed for a renewal (accounting for the delay), and on payment of arrear and interest, it was decreed. Rawstorne v. Bentley, 4 Bro. C. C. 415.

The assignee of a lease for lives, which contained a covenant for renewal upon the dropping of any life, provided application were made within six months, having omitted, upon the death of one of the cestui que vie, to apply for a renewal within the six months, filed his bill praying relief, upon the ground that he did not within the six months know that the person was dead, or that the deceased person was one of the cestui que vies named in the lease. The bill was dismissed with costs, because the plaintiff might have known the facts if he had used reasonable diligence and acted with ordinary prudence. Harries v. Bryant, 4 Russ. 89 ; 28 R. R. 15.

Covenant in lease for perpetual renewal upon notice within one year next after the death of any or either of the life or lives ; informal notice, about five years after dropping of first life, with the allegation of accident and ignorance of rights, and a regular application after the termination of the second and third lives, both within one year ; lessee held not entitled to a renewed lease determinable on either three or two lives with similar covenant, but bill retained for a year, with liberty to bring action at law. Maxwell v.

Ward, 1 M'Clel. 458 ; 13 Price, 674 ; 28 R. R. 725.

Ignorance of party's own rights or instruments in his possession or power, in no way occasioned by opposite party, cannot excuse a non-performance of anything incumbent on party to perform. Ib.

Equity will relieve against an objection taken, that notice of an intention to renew was not given, according to the letter of the condition of the covenant, in writing. S. C., 11 Price, 16.

In a lease for a term of years, determinable on the deaths of three persons, it was covenanted that, on the death of either of the lives, the lessee should, within twelve months, renew, and pay a fine of nine guineas ; and each party bound himself unto the other in a penalty of eighteen guineas, to renew, and to grant and take the new lease respectively. Two of the lives died before the lessee made his application to renew, when he offered to pay the fines and a penalty, but the owner of the land refused to renew :—Held, that no accident will entitle a party to renew, unless it could not have been avoided by reasonable diligence ; that the penalty did not give an option to the lessee, and that a direction given by a former owner in his will to renew, only left the trustees to do what the testator himself would have done ; that if the lessee omit to renew on the death of the first life, he is not entitled to renew on the death of the second life ; and that communications which have passed between the lessor or solicitors, and other lessees, regarding their renewals, cannot be read in evidence. Reid v. Blagrave, 9 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 245.

Lessor for lives under covenant to renew on expiration of one, is not bound, if no application, till two drop. Bayly v. Leominster Corporation, 1 Ves. J. 476 ; 3 Bro. C. C. 529.

Leases for years depending upon lives are substantially the same as leases for lives, and renewals have always been decreed in equity where all the lives had been gone for many years, and no legal estate had existed in the tenant. Freeman v. Boyle, 2 Ridgw. P. C. 69 ; Vern. & Scriv. 414.

Construction of a covenant for a renewal where notice necessary. Eaton v. Lyon, 3 Ves. 690.

—— Irish Leases.]—In Irish leases, if tenant suffers the three lives to drop, without renewing, or without good excuse for such omission, the right is gone, and lease becomes forfeited. Bateman v. Murray, 5 Bro. P. C. 20 ; 1 Ridgw. P. C. 187. See also Kane v. Hamilton, 1 Ridgw. P. C. 180. Reversing Wall. Lyn. 172 ; and cases in Wall. Lyn. 190, n.

In cases of leases for lives renewable for ever, it seems to be an established principle with the courts of equity in Ireland to relieve the tenant, and grant him a renewal upon terms, without regard to negative clauses in the original lease, if compensation can be made to the landlord, and the conduct of the tenant has been fair ; and also to relieve against lapse of time after all the lives have dropped ; provided there be no gross neglect, dereliction or fraud on the part of the tenant, in which case the courts will absolutely refuse their aid. Magrath v. Muskerry, 1 Ridgw. P. C. 469.

Lease in Ireland renewable by A. to B., B. leases to C. at increased rent, with covenant to renew for ever to C. on same terms. B. covenants to renew with A. C. pays fines, and renews with B. B. never renews with A. D., A.'s representative, in 1793, accepts some money from C. towards fines due from B., and makes demand of whole fines from C., which C. neglects to comply with. A formal demand is made from C. by D. in 1799, who delays nine months, and then makes an illusory tender, which is not accepted :—Held, C.'s right of renewal is gone. Barrett v. Burke, 5 Dow, 1.

Formal demand is not necessary, but when made, time is considered from that period. But prior demands are to be taken into account in considering what is a reasonable time after formal demand. Precise sum need not be stated in demand. Id. 17.

Landlord may file a bill to perpetuate evidence of a demand made under the Tenantry Act on his tenant to renew. Keating v. Sparrow, 1 Ball & B. 372.

After a demand made, and neglect to renew when all the lives are gone, it is dereliction ; when but one or two, negligence ; and wilful default, when a refusal or neglect to renew in a reasonable time. To neglect renewing for three years after demand is made, is wilful default. Ib.

The plaintiffs held under a lease for three lives, with a covenant for perpetual renewal ; two of the cestui que vies (one of whom was the father, and the other the uncle, of one of the plaintiffs) having died, the landlord, on the 28th of January, 1832, served a notice on plaintiffs, calling upon them to pay the renewal fines and interest, and to furnish a renewal for execution. On the 17th of February, a draft renewal was furnished to the landlord's agent ; a blank having been left for the amount of the renewal fines, as the periods of the deaths of the cestui que vies were not then ascertained. On the 28th of the same month it was returned by the agent with some alterations, who asserted that one of the lives had dropped in 1804, and the other in 1818. The plaintiffs, on the 28th of September, ascertained, by a search in the parish registry books, that one of the lives had dropped in 1805, and the other in 1818, and on the 20th of October tendered the amount of the renewal fines, which the landlord refused. The plaintiffs, in the circumstances, were decreed entitled to a renewal upon payment of the costs of the suit, although it was proved that some time previous to the service of the notice of the 28th of January, 1832, they had been required to take out a renewal. Baldwin v. Bridges, Ll. & G. t. Plunk. 408.

A., seised in fee, by registered deed conveyed lands to a trustee, upon trust, to sell and pay debts and incumbrances, and the residue to himself. Subsequently A., in 1782, for valuable consideration, by registered deed demised the lands to B. (who did not appear to have had notice of the trust deed) for lives renewable for ever, subject to a lease thereof then subsisting. The rent reserved was equal in amount to the rent payable under the sub-lease. In 1789 the lands were sold to N., under a decree in an administration suit instituted before 1782 by a judgment creditor of a former owner of them against A. and his trustee, who joined in conveying the lands to N. It was not shewn that A. had been served with subpœna in that suit before the making of the lease of 1782, when he purchased. The purchase-money was applied in payment of incumbrances created prior to 1782. The last life in the lease of 1782 died in 1835, and the sub-lease determined in 1839, and shortly afterwards a claim for a renewal of the lease of 1782 was for the first time made by the heir-at-law of B. :—Held, that the laches of the parties deriving under the lease in claiming a renewal, or obtaining a recognition of their title, was, under the circumstances, a bar to their suit. Drew v. Norbury (Earl), 3 Jo. & Lat. 267 ; 9 Ir. Eq. R. 171, 524.

The fact of a lease being in settlement does not alter the landlord's right to the benefit of a forfeiture of the right to renewal by the tenant's laches. Townley v. Bond, 2 Con. & L. 393 ; 4 Dr. & War. 240.

If, after a forfeiture has been incurred, the landlord declare himself willing to renew, upon the condition of the tenants using expedition, this waiver does not set the matter open again ab initio, and the tenant must use the utmost diligence in taking advantage of it, otherwise his right will be barred. Ib.

Where a forfeiture is already incurred, and the matter has been put into the hands of the landlord's law agent, communications on legal matters by his land agent will not bind him. Ib.

A renewal decreed, notwithstanding a delay of four months after notice to renew served under the Tenantry Act, when the notice insisted on a term to which the landlord was not entitled, and the landlord delayed after promising to answer inquiries respecting the title made by the tenant, but with costs to be paid by the plaintiff. Moore v. Sayers, Beat. 530.

Where, on the dropping of one of the lives in a lease for three lives, with covenant for perpetual renewal, repeated applications are made to tenant to renew, particularly in 1798 and 1796, and he made no offer to renew till 1804 or 1805, when some conversation took place respecting the renewal, upon the tenant's relinquishing suit in equity against his landlord, but which conversation ended in nothing, and the landlord refused to renew :—Held, that right to renew was forfeited. Mountmorris (Earl) v. White, 2 Dow (N.S.) 459.

Where there was a lease for three lives with covenant for perpetual renewal, and one life had dropped in 1791, and another in 1838, and there had been a neglect to renew until August, 1843, when a petition was presented, under the statute 1 Will. 4, c. 65, to obtain a renewal from the minor representative of the lessor ; the petition was dismissed. Sheehy v. Bradshaw, 6 Ir. Eq. R. 397 ; Dr. 307.

If lease for lives renewable for ever expires without renewal, and landlord brings ejectment, tenant ought not to dispute his title, but give consent for judgment, and file bill for renewal. Wallace v. Patten, 1 Ir. Eq. R. 338.

Lessor being himself a tenant, under a lease for lives renewable for ever, makes a sub-demise, and covenants that every life added by his own landlord shall be also added to the sub-demise. On obtaining a new life in his own lease, he ought to give notice to his tenant, that he is ready to renew. Ib.

—— Penalty.] — Where a lease has been granted upon lives renewable for ever, with a nomine pœnæ in case of the lessee's neglect to renew, equity will not decree the lessor to renew, except upon the terms of paying the penalty. Donegaile v. Chartres, 1 Ridgw. P. C. 122.

—— By Sub-lessee.]—Equity will not decree the specific performance of a covenant by the mesne landlord with his lessee for the renewal of the lease after the lessee has wilfully neglected or refused to renew, and the nonpayment after demand of the fine which the mesne landlord has paid to the superior landlord, amounts to such neglect or refusal. Chesterman v. Mann, 9 Hare, 206.

An under-lessee, who is not himself bound to take a renewal of his lease, but who is entitled to the benefit of a covenant by his lessor for the renewal of his under-lease upon payment of his proportion of the fines and expenses of a renewal by the superior landlord, ought, if he complains of the amount of such proportion required from him by the mesne landlord, to apply without delay to a court of equity to assess the sum which he ought to pay, submitting himself to the jurisdiction of that court to compel him to pay a reasonable sum ; and if, instead of making such application and after notice from his mesne landlord that the fine must be paid in a certain time or his right will be excluded, he should delay the payment, the objection that the sum demanded from him was unreasonable will not excuse his laches. Ib.

The time from which the lessee will be deemed to have neglected or refused to renew is not to be computed from the latest time at which the mesne landlord might have procured a renewal, but from the time at which he applies to the under-lessee to contribute to the fine and expense of the renewal which he is about to obtain or has obtained. Ib.

Where there is a lease of church lands and tithes by an ecclesiastical corporation, and a sub-lease of part thereof by the first lessee, with a toties quoties covenant for renewal on the terms of the sub-lessee paying his proportion of such fines, costs and charges as the first lessee should have to pay in obtaining a renewal of his interest, and there is not a mutual covenant on the part of the sub-lessee to accept a renewal, delay on the part of the sub-lessee in taking out a renewal and paying such proportion when required by notice so to do by the first lessee, at a time when he has been called upon by the ecclesiastical corporation to renew and pay the necessary fine, is a circumstance which will be taken into consideration by the court of equity on a bill filed by the sub-lessee for renewal. Semble, in such a case, if the sub-lease be put in settlement, notice by the sub-lessor to the tenant for life under the settlement will be sufficient without giving notice also to the trustees of the settlement. What will be sufficient laches to work a forfeiture of the right to a renewal of such a sub-lease considered. Morgan v. Gurley, 1 Ir. Ch. R. 482.

Neglect to name New Life.]—Specific performance of a covenant to grant on the death of the survivor of three cestui que vies a new lease for one life, to be named within twelve calendar months after the death of the first of the said three lives, decreed ; though the new life not named within the time prescribed by the covenant. The lessee being surprised by the misinformation of the lessor's agent, and therefore could not name the life at the proper time, and there being no difficulty in ascertaining the compensation. The lessor affected by letters written to lessee by his land agent and receiver of his rents, who had the key of his record chamber, that being sufficient to constitute him agent for the purpose, and to protect the tenants in their fair transactions with such agent. Firman v. Ormonde (Lord), Beat. 347.

Renewal of a lease refused, the lessee omitting to nominate lives within the time limited by the covenant, and the injury sustained by the lessor not admitting of compensation. M'Alpine v. Swift, 1 Ball & B. 285.

Where a lessor covenants for the perpetual renewal of a lease upon the lessee's naming a new life, and paying a fine within a certain time after the death of any of the cestui que vies, a court of equity will, upon slight circumstances, relieve the lessee against a forfeiture, for not literally complying with the terms of the covenant. Ross (Earl) v. Worsop, 1 Bro. P. C. 281.

Concealing Death of Cestui que vie.]—Where a lessee wilfully conceals the death of any of the cestui que vies, and acts under such concealment for his own advantage, the lessor is not obliged to renew, but may take advantage of the forfeiture, and enter upon and hold the estate. Pendred v. Griffith, 1 Bro. P. C. 314.

Covenantor procuring Renewal on his own Life.]—If a lease for ninety-nine years, determinable on three lives, is conveyed in trust for A. for life, and A. covenants to use his utmost endeavours as often as any of the persons on whose lives the premises are held shall die, to renew the same, by purchasing of the lord of the fee a new life in the room of such as shall fail, it is no breach of the covenant if, upon one of the lives failing, he procures a renewal upon his own life. Scudamore v. Stratton, 1 Bos. & P. 455.

Relief against under the Conveyancing Acts.]—See post, J. 2, i., iii.

c. Fines payable on.

Amount of.]—A sum falling short of three years' annual value of the premises is not an unreasonable fine for the renewal of a lease by the duchy of Cornwall; and the rack rent paid by actual occupiers is a fair criterion of the annual value. Simpson v. Clayton, 4 Bing. (N.C.) 758; 6 Scott, 469; 1 Arn. 299; 8 L. J., C. P. 59; 2 Jur. 892.

Arrears of—Who entitled to.]—In the case of a renewable lease the sum calculated as renewal and septennial fines and interest is really compensation for the breach of the covenant to pay a fine on the fall of each life. Therefore, where the lessor's interest in a renewable lease was sold after the lease had been allowed to remain unrenewed until more than one life had dropped, and a large number of fines had accrued due:—Held, that the owner of the reversion, though the proper person to receive the fines, receives them only as trustee for the persons who were entitled on the fall of each life. Held, also, that the execution of a fee farm grant subsequent to the publishing of the rental, but before the sale, affords no ground to the purchaser to claim the money paid as renewal and septennial fines and interest. Brinkley's Estate, In re, 16 W. R. 356.

—— On Sale of Lease.]—When the lessee's interest under a bishop's lease is sold in the Landed Estates Court, and the customary renewal fine is stated in the printed rental as an annual outgoing, if any such fines are in arrear at the time of the sale, the purchaser is entitled to have those arrears paid out of the funds in court. Swiney's Estate, In re, 16 W. R. 357.

By whom Payable—Trustee or Beneficiary.]—Trustees of a will held a renewable lease upon trust for successive life tenants, with remainders over and the residuary personal estate upon trusts to pay all the costs, charges, and expenses of executing the trusts of the will:—Held, that the fine and expenses of the renewal of the lease should be borne by the beneficiaries ratably, according to their enjoyment of the lease. Baring, In re, Jeune v. Baring, 62 L. J., Ch. 50; [1893] 1 Ch. 61; 3 R. 37; 67 L. T. 702; 41 W. R. 87.

—— Persons from Time to Time entitled under Will.]—Where the first trust of leasehold property, held for lives and years, is to pay the fines on renewals out of the rents and profits, and the next trust is for the benefit of those who, in strict settlement, take freehold and copyhold property under the same will, the expenses of renewal are incidental to the leasehold property, and fall upon those who from time to time are entitled to the possession of it under the will. Shaftesbury (Earl) v. Marlborough (Duke), 2 Myl. & K. 111.

A devise of renewable leasehold estates for lives and for years, upon trust from time to time to renew the leases and out of the rents, issues and profits to pay the fines, fees and other expenses of renewal, and subject thereto upon trusts corresponding with the trusts of freehold property devised by the same will to the testator's eldest son for life, with remainders to his issues in tail, with remainder to his second son for life, with remainders over in strict settlement:—Held, as to the leaseholds for life, that under this devise the persons successively entitled to the leasehold estates for lives under the will are bound to sustain the expenses of all renewals occurring during the period of their respective enjoyment; as to the leaseholds for years, that the fines on renewals should be provided by an annual reservation out of the rents and profits of an aliquot part of the accruing fine. Shaftesbury (Earl) v. Marlborough (Duke), 3 L. J., Ch. 30.

—— Where Renewal becomes Impossible.]—A husband bequeathed his share in renewable leaseholds (which he expressed himself to be entitled to under a lease, but in fact held under a trust, whereby the entirety was vested in trustees, with powers for renewal) upon trusts to renew the lease from time to time out of the income, and to divide the surplus during his wife's life as therein mentioned, with a direction that after her death the same should fall into his residuary estate; and he empowered his executors at any time to sell the leaseholds and invest the proceeds in consols. Renewal having become impossible:—Held, that the will shewed not a mere discretionary power for the trustees to renew, but a paramount intention that the property should be enjoyed in succession, and that therefore the remainder of the term must be sold, and the renewal fund treated as capital, and not paid to the tenants for life. Maddy v. Hale, 45 L. J., Ch. 791; 3 Ch. D. 327; 35 L. T. 134; 24 W. R. 1005—C. A.

Contribution from Sub-lessee.] — Renewal decreed against a tenant under a bishop's lease, without having any contribution from his sub-lessee, he having covenanted that as often as the bishop would renew he would renew without fine with his sub-lessee. The tenant and his lessor are necessary parties, the sub-lessee deriving his title from their covenants. Revell v. Hussey, 2 Ball & B. 288 ; 12 R. R. 87.

A. B., being entitled to a bishop's lease, grants a sub-lease to C. D., with a covenant "that in case he, &c., should at any time thereafter renew or take a longer term in the premises demised than he did therein, then that he, the said A. B., &c., would within twelve months after such renewal, and in like manner upon every renewal, or further term of years, &c., renew to the said C. D.," &c. The representative of A. B., who had renewed with the bishop at a heavy fine, refused to grant a renewal to the representative of C. D. without his contributing towards the payment of the fine so paid by him to the bishop :—Held, on a bill filed by C. D.'s representative to compel a renewal, that the representive of A. B. was not entitled to any contribution, but was bound by the covenant in the original lease to renew with the representative of C. D. whenever he obtained a renewal from the bishop. Thomas v. Burne, 1 Dr. & Wal. 657.

A bishop's lease was granted after the expiration of the former one at a less fine, because the lessee was son to the old tenant, who died without assets to pay the fine. Another person was his administrator, but the son had made himself executor de son tort. The new lease was held a graft, and the lessee bound to renew to sub-lessee without contribution. M'Nulty v. Hamill, Beat. 544.

A sub-lessee of a bishop's lease demised to the plaintiff, covenanting to renew, and to use his best endeavours to obtain a renewal from his immediate lessor. He afterwards purchased his immediate lessor's estate. The bishop refused to renew, except at a greatly increased fine, which he paid :—Held, that he was bound to renew to the plaintiff without any contribution, in consequence of the increase of the bishop's fine. Lawder v. Blackford, Beat. 522.

A., holding under a corporation (of which he was a member), and in the habit of obtaining renewals on favourable terms, demised to B., at a certain rent, with a covenant to renew at the same rent as often as the corporation should renew to him. The corporation at length raised the rent payable by A. A. was bound, notwithstanding, to renew to B. on the former terms. Evans v. Walshe, 2 Sch. & Lef. 519. See 12 R. R. 88, n.

Amount of.]—It is usual and perfectly reasonable that in derivative leases the tenant should contribute to the renewal fines in proportion to the quantity and quality of the land comprised in his lease. Frankfort v. Thorpe, 2 Ball & B. 379.

D., a lessee of lands under a bishop's lease for twenty-one years, demised part to S. for twenty years, and covenanted to renew as often as he obtained a renewal from the bishop, the sub-lessee paying an acreable proportion of the fines and expenses in one month after notice of the amount, and on failure to pay, D. to be at liberty to distrain ; and D. covenanted not to omit the part sub-let from the renewal of the head lease. D. assigned his interest to C. :—Held, that C. might compel S. to accept a renewal and pay his proportion of renewal fines and expenses ; and that the agreement that S. should so contribute was not inequitable or unreasonable. Curry v. Stanley, Hay & J. 487.

A. being possessed of premises held under B. by lease, renewable from time to time on payment of certain fines and fees, demised them for a term to C., who covenanted "that he would from time to time, and at all times during the term, pay to A. or B. such part of the fines and fees which, on every renewal by A. of the lease under which he held the premises demised, should be paid by him in respect of the premises demised to C." A. afterwards renewed his lease under B. for a term of five years, exceeding the term demised to C. :—Held, that C. was not liable on this covenant to pay the whole of the fines and fees incurred by A. on the renewal of his lease to the above extent, but only a part thereof, commensurate with the interest which C. had acquired in the premises. Charlton v. Driver, 5 Moore, 59 ; 2 Br. & B. 345.

The contributions of sub-tenants to renewal fines, under leases with toties quoties covenants, are to be calculated according to the proportion which the annual value of the lands comprised in each lease bears to the annual value of the entire lands comprised in the original lease at the time of the renewal. Reference cannot be had to contemporaneous leases to ascertain how such contributions have been regulated on the estate. Interest is chargeable on such contributions against the sub-tenants from the time when they ought to have paid them, though the tenant had not then obtained a renewal. Molony v. Scollard, 12 Ir. Eq. R. 93.

The contributions to renewable fines of the tenant of a college lease, and his sub-tenant, with a toties quoties covenant for renewal, are in proportion to the annual value of their respective interests. Orr v. Littlewood, 11 Ir. Ch. R. 502.

In calculating the value, the rent payable by each is to be deducted. Ib.

If there were buildings on the land at the date of the under-lease, they are to be taken into account in ascertaining the value. Ib.

The assignees of a church lease, which was subject to an under-lease that had subsisted for more than thirty years, and of which twenty-four years were unexpired, covenant, on renewal by them of such under-lease, that they will, within two months after the lease under which they then held shall have been renewed, execute to the under-lessee a lease for such further term as would make up the full term of his original under-lease, the under-lessee from time to time surrendering his then subsisting lease, and paying upon every such renewal such a proportion of the fine as should have been imposed in respect of any new buildings erected by him. The next renewal, if taken at the proper time, would have enabled the holder of the church lease to make up the full term to the under-lessee :—Held, that the latter was only bound to pay a proportionate part of the fine which would have been imposed on such one renewal if taken at the proper time. Clutton v. Fleming, 8 Sim. 105 ; 5 L. J., Ch. 373.

—— Interest on.]—A previous renewal by the tenant of a see to his sub-tenant recited the payment of interest on the renewal fines, and contained a toties quoties covenant for renewal, and a covenant by the tenant to pay what fine or fines the lessor should pay to the see:—Held, that the sub-tenant was bound to pay interest on the renewal fines on obtaining the perpetuity, under the 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 99, s. 1. Brabazon v. Lucan (Lord), 12 Ir. Eq. R. 432.

In order to entitle a tenant of an ecclesiastical lease to a renewal under any of the statutes 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 37, 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 90, or 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 99, he must have or be entitled to a full renewal lease. Semble, therefore interest on renewal fines is payable by sub-tenants on obtaining a perpetuity under the 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 99, s. 1. Ib.

Semble, interest is customarily payable on renewal fines by sub-tenants of ecclesiastical leases with toties quoties covenants for renewals. Ib.

d. Renewed Leases.

Covenants in.]—A covenant for renewal is a covenant to grant an estate, and implies the insertion of such covenants as are incidental to the legal estate, having regard to the tenure; and a covenant for a lease contains a contract that it shall be accompanied by the ordinary covenants. The party receiving is bound to give that which those from whom he derives were bound to, and did give, by the original contract. Vance v. Ranfurley (Earl), 1 Ir. Ch. R. 322.

—— Ultra Vires.]—Bill for the execution of a covenant contained in a renewed lease granted by trustees dismissed, the covenant being ultra vires of the trustees. Bellringer v. Blagrave, 1 De G. & Sm. 63; 11 Jur. 407.

—— For Renewal.]—A. being seised of K. estate for life, remainder to B., his son, for life, remainder to C., his grandson, in fee. A., B., and C. joined in a demise of a part of K., and certain mills thereon, with the rights, &c., grist toll, &c., usually paid by the tenants of K., at the rate of one-sixteenth of the corn ground, as toll for grinding, reserving all royalties to A., his heirs and assigns, with liberty to A., B. and C., and their heirs and assigns, according to their interests, to enter to take the royalties at the pleasure of A., his heirs and assigns, to hold for three lives, with covenant for perpetual renewal. By the reddendum, the rent was reserved as to part to A., B. and C., according to their respective interests, and as to the residue to A., his heirs and assigns, with a covenant to pay A., B. and C. according to their interests, their heirs and assigns. There were covenants by the lessees and by A. as to the tenants grinding at the mills, a covenant for perpetual renewal by A. for himself, his heirs and assigns, and covenants by A., B. and C. for title, &c. The lands devised were, without the profits from the mills, inadequate to meet the reserved rent. A. and B. being dead, and a bill being filed against C. for a renewal:—Held, that C. was not bound to enter into the covenants as to mill duties contained in the original lease, on the part of A., his heirs and assigns; but that he was bound to enter into all he had entered into in the original lease by name. Ib.

Semble, that if the demise by A., B. and C. had not been as well for all future lives to be added to the lease, as for the original lives, C. would not have been bound to renew by the covenant for perpetual renewal on the part of A., his heirs and assigns. Ib.

Covenant in a lease to renew under the same covenants is exclusive of the covenant of renewal. Tritton v. Foote, 2 Bro. C. C. 636. And see 2 Cox, 171.

A covenant for perpetual renewal does not entitle the lessee to a similar covenant from assigns of the land in subsequent leases. The subsequent leases ought to contain a recital of the original covenant. Copper Mines Co. v. Beach, 1 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 84.

Court leans against construction of covenants for renewal with like covenants, that covenant for renewal shall be perpetual, unless clearly intended. Moore v. Foley, 6 Ves. 232; 5 R. R. 270. S. P., Baynham v. Guy's Hospital, 3 Ves. 295; 3 R. R. 96.

Form of lease to be granted by trustees, under a covenant by testator for perpetual renewal. Hodges v. Blagrave, 18 Beav. 404.

Under such a covenant, trustees are not bound to enter into a covenant to renew, but the original covenant, together with the decision of the court, of the lessee's right to a perpetual renewal, should be recited in the lease granted by the trustees, and the trustees should purport to demise in obedience thereto. Ib.

Covenant in lease for perpetual renewal upon notice within one year, next after the death of any or either of the life or lives: informal notice, about five years after dropping of first life, with the allegation of accident and ignorance of rights, and a regular application after the determination of the second and third lives, both within one year; lessee held not entitled to a renewed lease determinable on either three or two lives with similar covenant, but bill retained for a year, with liberty to bring action at law. Maxwell v. Ward, M'Clel. 458; 13 Price, 674; 28 R. R. 725.

A. demises lands to B. and his heirs, for the lives of O., P. and Q., and the longest liver of them, and grants the reversion to X. In the original demise is a covenant by A., for himself, his heirs, executors, and administrators, that if O., P. or Q. shall die, and B. shall within twelve months demand a renewal, and name another cestui que vie, A., or the person entitled to the reversion, would, on the payment of a fine and surrender of the old lease, grant to B., his heirs and assigns, a new lease for the life of such nominee, and of such of them, O., P. and Q., as shall then be alive, "such new lease to contain all the covenants herein contained, including this covenant." O. died, and six months afterwards B. demanded a renewal from X., for the lives of P. and Q. and R., a new life named:—Held, first, that B. was entitled to have a renewal. Hare v. Burges, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1294.

Held, secondly, that in the renewal lease X. must covenant to grant a fresh renewal, on similar terms, on the death of either of them, P., Q. and R., in the same words mutatis mutandis, as the covenant in the original demise. Ib.

In order to have a right to perpetual renewal, it is sufficient if the intention is made reasonably clear. Ib.

The court, in deciding upon the nature of the covenants to be entered into by a conveying party, will look to his interest in the premises. Ib.

Where a lease had been granted with a covenant for renewal, and also the deputation of a keepership, with a memorandum to renew concurrently with the lease, and upon the renewal, a few days before the expiration of the term, the renewed deputation had been by mistake made for the residue of the old, instead of the new term :— Held, that the mistake ought to be rectified, though there was a covenant in the lease not to assign, yet, as that covenant would not at law have prevented an under-letting, the same relief was given to an under-tenant as the original lessees would have been entitled to. Jalabert v. Chandos (Duke), 1 Eden, 372.

The lessee of see lands, held under a lease with a toties quoties covenant for renewal, demised part thereof as building ground for a similar term ; and the sub-tenant covenanted not to carry on certain trades upon, or to throw dirt into the avenue in front of the demised premises, during the term ; and that in case he, his executors, administrators, or assigns did so, he and they would pay an increased rent as a penalty :—Held, upon a petition by the sub-tenant against his landlord for a conveyance of a perpetual estate in the lands pursuant to the 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 99, that the conveyance of the fee should contain covenants on behalf of the sub-tenant, his heirs, and assigns, similar to those in that behalf contained in the toties quoties lease to the sub-tenant, although neither the conveyance of the fee, nor the lease to the sub-tenant contained such covenants. Dockrill v. Dolan, 3 Ir. Eq. R. 552 ; 1 Longf. & T. 282.

Description of Premises.]—A lease for lives renewable for ever was made of the lands of D., except the bogs and turf-mosses. The tenant reclaimed portions of the bog, and converted them into arable land, and afterwards filed a bill for renewal :—Held, that the description of the demised premises in the renewal ought not to be in the same terms as in the original lease, but ought to be so altered that such portions of the lands as have been reclaimed from the bog should not pass thereby to the tenant. Boyle v. Olpherts, 4 Ir. Eq. R. 241 ; 1 Longf. & T. 320.

Duration.]—Where an agreement to renew a lease contains no stipulation as to the term of its duration, it is implied that the new lease shall be of the same duration as the old. Price v. Assheton, 1 Y. & Coll. 82.

Liability of Lessee's Executors.] — Specific performance of a covenant in a lease to take a renewed lease decreed in chancery against lessee's executors, who had entered and admitted assets. Stephens v. Hotham, 1 Kay & J. 571 ; 24 L. J., Ch. 665 ; 3 Eq. R. 571 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 842 ; 3 W. R. 340.

But the court will take care that the renewed lease, if not beneficial, is so framed as that no personal liability shall be incurred by the executors. Ib.

e. Evidence and Costs.

Evidence to Prove.]— In order to prove a renewal of a lease for lives the defendant called a witness, who stated that a conversation took place about fifteen years before, between himself and the former owner of the property, through whom the plaintiff made title, in which such former owner had said that the premises had been new-leased or new-lived, but without mentioning either terms, or lives, or rent, or any of the stipulation of the supposed lease :—Held, too loose to be available as evidence for the purpose for which it was offered. Doe d. Lord v. Crago, 6 C. B. 90 ; 17 L. J., C. P. 263.

Costs — Party making suit necessary.] — Where a person bound by a covenant to renew a lease if required, " at the costs and charges in all things " of the lessee, subsequently devised the land in strict settlement, and died pending the arrangements for a renewal, leaving the first person entitled to an estate of inheritance under his will an infant, so that it was necessary to institute a suit in chancery to obtain a renewal of the lessee :—Held, that the costs of the suit must be paid out of the estate of the covenantor, because it had been rendered necessary by his own act, done subsequently to entering into the covenant. Wortham v. Dacre (Lord), 2 Kay & J. 437 ; 4 W. R. 451.

A tenant having, by his conduct, made his title to a renewal doubtful, and thereby rendering a suit for it necessary, was, on obtaining a renewal, decreed to pay all the costs. Barrett v. Pearson, 2 Ball & B. 189.

Where Defence fails.]—A lessor having, in his answer to a bill for renewal of the lease, alleged breach of covenant by the lessees as a defence to the bill, and having failed in proving it, was ordered to pay the costs occasioned by that defence. Vance v. Ranfurley (Earl), 1 Ir. Ch. R. 321.

Costs cannot be given to a defendant who sets up a defence that fails ; but from the conduct of the tenant in this case, and the bill containing an unproved imputation against the landlord, the specific performance of the covenant to renew was decreed without costs. Fitzgerald v. O'Connell, 6 Ir. Eq. R. 455 ; 1 Jo. & Lat. 134.

Laches.]—In a suit for renewal, if it appears that the tenant has been guilty of any laches, he must, in general, pay the landlord's costs ; but if the tenant was guilty of no laches, and the landlord refused a renewal on insufficient grounds he will be decreed to pay the tenant's costs. Fitzgerald v. Carew, 1 Ir. Eq. R. 346.

Improvements by Lessee—Breach of Covenant.] —A lease was granted of copyhold houses and lands in London for twenty-one years, subject to a small rent, and to the usual covenants to repair, insure, &c., with the usual proviso for re-entry on breach of any of the covenants ; and also a covenant by the lessor, provided the rent should have been paid and the covenants kept, at the request in writing of the lessee, to procure from the lord of the manor a licence to demise the premises for the further term of twenty-one years, and so from time to time, provided such request should be given as aforesaid ; and, in obtaining such licence, to grant a new lease with the same covenants, including the covenant for renewal. Subsequently, the lease was renewed on the expiration of the term, by a new lease for twenty-one years, containing similar covenants. The lessee expended money on the premises, and the value of the property was much increased. The covenants in the renewed lease, to repair and to insure, were broken, and at the end of the renewed term, the landlord, on account of the breach of the covenants, refused again to renew, and brought an action of ejectment :— Held, that a court of equity would not compel the landlord to renew, nor restrain him from ejecting the lessee; but that as the case was one of great hardship on the lessee, and the question had not before arisen in the case of a lease with a covenant for a perpetual renewal, the court dismissed the bill without costs. Job v. Banister, 2 Kay & J. 374.

A landlord who does not litigiously oppose a covenant for renewal, shall be entitled to his costs. Doneraile v. Chartres, 1 Ridgw. P. C. 137.

5. Leases for Life.

Validity of.]—A lease for lives to begin from the day of the date thereof, with seisin delivered afterwards, is good, and shall not be said to convey a freehold to commence in futuro. Freeman d. Vernon v. West, 2 Wils. 165.

By an indenture, premises were demised to M. E., and her heirs, for and during the natural lives of M. E.'s son, J. E., her daughter, M. E., and A. E.'s grand-daughter, and the life of the survivor of them. A. E. had a daughter, but he had not a grand-daughter at the time of making the indenture, nor previously thereto, though subsequently he had several grand-daughters:—Held, that the lease was good for the lives of J. E. and M. E. only. Doe d. Pemberton v. Edwards, 1 M. & W. 533; 5 L. J., Ex. 258.

A demise by A. to B. for the term of his natural life may enure as a demise either for the life of A. or of B., according to circumstances. Doe d. Pritchard v. Dodd, 2 N. & M. 838; 5 B. & Ad. 689.

Semble, that if the habendum is to B., his executors, administrators, and assigns, a presumption is created in favour of a demise for the life of A. Ib.

Such presumption is confirmed by a covenant by A. with B. for quiet enjoyment during the life of A. Ib.

Such a covenant per se would amount to a demise. Ib.

In 1813, R. O., being seised in fee of premises, mortgaged them for a term of 500 years to H., who died in 1814, having bequeathed the premises to his widow and executrix, who entered into possession and receipt of the rents. In 1837, R. O. died intestate, and J. O., his heir-at-law, paid off the mortgage, and received possession of the premises from the executrix, but no assignment was executed by her until 1843. In 1840, J. O. demised the premises after his death to his son W. O., during the lives of himself, his wife and child, and the survivor of them, at the yearly rent of 10*l.* The yearly value of the premises was 27*l.* In 1843 J. O. mortgaged the premises to L. for securing payment of 600*l.*, and the executrix of H., by the direction of J. O., assigned the residue of the term of 500 years to a trustee for L. as a further security, and in the meantime to attend the inheritance. Neither the mortgage nor the assignment made any mention of the lease for lives. In ejectment by the heir-at-law of the lessee against the heir-at-law of R. O.:—Held, first, that the lease for lives was not a void conveyance, under 26 Eliz. c. 4, s. 2. Owen v. Owen, 3 H. & C. 88; 33 L. J., Ex. 237; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 884; 11 L. T. 137.

Held, secondly, that L. was entitled to the protection of the term of 500 years against the claim of the heir-at-law of the lessee for lives. Ib.

By writing not under seal, reciting that D. had purchased for the residue of a term four messuages, in one of which the plaintiff resided, it was agreed that he should continue to reside in that messuage during the residue of D.'s interest, if the plaintiff should so long live, at the yearly rent of 1*s.*, and D. further agreed to assign all his interest in the premises purchased by D. to the plaintiff on payment of 140*l.* within a stated period:—Held, that this was a lease. Lovelock v. Franklyn, 8 Q. B. 371; 16 L. J., Q. B. 182; 11 Jur. 1035.

By Deed.]—A lease for life must be by deed. Browne v. Warner, 14 Ves. 156; 9 R. R. 259.

Leasing Power—Construction of Clause.]—The interest in a lease for lives renewable for ever of certain lands having vested in the five daughters of G., one of them, H., in 1773 married F., and by the settlement then executed F. was made tenant for life, with a power to lease for any term not exceeding three lives or 31 years. By the same settlement a term of 500 years was vested in trustees on certain trusts. In 1800 a lease of the lands for three lives was made to O'C. by the persons representing the interests of the four sisters of H.; but the interest of H. was represented only in that lease by F. F. died in 1821. The interest of O'C. in the lease of 1800 having become vested in O'B., the latter in 1825 made a lease of the lands to S. for three lives, and the longest of them, "provided the interest of the said O'B. should so long continue, and not otherwise." In 1828 O'B. purchased the trust term created in 1773. The interest in the lease of 1800 had determined:—Held, first, that the lease of 1800 was not in excess of the leasing power; and, secondly, that no equity arose in S. to have the term granted to him kept alive as to one-fifth of the lands, in consequence of the purchase of the trust term by O'B. In re O'Brien's Estate, Ir. R. 3 Eq. 77.

Apportionment of Rent.]—A lease of lands in which the lessor was seised in fee, and of other lands of which he was seised for life (with power of leasing), at one entire rent, and the lease not well executed according to the power, is good after the death of lessor for the lands in fee, though not for the other lands; for the rent may be apportioned. Doe d. Vaughan v. Meyler, 2 M. & S. 276; 15 R. R. 244.

Legal Estate.]—Lands held under a lease for lives, having been devised to Mary for life, and, after her death, to Thomas absolutely, they joined in surrendering the lease, and procured a new one for lives to themselves and their heirs as joint tenants; Thomas devised the lands, but Mary survived him and devised them:—Held, that the legal estate granted by the new lease was vested in the devisee of Mary, in trust for the heir of Thomas and also of his devisee. Hill v. Hill, Ir. R. 8 Eq. 140. Affirmed, Ib. 622—Ch. Ap.

Question for Jury whether for Lives or from Year to Year.]—The assignee of a lease for lives continued in possession for several months after its expiration, and paid a half-yearly gale of the reserved rent which subsequently accrued due; but there being a controversy as to the terms upon which he was permitted to remain in possession:—Held, that it ought to have been left to the jury to find what was the precise character of the assignee's possession after the expiration of the lease—whether as tenant from year to year upon the terms of the expired lease, or subject to negotiations for the creation of a new tenancy at an increased rent. Caulfield v. Farr, Ir. R. 7 C. L. 469.

Covenant that Lease but not that Lives subsisting.]—C. assigned by deed a lease for the lives of W., J. and H., to hold for the lives of W., J. and H., and the survivors and survivor of them, and covenanted that the lease "was a good, valid, and subsisting lease in the law for the lives of W., J. and H., and the survivors and survivor of them, and was not forfeited, surrendered, or become void or voidable." J. had died before the making of the deed :—Held, that there was no breach of the covenant, as C. only undertook that the lease was subsisting, and not that three lives were in existence at the date of the covenant. Coates v. Collins, 41 L. J., Q. B. 90 ; L. R. 7 Q. B. 114 ; 26 L. T. 134 ; 20 W. R. 187—Ex. Ch.

Estoppel of Tenant.]—In an action for rent, where the title to the land is not in question, the tenant is estopped from saying the lease is not a good one ; as that being a lease for lives it could not be granted without livery of seisin, or by lease and release, or bargain and sale ; and that being a lease of a freehold it could not commence in futuro ; for let the lease be what it will, the covenant is good ; and, if otherwise, the tenant might enjoy the land, and yet the landlord have no remedy for his rent. Monroe v. Kerry (Lord), 1 Bro. P. C. 67.

Duration of.]—A lease was granted in pursuance of an agreement between A. and B., by which "A. agreed to let her house to B. during her life, supposing it to be occupied by B. or a tenant agreeable to A." ; and "a clause was to be added in the lease," to give A.'s son an option to possess the house when of age :—Held, that such lease only enured for the joint lives of A. and B. Doe d. Bromfield v. Smith, 6 East, 530 ; 2 Smith, 570 ; 2 T. R. 436.

Stamping.]—An agreement that A. is to have a tenement for life does not require a lease stamp, the document not being under seal, and therefore not operating to pass an estate for life. Stone v. Rogers, 2 M. & W. 443 ; M. & H. 146 ; 6 L. J., Ex. 145 ; 1 Jur. 455.

Termination of.]—Where the interest of a tenant is determined by the death of a tenant for life. under whom he holds, the possession ceases with the interest, and he cannot maintain trespass unless he does some act indicating an intention to continue in possession. Brown v. Notley, 3 Ex. 219.

Effect of.]—By a memorandum A. agreed to let premises to B. for two years at a certain rent ; and that B. should have the right of purchasing the premises at the end of or at any time during the term for a given sum ; "it being understood that A. was possessed of the premises for his own life, and the life of M., and of the survivor of them" :—Held, that by this agreement A. bound himself to make title to the premises, for the lives of himself and M. and the life of the survivor. Worthington v. Warrington, 5 C. B. 635 ; 17 L. J., C. P. 117.

Sub-lease—Surrender and Renewal of Lease—Recovery of Possession by Owner in Fee—Interesse Termini.]—C., the owner in fee and predecessor in title of the plaintiffs, in 1805 granted a freehold lease of lands for three lives. The lessees in 1807 sub-demised part of the land for a term determinable on the dropping of the last of the three lives, which occurred in 1874. The lessees in 1832 surrendered their lease, and on the next day took a new lease for lives, the last of which dropped in 1891. This lease was by common law demise, and bore an indorsement of livery of seisin. The defendant, claiming through the sub-lessees, had been, since 1874, when the sub-lease expired, in actual possession of the lands comprised therein without title. In an action to recover possession :—Held, that the lease of 1832, being a valid lease by virtue of 4 Geo. 2, c. 28, s. 6, operated to pass an estate to the lessees ; and therefore the plaintiffs' reversionary estate did not become an estate in possession within the meaning of the Real Property Limitation Act, 1874, until 1891, when the last life in the lease dropped ; and, therefore, that the plaintiffs' right to recover was not barred under that act. The expression "interesse termini" is never used with regard to a freehold lease, to which it has no application. Ecclesiastical Commissioners v. Rowe (5 App. Cas. 736) distinguished. Ecclesiastical Commissioners v. Treemer, 62 L. J., Ch. 119 ; [1893] 1 Ch. 166 ; 3 R. 136 ; 68 L. T. 11 ; 41 W. R. 166.

Effect of Surrender.]—Quasi tenant in tail of a freehold lease for lives may, by surrendering the old lease, and taking a new one to himself, bar the remainder over. Gray v. Mannock, 2 Eden, 339.

6. Non-execution by Lessor.

Action on Covenant—Liability of Tenant.]—Action on an indenture for a term of ten years, by the plaintiffs to the defendant, for not yielding up the premises occupied by him during the term in good repair. Plea (setting out the indenture, by which the plaintiffs, as the master and governors of an hospital, demised, under their common seal, to the defendant, who covenanted with such master and governors), that the indenture was not at any time during the term signed by the plaintiffs, nor did they sign any lease in writing :—Held, that the defendant was liable on his covenant, whether the plaintiffs had executed the indenture or not. Cooch v. Goodman, 2 G. & D. 159 ; 2 Q. B. 580 ; 11 L. J., Q. B. 225 ; 6 Jur. 779.

Held, secondly, that the plaintiffs could not sue in their individual characters on a covenant made with them in their corporate capacity. Ib.

Declaration on a deed made between the plaintiff and the defendant, whereby the plaintiff demised to the defendant a messuage, with the appurtenances, for seven years, and the defendant covenanted with the plaintiff, that he would yearly and every year, during the term, keep the premises in repair, and give them up in repair, at the end of the term ; by virtue of which demise the defendant entered upon and enjoyed the premises. The breach laid was for not keeping the premises in repair during the term. The defendant pleaded that his part of the deed was executed by him after the alleged day of the execution thereof, and that the plaintiff's part was never executed by him, or by any agent of his thereunto lawfully authorised, nor was there ever any demise of the premises to the defendant, nor was there ever any lease of any part of the premises put in writing and signed, or made, signed, sealed or delivered by the plaintiff, or by any agent of his thereunto lawfully authorised by writing or otherwise; and that although before the making of the deed the plaintiff demised the premises for one year, and so on from year to year, by virtue of which demise the defendant entered and occupied the premises for a term, to wit, for nine years, which term ended before the commencement of the suit, the defendant never did occupy the premises under any demise from the plaintiff, other than that last mentioned, or for any term granted by the deed, and that there never was any consideration for the execution by the defendant, on his part, of the deed, and that his covenant therein was void:—Held, in substance, a good answer to the action. Pitman v. Woodbury, 3 Ex. 4.

Action upon an indenture between commissioners of an inland navigation, under the authority of several acts of parliament, on the one part, and the defendant on the other part, whereby the commissioners demised the tolls of the navigation to the defendant for one year, at a rent payable monthly, together with some other payments, and the defendant covenanted with the commissioners, parties to the indenture, and also with the whole body of the commissioners in a separate covenant, for payment of the rent. The declaration alleged an entry by virtue of the demise, and an occupying and receiving the tolls during the entire year. Breach, nonpayment of the rent. Plea, that the commissioners never executed the lease, and that the entry and occupation were at the will of the commissioners only, and not under the demise. Replication, that the defendant entered, and received and enjoyed the tolls by the permission of the commissioners, under the terms of the indenture:—Held, that, as the lessors had not executed the lease, the lessee had never received the consideration for which he had stipulated, namely, a permanent estate during the demise, and under its terms; and, therefore, that he was not liable to be sued upon his covenant in that instrument. Swatman v. Ambler, 8 Ex. 72: 22 L. J., Ex. 81. See Morgan v. Pike, 14 C. B. 473; 2 C. L. R. 696; 23 L. J., C. P. 64; 2 W. R. 193.

To an action on a covenant in a lease for years by the lessor, a plea that the lessee was tenant for a term of years if he should so long live, and that the lease was never executed by the reversioner is a bad plea. How v. Greek, 3 H. & C. 391; 34 L. J., Ex. 4; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1187; 11 L. T. 315; 13 W. R. 80.

—— Liability of Assignee.]—To an action on a covenant against the assignee of a lease, of which the declaration averred that the party under whom the assignee claimed executed the counterpart:—Held, that a plea that the indenture was not executed by the plaintiff, or by any agent of the plaintiff thereunto lawfully authorised, in writing was no answer. Areline v. Whisson, 4 Man. & G. 80; 12 L. J., C. P. 58.

7. Counterparts.

Inconsistency with Lease.]—The rule as to lease overruling counterpart applies only where there is inconsistency between those two documents compared with each other, and not where the lease is inconsistent with itself. Burchell v. Clark, 46 L. J., C. P. 115; 2 C. P. D. 88; 35 L. T. 690; 25 W. R. 334—C. A.

When the term mentioned in the reddendum in a lease differed from that stated in the habendum, and the counterpart throughout stated the term as in the reddendum, the habendum was corrected so as to agree with the reddendum. Ib.

Effect of—Evidence.]—In an action for rent on a demise, the plaintiff produced a deed properly stamped as a counterpart lease, and proved the same to have been executed by the defendant:—Held, that although there was no evidence of any lease having been executed by the plaintiff, the presumption was that there was such; and the deed produced was therefore rightly admissible as a counterpart. Hughes v. Clark, 10 C. B. 905; 15 Jur. 430.

In an action for rent upon an indenture of lease, the defendant pleaded non demisit. The counterpart is sufficient evidence of the demise. Houghton v. Kœnig, 18 C. B. 235; 25 L. J., C. P. 218.

Where a lease purports to be made under a power contained in a will, the lessee is estopped, by his execution of the counterpart, from denying the execution of the will. Bringloe v. Goodson, 8 Scott, 71; 5 Bing. (N.C.) 738; 1 Arn. 322; 8 L. J., C. P. 116.

Lands at A. were conveyed to a charity in 1763. In 1783 the charity, being then incorporated as the Magdalen Hospital, granted a lease for ninety-nine years to G. of all their lands at A. not included in the site of the hospital. The lease reserved no beneficial rent to the lessors, and contained no onerous covenants binding on the lessee. In 1876 the governors of the hospital brought an action against the defendants, who were in possession of premises alleged to be comprised in the lease, to have the lease declared void under 13 Eliz. c. 10, and for possession. The lease having been declared voidable on demurrer, the defendants denied that they were in possession under the lease, and asserted a freehold title in themselves in fee. Since 1858 they or their predecessors had dealt with the property as if seised in fee. At the trial of the action it was proved that, assuming the hospital to be owners in 1783 of the lands conveyed to them in 1763, the premises in question were comprised in the lease:—Held, that a counterpart of the lease in the possession of the plaintiffs was admissible as evidence against the defendants, although there was no other evidence of the identity of the property comprised in the lease with that conveyed in 1763, and although there was no evidence that G. entered under the lease, or that the defendants claimed under him; for that, first, where persons are found to be owners of property, there is a presumption, in the absence of anything to the contrary, that they have remained owners of the same property; and, secondly, that the defendants being in possession, it must be presumed that G. entered, and that the defendants were in possession by devolution from him, so as to ascribe to them a rightful rather than a wrongful possession. Magdalen Hospital v. Knotts, 37 L. T. 428; 26 W. R. 141. Affirmed in C. A. infra.

Held, also, that the fact that the defendants had dealt with the property as owners in fee did not rebut the presumption that they held under the lease. Ib.

In 1763 lands were conveyed upon trust for a charitable corporation, and in 1783 the corporation granted a lease of part of such lands to G. for ninety-nine years at a peppercorn rent. In 1877 the corporation commenced an action against K., who was in possession of the demised lands, on the ground that the lease being voidable under 13 Eliz. c. 10, they had the option to determine it at any time during its continuance, and that the Statute of Limitations did not commence to run against them until they exercised such option:—Held, that in the absence of evidence to the contrary, the counterpart lease was primâ facie evidence of the title in fee of the corporation, and that the defendant being admittedly in possession of land included in the lease, the presumption, in the absence of proof to the contrary, was that he was in possession under some title derived through G. Magdalen Hospital v. Knotts, 47 L. J., Ch. 726; 8 Ch. D. 709; 38 L. T. 624; 26 W. R. 646—C. A. In H. L. (see infra) this point did not arise.

Cost of.]—In a written agreement for a lease it was stipulated that if the tenant should be desirous to take a lease of the premises, "he the said (landlord) will, at the request and costs of the said (tenant), grant and execute to him a lease thereof":—Held, that, upon this agreement, the tenant was not bound to pay for the counterpart of the lease, although the lease was to contain covenants to be performed by the tenant; and that, if the landlord required a counterpart, he must be at the expense of it himself. Jennings v. Major, 8 Car. & P. 61.

Right of Lessor to Witness Execution of.]—In the absence of any stipulation to that effect, the lessor is not entitled to insist upon witnessing by himself or his agent the execution of the counterpart of the lease by the lessee; and in a suit by the lessee to enforce specific performance of the agreement for a lease, the lessor ordered to pay the costs of the suit occasioned by his refusal to execute the lease, unless the execution of the counterpart was attested by his agent. Borradaile v. Smart, 5 W. R. 270.

8. Title of Lessor.

Presumption of Possession.]—The granting of a lease is an act of ownership which is primâ facie evidence of a title in fee of the grantor; and the law will presume that persons in possession of land comprised in the lease are in possession rightfully, and are, therefore, in the absence of other proof by them, privy to the term. Magdalen Hospital v. Knotts, 47 L. J., Ch. 726; 8 Ch. D. 709; 38 L. T. 624; 26 W. R. 640—C. A. S. C. in H. L.; 48 L. J., Ch. 579; 4 App. Cas. 324; 40 L. T. 466; 27 W. R. 602.

How far Lessor guarantees as to Title.]—Under a parol demise, the law implies an agreement for quiet enjoyment, but not of good title. Bandy v. Cartwright, 8 Ex. 913; 22 L. J., Ex. 285.

A tenant from year to year, who has been evicted by the reversioner after the determination of the interest of the landlord, cannot maintain an action upon an implied covenant for quiet enjoyment against his landlord. Penfold v. Abbott, 32 L. A tenant from year to year, equally with a tenant having a larger interest, is bound to make proper inquiries into his landlord's title, and he is affected with the consequences of not doing so. Wilson v. Hart, 35 L. J., Ch. 569; L. R. 1 Ch. 463; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 460; 14 L. T. 499; 14 W. R. 748.

9. Option to Purchase Premises.

To Purchase Fee Simple—Nature of Interest conferred on Lessee—Real and Personal Representatives.]—A lease of land contained a covenant by the lessor with the lessee, his executors, administrators and assigns, that if the lessee, his executors, administrators or assigns, should at any time thereafter be desirous of purchasing the fee simple of the demised land, and should give notice in writing to the lessor, his heirs and assigns, then the lessor, his heirs or assigns, would accept 1,200*l.* for the purchase of the fee simple, and on receipt thereof would convey the fee simple to the lessee, his heirs or assigns, or as he or they should direct. The lessee died intestate, and nearly twenty years after his death his heir, who was also administrator of his personal estate, called on the devisee of the lessor to convey the fee simple to him in accordance with the covenant, and a conveyance was executed accordingly. The heir afterwards contracted to sell part of the property thus conveyed to him:—Held, that the option to purchase was attached to the lease and passed with it; that it consequently passed as part of the lessee's personal estate to the administrator, and that the administrator could not make a good title to the purchaser, unless the next of kin of the lessee would concur in the sale. Adams and Kensington Vestry, In re, 54 L. J., Ch. 87; 27 Ch. D. 394; 51 L. T. 382; 32 W. R. 883—C. A.

Payment a Condition Precedent to Purchase.]—A lease for years contained a covenant on the part of the lessor, that if the lessee should be desirous at the expiration of the term of purchasing the premises, and should give to the lessor six calendar months' notice in writing of such desire, and should pay to him 2,000*l.*, the lessor would sell and convey the premises to the lessee; the expense of the preparation and verification of the abstract to be borne by the lessee, he expressly accepting the title. The lessee gave notice, but did not pay the money:—Held, that the payment of the money was a condition precedent to the right of purchase, and that the money not having been paid, no binding contract arose. Weston v. Collins, 34 L. J., Ch. 353; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 190; 12 L. T. 4; 13 W. R. 510—L.C.

A lessee, who had the option of purchasing the freehold at any time within seven years, by giving three months' notice, and paying a certain sum at the expiration of such notice, gave the required notice three months before the seven years elapsed, but did not pay the money on or before the day the notice expired:—Held, that the lessee was not entitled to a decree for specific performance, the time of payment being one of the two conditions of the contract. Ranelagh (Lord) v. Melton, 2 Drew. & Sm. 278 ; 34 L. J., Ch. 227 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1141 ; 11 L. T. 409 ; 13 W. R. 150.

Option independent of Duration of Term.]—By a clause at the end of a lease, the lessees on notice given on or before a fixed date had the option of purchasing the fee simple of the premises comprised in the lease, together with certain machinery thereon. The term was under the lease determined absolutely by an event which happened, viz. by a fire which partly destroyed the premises demised, and which occurred before the exercise of the option :—Held, that the option to purchase was independent of the duration of the term. Edwards v. West, 47 L. J., Ch. 463 ; 7 Ch. D. 858 ; 38 L. T. 481 ; 26 W. R. 507.

Notice to Infant Heir.]—A lease for twenty-one years contained a proviso, that if the lessees should be desirous of purchasing the fee, and should give to the lessor, his heirs or assigns, notice of such desire, they should be entitled to become the purchasers of the premises at the price named, and the lessor, his appointees, heirs or assigns, would, on payment of the purchase-money, do all acts for conveying the premises to the use of the purchasers. The lessor died, having devised all his real estates to trustees, who disclaimed, and leaving an infant heir. The lessees having served on the infant and his guardian notice of their election to purchase :—Held, that such notice was effectually served, and constituted a valid and binding contract, which the court would not refuse to carry out on the ground that the infant could not give a discharge for the purchase-money. Woods v. Hyde, 31 L. J., Ch. 295 ; 6 L. T. 317 ; 10 W. R. 339.

Breach of Covenant to Insure.]—An owner of a plot of ground agreed to grant a lease of it to A. as soon as the latter had erected a villa thereon. But it was stipulated, that if A. should not perform the agreement on his part, the agreement for a lease was to be void, and that the owner might re-enter. A. was to insure in a particular way, and he was to have the option of purchasing the fee within two years. A. erected the villa, but insured in a wrong office and in a wrong name :—Held, that the contract for a lease was independent of the option to purchase, and that, notwithstanding the forfeiture of the first, the latter still subsisted, and a specific performance of the contract for sale was decreed. Green v. Low, 22 Beav. 625 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 848 ; 4 W. R. 669.

10. Setting Aside.

Fraud.] — A lease impeached for alleged fraud and under-value :—Held, under the circumstances, valid. Donegal (Marquis) v. Greg, 13 Ir. Eq. R. 12.

Concealment and misrepresentation relied on in such a case must be proved fraudulent, and the contract shewn to be based upon it ; and the very fraud alleged in the bill proved. Ib.

Agreement for lease founded on fraudulent statement, will be rescinded, and an account directed. Long v. Fletcher, 2 Eq. Abr. 5.

Bill to set lease aside as having been obtained by surprise and fraud, dismissed under the circumstances. Smyth v. Smyth, 2 Madd. 75.

A. filed his bill in the Court of Chancery in Ireland, to be relieved against a long lease granted by his ancestors, on the foot of fraud ; but not giving sufficient evidence of the fraud, his bill was dismissed with costs. Some years after, A. filed a new bill for the same purpose, charging fresh proofs of the fraud, which were not discovered pending the former suit. Upon hearing this second cause, the lease was set aside ; and, on an appeal, this decree was affirmed, but varied by consent. Cotter v. Barrymore (Earl), 4 Bro. P. C. 203.

A. having granted a lease of certain mines to P. as a trustee for the West Cork Mining Company, and having in his lifetime received certain sums in part payment of the consideration money of the lease, P., who was his executor, filed his bill against V., the managing director of the company, for an account of the sum due on foot of the purchase-money and for payment thereof. V. filed a cross bill on behalf of the company, and thereby, after setting forth various facts and matters as evidencing fraudulent conduct against the shareholders on the part of A. and his executor P., impeached the lease as fraudulent, and the consideration thereof as exorbitant and extravagant :—Held, under the circumstances, that the plaintiff in the original cause was entitled to the relief as prayed for by his bill, and that the cross bill should be dismissed without costs. Pike v. Vigers, 2 Dr. & Wal. 1. Affirmed, sub nom. Vigers v. Pike, 8 Cl. & F. 562.

Validity of leases is triable at law ; therefore, bill to set lease aside demurrable. Sed quære. Hutchinson v. Gamble, 2 Bro. P. C. 518.

Fraudulent Representation—As to Purposes for which Premises were to be used—Immorality.]—An owner of premises, who grants a lease of them for a term, under which the lessee enters, cannot avoid the lease on the ground that it was obtained by the fraudulent misrepresentations of the lessee as to matters collateral to the lease, e.g. that he was a respectable person, and intended to use the premises for a respectable business ; whereas he was not a respectable man, and intended at the time and did afterwards use the premises for an immoral and an illegal purpose. Feret v. Hill, 15 C. B. 207 ; 2 C. L. R. 1366 ; 23 L. J., C. P. 186 ; 18 Jur. 1014 ; 2 W. R. 493. See also post, col. 924.

—— As to Age of Infant.]—Where a lease is set aside at the instance of the lessor on the ground that the lessee is an infant and obtained the lease on his representation that he was of full age, the lessor cannot recover damages for use and occupation. Lempriere v. Lange, 27 W. R. 879.

Unfounded but Justifiable Assertion.]—Lease deliberately executed cannot be set aside on account of an unfounded, though justifiable, assertion of the lessor, pending the treaty, there being no wilful misrepresentation, nor on the grounds of mistake from an omission of a general warranty in the lease, such not constituting part of the agreement. Legge v. Croker, 1 Ball & B. 506 ; 12 R. R. 49.

Surprise.]—Agreement decreed to be delivered up on the ground not of fraud, but surprise, neither party understanding the effect of it, viz., a lease, with covenant for perpetual renewal at a fixed rent, of premises held under church lease, renewable upon fines continually increasing. Willan v. Willan, 16 Ves. 72.

A surveyor is a competent adviser in the matter of a building lease, and a lessee who has had the assistance and advice of a competent surveyor cannot complain of surprise. Haberdashers' Co. v. Isaac, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 611.

In consideration of Marriage.]—Tenant in tail made a lease to A., in consideration of his procuring a marriage between the lessor and a lady of fortune:—Held, that this consideration was fraudulent, and the lease accordingly set aside. Decree of the Court of Chancery dismissing the bill for relief against the lease, reversed. Scribblehill v. Brett, 4 Bro. P. C. 144.

Inadequacy of Consideration.]—A lease granted under circumstances of imposition and inadequate consideration and distress of lessor, set aside as between lessor and lessee, but lessee having made it a provision for wife and family by marriage settlement, court below left to proceed as to their relief. Knatchbull v. Kissane, 5 Dow, 389.

Premises worth 20*l.* or 22*l.* let for 15*l.* 8*s.* The difference is not so gross as to vitiate the bargain on the ground of inadequacy of consideration, it not appearing that the lessor had been deceived by the lessee respecting the value. Luby v. O'Donnell, 2 Sch. & Lef. 471.

In 1804 A., tenant for life under a settlement, with a power to grant leases for twenty-one years, concurred with B., the next tenant for life, in an agreement to grant to the steward and solicitor of A. a lease of part of the lands, &c., in settlement for twenty-one years at a rent paid upon a valuation, which omitted to estimate certain rights of common annexed to the lands, on the alleged ground that those rights were disputed by the copyholders of the manor. In 1809, B. having become tenant for life on the death of A., executed a lease according to the agreement. In 1810, under an act for inclosure of waste lands, a very large allotment was made in respect of the lands leased. B. died in 1816, when the reversion of the lands subject to the lease vested in C., who accepted the rent reserved until 1821, when he filed a bill to set aside the lease:—Held, in the court below, that the transaction was unimpeachable on the ground of fraud:—Held, on appeal, that the relief was barred by acts of confirmation and acquiescence, but quære whether, considering the facts and the relation of the parties, the lease might not have been avoided on the ground of fraud or mistake if it had been questioned soon after the transaction. Selsey (Lord) v. Rhoades, 1 Bligh (N.S.) 1; 30 R. R. 1.

—— Lease of Charity Land.]—Lease of charity lands set aside on the grounds of inadequacy of rent, length of the term, and the insertion of a proviso that the tenant might remove buildings at the end of the tenancy. The fact of a party joining in a lease as a consenting party:—Held, to be notice to the lessees of the nature of the interest which he claims. Att.-Gen. v. Hall, 1 W. R. 117.

Where Lessor has no Title.]—A lease having been granted by deed in terms from which the law implies a covenant for title, and the lessor proving to have no title to part of the demised premises:—Held, that the lessee might refuse to take possession of such part of the demised premises, and elect to keep the remainder, and might in an action for rent due under the lease claim damages for breach of the implied covenant by way of counter-claim. Feret v. Hill, supra.

Action for rent due on a lease. The declaration stated that one Lawless being entitled to a certain estate mortgaged the premises to O'Brien, and that afterwards Lawless and O'Brien demised to the defendant, who entered upon the premises demised and became thus possessed of the term; that O'Brien's interest vested in the plaintiff, and that a half-year's rent was due to the plaintiff on the demise. A plea alleged that, before the demise, O'Brien falsely and fraudulently represented that Lawless was entitled to the lands in the lease mentioned, as devisee under the will of his father, and that his will had been duly proved, and that by such false and fraudulent representations the defendant was induced to accept the lease and enter into the covenants therein contained, and averred that Lawless was not so entitled as owner, and the defendant himself, as O'Brien well knew, was entitled to the lands as heir-at-law. On demurrer, the plea was held bad, for not stating that the defendant repudiated the lease and derived no benefit under it. Meldon v. Lawless, Ir. R. 5 C. L. 547, n. S. P., Anderson v. Costello, Ir. R. 5 C. L. 544.

The lessor of certain lands knew that as to part of them he had no title to grant the lease. The lessee did not know, and had no means of knowing, that such was the case, and the lessor did not disclose the want of title of him:—Held, that it was not necessary in equity, in order that the lessee might be relieved of the lease, that there should have been any affirmative fraud, and that the concealment by the lessor of a fact affecting the title to a material part of the demised premises was a sufficient ground for treating the lease as set aside. Mostyn v. West Mostyn Coal and Iron Co., 45 L. J., C. P. 401; 1 C. P. D. 145; 34 L. T. 325; 24 W. R. 401.

Lease by Owner before Seisin.]—Fraud by making lease after feoffment, and before livery and seisin. Treby v. Gibone, Cary, 82.

Lease by Intoxicated Person.]—Lease obtained by fraud and circumvention from person in a state of intoxication is void in equity. Butler v. Mulvihill, 1 Bligh, 137.

By Person of Weak Intellect.]—Leases for lives obtained by agents of a deceased person of weak intellect upon inadequate considerations set aside as fraudulent. Gartside v. Isherwood, 1 Bro. C. C. 558.

By Principal to Agent.]—An agent may take a lease from his principal, but he must always be prepared to prove that full information has been imparted to his principal, and that the contract has been entered into with perfect good faith. Molony v. Kernan, 2 Dr. & War. 31.

By Agent to Stranger.]—A party who takes an assignment of a lease from the agent of the lessor, with notice of the assignor's character as agent, has the same liability of sustaining the lease cast upon him that the agent has, and if the lease cannot be upheld by the agent, neither can it be supported by the purchaser from the agent. Ib.

A tenant having, by collusion with the steward of the landlord, obtained a renewal of a lease for lives, as though one only had dropped, and two were exchanged, when in fact two lives had fallen; decreed to pay the value of the two lives, and he shall not have the option of delivering up the new, and abiding by his former lease. Abingdon (Earl) v. Butler, 2 Cox, 260; 3 Bro. C. C. 112; 1 Ves. Jun. 206.

A., who was agent over a property held by four sisters as tenants in common, and had a power of attorney from three of them to make leases, having, when about to leave the country under very suspicious circumstances, executed, as by a power of attorney from the four sisters, a lease of part of the property to B., his under-agent, and there was some evidence of under-value in the rent reserved, and covenants were omitted, which B. had suggested as proper in other leases of the same lands to other tenants, the lease was, at the suit of the four sisters, decreed to be set aside. Rossiter v. Walsh, 2 Con. & L. 562: 4 Dr. & War. 485.

By Client to Solicitor.]—Upon a bill by a tenant in remainder under a marriage settlement, a lease at an under-value, obtained by a solicitor from a tenant for life, being his client, and in embarrassed circumstances:—Held, invalid and rescinded on terms of paying for substantial improvements and the usual terms in equity. Ward v. Hartpole, 3 Bligh, 470.

By Tenant for Life to Trustee.]—A trustee appointed by will for the management of estates (with a salary of 100*l.* per annum), during the continuance of a tenancy for life, took a lease at a very low rent, in consideration of faithful services, from the tenant for life; it was also exceeding the power of leasing given to the tenant for life:—Held, that this lease was fraudulent and voidable in the hands of a purchaser for value, who had constructive notice of the nature of the lease, in favour of those claiming the estates after the tenant for life. Ker v. Dungannon (Lord), 1 Dr. & War. 509; 1 Con. & L. 335; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 343.

By Mortgagor to Mortgagee.]—A lease, set aside under the circumstances, being made by mortgagor to mortgagee, the latter taking advantage of the distress of the former, and using his mortgage as an instrument to obtain an undue advantage; and the lessor executing the lease on the faith of an agreement, that he was to be allowed a certain maintenance out of the property for himself and family, which lessee did not perform, and which it would not have been in his power to have secured on account of right of creditors. Whether the mere relation of mortgagor and mortgagee be sufficient to avoid a lease fairly made by the former to the latter, quære. Gubbins v. Creed, 2 Sch. & Lef. 214; 9 R. R. 71.

A contract between mortgagor and mortgagee for a lease to be granted by the former in consideration of forbearance is usurious. Id. 218.

Fee farm grant or lease of mortgaged premises from mortgagor to mortgagee, at a fixed annual rent, is among that description of transactions at which courts of equity look with great jealousy. Hicks v. Cooke, 4 Dow, 24; 16 R. R. 1.

By Debtor to Creditor.]—On the same principle that purchasers of reversionary interests and post obit bonds are required to prove that they gave the full value, and did not practise on distress, a lessee making a contemporaneous loan to his lessor ought, when called on, to shew that he gave the fair and just rent, and that he did not use his loan as a means to obtain a more profitable bargain than he might have had in the ordinary course of contract. Moore v. M'Kay, Beat. 291.

A lease not set aside because it was contemporaneous with an advance of money to the lessor. In order to induce the court to interfere, there must, in addition to that fact, be some evidence, or legal presumption, of the advance being used as a means of restraint or undue influence, to obtain an unjust profit, or that it was intended as a device or shift to evade the statute, or that the rent reserved was inadequate. Id. 282.

A lease at a fair rent, lessee paying two years' rent in advance, secured by lessor's bond and insurance on his life, not impeachable either as fraudulent on a power to lease without fine, or as being accompanied with a loan of money. O'Brien v. Grierson, 2 Ball & B. 323.

A bill will not lie at the suit of a remainderman to set aside a lease by tenant for life, on the ground of its being accompanied with a loan of money; there being no privity between them, and the remedy being at law. Corbet v. Segrave, 2 Ball & B. 98.

A lease granted to a creditor on a further loan of money, at a stipulated rent, to be retained in discharge of the debt, is a security in the nature of a mortgage, and if the rent be at a fair value, which by the debtor's acquiescence for nineteen years will be presumed, cannot be set aside. By the acquiescence, the debtor is precluded from proving the rent to be at an under-value. But a lease afterwards granted on further loan at the old rent, set aside, being on the face of it a fraud, the creditor to account for the full value of lands from the date of the mortgage. Morony v. O'Dea, 1 Ball & B. 109.

An agreement that a mortgagee shall enter into the possession of lands of the mortgagor at a fair rent in discharge of the debt will be supported in equity, not being against public policy, or working a private injury, and is an exception to the rule, that a mortgagee in possession must account for the full value of lands. Ib.

A lease at a stipulated rent, the landlord at the same time obtaining from the tenant a sum of money, two years' rent, in which the tenant is secured by another lease of the same date for two years, at a nominal rent; the interest to be retained out of the first gale payable under the other lease. This is not a lease in consideration of a loan, as the relation of a debtor and creditor did not exist; and the tenant could not recover the money by action; it is but an advance of rent by way of fine or foregift. Where a loan of money is made in consideration of a lease, and an available security is given for it, the dealing is usurious. But where rent is advanced by way of fine or foregift it is not so. Wilton v. Browne, 1 Ball & B. 125.

A lease containing a clause, empowering the tenant to retain the rents, till a sum of money advanced to the landlord at the time of granting the lease was repaid, but for which no separate security was given, nor was the advance to pay interest:—Held, not impeachable on the grounds of being a lease connected with a loan. Prior v. Dumphy, 1 Ball & B. 27.

Rent may be reduced beyond legal interest, by way of fine; yet the transaction not impeachable if not attended by fraud. Lukey v. O'Donnell, 2 Sch. & Lef. 466.

In order to constitute a loan, it is essential that the money, with interest, is at all events secured to the lender. Ib.

A. seised of the reversion in fee of premises which were let to E. for a term of years, at 15*l.* 8*s.* yearly rent, agrees bonâ fide to sell to B. the rent reserved by that lease for the residue of the term for a sum, the principal and interest of which was to be reimbursed to B. in that time by the perception of the rent, supposing it punctually paid; and at the same time A., being induced by the accommodation offered him by B. in purchasing the rent, makes a lease for lives renewable for ever to B. of the same premises, and at the same rent which E. paid, but not to commence or be payable until the expiration of E.'s lease; at which time the premises would be worth 20*l.* or 22*l.* per annum. This not impeachable as a lease coupled with a loan, the first transaction being a fair purchase of the rent, and the second, though induced by the first, yet not distinguishable from a lease made upon payment of a fine. Ib.

A lease granted at the same time with a loan of money by lessee to lessor, set aside, although the proposal for connecting the loan with the lease moved from the lessor. But an underlessee bonâ fide, and not concerned in the transaction of the loan, not disturbed. Molloy v. Irwin, 1 Sch. & Lef. 310.

A beneficial lease granted at the same time with a loan of money by lessee to lessor held fraudulent and void, as affording to the lender a profit on the money lent beyond legal interest. Brown v. O'Dea, 1 Sch. & Lef. 115.

A beneficial lease obtained under the influence of loans of money, made or expected to be made by the lessee to the lessor, is a fraudulent invasion of the Statutes of Usury, and an undue advantage taken of the lessor, and therefore void. Drew v. Power, 1 Sch. & Lef. 182.

A lease for 999 years, made by mortgagor to mortgagee, set aside; the policy of the law upon which the Statutes of Usury are founded not permitting such a transaction between persons standing in the relation of the mortgagor and mortgagee, and this, semble, although the lease was made at a fair value. Webb v. Rorke, 2 Sch. & Lef. 661; 9 R. R. 122.

Who may Avoid.]—Lease obtained by fraud may be avoided by patentee of the land. Devon (Earl) v. Haule or Hanley, Cary, 32.

Clause Permitting Waste—Effect of.]—Where the power is unlimited, a clause permitting waste does not invalidate the lease. Muskerry v. Chinnery, Ll. & G. t. Sugd. 185. But see S. C., t. Plunk. 182.

11. Under-leases.

Effect of Assignment of Lease on.]—When a lessee grants an under-lease, reserving a rent which is incident to the reversion on the under-lease, the rent, the reversion, and the benefit of the covenants will not pass by a subsequent mere assignment of the term, nor unless expressly assigned. Franklin v. Howes, 24 L. T. 348; 19 W. R. 581.

Upon an assignment of a lease to a purchaser, the absence of the counterpart of an under-lease of a portion of the property comprised in the lease, is notice to the purchaser of the title of a person holding such counterpart by way of equitable mortgage, and if the purchaser does not inquire, or obtain possession of such counterpart, he will be guilty of gross negligence, and will, therefore, be postponed to the equitable mortgagee. Ib.

Grant of—Acceptance, how rebutted.]—When a parol contract is made for the grant of an under-lease subject to a question of title, possession taken with the knowledge and consent of the grantor is not of itself a waiver of an objection to title by the grantee, but it is only evidence of the acceptance of the title, which may be rebutted by other circumstances. Hyde v. Warden, 47 L. J., Ex. 121; 3 Ex. D. 72; 37 L. T. 567; 26 W. R. 201—C. A.

Constructive Notice of Provisions of Original Lease.]—Upon an agreement to grant an under-lease the grantee has constructive notice of the provisions of the original lease only when he has had a fair opportunity of ascertaining what they were. Ib.

The defendant having agreed to take an assignment of an under-lease from the plaintiff, found on examining the lease that it contained a covenant by the plaintiff not to under-let without the consent of the lessor, the lessor agreeing not to withhold his consent from any assignment to a respectable and responsible person:—Held, that the fact that the lessor's consent had not been obtained at the time of the agreement to take an assignment was not enough to enable the defendant to resist a claim for specific performance. Ib.

A party who enters into an agreement for an under-lease, without inquiring into the covenants of the original lease, has constructive notice of all usual covenants in the original lease. Flight v. Barton, 3 Myl. & K. 282.

But where a party entered into an agreement under a lease for an under-lease, and informed the lessee of the nature of the business which he meant to carry on in the premises, and the lessee did not apprise him that there was a covenant in the original lease prohibiting such business, the silence of the lessee was equivalent to a representation that there was no such prohibitory covenant. Ib.

It is the duty of a person contracting for an under-lease to inform himself of the covenants contained in the original lease, and if he enters and takes possession of the property he will be bound by those covenants. Cosser v. Collinge, 3 Myl. & K. 283; 1 L. J., Ch. 130.

Where a lessee covenants in an under-lease to observe the covenants of the original lease, it is the same as if those covenants had been inserted at length in the under-lease. Piggott v. Stratton, 1 De G. F. & J. 33; 29 L. J., Ch. 1; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 129; 1 L. T. 111; 8 W. R. 13.

By a contract in 1861, A. agreed to grant an under-lease to B. of premises, for the residue of the term held by A., except the last ten days, such under-lease to contain similar clauses and covenants to those contained in the original lease. In pursuance of this contract an under-lease was prepared by the lessor's solicitor for twenty-three years less ten days, and the lease was executed by the lessee, who neither inspected the original lease nor employed any professional adviser. In 1877 it was discovered that the original lease had only sixteen years to run, and the under-lease had, by mistake, been made for seven years longer than the lessor had power to grant. The lessee claimed compensation :—Held, that the lessee was to blame in not inspecting the original lease and ascertaining for himself the precise term, and that caveat emptor applied. Besley v. Besley, 9 Ch. D. 103 ; 38 L. T. 844 ; 27 W. R. 184.

Mistake as to Lessor's Title—Compensation.]—L., a leaseholder, believing that her term had thirty years to run, agreed in writing with C. to grant him a lease for twenty-one years, nothing being said about compensation for misdescription. C. did not investigate the title, but took an under-lease for twenty-one years. In the following year he discovered that L.'s term had only about fourteen years to run, and he claimed compensation. L. offered to grant a fresh lease for the residue of the term less three days, but declined to give compensation. C. thereupon brought his action for rectification of the lease and compensation :—Held, that as the compensation was claimed in respect of a defect of title which C. might have discovered before he took his lease, and there was no contract as to compensation, he was not entitled to compensation after taking it. Besley v. Besley (9 Ch. D. 103) approved, and held not to be overruled by Palmer v. Johnson (13 Q. B. D. 351), which turned on an express agreement for compensation. Clayton v. Leech, 41 Ch. D. 103 ; 61 L. T. 69 ; 37 W. R. 663—C. A.

When determined.]—In 1852, M. having a crown lease of premises, let them to the plaintiff for three years from the 24th June by an agreement, wherein it was stipulated that he should do nothing contrary to the covenants and provisions in the lease from the crown. After the three years had passed, the plaintiff continued to occupy the premises as tenant from year to year, paying an annual rent from every 24th June. In September, 1869, M. assigned his interest in the crown lease to C., and subsequently gave notice to the plaintiff to pay his rent to C., from Michaelmas, 1869. This the plaintiff accordingly did, not receiving any notice to quit. In June, 1870, he was informed by the solicitors of C., that, as the interest of the latter under M.'s assignment expired in October, C. could not after that time treat the plaintiff as his tenant. The crown lease to M. expired on the 10th October, 1870, and in 1866 C. agreed with the crown for a new lease of the premises at the expiration of the old one. Both these facts were known to the plaintiff. A new lease was granted to C. by the crown when the former lease lapsed, and he having sub-let the premises to the defendants, they evicted the plaintiff in 1870 :—Held, that the plaintiff's tenancy terminated when the crown lease to M. ran out, and that the defendants were entitled to possession of the premises. Weller v. Spiers, 26 L. T. 866 ; 20 W. R. 772.

Right to inspect Lessee's Title.]—On the grant of a sub-lease by a lessee, the intending sub-lessee has a right to inspect the lessee's lease. Gosling v. Woolf, [1893] 1 Q. B. 39 ; 5 R. 81 ; 68 L. T. 89 ; 41 W. R. 106.

Waste.]—The court will restrain waste in an under-lessee at the suit of the ground landlord. Furrant v. Lovel, 3 Atk. 723.

12. RECTIFICATION.

Mistake—Must be Common to both Parties.]—To justify the court in reforming an executed deed, it must appear that there has been a mistake common to both the contracting parties, and that the agreement has been carried into effect by the deed in a manner contrary to the intention of both. Murray v. Parker, 19 Beav. 305.

—— As to Quantity of Land Demised.]—A lease which contained a larger quantity of land than was intended to be demised, was decreed to be rectified as to the overplus. Mortimer v. Shortall, 2 Dr. & War. 363 ; 1 Con. & L. 417.

—— As to Parcels.]—Where there has been a mistake in the parcels contained in an executed lease, although it may be a mistake by the plaintiff only, the court will order the annulment or, at the option of the defendant, the rectification of the lease. Paget v. Marshall, 51 L. T. 251.

—— As to Land-Tax.]—By an agreement in writing, A. agreed to take an under-lease from B., at a rent of 340*l.*, A. "paying all taxes, land-tax, and insurance." A lease was granted, reserving the rent of 340*l.* stated to include the land-tax. It had, however, been redeemed by the superior landlord. The lessee having refused to pay the amount of the land-tax redeemed, the lease was ordered to be reformed by making him liable for the land-tax though redeemed :—Held, also, that parol evidence was admissible to explain the meaning of the parties by "land-tax." Murray v. Parker, supra.

—— As to Rent—Mistake by One Side only.]—A. signed an agreement to take from B. a lease of a house, at the rent of 230*l.*, and on the terms of a lease on which the agreement was written, which erroneously stated the rental to be 130*l.* A lease was afterwards executed, in which the rent was erroneously stated to be 130*l.* The error on the part of the lessor was proved, and the court considered that the lessee must have perceived the discrepancy between the amount of rent previously stated by B. and specified in the agreement, and that reserved by the lease :—Held, that B. was not entitled to have the lease reformed, but that the proper relief was to give the lessee the option of taking the reformed lease or of rejecting it, paying, in the latter case, a rental for the past occupation, and a mortgage on the lease created by such lessee. Garrard v. Frankel, 30 Beav. 445 ; 31 L. J., Ch. 604 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 985.

After negotiations for a lease of certain premises had been for some time pending, R., who was acting in the matter on behalf of G., the intending lessor, wrote a letter to M., the intending lessee, offering a lease at a rent of 33*l.* 10*s.* yearly, which was immediately accepted in writing by M., and a lease at that rent was afterwards prepared and executed by G. and M. G. afterwards brought an action in the county court to have the agreement and lease rectified by inserting 53*l.* 10*s.* as the yearly rent, or in the alternative that the agreement and lease might be cancelled :—Held, that the sum of 33*l.* 10*s.* had been inserted by mistake in R.'s offer, and in the subsequently prepared lease, and that the offer had been accepted and the lease taken by M. with knowledge of the mistake ; and therefore the court, while holding that it was not a case for reformation of the contract, directed the lease and the agreement to be delivered up to be cancelled. Gun v. M'Carthy, 13 L. R. Ir. 304.

—— As to Machinery—Lease by Infant prepared by Master.]—Where a lease beneficial to an infant was prepared by the master, and deliberately entered into and executed by the lessees (one of whom was a guardian of the infant), a bill by the lessees, praying that the lease might be rectified, by excluding machinery and other things from it which it was alleged did not belong to the infant at the date of the lease, was dismissed with costs. Seaton v. Staniland, 4 Giff. 61 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 69 ; 7 L. T. 347.

—— As to Lessor's Name.]—Leases of corporation wherein their names are mistaken by themselves holpen in chancery. Anon., Cary, 31.

13. Cancellation and Delivery up of.

Cancellation.]—Cancelling a lease by the mutual consent of both parties does not destroy the estate vested in the lessee, and the lessor may therefore maintain an action on the demise for the recovery of the rent. Ward (Lord) v. Lumley, 5 H. & N. 87 ; 29 L. J., Ex. 322 ; 1 L. T. 376 ; 8 W. R. 184.

A declaration on a demise, for rent, stated that the plaintiff by deed demised to the defendant certain premises. Plea, that the plaintiff did not by deed demise the premises. Since the rent became due the deed was cancelled by the mutual consent of both parties :—Held, that the cancelled deed was evidence in proof of the issue. S. C., 5 H. & N. 656 ; 29 L. J., Ex. 322 ; 2 L. T. 158 ; 8 W. R. 184.

Delivering up.]—A. being lessee of premises under a lease for twenty-one years, determinable at the end of seven or fourteen years, gave notice to quit at the end of seven years, but did not yield up possession pursuant to such notice. Disputes having arisen, A. gave C., who was entitled to the residue of the term, an undertaking that, in consideration of his granting a new lease to B., he would "deliver up to C. the said lease" :—Held, that the delivery of the lease to C. with the seal cut off, was a breach of the undertaking, although the seal was also delivered at the same time. Richardson v. Barnes, 4 Ex. 128 ; 18 L. J., Ex. 468.

Trover does not lie by a lessor against a lessee to obtain possession of the indenture of lease, upon the expiration of the term by forfeiture, or otherwise. Ball v. Ball, 3 Scott (N.R.) 577 ; 3 Man. & G. 242.

A lessor who has determined the term by re-entry for breach of covenant has no title to the lease as against the lessee. Elworthy v. Sandford, 3 H. & C. 330 ; 34 L. J., Ex. 42 ; 10 L. T. 654 ; 12 W. R. 1008.

—— Presumption that Lease has been Lost.]—An expired lease may be presumed to have been destroyed, where reasonable diligence has been unsuccessfully used to secure its production. Doe d. Manton v. Austin, 2 M. & Scott, 107 ; 9 Bing. 41 ; 1 L. J., C. P. 152.

The production of the counterpart of an old lease, coupled with evidence of the payment of rent to the lessee by his under-tenants for a number of years, is sufficient evidence of the lessee's interest under such lease. Ib.

Mistake as to Rent.]—See Gun v. M'Carthy, col. 869.

14. Stamps on Leases.—See Revenue.

15. By Way of Estoppel.

The doctrine of estoppel between landlord and tenant is founded upon the principle that a lessee, having accepted a lease, may not plead to the action of his lessor nil habuit in tenementis. Langford v. Selmes, 3 Kay & J. 220 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 859.

But a lessee may plead to such an action, that the lessor had an interest at the date of the lease, but that such interest had determined before the alleged cause of action arose. Ib.

Therefore, if a termor affects to grant a lease for a term exceeding his own term in duration, and to reserve an annual rent, that would operate as an assignment of his term, and there would be no estoppel between him and the person to whom he made such assignment ; and accordingly, it would be doubtful whether the assignor would have any remedies for recovering the rent. Ib.

If any estate or interest passes from a lessor, or his real title is shewn upon the face of the lease, there can be no estoppel. Cuthbertson v. Irving, 6 H. & N. 135 ; 29 L. J., Ex. 485 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1211 ; 3 L. T. 335 ; 8 W. R. 704—Ex. Ch.

If a lessor has no title, and the lessee is evicted by title paramount, he may plead that as a defence to an action by the lessor. Ib.

But so long as a lessee continues in possession under the lease, he cannot set up any defence founded upon the fact that the lessor nil habuit in tenementis ; and upon the execution of the lease there is, in contemplation of law, created in the lessor a reversion in fee simple by estoppel, which passes by descent to his heir, and by purchase to his assignee or devisee, who may sue on the covenants in the lease. Ib.

An assignee of the reversion may establish his title against the lessee by way of estoppel. Ib.

D. granted to A. a lease of premises for twenty-one years from the 29th September, 1854, "subject, nevertheless, to an indenture of lease, bearing date the 19th October, 1847, and made between D. of the first part, J. D. and B. D. of the second part, and K. of the third part, whereby the premises were demised to K. for a term of twenty-one years, determinable and subject to the covenants and agreements therein mentioned." A. having paid rent under his lease :—Held, in an ejectment for breaches of covenant, that A. was estopped from setting up the prior lease. Duke v. Ashby, 7 H. & N. 600 ; 31 L. J., Ex. 168 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 236 ; 10 W. R. 273.

Where a person, having possession of land under a good title, became tenant, and paid rent to a stranger :—Held, that he was not estopped after his tenancy had determined, and before he had given up possession, from setting up his own prior title in an ejectment by his lessor. Accidental Death Insurance Co. v. Mackenzie, 5 L. T. 20 ; 9 W. R. 783.

The rule by which a tenant is estopped from denying the title of the landlord, who let him into possession, is applicable in an action of trespass as well as in ejectment. Delaney v. Fox, 2 C. B. (N.S.) 768 ; 26 L. J., C. P. 248.

Payment by a tenant of rent to a person other than the person who let him into possession, under a threat of expulsion, does not amount to a constructive eviction so as to affect the estoppel. Ib.

A declaration by the devisee of the reversion against the lessee, alleged that the reversion of and in the demised premises belonged to the lessor and his heirs. A plea, that the reversion of and in the premises did not belong to the lessor and his heirs is a good plea, as traversing a material allegation in the declaration. Weld v. Baxter, 11 Ex. 816; 25 L. J., Ex. 214. Affirmed, 1 H. & N. 568; 26 L. J., Ex. 112; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 91; 5 W. R. 113—Ex. Ch.

A replication by way of estoppel, that the lease was an indenture executed by the lessee, and that he entered and enjoyed the premises by virtue of the indenture; that it did not appear by the indenture that the lessor was not seised in fee, or that he had any estate or interest other than a fee simple, nor did the indenture contain anything to shew that the reversion did not belong to the lessor and his heirs, is bad, since the lessor might have had a term of years, or an estate for life, or pur autre vie. Ib.

By a deed made in 1840, S., in contemplation of his marriage, conveyed real estates to trustees to his own use until the marriage; and after the marriage, to the trustees, their executors, administrators and assigns, for a term of 500 years, without impeachment of waste, upon certain trusts, and immediately after the expiration, or sooner determination thereof, and in the meantime subject thereto, to the use of S. for life, without impeachment of waste, with remainder to other uses. It was also provided by the deed, that it should be lawful for S. during his life, from time to time, by deed either referring to or not referring to the power, to demise the estates for any term not exceeding twenty-one years, so that there should be reserved the best or most improved yearly rent, to be incident to the immediate reversion of the hereditaments so demised, that could be obtained for the same, and so that the lessee was not by any clause therein to be contained made dispunishable for waste, or exempted from punishment for committing waste. The marriage took place, and S. afterwards, by deed, leased the premises to the defendant for twelve years. By the lease, which did not refer to the deed of settlement, the rent was reserved to S., his heirs and assigns; and it contained a covenant by the lessee to repair a blacksmith's shop, and all the glass and leadwork of the windows of the messuages, and all doors, the lessee being allowed sufficient bricks and timber for the repairs, and to yield up the premises so repaired at the end of the term to S., his heirs or assigns; there was also a covenant by S. that he would repair, except those repairs covenanted to be made by the defendant. S. died before the expiration of the term:—Held, that the lease was not in pursuance of the power, and void as between the trustees and the lessee: but that such a lease is good by way of estoppel between the parties to it, and, consequently, S. might have maintained an action upon it against the lessee for a breach of covenant by the lessee. Yellowly v. Gower, 11 Ex. 274; 24 L. J., Ex. 289.

As against Receiver.]—In replevin a defendant made cognisance as bailiff of W. for rent in arrear from the plaintiff, under a demise from W.; on the production of the lease under which the plaintiff held, W. was described as a receiver appointed by the Court of Chancery, and the rent was made payable to him or any future receiver:—Held, that W. was entitled to distrain for rent in arrear, and that the plaintiff was estopped by his own deed from pleading non tenuit. Dancer v. Hastings, 12 Moore, 34; 4 Bing. 2; 5 L. J., C. P. 3; 29 R. R. 740.

An attornment by a tenant to a receiver appointed by the Court of Chancery to collect the rents, and payment of rent to such receiver, create a tenancy by estoppel between the tenant and the receiver, but do not enure to enable the person who is found ultimately to have the legal title to treat the tenant as his tenant, and to distrain for rent. Evans v. Mathias, 7 El. & Bl. 590; 26 L. 16. Other Matters relating to.

Entry of Lessee.]—Entry is not necessary to the vesting of a term of years in the lessee; but for the purpose of maintaining an action of trespass the lessee must enter, since that action is founded on actual possession. Harrison v. Blackburn, 17 C. B. (N.S.) 678; 34 L. J., C. P. 109; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1131; 11 L. T. 454; 13 W. R. 135.

A., in 1819, demised lands to B. for 100 years, and subject thereto, he, in 1820, demised for 200 years to C., who entered. In 1822 D. recovered judgment against A., and issued an elegit, under which the lands were delivered in execution:—Held, that C. was entitled to the possession as against D., and might maintain trespass against him, it not appearing that B. had entered under the demise to him. Chatfield v. Parker, 2 M. & Ry. 540; 8 B. & C. 543; 7 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 13.

Premiums on Interest in Land—Lien.]—A lease is a sale pro tanto, and a premium reserved on a lease is in the nature of purchase-money, for which, if unpaid, there is a lien on the land; and consequently, unpaid premium is an interest in land within 9 Geo. 2, c. 36, s. 3. Shepheard v. Beetham, 46 L. J., Ch. 763; 6 Ch. D. 597; 36 L. T. 909; 25 W. R. 764.

Incorporation of Prior Lease.]—The said lease of 1843 referred to a prior lease of the same mines granted by the testator in 1829, and purported to grant such or the like liberties, powers, authorities, and privileges thereby granted, and all other liberties, &c., necessary for working the mines, except as in the said lease of 1829 was excepted. The lease of 1829 excepted certain minerals from the demise, and contained covenants by the lessees not to remove the pillars of the mines without the consent of the testator, his heirs or assigns:—Held, that the lease of 1843 incorporated the provisions in the lease of 1829 against the removal of the pillars. Mostyn v. Lancaster, 51 L. J., Ch. 696; 46 L. T. 648; 31 W. R. 3.

Proof of Terms of Holding.]—Where a tenant was to hold land according to certain rules in writing, under which a former tenant held, but the length of his term was agreed on orally:—Held, that, to shew the expiration of the term, it was not necessary to produce the rules. Hey v. Moorhouse, 6 Bing. (N.C.) 52; 8 Scott, 156; 9 L. J., C. P. 113.

In an action to recover back a sum alleged to have been overpaid by a tenant to his landlord, upon a settlement between them in relation to a distress for arrears of rent, it appeared that the defendant held the premises under a lease from Michaelmas, 1832:—Held, that a memorandum written in the margin of the draft of the lease whereby the tenant engaged to pay rent for the preceding half-quarter, was admissible for the purpose of negativing the claim. Cowne v. Garment, 1 Scott, 275; 1 Bing. (N.C.) 318.

In an action for breach of an agreement between a tenant of S. and the plaintiff, that the tenant should deliver to the plaintiff the farm occupied by the former, "upon the terms and conditions of the agreement under which the said tenant held of S.," it is not necessary to produce at the trial the lease by S. Wallis v. Littell, 11 C. B. (N.S.) 369; 31 L. J., C. P. 100; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 745; 5 L. T. 489; 10 W. R. 192.

Where a lessee, after the expiration of his lease, remains in possession and pays rent, it is a question for the jury upon what terms his tenancy continues. Oakley v. Monck, 4 H. & C. 251; 35 L. J., Ex. 87; L. R. 1 Ex. 159; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 213; 14 L. T. 20; 14 W. R. 406—Ex. Ch.

A tenant for life granted a lease containing a covenant that he would, at the expiration of the term, pay and allow the lessee, a nurseryman, for all fruit trees and shrubs then on the premises which had been planted by him. At the expiration of the lease the lessee continued in possession, and paid rent, and upon the death of the tenant for life he paid the same rent to the remainderman, who was not aware of the covenant in the lease:—Held, that there was no evidence for the jury that the tenancy continued upon the terms of the lease, so as to bind the remainderman by the covenant. Ib.

A lessor of a term of years created by a writing not under seal, containing a particular contract of tenancy, conveyed the freehold to the plaintiff. The defendant afterwards and during the term paid rent to the plaintiff, and otherwise admitted him to be his landlord on the terms of the original demise:—Held, though the term of years first created was still unexpired, that there was evidence for the jury in support of the demise stated; and that, on their verdict of such a demise, the plaintiff had a right of action for the non-observance of such particular contract of tenancy. Brydges v. Lewis, 3 Q. F. TENANCIES FROM YEAR TO YEAR.

1. HOW CREATED.

What is.]—A landlord agreed to let, and a tenant to take, an office from the 29th of September, 1869, at the yearly rent of 20*l.*, payable quarterly in advance. The agreement alluded more than once to the term thereby created, and provided that in case the term should be determined otherwise than by effluxion of time or by legal notice, then the tenant should pay to the landlord 5*l.*, equivalent to one quarter's rent, as and by way of liquidated and ascertained damages, and to be recoverable as such by the landlord. The tenant without any notice gave up possession of the premises before the 29th September, 1870, having paid in advance all rent for the year ending on that day:—Held, that the terms of the agreement created a yearly tenancy, and that the landlord was entitled to recover 5*l.* from the tenant for the rent due on the 29th September in advance. Florence v. Robinson, 24 L. T. 705.

W. being entitled to a leasehold interest, the term of which expired on 25th December, 1881, agreed in writing to let the same to K. at the yearly rental of 36*l.*, and agreed not to give K. notice to quit so long as he continued to pay the rent. A railway company agreed to purchase at the price of 470*l.* this interest, described as the interest which K. held of W. for any term at tenant's option, but not beyond the term and interest of W. in the premises which term will expire on the 25th December, 1881. The railway company subsequently objected that this was only a tenancy from year to year:—Held, that it was a tenancy for the remainder of the term, but that even if it were not the company was bound by their agreement. King, In re, East London Ry., Ex parte, L. R. 16 Eq. 521; 29 L. T. 288; 21 W. R. 881.

By a written instrument, not under seal, and dated the 28th of February, 1872, W. purported to demise a messuage to the defendant, as tenant from year to year, for so long as he should keep the rent paid, and as W. should have "power to let the premises"; the defendant entered and paid rent quarterly:—Held, that the only estate vested in the defendant was a tenancy from year to year. Wood v. Beard, 46 L. J., Q. B. 100; 2 Ex. D. 30; 35 L. T. 866.

By an agreement under seal the premises in dispute were let for the term of one year, at a yearly rent, payable quarterly; and it was agreed that the lessee might determine the tenancy at the expiration of the term of one year by giving to the lessor three months' previous notice in writing, and that the lessee might continue tenant after the expiration of the term, on punctual payment of the rent, free from disturbance or eviction by the lessor as long as the rent was punctually paid:—Held, that the estate created by the instrument and the payment of the rent was a tenancy from year to year, and that a clause declaring that such a tenancy was not to be determinable by a notice to quit was inconsistent with and repugnant to the nature of such estate; and that the lessor, who had served a notice to quit, was entitled to recover. Holmes v. Day, Ir. R. 8 C. L. 235.

A. agreed to let, and B. agreed to hire, a piece of land, containing about fifteen acres, at an annual surface rent; B. to use the land for the purpose of making bricks, and to pay A. 3*s.* per 1,000 on the quantity made; the quantity made to be not less than 4,000,000 annually; the ground not to be excavated beyond the depth of eight feet without the permission of A. in writing. A portion of the land being required by a railway company, B.'s claim for compensation in respect of his estate and interest in the land so required, and for deterioration to the residue, was referred to arbitration. The umpire found that the interest of B. under this agreement was that of merely a tenant from year to year; and he assessed the compensation upon that basis:—Held, that the construction put by the umpire upon the agreement was correct; and that evidence tending to shew that by the custom of the brickmaking trade brick land is never hired from year to year was properly rejected. Stroud, In re, 8 C. B. 502; 19 L. J., C. P. 117.

An agreement dated the 19th April, 1841, by which part of a dwelling-house was let, stipulated for "the yearly rent of 42*l*., payable quarterly, the first payment of 7*l*. 13*s*. 6*d*., to be made on the 24th June next, being the proportion of rent from the 19th April, 1841, to that date." And, further, that the tenant should hold and enjoy the possession "until one of the parties should give to the other six calendar months' notice in writing to quit at the expiration of any such notice":—Held, that a yearly tenancy was not created, and that a six months' notice to quit expiring on the 5th December, was a sufficient notice to put an end to the tenancy. Doe d. King v. Grafton, 21 L. J., Q. B. 276; 16 Jur. 833.

H. and R., by indenture of February, 1805, granted and leased premises unto and to the use of J. H., his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns for ever, yielding and paying therefor a yearly rent. Proviso for re-entry on nonpayment of rent. Covenant by J. H. for payment of the rent, for repairs and for insurance:—Held, that in the absence of proof that the premises were, at the date of the instrument, in the occupation of tenants, and the expressed intention of the parties precluding the presumption of livery of seisin, the instrument could not operate as a conveyance of the fee subject to a rent-charge, but only to create a tenancy from year to year. Doe d. Roberton v. Gardiner, 12 C. B. 319; 21 L. J., C. P. 222.

A. agreed to let, and B. to take, a cottage for three months from 29th December, at a yearly rent of 18*l*., the first monthly payment to be made 25th January, free from all taxes, which were to be paid by the tenant, and allowed out of the rent. Three months' notice to quit from either party to be sufficient. B. occupied for eighteen months:—Held, a tenancy from year to year, so as to give the tenant a settlement under 6 Geo. 4, c. 57, s. 2. Willesden Overseers v. Paddington Overseers, 3 B. & S. 593; 32 L. J., M. C. 109; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 874; 7 L. T. 784; 11 W. R. 425.

A renting of a tenement for an indefinite period, and an occupation for a year, constitute a tenancy for a year. Reg. v. St. Giles, Cripplegate, 4 B. & S. 509; 33 L. J., M. C. 3; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 205; 9 L. T. 411; 12 W. R. 125.

By articles of agreement under seal, the plaintiff covenanted with E. that he would from time to time, when and so soon as he should have erected and covered in one or more of the messuages agreed to be built by him upon land therein described and agreed to be demised by indenture, demise and lease unto E., his executors, administrators, or assigns, the whole or such part or parts whereon one or more of the messuages or tenements should have been built, for ninety-eight years from the 29th of September then last (1852), at a certain yearly rent payable quarterly, the rents to be so apportioned that the yearly rent to be reserved on any such lease should not exceed one-sixth of the yearly value of the land and buildings demised, with a proviso that if the yearly rent or rents to be reserved upon the lease or leases to be granted of any part or parts only of the land should amount to or make up the full yearly rent reserved, the remainder of the land, when built upon, should be demised at the yearly rent of a peppercorn only. The articles contained a covenant by E. with the plaintiff to pay the rent agreed to be reserved, and to pay rates, to erect the messuages, and also a covenant that until the land and the buildings erected should be leased in execution of the covenant in that behalf, E., his executors, administrators, or assigns, would pay for the same the several yearly rents stipulated or agreed to be reserved in the leases to be granted to such persons, and in such manner and proportions and at such times as the same would be payable in case such leases were actually granted. There was also a proviso for re-entry by the plaintiff, in case the whole or any part of the yearly rent or rents thereby or by the leases to be granted should be behind or unpaid for twenty-one days. In 1854, E. assigned all his interest in the agreement to the defendant, who thereupon entered and occupied the land, erected certain buildings thereon, and paid the stipulated yearly sums, and then assigned to B.:—Held, that neither E. nor the defendant acquired any estate in the premises under the building agreement, nor was any tenancy from year to year created thereby, or by the occupation of the land, and payment of the stipulated rents. Camden (Marquis) v. Batterbury, 5 C. B. (N.S.) 808; 28 L. J., C. P. 187; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 627. Affirmed, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 864; 28 L. J., C. P. 335; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1405; 7 W. R. 616—Ex. Ch.

In December, 1819, the testator's father was tenant of a farm belonging to the plaintiff until the following Lady-day. The plaintiff's steward, in the month of December, proposed to let the farm, and read from a printed paper the terms of letting. The testator was present, and assented to those terms, agreeing to succeed his father at Lady-day, but no writing was signed. He did then enter, and continued tenant till his death, since which his executors occupied and paid rent. At the foot of the printed paper of terms was written a memorandum, not signed by either party, but by the attorney of the plaintiff, who was present at the time of the letting. This memorandum commenced in the following terms: "A. B., as agent of the plaintiff, agreed to let, and C. D. agreed to take," and went on to state the farm, rent, and when payable; that the term was for one year certain from Lady-day next, and so from year to year, until a due notice to quit was given:—Held, that this agreement, followed by entry and payment of rent, created a tenancy, upon the terms contained in the printed paper and memorandum, and that they might be referred to by the attorney, as shewing what the terms of the demise were. Bolton (Lord) v. Tomlin, 1 N. & P. 247; 5 A. & E. 856; 2 H. & W. 368; 6 L. J., K. B. 45.

The defendant, being in possession, under a lease for fourteen years, assigned it, by way of mortgage, to the plaintiff, and then committed a forfeiture, for which the lessor brought ejectment. It was then agreed, at a meeting of all the parties, that judgment should be signed in the ejectment, that the lessor should grant a new lease to the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff should grant an under-lease to the defendant.

The new lease was accordingly granted to the plaintiff, who then delivered the defendant the key, saying, "Go on as usual, pay the money" (due on mortgage), "and when you have done so you shall have an under-lease"; no rent was ever paid:—Held, that this did not constitute the defendant a tenant from year to year. Doe d. Rogers v. Pullen, 3 Scott, 271; 2 Bing. (N.C.) 749; 2 Hodges, 39; 5 L. J., C. P. 229.

A. let land to B. on a tenancy from year to year, which B. continued to hold for several years after A.'s title had determined, paying rent to A., and he at length gave up possession on a notice to quit from A. Subsequently to the determination of A.'s title, but before B. had given up possession, B. under-let to C. C. paid rent to B. as long as B. continued to hold, but paid no rent to any one subsequently. In an ejectment by A. against C., after B. had given up possession:—Held, that it might be presumed, as a matter of fact, that a new tenancy, from year to year, had been commenced by B. after A.'s title had ceased, and that C. therefore could not dispute A.'s title. L. & N. W. Ry. v. West, 36 L. J., C. P. 245; L. R. 2 C. P. 553.

An agreement for the holding of certain quarries provided that the rent should be 50*l.* a year; that the tenant was to work the whole of the stone, but not to employ more than a given number of men; that the rent was not to be advanced; and that that agreement was to have the effect of creating a new yearly tenancy between the parties. It would, in fact, take five years to work out the stone with the limited number of men:—Held, that this created only a tenancy determinable by notice to quit at the end of the first year. Doe d. Skrine v. Watson, 8 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 12.

Intention to create Tenancy.]—In order to create a tenancy from year to year, there must be some circumstances to shew an intention to do so, such as payment of rent quarterly, or some other aliquot part of a year. Doe d. Hull v. Wood, 14 M. & W. 682; 15 L. J., Ex. 41; 9 Jur. 1060.

Tenant at Will at Yearly Rent.]—A tenant at will, at a yearly rent, is a tenant from year to year. Pope v. Garland, 4 Y. & C. 394; 10 L. J., Ex. Eq. 13.

Effect of.]—A tenant from year to year has a lease for a year certain, with a growing interest during every year thereafter, springing out of the original contract and parcel of it. Cattley v. Arnold, 1 Johns. & H. 651; 28 L. J., Ch. 352; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 361; 7 W. R. 245.

Determination and Renewal of Lessor's Interest.]—A tenancy from year to year under a middleman, whose own interest in the premises is derived under a lease for lives, does not, where the middleman has obtained a new lease, terminate, without notice to quit, upon the death of the last surviving life in the original head lease, even though the new head lease contains a covenant against sub-letting. Hayes v. Fitzgibbon, Ir. R. 4 C. L. 500.

A tenancy from year to year is a continuing tenancy. Ib.

Adoption by Remainderman of Tenancy created by Tenant for Life.]—I. being tenant for life of lands with remainder to the plaintiff, created a yearly tenancy in the defendant, which was subsisting on the 9th of June, 1877, when I. died. The defendant continued in occupation, and tilled the land in that and the following year. He had interviews with the plaintiff after I.'s death, but no reference was made by either party to any new tenancy. No rent was demanded or paid, but the plaintiff did not intimate any intention to dispossess the defendant, or do any act either recognising or repudiating a tenancy until some time in 1878, which was not more particularly fixed by the evidence, when the defendant tendered the amount of rent which would have been then payable by him under the terms of his former tenancy, if continuing: the plaintiff then refused to accept such rent, demanded possession on the 31st December, 1878, and, without serving notice to quit, commenced, on the 28th January, 1879, an action to recover possession:—Held, that there was evidence proper to be submitted to the jury of an adoption by the plaintiff of the pre-existing yearly tenancy in the defendant. Doe d. Cates v. Somerville (6 B. & C. 126) followed. O'Keefe v. Walsh, 8 L. R. Ir. 184—C. A.

Evidence as to.]—In ejectment the plaintiff proved that S. was the tenant of the premises when he became the owner, and had paid rent to him for many years; that she was succeeded by H.; that N. succeeded H. and paid rent. At the beginning of September, 1858, the defendant and N. severally asked the plaintiff if he would accept the defendant as tenant. On each occasion the plaintiff said he would. On the 7th of September the defendant took possession, and in October of the same year paid the rent to Michaelmas, 1858, for which the plaintiff gave a receipt. The plaintiff received the rent at Christmas, 1858, and gave a receipt for it to the defendant. In March, 1859, the plaintiff gave to the defendant notice to quit at Michaelmas, or otherwise at the end of the year of the tenancy which should expire one half-year from that notice. On the 17th of December, 1859, the plaintiff's agent served a notice on the defendant to quit at Midsummer. The defendant said the plaintiff might have the house if he paid the valuation of the fixtures and goodwill:—Held, that it was a question for the jury and not for the judge at which time the tenancy commenced, that there was evidence of a tenancy ending at Michaelmas, and that it was a misdirection to withdraw from the jury all the facts, except the conduct of the defendant when the notice to quit at Midsummer was served on him. Walker v. Gode, 6 H. & N. 594; 30 L. J., Ex. 172; 4 L. T. 16.

—— Payment of Rent.]—Payment and receipt of rent are evidence against a corporation of a demise by them from year to year. Doe d. Pennington v. Taniere, 12 Q. B. 998; 18 L. J., Q. B. 49; 13 Jur. 119.

On the issue whether the plaintiff is tenant of the defendant under a demise for one year from 23rd April, 1821, and thence afterwards from year to year, evidence that the plaintiff has paid the defendant rent is not sufficient proof of the demise in issue. Phillips v. Moseley, 1 Car. & P. 262.

The receipt of rent under a lease granted by the tenant for life under a will, by a receiver appointed by the Court of Chancery during the minority of an infant remainderman, who is a ward of such court, is no evidence of a yearly tenancy between the infant ward and the lessee.

Jegon v. Vivian, 35 L. J., C. P. 73 ; L. R. 1 C. P. 9 ; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 184 ; 14 W. R. 227.

—— Payment of Annual Sum.]—The payment of a small annual sum inadequate to the value of the demised premises for a number of years is not per se evidence from which a tenancy from year to year can be inferred. Reynolds v. Reynolds, 12 Ir. Eq. R. 172.

2. OCCUPATION.

a. Under an Agreement for a Lease.

Terms must be Agreed upon.]—No tenancy is created where one has got into possession of a house without the privity of the landlord, although they afterwards enter into a negotiation for a lease, but differ as to the terms. Doe d. Knight v. Quigley, 2 Camp. 505 ; 11 R. R. 780.

What sufficient to constitute Tenancy.]—An occupation of premises, pending the execution of a lease, constitutes the relation of landlord and tenant, and will entitle the latter to sue the former upon a quantum valebat, although no distress for rent can be made. Hamerton v. Stead, 5 D. & R. 206 ; 3 B. & C. 478 ; 3 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 33 ; 27 R. R. 407. And see Doe d. Hollingsworth v. Stennett, 2 Esp. 717 ; 5 R. R. 769.

So, an occupation for eighteen years, under an unstamped agreement for a lease for twenty-one years, was held to constitute a tenancy, though no lease had ever been tendered by the lessor, or demanded by the lessee. Weakly d. Yea v. Bucknell, Cowp. 473.

A tenant holding lands under an accepted proposal for a lease, specifying the term, and bearing date prior to the 16th of August, 1832, is liable to the payment of the tithe composition, and is not to be considered as a tenant from year to year, within the 12th section of 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 119. Langley v. Langley, Ll. & G. t. Plunk. 361.

By a memorandum, dated 23rd June, 1842, made between A. as agent for and on behalf of the churchwardens of the parish of St. M. (not naming them), of the one part, and B. of the other part, it was agreed that the churchwardens should grant a lease to B. for twenty-one years from Midsummer-day then next, under the clear yearly rent of 30*l.*, and B. agreed to accept such lease ; and that, until such lease should be granted, the yearly rent should be payable and recoverable by distress or otherwise, in like manner as if such lease had been executed :—Held, that the tenancy thereby created was a tenancy from year to year. Doe d. Bailey v. Foster, 3 C. B. 215 ; 15 L. J., C. P. 263.

Where a person held premises under an agreement in writing, from quarter to quarter, and the agreement provided that the tenant should quit possession upon receiving six months' notice in writing, and, in the event of his losing his licence to sell ale, through misconduct at any time during the term, should then forthwith quit possession on being requested so to do by his landlord :—Held, that he had neither a tenancy from year to year, nor a term certain in the premises, within 1 Geo. 4, c. 87, s. 1, so as to entitle the landlord in ejectment to compel him to give security for costs under that act. Doe d. Carter v. Roe, 10 M. & W. 670 ; 2 D. (N.S.) 449 ; 12 L. J., Ex. 27 ; 6 Jur. 1044.

A party signed an instrument by which he agreed to take certain premises at a fixed yearly rent, commencing at a specified time, and which was directed to the landlords of the premises, who did not execute it ; but it was proved that he was put into possession ; that certain fixtures belonging to the landlords were appraised to him, and that he was in possession at the expiration of a year :—Held, that there was evidence from which the jury might infer a demise from year to year. Taylor v. Young, 6 L. J., K. B. 141.

When Rent has been Paid.]—Where there has been an agreement for a lease and an occupation without payment of rent, the occupier is a mere tenant at will. Braythwayte v. Hitchcock, 10 M. & W. 494 ; 12 L. J., Ex. 38 ; 6 Jur. 976. See Riseley v. Ryle, 11 M. & W. 16 ; 12 L. J., Ex. 38.

If he subsequently pays rent under that agreement, he thereby becomes tenant from year to year. Ib.

But, in order to establish a tenancy from year to year in such case, the payment of rent means a payment of rent with reference to a yearly holding. Ib.

The receipt of rent may be explained so as to rebut the implication of a yearly tenancy arising out of payment. Doe d. Lord v. Crago, 6 C. B. 90 ; 17 L. J., C. P. 263 ; 12 Jur. 705. S. P., Hurley v. Hanrahan, 15 W. R. 990.

In an action for rent, stating a demise of a messuage by the plaintiff to H. for one year, and so on from year to year, if they should respectively please, at the yearly rent of 140*l.*, payable quarterly, and an assignment by H. to the defendant, the plaintiff proved an agreement (signed by himself only) for a lease of the premises by him to H. for seven years, at 140*l.* a year ; that no lease had been actually executed, but that H. had entered into possession shortly after the date of the agreement, and had paid two quarters' rent, at the rate of 140*l.* a year :—Held, that this was sufficient evidence of a tenancy from year to year, as stated in the declaration, and in which H. had an assignable interest. Braythwayte v. Hitchcock, 10 M. & W. 494 ; 12 L. J., Ex. 38 ; 6 Jur. 976.

A party took possession of premises under an agreement for a lease to be granted to him for a term of ten years, at a yearly rent payable half-yearly ; no lease was executed, nor was the quantum of the rent to be paid ascertained ; but he occupied under the agreement for three years, paying rent for two :—Held, that this created a tenancy from year to year. Knight v. Benett, 11 Moore, 222 ; 3 Bing. 361 ; 4 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 94 ; 28 R. R. 640.

Where the occupier, under an agreement for a lease at a certain rent, pays the rent, he becomes tenant from year to year, on the terms of the agreement, and the landlord may distrain. Mann v. Lovejoy, R. & M. 355.

Where A., having entered into an agreement for a lease, has been let into possession, and has paid the stipulated rent, a tenancy from year to year is created. Doe d. Westmorland v. Smith, 1 M. & Ry. 137 ; 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 44.

Payment of rent is primâ facie evidence of a tenancy from year to year. Doe d. Pritchard v. Dodd, 2 N. & M. 838 ; 5 B. & Ad. 689.

Secus, semble, where the existence of such a tenancy would imply that devisees in trust had conveyed away their estate, whilst a duty still remained to be performed by them. Ib.

The presumption is completely rebutted by shewing that the rent paid and reserved is of the same amount as the rent reserved in an unexpired lease, the premises being at the time of such payment of rent of much greater value than the rent so reserved and so paid. Ib.

When no Rent has been Paid.]—A party entered into possession of premises under an agreement for a lease at a certain rent, and occupied them more than a year, but paid no rent. An account was afterwards delivered to him by the landlord, charging him with half a year's rent, the amount of which he at first disputed, but admitted that a half-year's rent was due, and named the amount, and the account was altered accordingly:—Held, that a yearly tenancy might thereby be implied; and that the landlord had a right to distrain. Cox v. Bent, 2 M. & P. 281; 5 Bing. 185; 7 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 68; 30 R. R. 566. See also Braythwayte v. Hitchcock, supra, and Faby v. O'Donnell, 4 Ir. R., C. L. 332.

Since Judicature Acts.]—Since the Judicature Acts, the rule no longer holds that a person occupying under an executory agreement for a lease is only made tenant from year to year at law by the payment of rent, but that he is to be treated in every court as holding on the terms of the agreement. Walsh v. Lonsdale, 52 L. J., Ch. 2; 21 Ch. D. 9; 46 L. T. 858; 31 W. R. 109.

Notice to Quit.]—If a tenant holds under an agreement for a lease at a yearly rent, whereby it is stipulated that the agreement shall continue for the life of the lessor, and that a clause shall be inserted in the lease, giving the lessor's son power to take the house for himself when he comes of age, the son must make his election in a reasonable time after he comes of age. The delay of a year is unreasonable, and the tenant cannot be ejected upon a half-year's notice to quit, served after such a delay. Doe d. Bromfield v. Smith, 2 Term Rep. 436; 6 East, 530; 2 Smith, 570.

A. agreed by parol to sell an estate to B. on certain terms, provided B. would continue C. his tenant, not for one year only, but from year to year (C. having just before been let into possession, under a contract for the purchase of the estate, which he had failed to pay for in time, and had therefore forfeited his deposit); and A. thereupon agreed to take C.'s forfeited deposit as part of the purchase-money: A. and B. afterwards reduced their agreement respecting the purchase into writing, in which no notice was taken of the stipulation concerning C.'s tenancy; yet held, that this stipulation being collateral to the written agreement, was binding upon B.: and that the agreement operated as a tenancy for two years certain at least, though no rent was then mentioned, but was to be settled afterwards; and that the tenancy could not be put an end to at the end of the first year, by six months' previous notice to quit. Denn d. Jacklin v. Cartwright, 4 East, 29.

b. Under a Contract for Sale.

Generally.]—An occupation under an agreement for the sale of premises, if a title could be made, creates a tenancy. Doe d. Newby v. Jackson, 2 D. & R. 514; 1 B. & C. 448.

In an agreement for the sale of leasehold premises, to be paid for by instalments, it is stipulated that, in default of payment of the instalments at specified times, the former instalments shall be forfeited, and the vendor shall not be compellable to convey; upon which the purchaser is let into possession, and makes default; he is thenceforth a mere tenant upon sufferance. Doe d. Moore v. Lawder, 1 Stark. 308.

One who is put in possession upon an agreement for the purchase of land, cannot be ousted by ejectment before his lawful possession is determined by demand of possession or otherwise. Right d. Lewis v. Beard, 13 East, 210.

Purchase not completed.]—A. having agreed to buy certain lands of B. had paid part of the purchase-money, and was let into possession. B. had not executed any conveyance:—Held, that this was a mere tenancy at will in A., and that if B. had made a demand of possession to determine the tenancy at will, he might recover the lands by ejectment. Doe d. Hiatt v. Miller, 5 Car. & P. 595.

A. entered into possession of certain premises under an agreement with B. and wife for sale, which agreement conveyed no legal estate, and B.'s wife was replaced in possession by A. as a caretaker. After some time, B. and wife, alleging that A. had not completed his agreement, made a lease to C., and gave possession of the premises to C., without A.'s privity. In an action of trespass by A. against C.:—Held, that A., by taking possession under the agreement, only became tenant at will to B.; that that interest at will was determined by the lease from B. to C., and that C. was not estopped from shewing that A.'s interest had so determined, after B. had accepted possession from A., though determined by B.'s own act. Farrelly v. Robins, Ir. R. 3 C. L. 284.

Agreement between P. and W. for the sale of lands to W., to be completed on the 25th March, and before the day W. agrees to let to the defendant from that day, and the defendant is let into possession before that day by the consent of P., upon notice to P. that W. had agreed to let to him; on the 29th May, conveyance executed as of the 25th March, subject to a term redeemable on payment by W. of purchase-money with interest, with power to P. to enter for default of payment by W.:—Held, that P. might bring ejectment for default of payment, without giving the defendant notice to quit. Doe d. Parker v. Boulton, 6 M. & S. 148.

If the vendor of a term before the whole of the purchase-money is paid, agrees with the purchaser that the latter shall have possession of the premises till a given day, paying the reserved rent in the meantime, and that if he does not pay the residue of the purchase-money on that day, he shall forfeit the instalments already paid, and shall not be entitled to an assignment of the lease; the purchaser being thus put into possession, if the residue of the purchase-money is not paid at the day appointed, no tenancy is created, and the vendor may maintain ejectment without any notice to quit, or demand of possession. Doe d. Leeson v. Sayer, 3 Camp. 8.

A party who has been let into the possession of land under a contract of sale which has not been completed, is a tenant at will to the vendor. Ball v. Cullimore, 2 C. M. & R. 120; 1 Gale, 96; 5 Tyr. 753.

A. agreed with B. that he, A., would on payment of 900*l.* as thereinafter mentioned, grant, sell, and convey to B. the messuages, lands, and premises mentioned; and B. covenanted to pay the sum on or before the 1st January then next, or whenever a good title to the messuages, &c., should be tendered to him; but it was agreed that if B. should, on or before the 1st January, be desirous that that sum should remain a charge on the premises, then B. might require the same, so that upon completion by A. of the conveyances, B. should execute to A. proper conveyances for securing the 900*l.* on the premises, with interest. Covenant by B. to pay the interest so long as the principal should remain unpaid. Proviso, that, in case the interest should be in arrear thirty days next after the same should have become due, B. should be considered as a tenant to A. of the messuage, lands, &c., from the date thereof, at the yearly rent of 40*l.* 10*s.*, payable on the 16th April and the 16th October in every year; and it should be lawful for A., his heirs and assigns, to enter and distrain, and to sell and dispose of the distress, or otherwise to deal with the same, in like manner as in distress for rent reserved by lease, to the end that A. might be fully paid and satisfied the interests and costs. B. gave due notice that he would require the purchase-money to remain a charge on the premises for five years; he was let into possession and received the rents, and in July, 1828, became bankrupt, and half a year's interest being in arrear for more than thirty days, A. distrained on the tenants then in possession of the premises. The assignees paid the amount of the distress:—Held, that the agreement was substantially an agreement for a purchase of the premises, and that it did not become a lease or an agreement for a lease, by reason of the interest having been in arrear more than thirty days, and of the proviso contained in the agreement; that the unpaid vendor was entitled to have the estate resold, and the produce and interest applied in payment of the purchase-money, and to prove against the estate for the residue; and consequently that the claim for interest was a debt provable under the commission, and therefore barred by the certificate. Hope v. Booth, 1 B. & Ad. 498; 9 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 21.

A party who occupied a house as tenant from year to year, entered into the following agreement with his landlord: "1831, September 2, S. S., the tenant, purchased an estate in the parish of C., bought of R. G. (the landlord), at the sum of 100*l.* Received on account, 10*s.* R. G. is willing to let the sum lie by paying 4 per cent." :—Held, that as there was an implied condition in the contract that the landlord should make out a good title, the agreement for the purchase did not operate as a surrender of the tenancy by operation of law. Doe d. Gray v. Stanion, 1 M. & W. 695; 5 L. J., Ex. 253.

A person who contracts for the purchase of land, and is let into possession by the vendor, but is prevented from completing the purchase by the vendor failing to make a good title, is not liable, in an action for use and occupation in respect of the time of his holding, in the expectation that such good title would be made, and the purchase would be completed. Winterbottom v. Ingham, 7 Q. B. 611; 14 L. J., Q. B. 298; 10 Jur. 4.

With a Condition.]—A contract was made for the purchase of a public-house; 50*l.* was paid as a deposit; 70*l.* more was to be paid on the landlord's consent being obtained to a change of the tenancy. The purchaser sent some furniture to the house in question, and resided in a part of it, the vendor also still remaining in it:—Held, that the contract was conditional on a valid consent of the landlord being given; and that a verbal consent afterwards revoked before any change of tenancy in fact had occurred, was not binding; that there had been no partial enjoyment of the object of the contract, and that, therefore, on the failure of the condition, the 50*l.* might be recovered as money had and received. Wrighton or Wright v. Newton, 2 C. M. & R. 124; 1 Gale, 67; 5 Tyr. 736.

Evidence as to.]—A tenant in common of five houses, occupying one of them, joined his cotenant in the sale of the five, and continued in the occupation of the one for two years afterwards:—Held, that these facts alone were not evidence of a tenancy, and that he could not be sued by the purchaser for use and occupation. Tew v. Jones, 13 M. & W. 12; 14 L. J., Ex. 94.

c. Under Void Lease.

Effect of receiving Rent.]—The plaintiff was owner in fee of cottages and land conveyed to him subject to an unexpired lease for sixty years. He received rent from the tenant under this lease at the nominal rate, reserved under the lease, of 6*d.* a year, and gave a receipt for it for chief rent. The lease had been granted by a former tenant for life without leasing power, and contained a covenant for quiet enjoyment. In an action of ejectment by the plaintiff against the tenant in possession under this lease:—Held, that as the void lease gave no action on the covenant for quiet enjoyment to the defendant against the plaintiff, it afforded no defence to this action; and the receipt of rent under the circumstances did not create a tenancy from year to year. Smith v. Widlake, 47 L. J., Q. B. 282; 3 Q. B. D. 10; 26 W. R. 52—C. A.

So, where one enters under a void lease by a tenant for life, and after his death the remainderman receives rent. Doe d. Martin v. Watts, 7 Term Rep. 83; 2 Esp. 501; 4 R. R. 87. And see Ludford v. Barber, 1 Term Rep. 86; 1 R. R. 156.

Yet, if the remainderman receives money as rent after the death of the tenant for life, it is an admission of a tenancy from year to year. Ib.

And in such cases the tenant holds under the terms of the lease in all other respects except the duration of time. Doe d. Rigge v. Bell, 5 Term Rep. 471; 2 R. R. 642.

A tenant in tail having received an ancient rent of 1*l.* 18*s.* 6*d.* from the lessee in possession, under a void lease granted by the tenant for life under a power, the rack-rent value of which was 30*l.* a year, cannot maintain an ejectment, at least after laying his demise on a prior day, without giving the lessee some notice to quit, so as to make him a trespasser after such recognition of a lawful possession either in the relation of tenant, or at least as continuing by sufferance till notice. Denn d. Brune v. Rawlings, 10 East, 261; 10 R. R. 287. And see Doe d. Brune v. Prideaux, 10 East, 158; 10 R. R. 258; and Whitecare d. Boult v. Symonds, 10 East, 13; 10 R. R. 224.

In 1786, a dean and chapter and P. granted a lease of premises for ninety-nine years, reserving a rent to the dean and chapter and another rent to P. This lease purported to be made in pursuance of leasing powers given by a private statute, but was in fact not in accordance with them. The rents reserved by the lease had been from time to time regularly paid to and received by the successive deans and chapters, and to and by P. and his representatives. Quære, whether the lease was void or only voidable; but held, that if voidable, it had been set up by acceptance of rent by each successive dean and chapter; and if void, the payment and receipt of rent were evidence from which a demise from year to year by the dean and chapter would be presumed. Doe d. Pennington v. Taniere, 12 Q. B. 998; 18 L. J., Q. B. 49; 13 Jur. 119.

Where a party became tenant for a period exceeding three years, under a lease void at law, as not being made by deed under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 3, and the receipts given to him for rent which he had paid for two years stated the rent to be payable in advance:—Held, that he became a yearly tenant, on the terms of paying the rent in advance. Lee v. Smith, 9 Ex. 662; 23 L. J., Ex. 198; 2 W. R. 377; 2 C. L. R. 1079.

Notice to Quit.]—An agreement for a lease at a certain rent, containing a stipulation that the lessor should not turn out the tenant so long as he paid the rent, and did not sell, &c., any article injurious to the lessor's business, either purports to be a lease for life, and would then be void, as not being creatable by parol, or, if it operates as a tenancy from year to year, it must necessarily be determinable by either party giving the regular notice to quit. Doe d. Warner v. Browne, 8 East, 166; 9 R. R. 397.

By an agreement in writing made on the 17th December, 1850, the plaintiff agreed to let to the defendant premises for a term of three years from the 25th December inst. The defendant occupied under this agreement during the three years, and paid the rent reserved. The plaintiff, without giving notice to quit, brought ejectment:—Held, that though the lease, not being by deed, was void by 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 3, the defendant became tenant from year to year, subject to the terms of the agreement, and that his interest expired at the end of the three years without a notice to quit. Tress v. Savage, 4 El. & Bl. 36; 2 C. L. R. 1315; 23 L. J., Q. B. 339; 18 Jur. 680; 2 W. R. 564.

3. Holding over.

What is.]—When a lease for a term of years expired at Midsummer, 1821, and the tenant refused to relinquish possession, and insisted that he was entitled to a notice to quit, and continued in possession until Christmas following, and paid rent to that time, when he tendered the keys of the premises to his landlord, which the latter refused to accept:—Held, that such continuing in possession by the tenant did not amount to a holding over by him, but was conclusive evidence on presumption of law of a tenancy from year to year, which entitled the landlord to maintain an action for the use and occupation of the premises to recover the amount of a quarter's rent, which became due from Christmas, 1821, to Lady-day in the following year. Bishop v. Howard, 3 D. & R. 293; 2 B. & C. 100; 1 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 243; 26 R. R. 291.

If a tenant, whose lease is expired, is permitted to continue in possession pending a treaty for a further lease, he is not a tenant from year to year, but so strictly a tenant at will, that he may be turned out of possession without notice: but it is otherwise if he has continued in possession for a year, or rent has been received. Doe d. Hollingsworth v. Stennett, 2 Esp. 717; 5 R. R. 769.

By Under-tenants.]—A lessee of a term underlet, and his under-tenant held over for a portion of a year after the expiration of the term against the will of the lessee, so that he could not give up possession to his lessor. During such holding over, the lessee distrained upon the under-tenant for rent previously due:—Held, that the lessee was liable for the period of the under-tenant's holding over, but not for a whole year's rent. Ibbs v. Richardson, 1 P. & D. 618; 9 A. & E. 849; 8 L. J., Q. B. 126.

An under-tenant (who was tenant from year to year), after the expiration of the tenant's lease, being acquainted with the circumstance, held on under the new tenant for one quarter, and paid him the same rent he had been accustomed to do. He then gave up the premises, not having given any previous notice:—Held, that there was no evidence of a new continuing tenancy, and that, therefore, the under-tenant was not obliged to give a notice to quit. Freeman v. Jury, M. & M. 19.

An under-tenant who is in possession at the determination of the original lease, and is permitted by the reversioner to hold over, is quasi a tenant at sufferance; and the mere fact of occupation, coupled with the payment of rent for such time of occupation, does not raise the presumption of a demise for years unless there is some evidence to shew an agreement for a demise for the term. Simkin v. Ashurst, 1 C. M. & R. 261; 4 Tyr. 781.

By Co-tenants.]—A. and B. were tenants to C. for a term of three years. B. never occupied the premises, but A., on the expiration of the term, held over. No assent of B. to the holding over was proved. An action for use and occupation having been brought by C. against A. and B., in which A. suffered judgment by default, C. tendered in evidence a letter written by his agent to B. after the expiration of the term, in which he demanded rent alleged to be due subsequently to the term. No answer was returned to the letter:—Held, that as one tenant cannot bind his co-tenant by holding over without his assent, and as there was no evidence of B.'s assent, B. was not liable for the rent, and therefore the letter to him, although admissible, was not entitled to much weight. Draper v. Crafts, 15 M. & W. 166; 15 L. J., Ex. 92.

Subsequent Payment of Rent.]—Wherever a tenancy for years comes to an end either by efflux of time, or by the death or end of the title of the lessor, so that either he or his representative, or any independent owner of the demised hereditament, can without notice eject the tenant, and the person entitled to eject leaves the tenant in possession, and receives rent from him without explanation or stipulation, the person receiving the rent is to be assumed to have created a tenancy upon the terms on which the tenant held in the demise originally made to him; and the holding to be presumed is as of a tenancy from year to year according to the former holding of the tenant, and therefore commencing at a time corresponding to that from which he originally held. Kelly v. Patterson, 43 L. J., C. P. 320; L. R. 9 C. P. 681; 30 L. T. 842.

If on the death of the landlord the tenant who has held on such terms, continues in possession, and pays the same rent to the landlord's successor, it is evidence that the latter has assented to the tenant continuing on all the terms of the original letting. Cornish v. Stubbs, 39 L. J., C. P. 202; L. R. 5 C. P. 334; 22 L. T. 21; 18 W. R. 547.

Terms of.]—If, after the expiration of a lease, containing a covenant by the tenant to keep the premises in repair, he verbally agrees to hold over, paying an additional rent, nothing more being expressed between the parties respecting the terms of the new tenancy, he is presumed to hold under the covenants of the former lease, as far as they are applicable to his new situation; and if the premises are afterwards burnt down by accidental fire, he is bound to rebuild them. Digby v. Atkinson, 4 Camp. 275; 16 R. R. 792.

Where, on the expiration of a lease for a year, the tenant remains in possession with the consent of the landlord, and nothing is said or done inconsistent with his holding on under the terms of the lease, the implication of law is, that a tenancy from year to year has been created on the same terms in so far as they are not inconsistent with a tenancy from year to year. Dougal v. McCarthy, 62 L. J., Q. B. 462; [1893] 1 Q. B. 736; 4 R. 402; 68 L. T. 699; 41 W. R. 484; 57 J. P. 597—C. A.

When a tenant enters a house under an unsealed agreement to let for a term of more than three years, and occupies and pays rent till the end of the term, he is during the whole term a tenant from year to year, subject to all those stipulations in the agreement which are applicable to such a tenancy, and may be sued for the breach of any of them, e.g. one binding him to paint in the last year of the term. Martin v. Smith, 43 L. J., Ex. 42; L. R. 9 Ex. 50; 30 L. T. 268; 22 W. R. 336.

By an agreement not under seal, the landlord agreed to let to the tenant, and the tenant to take of him, a house and premises for seven years, upon the terms that he would, in the last year of the term, paint, grain, and varnish the interior, and also whitewash and colour. The tenant entered under the agreement, and occupied and paid rent during the whole period of seven years. In an action for not painting, graining, and varnishing the interior, and whitewashing and colouring in the seventh year:—Held, that he must be taken to have occupied on the terms that, if he should continue to occupy during the whole period of seven years, he would do those things which were by the agreement to be done in the seventh year; and that he was therefore liable. Ib.

Where a tenant under lease continues to hold after the expiration of it as a tenant at will, and assigns to another, the tenancy of the assignee will be held to commence at the day on which the original tenancy commenced under the lease, and notice to quit on that day only is good, notwithstanding the assignee came in on a different day. Doe d. Castleton v. Samuel, 5 Esp. 173; 8 R. R. 845.

A person who held glebe lands as tenant to one incumbent, and continues in possession under his successor without disturbance, must be presumed to hold as tenant to the latter, and cannot be dispossessed without a notice to quit. Doe d. Coates v. Somerville, 9 D. & R. 100; 6 B. & C. 126; 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 28.

B. holding land of A. for a term of years, underlets part to C. from year to year. At the expiration of the term, B. agrees with A. to hold on from month to month. In the absence of any new agreement between B. and C., the tenancy from year to year continues. Peirse v. Sharr, 2 M. & Ry. 418; 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 159.

A. was tenant to the plaintiff of premises which the plaintiff gave him notice to quit on the 11th of October, 1843. After the notice was given, the defendant agreed to take a lease of the premises from that day. Before that day, the defendant was, with the consent of the plaintiff, substituted for A. as tenant during the remainder of A.'s term. The plaintiff and the defendant could not agree as to the terms of the lease to be granted to the defendant; but the defendant continued to occupy the premises for half a year after the 11th of October:—Held, that after the 11th of October, the defendant did not impliedly occupy, subject to the rent of the determined tenancy. Thetford Corporation v. Tyler, 8 Q. B. 95; 15 L. J., Q. B. 33; 10 Jur. 68.

Where a tenant holds over after the determination of a lease for years and pays rent, he is tenant from year to year: but such tenancy is determinable at the end of the first year by a six months' notice to quit, expiring at the end of the first year; and the same is true of every other mere tenancy from year to year. Doe d. Clarke v. Smarridge, 7 Q. B. 957; 14 L. J., Q. B. 327; 9 Jur. 781.

A tenant holding over after the expiration of a lease for years may be taken to hold upon any of the terms of such former lease which are consistent with a yearly tenancy; whether he does hold on any such terms or not, is a question for the jury on the facts proved. Hyatt v. Griffiths, 17 Q. B. 505.

Where a lessee, after the expiration of his lease, remains in possession and pays rent, it is a question for the jury upon what terms his tenancy continues. Oakley v. Monck, 3 H. & C. 706; 34 L. J., Ex. 137; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 376; 12 L. T. 465; 13 W. R. 721. Affirmed, 4 H. & C. 251; 35 L. J., Ex. 87; L. R. 1 Ex. 159; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 213; 14 L. T. 20; 14 W. R. 406—Ex. Ch.

A tenant for life granted a lease containing a covenant that he would at the expiration of the term pay and allow the lessee, a nurseryman, for all fruits and shrubs then on the premises which had been planted by him. At the expiration of the lease the lessee continued in possession and paid rent, and, upon the death of the tenant for life, he paid the same rent to the remainderman, who was not aware of the covenant in the lease:—Held, no evidence for the jury that the tenancy continued upon the terms of the lease, so as to bind the remainderman by the covenant. Ib.

—— Lease Terminable on Condition.]—A lease under the court for seven years pending the cause, being about to expire, the lands were sold under the decree, and the purchaser stated that he did not wish a new letting, but that the receiver should levy the accruing rents from the tenants, until the conveyance to him should be executed. After the expiration of the lease, the tenant continued to occupy, and the receiver to take the rent as before, but without any express agreement as to the new tenancy. Afterwards, the purchaser, by injunction, took the actual possession, and turned the tenant out. On motion for a writ of restitution, upon the ground that a tenancy from year to year had been created, and that the tenant was entitled to a notice to quit:—Held, that as to the tenancy under the court, the cause is determined by the execution of the conveyance to the purchaser; and that the tenant over-holding, without special agreement, held impliedly subject to the conditions of the lease, and therefore his tenancy was determined by the execution of the conveyance to the purchaser. Johnston v. Reardon, 2 Ir. Eq. R. 123.

—— Liability for Payment of Rent.]—Where a lease expires, the tenant continues liable to the rent, unless he delivers up complete possession of the premises, or the landlord accepts another in his room. Harding v. Crethorn, 1 Esp. 57.

Where several persons, directors of a trades' union bank, took certain premises for a year, with a proviso, that the landlord, on one month's notice before the expiration thereof, would grant a lease of the premises; and the directors, before the expiration of eleven months, abandoned the directorship and their possession; before the year had expired, negotiations were entered into for a lease for another year between the landlord and the new directors, but which terminated without any decisive arrangement being entered into, the new directors having continued to occupy after the expiration of the year:—Held, that the original directors remained liable for the rent. Christie v. Tancred, 7 M. & W. 127; 1 H. & W. 50; 10 L. J., Ex. 228; 4 Jur. 1064.

The defendant agreed by parol to rent a house as tenant from year to year, for the residue of a term, which was three years and three quarters: he held for three years and one quarter, and quitted:—Ruled, that though perhaps he might have quitted without notice at the end of three years, yet the remaining longer implied a contract to pay rent for the residue of the term. Sauvage v. Dupuis, 3 Taunt. 410.

A party occupied premises under an agreement for three years, at 45*l.* a year, which expired at Midsummer, 1826. He did not then go out, nor did his landlord take any steps to compel him; but, at Michaelmas following, gave him notice to quit at Lady-day, 1827, or pay the rent of 50*l.* a year. He continued in, but refused to pay any more than 45*l.* rent:—Held, that, under the circumstances, he must be taken to have acquiesced in the new proposal, and was bound to pay the rent of 50*l.* Roberts v. Hayward, 3 Car. & P. 432.

A lessor suffers the lessee to hold the lands, after the lease is determined. Equity will not compel the tenant to account for the mesne profits, unless the lessor was hindered from entering by fraud, or some extraordinary accident. Bolton v. Deane, Pre. Ch. 516.

Notice to Quit.]—Premises had been let by a tenant in fee on a lease expiring at Midsummer, 1866: at that date the defendant was in occupation as tenant from year to year to the intermediate lessee, on a demise commencing at Michaelmas; the tenant in fee let the premises on a fresh lease to the plaintiff, commencing at Midsummer, 1866: the defendant continued in occupation and paid rent to the plaintiff. Notice to quit at Midsummer was given by the plaintiff to the defendant, who refused to leave the premises. The plaintiff having sued in ejectment:—Held, that the plaintiff having allowed the defendant to hold over, and having received rent as from year to year without explanation or stipulation, the inference was that there had been a tacit agreement that the defendant should hold from year to year according to the terms of his former tenancy, that is to say, from Michaelmas to Michaelmas, that the notice to quit at Midsummer was wrong, and that the plaintiff must be nonsuited. Kelly v. Patterson, 43 L. J., C. P. 320; L. R. 9 C. P. 681; 30 L. T. 842.

Damages Recoverable by Landlord.]—Where a tenant holds over after the expiration of his tenancy, and after he has had notice that his landlord has relet the premises to another tenant, the landlord may recover against him, as damages, the amount he (the landlord) has been obliged to pay in an action brought against him by the person to whom he had so relet, for not delivering possession according to the terms of such reletting, together with his own and the plaintiff's costs of such action. Bramley v. Chesterton, 2 C. B. (N.S.) 1144; 27 L. J., C. P. 23; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1104; 5 W. R. 690.

4. Acceptance of a New Tenant.

The defendant, who had occupied under a lease which expired at Lady-day, 1829, paid a quarter's rent on Midsummer-day, 1829, deducting something for repairs; he was not afterwards seen on the premises, but the rent was paid at irregular intervals by L., who was in occupation for the ensuing two years:—Held, that it was correctly left to a jury to find whether the lessor had accepted L. as a tenant, and the jury having found for the defendant, the court refused to set aside the verdict. Woodcock v. Nuth, 8 Bing. 170; 1 M. & Scott, 317.

W. and H., by agreement in March, 1827, became tenants to the plaintiff for three years, of premises occupied by them as partners, with the power to them to extend the term for seven years, by giving the plaintiff a notice to that effect. In January, 1829, W. and H. gave notice accordingly. At Midsummer, 1828, W. retired from the partnership, and in January, 1829, H. entered into partnership with S., and H. and S. carried on the business under the firm of H. & S. until 1831. The plaintiff gave receipts for the rent as received from H. after W. retired, and as received from H. & S. after S. became partner with H. In February, 1829, the plaintiff gave to H. a letter from the plaintiff's attorney, signifying that a lease might be made to H. & S., but this letter was kept by H., and not acted upon, and no lease was prepared:—Held, that the original tenancy of W. and H. was not surrendered by act or operation of law, and consequently that W. remained liable for rent. Graham v. Wichelo, 3 Tyr. 201; 1 C. & M. 188; 2 L. J., Ex. 70.

The plaintiff was in possession of land under a lease granted to him by B., who had previously mortgaged the premises. The transferees of the mortgage (being cognisant of the lease) gave the plaintiff notice of the mortgage, and required him to pay them all rent due, and to become due, in respect of the mortgaged premises:—Held, that this was evidence whence the jury might infer a contract of tenancy for a year, as between the mortgagees and the plaintiff. Brown v. Storey, 1 Man. & G. 117; 1 Scott (N.R.) 9; 9 L. J., C. P. 225; 4 Jur. 319.

5. Change of Terms.

In Time of Payment of Rent.]—If a tenant enters in the middle of a quarter, and afterwards pays up to the beginning of a succeeding regular quarter, from which time he pays half-yearly, his tenancy commences from that regular quarter-day to which he paid up. Doe d. Holcomb v. Johnson, 6 Esp. 10; 9 R. R. 800.

In Mode of Payment of Rent.]—Where there was a letting by two tenants in common at an entire rent, and one of them afterwards gave notice to the tenant to pay a moiety of the rent to him:—Held, that it was a question for the jury, whether there was a new contract, or only an alteration in the mode of receiving the rent. Powis v. Smith, 1 D. & R. 490; 5 B. & Ald. 850; 24 R. R. 587. And see Harrison v. Barnby, 5 Term Rep. 246; 2 R. R. 584.

In Amount of Rent.]—By increasing the amount of rent payable by a tenant from year to year, a new tenancy is not necessarily created. Doe d. Monck v. Geekie, 5 Q. B. 841: 1 Car. & K. 307; 13 L. J., Q. B. 239; 8 Jur. 360.

During a tenancy from year to year, at a given rent, the rent was raised at the termination of one of the years, by consent of the landlord and tenant:—Held, that, if this created a new contract, it must be a contract to hold on the old terms; and that a contract for a tenancy for two years certain from the time of raising the rent could not be inferred in default of additional evidence, even on the assumption that an original contract for a tenancy from year to year creates a tenancy for two years certain. Ib.

An increase of the rent payable by a yearly tenant, by an arrangement during a year of the tenancy, does not per se operate to put an end to the old tenancy and create a new one. Inchiquin (Lord) v. Lyons, 20 L. R., Ir. 474—C. A.

If there is a written agreement between landlord and tenant, that for certain premises the tenant shall pay 170*l.* a year, and afterwards an arrangement is made by parol that 30*l.* a year shall be allowed out of it, because the landlord is to occupy a certain part for a time, such parol arrangement does not vary the agreement so as to reduce the rent payable under it, and therefore an allegation is correct which states it to be 170*l.* Hilton v. Goodhind, 2 Car. & P. 591.

After Expiration of Lease.]—A tenant occupied land at the expiration of a lease, with the assent of the lessor, a parson; on the determination of his title, he continued to be tenant to his successor:—Held, that he was tenant under the terms of the original lease. Hutton v. Warren, 2 Gale, 71; 1 M. & W. 466; 1 Tyr. & G. 646; 5 L. J., Ex. 234.

Sub-lease from Year to Year—Expiry of Lease—Lessee holding for Less than Year.]—Where a yearly tenancy has subsisted between a tenant for years and his under-tenant, it is no legal objection to the continuance of that tenancy, that the term of the tenant for years has run out, and that he continues to hold of the superior landlord as tenant from time to time, for a shorter period than a year. If the under-tenant continues to occupy without any new agreement he will be taken to have occupied as a yearly tenant. Pearce v. Shard, 6 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 354.

Other Changes.]—Where there is a demise from year to year, so long as the parties shall please, and a new tenant takes possession, whose occupation as tenant the then reversioner omits to determine by a notice to quit, the pleadings may allege a new relation of landlord and tenant, on the original terms between the reversioner and the occupier. Buckworth v. Simpson, 1 C. M. & R. 834; 5 Tyr. 344; 1 Gale, 38; 4 L. J., Ex. 104.

A. demised to B. certain lands and premises for one year certain, and then from year to year so long as the parties should think proper, with power to determine it on giving notice to quit; and the lease contained various terms and conditions as to the management of the lands and repairing the buildings. The lessee died, and his executors entered into the occupation of the premises, and continued to occupy, and paid rent:—Held, that they were chargeable in their personal character upon the terms contained in the original demise; their continuing to occupy, and the landlord abstaining from giving notice to quit, raising an implied promise on their part to abide by the terms of the original contract. Ib. But see Jackson v. McMaster, 28 L. R., Ir. 176.

A. granted an annuity to B. out of lands, with the usual powers of distress and entry, if the annuity should fall in arrear. A. afterwards granted a lease for years to the defendant. The annuity having fallen into arrear, B. distrained on the defendant, and informed him that he had a charge upon the premises under lease to him. The defendant thereupon signed an agreement "to attorn and become tenant to B.," and paid him rent:—Held, that this created a new tenancy from year to year between B. and the defendant, determinable on the payment of the arrears of the annuity, upon which the defendant's lease for years would revive. Doe d. Chawner v. Boulter, 1 N. & P. 650; 6 A. & E. 675; W. W. & D. 333; 6 L. J., K. B. 179.

A declaration stated that the defendant held lands under a lease from E. on certain terms, which were set forth; that the reversion came to the plaintiff; and that the defendant, in consideration of an alteration of the rent, promised to hold of the plaintiff on the same terms in all other respects; but that the defendant broke the terms. The plaintiff not having proved an express contract to hold of the defendant on the old terms:—Held, that he could not rely upon an implied contract arising from the old lease without putting it in evidence, and that the old lease could not be used as such evidence unless properly stamped. Wallis v. Broadbent, 4 A. & E. 877; 2 H. & W. 41; 6 L. J., K. B. 269.

A., B. and C. (C. being an unmarried woman), entered into an agreement, dated 25th December, 1834, to take a house of the plaintiff for seven years at an annual rent, payable quarterly, under which they entered. In September, 1835, C. married; in December, A. became a bankrupt. In an action by the plaintiff against A., B., C. and C.'s husband, for two years' rent, claimed to be due under the demise contained in the agreement, the defendants proved payment, by A.'s assignees, of the quarter's rent due at Michaelmas, 1835, and an admission by the plaintiff of the receipt of the two previous quarters' rent, but it was not shewn when, or by whom, these latter payments were made:—Held, that this was not evidence from which a new yearly tenancy, on the terms of the agreement, could be inferred, so as to charge all the defendants, inasmuch as it was not shewn that the payments were made before C.'s marriage, or with her assent after her marriage. Doidge v. Bowers, 2 M. & W. 365; M. & H. 170; 6 L. J., Ex. 132.

6. Terms Incident to Holding.

Generally.]—When a party enters into possession of a farm, and pays rent under an agreement for a lease, containing divers covenants to cultivate, pay rent, &c., he is bound by all the covenants in the agreement applicable to a tenancy from year to year, and therefore where the agreement stipulated for the lease to contain a condition for re-entry if the tenant should grow two successive crops of white corn without fallow, he might be ejected without notice if he committed a breach of this covenant. Doe d. Thompson v. Amey, 4 P. & D. 177; 12 A. & E. 476.

A covenant in a lease for years, ending at Michaelmas, that the tenant shall and may retain and sow forty acres of wheat on the arable land demised (consisting of 213 acres) at the seed-time next after the end of the term, and leave the standing thereof till the harvest then next following rent-free, with the use of the premises for threshing, &c., till a day named, is a term which may be made incident to a tenancy from year to year. Hyatt v. Griffiths, 17 Q. B. 505.

The rule that a tenant holding over, after the expiration of his lease, without entering into a new contract, continues to hold, upon the terms of the lease, so far as they are applicable to a tenancy from year to year, applies to a proviso for re-entry for nonpayment of the rent. Thomas v. Packer, 1 H. & N. 669; 26 L. J., Ex. 207; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 143; 5 W. R. 316.

A term contained in a demise for a period exceeding three years to keep open a shop, and use the best endeavours to promote the trade of it, is a term applicable to a tenancy from year to year. Sanders v. Karnell, 1 F. & F. 356.

An agreement for a lease contained a stipulation that the tenancy should continue until after two years' notice to quit had been given. The tenant occupied the farm, paid rent for some years, but no lease was executed:—Held, that it could not be implied that the stipulation as to the two years' notice to quit was one of the terms under which the tenant held. Tooker v. Smith, 1 H. & N. 732.

An agreement that an outgoing tenant shall be paid for tillages on the expiration of his tenancy is not inconsistent with the terms of a tenancy from year to year. Brocklington v. Saunders, 13 W. R. 46.

—— To Deliver up in Repair.]—See infra, M. 3, b.

7. Other Matters Relating to.

Landlord must have Legal Estate.] — No tenancy can be implied under a party who has not the legal estate. Morgell v. Paul, 2 M. & Ry. 303; 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 290.

Acknowledgment of Tenancy.] — Where one who had built a cottage on the waste had, on three occasions, paid 6*d*. as rent to the person who had bought the adjoining old inclosure:—Held, that it was a proper question for a jury whether there had been an acknowledgment of tenancy. Doe d. Jackson v. Wilkinson, 5 D. & R. 273; 3 B. & C. 413.

T. holding pictures of P.'s as a security for an alleged debt, hired rooms of the plaintiff in which to deposit them. P. having died, his administrators contested T.'s claim by a suit in chancery. Pending the suit, in order to prevent the pictures from being distrained, they petitioned the court to satisfy the plaintiff's rent out of certain funds paid into court in the course of the cause. T.'s claim having been disallowed by the court, the pictures were ordered to be delivered to the administrators, who, in order to obtain them, paid rent to the time of delivery:—Held, that these circumstances did not constitute the defendants tenants to the plaintiff. Strahan v. Smith, 4 Bing. 91; 12 Moore, 289; 5 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 95.

The defendant hired of the plaintiff apartments in his dwelling-house at a fixed rent, payable half-yearly, and entered into possession at Michaelmas, 1822. At Lady-day, 1823, he paid one half-year's rent, and at the Midsummer following gave up possession without having given any notice to quit; but at Michaelmas, in the same year, he paid another half-year's rent. At Lady-day, 1824, the plaintiff demanded a third half-year's rent, which the defendant refused to pay:—Held, that a tenancy from year to year could not be inferred from these facts. Wilson v. Abbott, 4 D. & R. 693; 3 B. & C. 88; 2 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 215.

Demise by Tenant from Year to Year to Hold from Year to Year.]—A demise by a tenant from year to year to another, also to hold from year to year, is in legal operation a demise from year to year during the continuance of the original demise to the intermediate landlord, and is properly so described in pleading, although at the time of making the contract no such qualification is mentioned. Pike v. Eyre, 9 B. & C. 909; 4 M. & Ry. 661; 8 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 69.

Determination of Tenancy.] — The nonpayment of rent for the space of sixteen years, and no demand being proved to have been made, is of itself sufficient evidence to presume the determination of a tenancy from year to year. Stagg v. Wyatt, 1 Arn. 327; 2 Jur. 892.

A tenancy from year to year, so long as both parties please, is determinable at the end of the first as well as of any subsequent year, unless in creating such tenancy the parties use words shewing that they contemplate a tenancy for two years at least. Doe d. Clarke v. Smaridge, 7 Q. B. 957; 14 L. J., Q. B. 327; 9 Jur. 781.

Premises were demised under a written agreement, dated 4th August, 1845, "the tenancy to be from year to year from Michaelmas next," at the rent of 55*l*. payable half-yearly, "except the last half-year, which portion of rent shall be paid on or before the 1st August in that year, and to be deemed then due for all legal remedies for recovering rent in arrear." The tenant "to allow the landlord or incoming tenant, in the last year, to enter on 1st May to make fallows and carry out the manure," for which compensation was to be paid. The tenant to have "the use of the barns for stacking and threshing the crops of the last year till the 1st day of May after the tenancy":—Held, that these stipulations did not necessarily import that the tenancy was to be extended beyond the first year; consequently, that the tenancy was determined by a notice, dated 24th March, 1846, to quit at Michaelmas that year. Doe d. Plumer v. Vainby, 10 Q. B. 473; 16 L. J., Q. B. 303; 11 Jur. 308.

A tenancy from year to year is to be considered as recommencing every year. Tomkins v. Lawrence, 8 Car. & P. 729.

—— Of Glebe Land.]—A tenancy from year to year of glebe land is determined by the death of the incumbent. Doe d. Kerby v. Carter, R. & M. 237.

Death of Tenant—No Personal Representative—Statute of Limitations.]—After the death of a tenant from year to year, his son remained in possession and paid rent, and was treated by the landlord as tenant of the premises for more than twenty years from his father's death. No personal representative of the father was appointed:—Held, that the tenancy from year to year vested in the father was extinguished. Jackson v. McMaster, 28 L. R., Ir. 176—C. A.

Liability of Tenant under Instrument not amounting to present Lease.]—A tenant who had been let into possession under an instrument, which did not amount to a present lease, and had paid rent under the agreement, was held liable for the mismanagement of the farm, under a count stating the premises to have been demised to him. Tempest v. Rawling, 13 East, 18.

Interest of Personal Representatives of Tenant.]—In a case of tenancy from year to year, the personal representatives of the tenant have the same interest in the land which he had. James v. Dean, 15 Ves. 241; 8 R. R. 178.

G. TENANCIES FOR SMALLER TERMS.

1. At Will.

a. What is.

Generally.]—A person who lives in a house rent-free by the sufferance of the owner, is a tenant at will. Rex v. Collett, R. & R. 498. S. P., Rex v. Jobling, R. & R. 525.

A minister of a dissenting congregation placed in the possession of a chapel and a dwelling-house by certain persons, in whom the legal estate was vested, in trust to permit and suffer the chapel to be used for the purpose of religious worship, is a mere tenant at will to those trustees; and his tenancy is determined instanter by a demand of possession. He is not entitled de jure before the determination of his tenancy to have a reasonable time for the removal of his furniture. Doe d. Nicholl v. M'Kaeg, 10 B. & C. 721. S. P., Doe d. Jones v. Jones, 10 B. & C. 718; 8 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 310.

The words "I give you a close to enjoy as long as I please, and to take again when I please, and you shall pay nothing for it," create a tenancy at will. Rex v. Fillongley, 1 Term Rep. 458.

If an agreement is made to let premises so long as both parties like, and reserving a compensation, accruing de die in diem, and not referable to a year, or any aliquot part of a year, it does not create a holding from year to year, but a tenancy at will strictly so called. And though the tenant has expended money on the improvement of the premises, that does not give him a right to hold them until he is indemnified. Richardson v. Langridge, 4 Taunt. 128; 13 R. R. 570.

A party who enters into the possession of premises under a paper signed by the owner, undertaking to execute to him a lease of them, is a tenant at will until he pays rent for the premises for either a year or some portion of time having reference to a year; after which he becomes a tenant from year to year. Braythwayte v. Hitchcock, 10 M. & W. 494; 12 L. J., Ex. 38; 6 Jur. 976.

But a mere payment of rent, without having reference to a year or some aliquot part of a year, is not sufficient. Ib.

Proviso in a deed: A. agrees to become tenant to C. and D. of the premises, "at their will and pleasure, at and after the rate of 25*l.* 4*s.* per annum payable quarterly." A. remained in possession under this agreement for two years, and paid a year's rent, after which C. and D. distrained for four quarters' rent:—Held, that A. was tenant at will, and not from year to year. Doe d. Bastow v. Cox, 11 Q. B. 122; 17 L. J., Q. B. 3.

A mere permission to occupy constitutes a tenancy at will. Doe d. Hull v. Wood, 14 M. & W. 682; 15 L. J., Ex. 41; 9 Jur. 1060. And see Pollen or Pollon v. Brewer, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 371; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 509.

The possession of a tenant at will is the possession of the lessor. Denn d. Warren v. Fearnside, 1 Wils. 176.

Under Void Lease.]—If a man enter under a void lease, and pays rent, he is not a disseisor, but a tenant at will. Denn d. Warren v. Fearnside, 1 Wils. 176.

A parol agreement to lease lands for four years only creates a tenancy at will. Goodtitle d. Gallaway v. Herbert, 4 Term Rep. 680.

And see ante, col. 884.

Under Parol Grant of Freehold Interest.]—An interest of freehold or quasi freehold character cannot be created by parol or by mere written agreement. A party holding under such an agreement is a tenant-at-will, and removable by ejectment, without prejudice to his equitable rights. Dossee v. East India Co., 1 L. T. 345; 8 W. R. 245.

S. having for some years held a piece of ground under the East India Company, which they proposed to take for the purpose of public improvement, a negotiation took place for S. surrendering the land and re-acquiring it on condition of giving up possession on one month's notice. At the time of proposing the surrender, S. believed the improvement in question was a new road which would greatly benefit his adjacent property, and such was also at first the intention of the company. Seemingly, however, the company varied the nature of the improvement ultimately contemplated. S. afterwards, without any definite notice of the improvement, surrendered the land and executed an agreement reciting the transaction and referring generally to the improvement as "a public improvement," without further describing it, and agreeing to quit at a month's notice:—Held, that the company were entitled at law to bring an ejectment for the land after a month's notice, and that S. had no defence; but that his remedy, if any, was in equity. Ib.

Whether constituted by Attornment Clause in Mortgage.]—A member of a building society borrowed 7,500*l.* from the society, which was to be repaid in a series of monthly instalments of 71*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.* each, including interest at 7 per cent. The instalments were payable at the monthly meetings of the society, and, if the member neglected to pay them when due, he became liable to a fine at the rate of 5 per cent. per month on the total amount in arrear and unpaid at each meeting. To secure the loan he executed to the trustees of the society a mortgage of real estate. The deed contained a proviso that if the member should fail for three monthly meetings to pay his subscription, interest, fines, or other moneys, or to observe the regulations of the society, or in the event of his becoming bankrupt, the mortgagees might enter into possession or receipt of the rents of the mortgaged property. And "for the better securing the payments which by the rules of the society ought to be made by the mortgagor," it was agreed that, if the mortgagees should at any time become entitled to enter into possession or receipt of the rents, and the mortgagor should then or afterwards be in the occupation of the whole or part of the property, he should during such occupation be tenant thereof from month to month to the mortgagees, at a monthly rent equal in amount to the moneys which ought to be paid monthly by the mortgagor from time to time for subscriptions, interest, fines, and other moneys under the rules, and that the tenancy should commence on the day up to which he should have fully paid all and every part of such subscriptions, interest, fines, and other moneys, and the rent for the period intervening between the commencement of the tenancy and the day on which the trustee should be entitled to enter into possession or receipt of rents should be payable and paid on that day, and the monthly rent due upon and subsequently to that day should become due monthly in advance, and be payable at the monthly meetings, the first payment of rent becoming due on the day on which the mortgagees should first become entitled to enter into possession. Power was given to the mortgagees to determine the tenancy by fourteen days' notice. The deed was not executed by the mortgagees, nor was it registered under the Bills of Sale Act. The mortgagor committed default in his payments, and was afterwards adjudicated a bankrupt:—Held, that the tenancy under the attornment clause was not made by s. 1 of the Statute of Frauds a tenancy at will. Voisey, Ex parte, Knight, In re, 52 L. J., Ch. 121; 21 Ch. D. 442; 47 L. T. 362; 31 W. R. 19—C. A.

Pending Contract for Sale.]—See cases, cols. 881-884.

Notice to Quit.]—Where a party was let into possession of land under an agreement of purchase, he paying interest after the rate of 5 per cent. per annum on the purchase-money, until the completion of the purchase, which was to be in three months; and the purchase not being then completed, he continued in possession on the same terms:—Held, that this was only a tenancy at will, which might be determined without notice to quit. Doe d. Tomes v. Chamberlaine, 5 M. & W. 14; 9 L. J., Ex. 38.

Cestui que Trust.]—The doctrine, that a cestui que trust who is in possession of the estate by the consent or acquiescence of the trustee must be regarded as his tenant at will, only applies where the cestui que trust is the actual occupant; where he is merely allowed to receive the rents, or otherwise deal with the estate in the hands of occupying tenants, he is merely the agent of the trustees. Melling v. Leak, 16 C. B. 652: 3 C. L. R. 1017; 24 L. J., C. P. 187; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 759; 3 W. R. 595.

The management of an estate was intrusted by the trustees (in fee) to the cestui que trust (for life) as beneficial owner; and the latter, having never been in actual occupation, let C. into possession, who occupied during the life of the cestui que trust, for more than twenty years, without paying rent or acknowledging title:—Held, that a tenancy at will had not been created between the cestui que trust and the trustees, and that C. had therefore acquired a good title, by adverse possession under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27. Ib.

Presumption of.]—By indenture of lease of the 26th of June, 1810, between A. of the one part, and B. of the other part, after reciting a former lease, dated 27th of July, 1801, made between W. S. of the one part, and A. of the other part, whereby one undivided moiety of certain lands, and two undivided moieties of other lands, containing eighty acres, were demised by W. and M. S. to A., for the term of forty years, the whole of the lands, containing eighty acres, and the moiety of the other lands, were demised by A. to B. for the remainder of the term of forty years, except the last ten days. A. died in 1813, leaving the plaintiff his real and personal representative, and B. died in 1818, leaving the defendant his personal representative, who continued to occupy the lands demised until the time of the trial. The rent was regularly paid by B. and the defendant to A. and the plaintiff up to Lady-day, 1841, when the lease expired, and in December, 1841, the defendant paid rent for the whole of the eighty acres to M. S. The defendant went into evidence to shew that neither A. nor the plaintiff had, in fact, any title to the undivided third part of the eighty acres, but that the whole was in M. S.:—Held, that, at all events, the lease of 1810 established a primâ facie case of title in the plaintiff, which the defendant must rebut by his evidence; and that the plaintiff had a right to treat the defendant as a tenant at sufferance of the undivided third part of the eighty acres, and to sue him for the use and occupation thereof after the expiration of the lease. Bayley v. Bradley, 5 C. B. 396; 16 L. J., C. P. 206.

Statute of Limitations—Waiver.]—W. H. died intestate in 1798, seised of a house and land, leaving a widow and an only son (by her), J., fifteen years old. The widow continued to reside on the property, and about a year after the death of W. H. married the defendant, and resided with him on the premises; J. also remaining with him till 1805, when he went away, but occasionally returned for about a fortnight at a time till 1842. About that time the defendant applied to the lessor of the plaintiff to advance 100*l.* on mortgage of the property, and on that occasion the title-deeds being produced, the solicitor stated that it was necessary that J., being the heir-at-law of W. H., should execute the conveyance. The defendant accordingly brought J., who executed the mortgage and signed the receipt for the 100*l.*, which was received by the defendant:—Held, that a jury might well presume on the state of facts, that the defendant was tenant at will to J., and that the defendant by his conduct had waived all right to set up the Statute of Limitations, 3 & 4

Will. 4, c. 27, to defeat the right of entry of J. Doe d. Groves v. Groves, 10 Q. B. 486; 16 L. J., Q. B. 297; 11 Jur. 558.

b. How Determined.

Feoffment and Livery of Seisin.]—A feoffment, with livery of seisin made on the land, determines a tenancy at will, though the tenant is not present, nor assenting to the feoffment; and the feoffee may maintain trespass against the tenant at will who has been entered on his possession. Ball v. Cullimore, 2 C. M. & R. 120; 1 Gale, 96; 5 Tyr. 753; 4 L. J., Ex. 137.

Demand of Possession.]—A letter from the attorney of a lessor to the attorney of a tenant at will, stating that, unless the tenant paid the lessor what he owed him, he would, without delay, take measures for recovering possession of the property, is a sufficient indication of the lessor's will to put an end to the tenancy, and equivalent to a demand of possession previously to the commencement of the action. Doe d. Price v. Price, 2 M. & Scott, 464; 9 Bing. 356.

A. lessor at will, B. lessee at will, C. underlessee at will; a demand of the possession, made upon the premises from the wife of C. is sufficient to entitle A. to maintain ejectment. Roe d. Blair v. Street, 4 N. & M. 42; 2 A. & E. 329; 4 L. J., K. B. 67.

A party, who defends in ejectment as landlord as to W., and as tenant as to B., cannot take advantage of a defect in the service of a demand of possession, made upon the tenant of B. for the purpose of determining an estate at will. Ib.

Notice.]—Where a tenant is in possession of land under an agreement for a lease for twenty-one years but has paid no rent, he is a tenant at will and the landlord may determine the tenancy by giving notice to quit. Coatsworth v. Johnson, 55 L. J., Q. B. 220; 54 L. T. 520—C. A.

A tenant at will cannot put an end to his tenancy, even by an assignment, without giving notice to his landlord. Pinhorn v. Souster, 8 Ex. 763; 22 L. J., Ex. 266; 16 Jur. 1001; 1 W. R. 336.

Agreement to Purchase.]—A tenancy at will is determined by an agreement to purchase. Daniels v. Davison, 16 Ves. 252; 10 R. R. 171.

Entry under Authority of Lessor.]—The defendant occupied land, under parish officers, and had paid rent; they gave an invalid notice to quit at the end of the first year, and, by a lease signed only by two of them, demised to the plaintiff for a term of years, to commence from the end of the defendant's tenancy. Under this lease the plaintiff entered; but the defendant refused to give up certain plants he had himself planted, and subsequently entered and took them away:—Held, that he was liable in trespass; that though the lease was invalid, there was evidence that the plaintiff entered under the authority of all the parish officers, and that therefore the defendant's tenancy being either a tenancy at will or on sufferance, was lawfully determined, and his entry wrongful. Wallis v. Delmar, 29 L. J., Ex. 276.

Death.]—Generally the death of either party determines a tenancy at will. James v. Dean, 11 Ves. 391. Affirmed, 15 Ves. 236; 8 R. R. 177.

Demand of Keys.]—Where a person, who has had the keys of a house given him in order that he may see over it, takes the opportunity to bring in his furniture and family, and the landlord afterwards sends for the keys, and, upon the refusal of them, enters himself, and turns out the party and his goods:—Held, that (the jury having found a tenancy at will to have been created) there was ample evidence in the facts to shew a determination of the tenancy. Pullen or Pollon v. Brewer, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 371; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 509.

Insolvency of Lessor.]—Where a party creates a tenancy at will, and afterwards becomes insolvent, the vesting order, with knowledge thereof by the tenant, is a determination of the tenancy; and if the tenant, after such information, continues in possession, he may be treated as a trespasser. Doe d. Davies v. Thomas, 6 Ex. 854; 20 L. J., Ex. 367.

Carrying away Stone by Lessor.]—A. in 1817 let B. into possession of a farm as tenant at will, and in 1827 A. entered upon the land without B.'s consent, and cut and carried away stone therefrom:—Held, that this entry amounted to a determination of the estate at will. Turner v. Doe d. Bennett, 9 M. & W. 643; 11 L. J., Ex. 453—Ex. Ch.

Determination of—Fresh Tenancy at Will—Statute of Limitations.]—A., having been in possession of a house and land adjoining, as tenant at will to the lord of a manor, was told by a subsequent lord that he must leave. On his refusal to do so, a writ of ejectment was served upon him; it was then verbally arranged that A. should give up part of the land, and retain the house and remaining land during the life of himself and wife:—Held, that these acts amounted to a determination of the tenancy at will, and as a new tenancy at will was thereby created, the Statute of Limitations, 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, ss. 7, 10 and 14, began to run from that time, and not from the date of the original tenancy. Locke v. Matthews, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 753; 32 L. J., C. P. 98; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 874; 7 L. T. 824; 11 W. R. 343.

2. Other Tenancies.

A Year certain.]—A tenancy for "a year certain" is "less than a tenancy from year to year," because:—

Per Dowse, B.: A tenancy from year to year is a tenancy for a year certain, and every year afterwards it is a springing interest arising upon the first contract and parcel of it, so that if the lessee occupies for a number of years, these years, by computation from the time past, make an entire tenancy for so many years, and after the commencement of each new year it becomes one entire lease certain for the year past, and also for the year entered upon, so that it is not a reletting after the commencement of the second and subsequent years. Wright v. Tracey, Ir. R. 8 C. L. 478—Ex. Ch.

Per Deasy, B.: If a tenant from year to year demises for a term of years, and the original tenancy from year to year lasts beyond that term, such a demise is not an assignment, but there is a reversion. Ib.

A tenancy for "a year certain" is not "less than a tenancy from year to year," because:—

Per Fitzgerald, J.: A tenancy from year to year is legally and technically a tenancy for one year certain and no more, but to which is superadded, by construction of law, that if neither party expresses his will to determine or give up at the end of the year, then it shall continue for another year. Ib.

Per Fitzgerald, B. (and adopted by Whiteside, C.J.): A tenancy from year to year in the uncertainty of its duration, still retains its character of a tenancy at will; but, by reason of judicial decisions, the will cannot be determined before the end of the first year at least, and thus the tenancy becomes certain for a year. Ib.

Per Palles, C.B.: The tenancy from year to year, pointed at by s. 69, is a tenancy from year to year in the abstract, and the necessary duration of a tenancy from year to year in the abstract is a term fixed and certain, that is, the term of one year. Ib.

Week to Week.]—A weekly tenancy is a reletting of the premises by the landlord at the beginning of each successive week. Sandford v. Clarke, 57 L. J., Q. B. 507; 21 Q. B. D. 398; 59 L. T. 226; 37 W. R. 28; 52 J. P. 773.

—— What amounts to.]—Where the only evidence of the terms on which a furnished house was taken, was the following receipt put in by the landlord: "Received from C. 12*l.* for rent of furnished house, from the 8th May to the 1st August, 1846":—Held, that the jury might properly infer that the tenancy was weekly. Towne v. Campbell, 3 C. B. 921; 16 L. J., C. P. 128.

—— Notice to Determine.]—Notice is necessary to determine a weekly tenancy. Sandford v. Clarke (21 Q. B. D. 308) explained; Jones v. Mills (10 C. B. (N.S.) 788) followed. Bowen v. Anderson, [1894] 1 Q. B. 164; 10 R. 47; 42 W. R. 236; 58 J. P. 213.

—— Removal of Goods after.]—A stipulation on the occasion of a weekly letting, that, after the expiration of such tenancy by the usual week's notice, the tenant shall have a reasonable time for the removal of his goods, is a valid stipulation and operates as an extension of the term, so as to give the tenant a right to enter and do what is necessary for such removal. Cornish v. Stubbs, 39 L. J., C. P. 202; L. R. 5 C. P. 334; 22 L. T. 21; 18 W. R. 547.

When it is a part of the terms of a tenancy created by parol that the tenant shall be allowed to place goods on land not comprised within the letting, the tenant, who has acted upon such licence, though not by deed, and was afterwards revoked by the determination of the tenancy, has a right to go and remove the goods which he has so placed there, and is entitled to have a reasonable time to do so. Ib.

—— Restraining Nuisance by Lessor of.]—The owner or lessor of houses let or sub-let to weekly tenants cannot maintain a suit to restrain a temporary nuisance, such as the noise of machinery in adjacent premises. Jones v. Chappell, 44 L. J., Ch. 658; L. R. 20 Eq. 539.

Semble, that such a suit could be maintained by a weekly tenant if the nuisance was of such a nature as to be injurious to his health or comfort. Ib.

For Six Months and then Three Months.]—A party hired apartments upon the terms contained in the following memorandum: "I hereby agree (according to our conversation of last evening) to pay you for the occupation of your first floor, furnished, from Monday, March 4th, 1839, to September the 4th, 1839, the sum of 52*l.* 10*s.* I also agree either to occupy the said rooms from the 4th September to the 4th December, furnished, on the same terms, viz. 26*l.* 5s., for the three months, or take them unfurnished at the rate of 84*l.* per annum":—Held, that this did not create a tenancy from year to year, but was properly declared on as an agreement to take the apartments furnished for six months; and for a further period of three months, furnished or unfurnished at the option of the tenant. Atherstone v. Bostock, 2 Scott (N.R.) 637; 2 Man. & G. 511; 1 Drink. 96; 10 L. J., C. P. 113.

On Sufferance.]—See HOLDING OVER, supra, F. 3 (ante, cols. 885 et seq.).

H. RENT.

1. CONTRACTS FOR.

When Concluded.]—Two of the plaintiffs were the legal owners of a leasehold interest in a house, and claimed 37*l.* from the defendant for the use and occupation of it during the three last months of their term. They authorised him to pay this amount to another of the plaintiffs, who was owner of the reversion. She called on the defendant, who expressed his willingness to pay her the money, though he did not make any actual tender of it, but she refused to receive it, and demanded more. The plaintiffs then sued the defendant for the use and occupation, and claimed 238*l.* The defendant paid 37*l.* into court:—Held, that as soon as the defendant expressed to the agent his readiness to pay the 37*l.* there was a concluded agreement between him and the plaintiffs for that amount, and that the plaintiffs could not recover more. Gretton v. Mees, 7 Ch. D. 839; 38 L. T. 506; 26 W. R. 607.

Held, also, that the defendant was entitled to the costs of the action from the time of the payment into court. Ib.

Construction.]—A net rent is a sum to be paid to the landlord clear of all deductions. Bennett v. Womack, 7 B. & C. 627; 1 M. & Ry. 644; 3 Car. & P. 96; 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 175; 31 R. R. 270.

A covenant that half a year's rent shall remain in the hands of the tenant till the last year, means the current half-year. —— v. Nicholls, Lofft, 393.

Where a contract was made by the plaintiff and A., that A. should build houses on the plaintiff's land and procure tenants for the same at a given rate, and himself pay the rent till he so procured tenants from the Michaelmas then next ensuing:—Held, that, under this contract, no tenancy was created between the plaintiff and A. Taylor v. Jackson, 2 Car. & K. 22.

Implied.] — There is an implied covenant for payment of rent under the words "yielding and paying." Iggulden v. May, 9 Ves. 330; 7 East, 237; 3 Smith, 269; 2 Bos. & P. (N.R.) 449; 8 R. R. 623. See 9 R. R. 104, n.

Qualified.] — Lease by the plaintiff to T., for years, of a messuage and farm, at a yearly rent, payable quarterly, and T. covenanted to pay the rent on the days and in manner therein mentioned, and also to pay interest in case the rent should be behind three quarters; and the defendant covenanted that T. should, at all times during the term, well and truly pay to the plaintiff the rent at the respective days, and also interest, and should duly observe all the covenants, and that in case T. should neglect to pay the rent for forty days, the defendant should pay on demand:—Held, that the defendant was not chargeable until after forty days and demand made. Sicklemore v. Thistleton, 6 M. & S. 9; 18 R. R. 280.

B., as surety for J., became party to an indenture, whereby A. leased land to J., at a rent payable by J., for a term determinable on A.'s death; and B. and J. covenanted jointly and severally for themselves and their heirs, that B. and J., or one of them, or their heirs, executors, &c., should pay the rent reserved, and also a further rent, as liquidated damages, if the land was farmed contrary to the covenants of the lease. After B.'s death, rents of both kinds became due:—Held, that B.'s devisees were not liable under 3 & 4 Will. & M. c. 14, to an action of debt for any of the sums due. Farley v. Briant, 3 A. & E. 839; 1 H. & W. 775; 5 N. & M. 42.

Dependent or Independent Covenants.]—In a lease for seven years, containing the usual covenants that the lessee should pay the rent, and keep the premises in repair, there was a proviso that the lessee might determine the term at the end of the first three or five years, giving six months' previous notice, and that then, and from and after the expiration of such notice, and payment of all rents and duties to be paid by the lessee, and performance of all his covenants until the end of the three or five years, the indenture should cease and be utterly void:—Held, that the payment of rent and performance of the other covenants were conditions precedent to the lessee's determining the term at the end of the first three years; and that his merely giving six months' notice, expiring with the first three years, was not sufficient for that purpose. Porter v. Shephard, 6 Term Rep. 665; 3 R. R. 305.

A. demised to B. a coal mine for forty-two years, at a yearly rent. The lease contained numerous covenants on the part of the lessee for payment of rent, and in respect of the working of the mine, with a proviso for re-entry on breach of any of them; and a proviso that if the lessees should be desirous to quit the premises at the end of the first eight years of the term, and of such their desire should give the lessor notice in writing eighteen calendar months before the expiration of such eighth year, then all arrears of rent being paid, and all and singular the covenants and agreements on the part of the lessee having been observed and performed, the lease should, at the expiration of the eighth year, be utterly void; but, nevertheless, without prejudice to any claim or remedy which any of the parties might then be entitled to for breach of any of the covenants:—Held, that the performance of all the covenants by the lessee was a condition precedent to his right to determine the lease. Friar v. Grey, 5 Ex. 597; 15 Jur. 814—Ex. Ch. Affirmed, 4 H. L. Cas. 565; 18 Jur. 1036.

Covenant to Pay Rent at a Certain Time—Proviso for Acceptance of Reduced Rent if Covenant Performed.] — A lease made in 1853 reserved the yearly rent of 556*l.*, payable half-yearly, and contained a power of distress in case such rent or any part of it should be in arrear; and also a covenant by the lessee to pay it on the gale days. Then followed a clause of re-entry in case such rent or any part of it should be thirty-one days in arrear, and a proviso that if the lessee should perform "the several covenants, clauses, conditions, reservations and agreements" thereinbefore on his part contained, the lessor would accept the "yearly sum of 278*l.*" in full satisfaction of the "yearly rent of 556*l.*" An ejectment having been brought for non-payment of 556*l.* as due for the year ending 1st November, 1877, claiming the higher rent on the ground that the lessee had not kept his covenant to pay or tender it on the gale days:—Held, reversing the decision below, that the tender of rent ad diem was not necessary to entitle the lessee to the benefit of the proviso for the acceptance of the reduced rent. M'Kay v. M'Nally, 4 L. R., Ir. 438.

Commencement of Rent.]—In an action for specific performance of an agreement to grant a lease of premises, which contained the term for which and the rent at which the lease was to be granted, but did not state when the term was to commence, it was held that the term commenced from the date of the agreement, and judgment was given to that effect, together with damages. When the lease was being settled a question arose as to the date at which the rent was to commence:—Held, that the rent commenced at the date of the entry into possession by the lessee, as the damages were to recompense him only for the loss of profit while kept out of possession by the lessor. Jaques v. Millar, 47 L. J., Ch. 544; 6 Ch. D. 153; 38 L. T. 99; 26 W. R. 368. See next case.

An executory agreement for a lease does not satisfy the Statute of Frauds, unless it can be collected from it on what day the term is to begin, and there is no inference that the term is to commence from the date of the agreement in the absence of language pointing to that conclusion. Jaques v. Millar (6 Ch. D. 153) overruled. Marshall v. Berridge, 51 L. J., Ch. 329; 19 Ch. D. 233; 45 L. T. 599; 30 W. R. 93; 46 J. P. 279—C. A.

Rent for a colliery, commencing the first quarter-day after a certain quantity of coal had been dug, ordered to be paid from the quarter-day prior to which that quantity would have been dug but for the fraudulent delay of the lessee. Green v. Sparrow, 3 Swanst. 408; 19 R. R. 248.

—— Of Medical Practice.] — The plaintiff wishing to sell a medical practice, with the lease of the house where it was carried on, placed it on the books of a medical agent. This led to negotiations with the defendant. The premiums asked for the practice and for the lease were stated in a letter from the agent to the defendant, but no time for completing the purchase was mentioned. The defendant replied in a letter to the agent accepting the terms offered, and adding that he should be ready to pay the deposit-money "on receipt of corrected agreement," and at the same time he wrote to the plaintiff personally, also accepting the terms offered, and adding, "I shall trust to you to give me the best introduction you can during three months and afterwards, if necessary." The plaintiff replied, thanking the defendant for acceding to his terms, and saying that "it would be his aim as well as his duty to give him an effectual introduction to his patients." A.

formal agreement was drawn up, but never signed, and after some further correspondence the defendant refused to complete the purchase:—Held, that inasmuch as the time for the commencement of the purchase was left uncertain, and the stipulation as to the three months' introduction was not agreed to, and as the parties contemplated a formal agreement, there was no binding contract between the parties, and the action was dismissed. May v. Thomson, 51 L. J., Ch. 917; 20 Ch. D. 705; 47 L. T. 295—C. A.

Damages or Rent.]—In 1862, A. agreed to lease a mine to B. Disputes arose between the parties, and A. brought an action against B. under the agreement, and B. filed a bill against A. to have the agreement set aside. The parties then referred all the matters in dispute between them to arbitration, and the arbitrator awarded that the agreement for a lease was valid; that it should be cancelled, and that B. should pay to A. 5,513*l*. B. died, and a suit was instituted to administer his estate, under which A. carried in a claim to rank as a specialty creditor in respect of the sum awarded:—Held, that the sum was awarded by way of damages and not for rent, and therefore was not entitled to rank as a specialty debt. Talbot v. Shrewsbury (Earl), 42 L. J., Ch. 877; L. R. 16 Eq. 26; 21 W. R. 473.

Property taken by Railway Company—Liability of Tenant.]—A party was the tenant from year to year of a house and premises, at a rent payable half-yearly, on the 1st April and the 1st October. The premises being required for the purposes of a railway, the railway company, in pursuance of a power given by their act of parliament, gave the tenant six months' notice to quit, which expired in the middle of a half-year, viz. on the 28th July. The tenant gave up possession to the company accordingly at the expiration of six months, without obtaining or requiring compensation for his interest in the premises, which he was entitled to under the act:—Held, that he was liable for the rent of the half-year ending on the following 1st October. Wainwright v. Ramsden, 5 M. & W. 602; 1 Railw. Cas. 714; 9 L. J., Ex. 120.

Right of Tenant to Retain—For Repairs.]—Agreement that the lessee should spend 200*l*. in repairs, to be inspected and approved of by the lessor, and to be done in a substantial manner; the lessee to be allowed to retain the sum out of the first year's rent of the premises:—Held, that the lessor's approval was not a condition precedent to the lessee's retaining the rent. Dallman v. King, 4 Bing. (N.C.) 105; 5 Scott, 382; 3 Hodges, 283; 7 L. J., C. P. 6.

Not Enforced.]—Upon the marriage of A., the grandson of W., from whom A. had large expectations, a house and lands were settled upon A., and it was agreed that the grandfather should occupy the house and lands, and also some glebe lands belonging to A. There was evidence as to the rent that was to be paid, which was about the actual value. A. never enforced the rent during the eight years of his grandfather's occupancy, which ceased with his death, but had received sums in money and goods equal to about half the alleged rent. Stuart, V.-C., allowed an exception to the master's report allowing the rent, as alleged. But Cranworth, C., reversed his decision, coming to the conclusion that there was either an express contract to pay the rent, or an agreement to occupy as any other tenant, and pay a quantum meruit; the sums and goods paid to go towards the rent. Alington v. Booth, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 50.

What constitutes fresh Demise.]—The defendant entered into a written agreement with the plaintiff to take premises at a rent of 20*s*. a week, payable on demand and subject to four weeks' notice to quit on either side. During the continuation of this tenancy, a verbal agreement was made between the parties that the rent should be 16*s*. a week, and the defendant for several weeks paid this reduced amount, and on one occasion submitted to a distress:—Held, that there was no fresh demise, and that the original rent continued to be the rent payable for the premises. Crowley v. Vitty, 7 Ex. 319; 21 L. J., Ex. 135.

A. demised to B. premises from the 15th of May, 1851, at the yearly rent of 145*l*., payable on November 14th and May 14th. These premises had been let to C., whose tenancy expired on the 13th May, 1851, and who had omitted to give a notice to quit to one of his under-tenants, who occupied a cottage, at a yearly rent of 5*l*.; and in consequence B. could not obtain possession of that part of the premises. It was then agreed that A. should receive from the under-tenant rent for two half-years, and deduct that 5*l*. from the rent to be paid for the whole by B., and that B. should pay 70*l*. to A. on the 14th of November, 1851, and 14th of May, 1852:—Held, that such agreement operated as a new demise, and that A. was entitled to distrain for 70*l*. which became due on the 14th of November. Watson v. Ward, 8 Ex. 335; 22 L. J., Ex. 161; 1 W. R. 133.

Time of Payment.]—Memorandum dated the 31st of January, 1840, between B. and J. J. agrees to become the tenant of the S. farm at the customary time of entry, under the following conditions: viz. that 260*l*. annual rent shall be paid at the usual time for the house, premises and lands as agreed upon; and B. agrees to lay out in the improvements of the farm-house a sum not exceeding 200*l*.:—Held, that this agreement did not necessarily import, in point of law, that the year's rent was to be payable at the end of the year from the time of entry; but that it might be shewn from the contemporaneous or subsequent dealings of the parties that their understanding was, that the rent should become payable at an earlier period. Gore v. Lloyd, 12 M. & W. 463; 13 L. J., Ex. 366.

It was proved that the usual time of entry on the neighbouring farms was on 12th May, and that the rents of the estate of which the farm G. was a part were payable at Michaelmas. The audit day being in January, T. entered on the farm in spring, 1840, and continued in possession till 1842. In May, 1842, he was in arrear for rent to the extent of 160*l*., and, being pressed by his landlord, executed a warrant of attorney for 420*l*., being the amount of the arrears and of the year's rent, the understanding being that a fi. fa. was to be delivered to the sheriff upon a judgment to be entered up, but that it was not to be executed unless the writs of other creditors were sent to the sheriff. In October, 1842, T. was applied to for another year's rent, of which he paid a portion, promising to pay the rest before Christmas. In November the sheriff, who had received writs from other persons against the property of T., executed the fi. fa.:—Held, that these facts warranted the jury in finding that a year's rent became due at Michaelmas; and, secondly, that the giving by T. of the warrant of attorney was not such a procuring of his goods to be taken in execution as amounted to an act of bankruptcy. Ib.

Tithe Commutation Rent-charge.]—The plaintiff being the owner of a farm, and lessee of the tithe commutation rent-charge, under a dean and chapter, at a rent of 60*l.* per year, let the land verbally to the defendant at a rent of 400*l.* a year, tithe free:—Held, that, as by 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, s. 80, in the event of the defendant distraining for the tithe rent, she would be compelled to allow the same to the plaintiff in account, the plaintiff was tenant to the defendant, at a rent of 400*l.* Meggison v. Glamis, 7 Ex. 685; 21 L. J., Ex. 284.

Extent of Promise to Pay.]—A declaration averred that the plaintiffs, being tenants to H., of chambers at a certain rent, payable quarterly, underlet them to the defendant, who undertook to pay the rent to H., and agreed that if he did not do so he would indemnify the plaintiffs in respect thereof, and that the defendant did not pay the rent to H., nor indemnify the plaintiffs:—Held, that whether the contract meant that the defendant was to pay to H. the rent due from the plaintiffs to H., or to pay the rent under the demise from the plaintiffs, the promise of the defendant to pay did not extend beyond the term of his own tenancy. Smith v. Coles or Lovell, 1 L. M. & P. 794; 10 C. B. 6; 20 L. J., C. P. 37; 15 Jur. 250.

Premises originally of no Value.]—When a lessee covenants to pay the rent reserved and keep the demised premises in repair, he is bound, during the term, to perform both covenants as long as the subject-matter of the demise continues to exist, although it was originally of no value. Meath (Earl) v. Cuthbert, Ir. R. 10 C. L. 395.

Joint Tenants—Liability of Executors of deceased Tenant during Sole Tenancy of Survivor.]—A mineral lease for thirty-one years was granted to L. and M., "and the survivor of them, but expressly excluding assigns and subtenants, whether legal or conventional." By the lease L. and M. bound themselves and their respective heirs, executors and successors, all conjunctly and severally renouncing the benefit of discussion, to pay the rent. The lease also provided that if L. or M. became bankrupt it should, in the option of the lessor, become void. Shortly after the commencement of the lease L. became bankrupt, and M. died, but the lessor never exercised his option to determine the lease:—Held, that by the terms of the clause of obligation the lessees were conjunctly and severally liable for rent irrespective of their interest, and that after M.'s death, his representatives, though they had no interest as tenants, remained liable for rent during the currency of the lease. Burns v. Bryan or Martin, 12 App. Cas. 184—H. L. (Sc.)

Liability of Under-Tenant.]—An under-tenant of a part of the lands demised, subject to the payment of rent to the immediate lessee, is not in the eye of the law an assignee of such immediate lessee. Berney v. Moore, 2 Ridgw. P. C. 323.

An under-tenant is not bound by any of the covenants contained in the original lease. Ib.

An under-tenant of premises comprised in an ejectment (for non-payment of rent) brought by the first lessor is not barred from relief if he files a bill in equity against such lessor within six months after execution had, and within that time deposits in the court the whole arrear of rent ascertained to be due to the lessor. Ib.

And in such case it is not necessary that any new lease should be executed by the first lessor. Ib.

The statutes giving to landlords the remedy by ejectment for non-payment of rent are not mandatory on the court of equity to set up an immediate lease which had been evicted under the said statutes, upon a bill filed, and the rent and cost deposited within six months after the habere executed by an under-tenant claiming one-fourth of the lands demised, and against the consent of the immediate lessee. And if a lease be so set up against the consent of the lessee, the statute 11 Anne, c. 2, subjects him to the several covenants. Ib.

Chief Rents.]—Land on which an improved chief rent, which was purchased by the plaintiff's testator in 1853, had been reserved by a former vendor of the land, was ordered to be sold to pay the arrears of the chief rent which had accrued due since that date. Horton v. Hall, L. R. 17 Eq. 437; 22 W. R. 391.

Liability of Auctioneer.]—S. and M. carried on business in premises rented by M. of C. Being about to dissolve partnership, their respective attorneys gave a joint order to an auctioneer to take possession of the goods upon the premises, "realise the same with all convenient despatch, and to hold the proceeds as stakeholder until we shall join in directing you as to the disposition thereof." The auctioneer took possession, and sold the goods by auction, under conditions, one of which was as follows:—"Each lot shall be paid for immediately after the sale and previously to its removal. Each and all lots shall be taken to be delivered at the fall of the hammer, after which time they shall remain and be at the exclusive risk of the purchasers, and the auctioneer shall not be called upon for compensation for any injury or loss sustained after that time." After the lots were sold, but before all had been taken away by the purchasers, the agent of C. told the auctioneer that he could not allow the things to go until he was paid rent then in arrear. The rent was the private debt of M., who asked the auctioneer to pay it out of the proceeds of the sale. S. gave him notice not to pay the rent, and the attorneys gave him notice to pay the net proceeds to S., he being entitled to the whole. The auctioneer paid the rent to C., and the balance of the proceeds to S.:—Held, that the auctioneer was not justified in paying the rent, and that S. was entitled to maintain an action against him to recover the residue of the proceeds. Sweeting v. Turner, 41 L. J., Q. B. 58; L. R. 7 Q. B. 310; 25 L. T. 796; 20 W. R. 185.

Receipts for Rent—Evidence.]—An alteration, in the landlord's receipts for rent, of the names of the occupying tenants does not, unless known to have been assented to by all the parties interested, afford any evidence from which can be inferred either a change of the tenancy or a transfer of the legal rights. Bourke v. Bourke, Ir. R. 8 C. L. 221.

Indemnities against Payment.] — A lessee of a farm for an unexpired term at a yearly rent, payable quarterly, gave up possession to the defendant, under an invalid assignment of the unexpired residue of the lease. He entered, occupied and paid the reserved rent quarterly to the lessor for the lessee. The lessor never accepted or objected to the defendant as his tenant. The defendant quitted on a quarter-day without giving the lessee any notice to quit:— Held, that a promise by the defendant to indemnify the lessee against the rent for any period after the defendant had ceased to occupy, could not be inferred as a matter of law. Crouch v. Tregoning or Tregonning, 41 L. J., Ex. 97; L. R. 7 Ex. 88; 26 L. T. 286; 20 W. R. 536.

On Grant of Reversion.]—See post, cols. 1082, 1083.

Relief against Breach.]—A lessee applying to redeem a lease which has become forfeited at law by nonpayment of rent is not required by the statute 4 Geo. 2, c. 28, s. 3, before the hearing to pay into court the arrears of rent, or the costs at law, if no injunction is granted until the hearing, and the lessor is in possession. Bowser v. Colby, 1 Hare, 109; 11 L. J., Ch. 132; 5 Jur. 1106.

A court of equity, when asked by a lessee to grant him relief, will consider the conduct of the lessee in dealing with the property, whether that conduct does or does not involve a breach of covenant. Ib.

A lease provided that, in case of any breach of covenant, it should be lawful for the lessor to re-enter and expel the lessee; and the lease should in that case be forfeited, and be utterly null and void. The lessee committed a breach by nonpayment of rent. Semble, such a lease is voidable and not void. Ib.

A court of equity will relieve a lessee from a forfeiture by nonpayment of rent where there is a proviso that in that case the lease shall be void, as well as where there is a mere power of re-entry. Ib.

Relief against breach of covenant for nonpayment of rent; lessor, therefore, compelled to proceed on some other covenant. Lovat (Lord) v. Ranelagh, 3 Ves. & B. 30.

Distinction as to injunction between landlord and tenant, upon an actual lease and a mere agreement; in the latter case no relief, if the covenant would have been violated; in the former, some ground necessary, either by the conduct of the lessor, or under the statute 4 Geo. 2, c. 28. Ib.

A. recovers judgment against B., and has a lease sold to him by the sheriff; C., the ground landlord, enters, and having judgment in ejectment for nonpayment of the ground rent, offers A., upon payment of arrears of rent and costs at law, to make him a new lease for the remainder of the term; A. refusing this offer, C. lets it to another. A. brings his bill to be relieved against the recovery and forfeiture at law, having first tendered the arrears and costs; bill dismissed with costs. Dorrington v. Jackson, 1 Vern. 449.

One makes a lease, and the lessee covenants to pay the rent and to repair; the lessee makes one hundred under-leases; the rent is behind, and the premises out of repair; the original lease is avoided for nonpayment of rent. Some of the under-lessees bring a bill to be relieved against the forfeiture. Equity will not apportion the rent, but the plaintiffs must pay the whole rent in arrear, and repair all the houses, and may compel the other under-lessees to contribute. Webber v. Smith, 2 Vern. 103.

Relief is granted from forfeiture under covenant for re-entry for nonpayment of rent; but not where the recovery in ejectment was also upon a breach of other covenants. Wadman v. Calcraft, 10 Ves. 67.

A court of equity will not interfere generally to restrain an ejectment brought against a lessee for breaches of covenant in the lease, except for breach in nonpayment of rent. Nokes v. Gibbon, 3 Drew. 681; 26 L. J., Ch. 433; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 726; 5 W. R. 400.

Upon a bill by a lessee evicted for nonpayment of rent seventeen years before, though imputing fraud, unsupported in proof, but praying for liberty to try validity of the eviction at law by the removal of temporary bar (a mortgage of the tenant's interest vested in the landlord):— Held, that he was entitled to such relief, there being no equitable circumstances to bar him of that right, he having acquiesced in ignorance of his rights; and the defendant having, by the concealment of a fact, obtained illegal advantage, which, consistent with good conscience, should not be allowed to protect his title on such a trial. Blennerhassett v. Day, 2 Ball & B. 104.

After judgment and execution in ejectment for nonpayment of rent, a bill does not lie at the suit of the tenant for an account, and to be restored to the possession on payment of what shall appear due, without bringing the rent and costs into court, if the question appears to be merely whether so much rent was due, and not to be of too complicated a nature to be tried at law. The account sought in this case consisting only of three disputed items admitted to have been paid, if at all, on account of rent, and being such as a jury might easily have investigated, the bill was dismissed with costs. It would have been otherwise, semble, if there had been a ground of defence, which could not be set up in the ejectment, but which it was unconscionable in the landlord not to admit, or if the account had been so complex that it could not properly have been taken at law. O'Mahoney v. Dickson, 2 Sch. & Lef. 400.

Where a decree, giving relief to a party whose title was gone at law, directs the accounts of the rents reserved in bonâ fide leases of tenants, not parties to the suit; the party relieved will be restrained from proceedings at law to evict the tenants, they being tacitly protected by the decree. Shine v. Gough, 1 Ball & B. 436.

Only in a strong case, if at all, will the court grant an injunction to restrain proceedings for nonpayment of rent. Clancy v. Roberts, 1 Ir. Eq. R. 21.

The court will not restrain a plaintiff in an ejectment for nonpayment of rent from executing his habere, where the bill is filed after judgment in the ejectment. Ivess v. Hunt, Fl. & K. 408.

Tenant having a claim against his landlord for unliquidated damages, occasioned by cutting timber on the demised premises, in pursuance of a power so to do, reserved by the lease, the landlord brought an ejectment for nonpayment of rent; on bill filed by tenant, stating his claim, and charging that if ascertained, and credit given for it, there would not be a year's rent in arrear; and on that fact being established upon an issue, tenant was restored to the possession (which landlord had obtained in the meantime) on paying the balance due by him; and decreed entitled to an account of mesne profits, &c. Beasley v. Darcy, 2 Sch. & Lef. 405, n.

Where there have been various dealings between landlord and tenant, so as to produce an account too complicated to be taken at law, and the landlord has brought ejectment for nonpayment of rent, the tenant may file a bill, before judgment at law, for an account on the foot of those dealings and to have the balance applied to the rent claimed to be due; and the tenant need not bring in the rent, under statute 4 Geo. 1, c. 5. O'Connor v. Spaight, 1 Sch. & Lef. 305.

Equity does not connect the tenant's right, under the statute, to redeem premises evicted for nonpayment of rent, with any extrinsic matter, so as to make the tenant pay compensation, as a condition connected with his relief; therefore, on a bill by a tenant to redeem premises evicted for nonpayment of rent, relief granted, although he had committed breaches of covenant. Swanton v. Biggs, Beat. 170.

B., the assignee of certain leases of lands in Ireland, for long terms of years, being in arrear for rent, suffered judgment to be recovered in ejectment by the lessor, and possession of the lands was delivered by writs of habere on the 18th July, 1823. By the Irish statute 4 Geo. 1, c. 5, s. 3, a court of equity is empowered to annul the proceedings in ejectment, and restore the possession to the lessee, if a bill is filed, and the amount of rent and costs paid into court within six calendar months after execution has been executed. On the 17th January, 1824, B. filed a bill in the exchequer to redeem the lands, and obtained an order, dated on the 17th January, and signed by one of the barons of the exchequer, to lodge the amount of rent in arrear and costs in the Bank of Ireland. The order was left with the accountant-general on the 17th, after the bank was shut. On Monday, the 19th January, the money was paid into the bank, and the accountant-general gave a certificate accordingly. A treaty for a compromise then took place, and was for some time pending. On the 7th May, 1825, on the motion of B., it was ordered that the order for lodging the rent and costs should be entered as of the 17th January, and that the lodgment of the money should be receipted on that day, instead of the 19th, and that a certificate should be granted accordingly by the accountant-general. On the 7th July, 1825, the lessor obtained an order to take out of court, without prejudice to the rights of the parties, the rent and costs which had been deposited, and that he might be at liberty to proceed in the recovery of the lands. Having, under this order, taken the money out of court, the lessor appealed against the order directing the alteration in the date of the payment of the rent and costs. The order was reversed. Vesey v. Bodkin, 4 Bli. (N.S.) 64; 1 Dow & Cl. 456. Reversing Jones, 139.

—— Mortgagee of Lease.]—The mortgagee of a lease has the same title to relief against an ejectment for nonpayment of rent, and upon the same terms, as the lessee against whom the recovery is had. Doe d. Whitfield v. Roe, 3 Taunt. 402.

A mortgagee of a lease, who is not in possession, is entitled to relief against a forfeiture of the lease through nonpayment of rent by the lessee, if he is willing, within six months after a judgment enforcing the forfeiture has been obtained by the lessor, to pay all rent in arrear and all costs and damages, and to perform all the covenants in the lease; except in the case where a third party has acquired rights between the forfeiture and the application for relief. Newbolt v. Bingham, 72 L. T. 852; 14 R. 526—C. A.

Landlord bringing ejectment for nonpayment of rent, and having notice of a mortgage of the tenant's interest, must serve the mortgagee with the ejectment, although the mortgage was not registered pursuant to the provisions of statute 8 Geo. 1, c. 2, s. 5. Biddulph v. St. John, 2 Sch. & Lef. 521.

To a bill by mortgagee or trustee of a leasehold interest evicted for nonpayment of rent against the landlord seeking a redemption, a demurrer, the lessee not being a party, allowed. Adams v. St. Ledger, 1 Ball & B. 181.

—— Statutory.]—See post, J. 2, i., ii. & iii. (post, cols. 1028 et seq.)

2. Reservation of.

Parties.]—Upon a lease by tenants in common the survivor may sue for the whole rent; although the reservation is to the lessors according to their respective interests. Wallace v. M'Laren, 1 M. & Ry. 516; 31 R. R. 334.

Where rent has become due under a lease made by several joint tenants, an assignment of the reversion by one does not alter the nature of the bygone rent, and therefore the right of distrainment for it is gone. Staveley v. Alcock, 16 Q. B. 636; 20 L. J., Q. B. 320; 15 Jur. 628.

A. let a house to B. as tenant from year to year, and afterwards granted a lease by deed to C. of the house and other property, for twenty-one years:—Held, that this transaction transferred the reversion of the house to C., and that A. could not recover against B. for rent due after the lease. Harmer v. Bean, 3 Car. & K. 307.

A joint demise by two tenants in common, in fee, with a general reddendum, not specifying to whom the rent is to be payable. The rent follows the reversion, and on the death of one of the tenants in common the reversion is split, and his share of it descends to his heir, who is entitled to the rent. Beer v. Beer, 12 C. B. 60; 21 L. J., C. P. 124; 16 Jur. 923.

One or two joint tenants may demise his or their portion to another, so as to create the relationship of landlord and tenant between them, with a right to distrain in respect of rent in arrear. Cowper v. Fletcher, 6 B. & S. 464; 34 L. J., Q. B. 187; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 780; 12 L. T. 420; 13 W. R. 739.

Where one seised in fee settles lands on himself for life, with remainders to other persons, reserving a leasing power, which he afterwards exercises, reserving rent to himself, his heirs and assigns, those in remainder shall have the rent. Greenaway v. Hart, 14 C. B. 340; 2 C. L. R. 370; 23 L. J., C. P. 115; 18 Jur. 449; 2 W. R. 702.

So where one seised in fee settles lands on A. for life, with remainders, and gives him a leasing power, which he exercises, reserving rent during the term to himself, his heirs and assigns, those in remainder shall take it. Ib.

The defendant being in possession of premises under a lease from two trustees, of a term which had expired, a new lease was granted for a further term, but was executed by one only of the trustees. The defendant paid rent to both trustees until one of them died, and for the rent due after his death the other trustee brought an action for use and occupation :—Held, that he might maintain the action in his own name and right, and was not bound to sue as surviving trustee. Wheatley v. Boyd, 7 Ex. 20.

Where a termor makes a lease to A. for twenty-one years, reserving rent to herself, her executors, administrators and assigns, and the lessee covenanted to pay it "to her and her assigns," and she afterwards conveys the reversion expectant on the lease to trustees, in trust for the wife of A. during her life, the administratrix of the surviving trustee may sue the lessee for arrears of rent due as well before as after the decease of the intestate, for the purpose of defraying thereout expenses properly incurred on behalf of the property ; and it is no answer for the lessee to allege, that with the consent of the intestate, and of the administratrix since the death, he had been allowed to pay over the rents to his wife, the money not being settled to her separate use. Dollen v. Batt, 4 C. B. (N.S.) 760 ; 27 L. J., C. P. 281 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 835.

As to right to rent of assignee or mortgagee of the reversion, see further, post, K. 2. (cols. 1081 et seq.)

Severance of Land and Rent.]—Lands were subject to a lease of a way-leave at a certain rent for sixty-three years, which the lessee had the power of determining. The land and rent were sold separately by auction in two lots, and were purchased by two different persons. After some time, the purchaser of the land entered into an arrangement with the lessee, to put an end to the lease, and entered into a different one, in order to defeat the right of the purchaser of the rent : —Held, that this was contrary to equity, and the right of the purchaser of the rent was made good out of the new contract. Wood v. Londonderry (Marquis), 10 Beav. 465 ; 16 L. J., Ch. 460 ; 12 Jur. 735.

Alternatively.]—By a turnpike act it was provided, that in leases of the tolls, the rent should be made payable to the treasurer, and that in default, every such lease should be null and void to all intents and purposes whatsoever. A lease was made whereby the rent was reserved to the trustees or their treasurer :—Held, first, that the reservation in the alternative was bad within the former part of this clause ; and, secondly, that the words "null and void to all intents and purposes" were to be construed as meaning absolutely void, and not voidable only. Pearse v. Morrice, 4 N. & M. 48 ; 2 A. & E. 84 ; 4 L. J., K. B. 21.

Lease of Mines—Royalty.]—A lessee of mines of ironstone, coals, and other minerals, for a term of thirty years, to be computed from March, 1839, demised the same, in November, 1846, to the defendant for twenty-three years, reserving a royalty upon the ore and coal raised by him, or an annual sum in lieu thereof, if the royalties in any year should not amount to that sum ; with power to the lessee to distrain for the rents, reservations, and royalties. The lessee, during the demise, assigned to the plaintiff "the rents, reservations, and royalties, and all his other the estate, right of, in, or in respect of the demised premises, and the benefit of the covenants in the lease contained." In an action by the plaintiff to recover arrears in lieu of royalties accrued since the assignment :—Held, that, by the deed of the lessee in 1846, a rent was created, and not a mere covenant in gross ; that such rent was assignable, and that the plaintiff, as assignee, could sue the defendant for such rent. Williams v. Hayward, 1 El. & El. 1040 ; 28 L. J., Q. B. 374 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1417 ; 7 W. R. 563.

Time.] — A subsequent agreement may by relation operate to make a reservation of rent from the beginning. M'Leish v. Tate, Cowp. 781.

On a parol demise, rent was to be payable from the Lady Day following : evidence of the custom of the country is admissible to shew that the parties meant Old Lady Day. Doe d. Hall v. Benson, 4 B. & Ald. 588. S. P., Denn d. Peters v. Hopkinson, 3 D. & R. 507.

The defendant avowed that the rent was payable at Martinmas, to wit, November 23rd :—Held, that this must be taken to mean New Martinmas ; and the plaintiff having shewn that the rent was, in fact, payable at Old Martinmas, the court refused to set aside a verdict given for him. Smith v. Walton, 8 Bing. 235 ; 1 M. & Scott, 380 ; 2 L. J., C. P. 85.

Under an agreement for the quarterly payment of rent, the first payment becomes due at the end of the first quarter, and the custom of the country to pay rent in advance cannot be imported into it. Doe d. Mitchell v. Weller, 1 Jur. 622.

Under a reddendum of a yearly rent, payable by four equal quarterly payments, commencing from the 25th day of March, then instant ; the first quarter's rent is payable on the said 25th day of March ; and, consequently, the rent is a beforehand rent. Hopkins v. Helmore, 3 N. & P. 453 ; 8 A. & E. 463 ; 1 W. W. & H. 386 ; 7 L. J., Q. B. 195 ; 2 Jur. 856.

By a memorandum in writing, A. agreed to let to B. a house at a yearly rent of 50*l.*, with a proviso that A. should, in consideration of the yearly rent being duly paid, give B. quiet possession of the house ; and B. agreed to pay the rent, and all taxes. The memorandum concluded thus :—"likewise the stable, and loft over, now occupied by H., at a further rent of 25*l.* per annum, to be paid on the usual quarter-days" :—Held, that the reservation of quarterly payments applied only to the 25*l.* rent, and not to the 50*l.* Coombes v. Howard, 1 C. B. 410.

A. agreed to let, and B. agreed to take, the second floor in a house, to hold from the 25th March, 1844, for a twelvemonth certain, and thence for the continuance of the term of A.'s interest in the premises, until determined by a six months' notice from B., expiring at any quarter of a year, at the rent of 120*l.* a year :—Held, that, after the expiration of the first twelve months, the rent continued to be payable yearly. Collett v. Curling, 10 Q. B. 785 ; 16 L. J., Q. B. 390 ; 11 Jur. 890.

When Rent becomes due.]—By an agreement dated the 8th September, the defendant agreed to let a house to the plaintiff for seven years, at an annual rent, payable quarterly, the first payment to be made on the 25th of March following:—Held, that a quarter's rent only became due on the 25th March. Hutchins v. Scott, 2 M. & W. 809; M. & H. 194; 6 L. J., Ex. 186.

Payable in Advance.]—Where there was a stipulation for "rent to commence at Michaelmas, and to be paid three months in advance, such advance to be paid on taking possession":—Held, that the stipulation could only go for the advance of the first quarter's rent. Holland v. Palser, 2 Stark. 161.

A. held premises of B. under a lease for three, seven or ten years, determinable on notice, with a stipulation that the amount of a quarter's rent should be paid by A. on taking possession, which was to be allowed to him for the last quarter's rent "on the determination of the tenancy." After a notice to determine the lease at the expiration of the third year had been given, and before its expiration, the parties verbally agreed that A. should continue tenant for another year, no express mention being made of the terms of the tenancy:—Held, that the above was, in substance, a stipulation for a forehand rent, and that in the absence of any express mention of other terms, A. continued to hold, subject to the terms of the original lease, and consequently, that the payment made on taking possession was applicable to the last quarter of the fourth year. Finch v. Miller, 5 C. B. 428.

In 1851 A. became tenant of premises under terms of a written agreement (not under seal) for a term exceeding three years, the rent payable quarterly in advance. A. occupied the premises for some time, and paid several quarters' rent, and the receipts given to him by the agent of the landlord stated that such payments were in advance, although, in fact, A. never paid the rent in advance:—Held, that although the agreement was void under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 3, as not being under seal, still that the receipts taken were ample evidence of the tenancy being upon the terms of the rent being payable quarterly in advance. Lee v. Smith, 9 Ex. 662; 2 C. L. R. 1079; 23 L. J., Ex. 198; 2 W. R. 377.

By an agreement for the sale of a house and land, 75*l*., part of the purchase-money, was payable on signing the agreement, and 1,500*l*., the remainder of the purchase-money, was payable with interest on a day certain; and after stipulating for the delivery of an abstract of title and the time within which the title should be deemed accepted, the agreement stated that as the purchaser was to be let into immediate possession, and for the purpose of securing the due performance of the several agreements therein contained, the purchaser admitted himself to be a tenant from week to week to the vendor of the hereditaments thereby agreed to be sold, at the weekly rent of 80*l*., payable in advance:—Held, that the agreement gave a right of distress to the vendor for the sum payable as a weekly rent. Yeoman v. Ellison, 36 L. J., C. P. 326; 17 L. T. 65.

An agreement to take a house having been entered into, conditioned to pay two quarters' rent in advance, the tenant entered and failed to perform such condition. In an action to recover that sum:—Held, that a count for use and occupation did not apply to such a case, and that the plaintiff could only recover under a special count on the agreement. Angell v. Randall, 16 L. T. 489.

Defendant occupied premises from 1st December, 1830, under an agreement dated February, 1831, for the term of one year, the rent to be paid on the usual quarter days, "the first day of payment to be on the 25th December last." He paid four quarters' rent, the last payment being on 29th September, 1831, and on 4th December sent the key of the premises to the landlord, who on the 20th gave possession to a new tenant:—Held, that the agreement was for payment of rent in advance, and therefore that defendant was entitled to costs under 43 Geo. 3, c. 46, on an arrest and holding to bail for a whole quarter's rent. Allen v. Bates, 3 L. J., Ex. 39.

Amount.]—If A. agrees to let, and B. to take a messuage, from a day past, for a term of ten years, "at and under the rent of 80*l*.," this is an agreement by B. to pay a rent of 80*l*.; and therefore, if there is a power of re-entry in case of a breach of "any of the agreements therein contained," A. has a power of re-entry for non-payment of rent, and may bring ejectment, although there is no express agreement to pay the rent. Doe d. Rains v. Kneller, 4 Car. & P. 3.

A. demised a colliery to B., and B. covenanted to pay as rent "one-third part of the money that should arise, be made, received, or produced from the sale of the coals"; and covenanted to keep "true accounts of all coal daily raised, and to make and deliver true copies thereof to A.":—Held, that taking the two covenants together, the rent was to be calculated on the amount of coal sold, and not on the amount of money actually received. Edwards v. Rees, 7 Car. & P. 340.

In an action on an indenture of demise of a coal mine, made on the 8th July, 1805, reserving one-fourth of the coal raised, or the value in money, at the election of the lessor; and if the one-fourth fell short of 400*l*. per annum, then reserving such additional rent as would make up that annual sum, to be rendered monthly in equal portions:—Held, that the lessor having elected to take the whole in money might declare for two years and three months' rent in arrear. But even if the money rent was reserved annually, the plaintiff might remit his claim to the three months' rent, and enter up judgment for the two years' rent only. Buckley v. Kenyon, 10 East, 139.

A lease of mines was granted for thirty years in consideration of 250*l*. paid down, and a reservation of 500*l*. to be paid annually during the first ten years, which, with a power of re-entry in case of nonpayment, was reserved to the lessor, his heirs and assigns. The payments were to be made clear of all deductions for rates and taxes except property tax, and, if more than one acre per annum was worked, the 500*l*. for that year was to be increased proportionately, but no payments were to be made after the total sum of 5,000*l*. had been thus paid:—Held, that the annual payments of 500*l*. were of the nature of rent, and were not instalments of unpaid purchase-money. Barrs v. Lea, 33 L. J., Ch. 437; 12 W. R. 525.

A tenant from year to year—evicted by a civil bill decree but still in actual occupation—entered into an agreement with the landlord, by which it was agreed that he should thenceforth be tenant from year to year at a rent to be ascertained by three persons named; those persons having declined to determine the amount of the rent, and the tenant having refused to pay an increased rent demanded by the landlord, the latter took possession under the decree :—Held, that the tenant was entitled to maintain trespass against the landlord. M'Creesh v. McGeough, Ir. R. 7 C. L. 236.

A water company was required by its act to supply water to every occupier of a house within the district, upon payment of a rate varying with the rent of such house :—Held, that the word "rent" did not necessarily mean the actual rent paid by the occupier, but must be construed to mean the proper rent to a tenant who paid the rates and charges regularly falling upon the tenant. Sheffield Waterworks Co. v. Bennett, 42 L. J., Ex. 121 ; L. R. 3 Ex. 196 ; 28 L. T. 509 ; 21 W. R. 686—Ex. Ch.

—— How Computed.]—In a lease of land for twenty-one years, from the 25th of March, 1848, it was covenanted that the lessee should pay a stipulated sum for the first year, with a proviso that the rent for each subsequent year of the term should be reduced or increased, according to the average price of wheat in any one year of the term, such average to be taken and ascertained from the then current year's averages, which were taken in the month of January in every year, under and by virtue of the Tithe Commutation Act (6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71), s. 56, which is the result of the sales during seven years ending on Thursday next before Christmas Day then next preceding :—Held, that the rent must be computed according to each septennial average so published in each year. Kendall v. Baker, 11 C. B. 842 ; 21 L. J., C. P. 110 ; 16 Jur. 479.

Under a covenant in a lease the court will grant a rule to have it computed what is due for arrears of rent. Wingfield v. Cleverly, 13 Price, 53.

—— Additional—Parol Evidence to prove.]—Parol evidence is not admissible to prove an additional rent payable by a tenant, beyond that expressed in the written agreement for a lease. Preston v. Morceau, 2 W. Bl. 1249.

—— Damages for Rent.]—In a covenant for five years' rent due at the expiration of a term of years, the rent day for the last half-year not falling within it, the plaintiff may recover damages for all, except the last half-year's rent. Long v. Barroughs, 1 Vern. 247.

Improved Annual Value.]—An agreement was entered into for a lease of premises in the city of London to A. for a term of years, in consideration of a yearly reserved rent of 102*l.* 10*s.*, and of a covenant to expend 2,000*l.* in building a house upon the premises. The house was built, and the lease granted at the rent agreed. The improved annual value, after the erection of the house, was 250*l.* :—Held, that tithes, at the rate of 2*s.* 9*d.* in the pound, were to be computed not merely on the rent reserved by the lease, but on the full annual value of the premises to let, as improved by the expenditure of the 2,000*l.* Vivian v. Cochrane, 4 De G. M. & G. 818 ; 25 L. J., Ch. 553 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 809 ; 3 W. R. 254.

Nominal Amount—"Rent having no Money Value."]—An annual rent of merely nominal amount, e.g. 3*s.*, is not "a rent having no money value" within s. 65, sub-s. 1, of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, even though it may have in practice not been regularly paid, those words meaning, rather, a rent which, when received, has no money value. Smith & Stott's Contract, In re, 48 L. T. 512 ; 31 W. R. 411.

3. Apportionment.

On Death.]—Upon the death of a tenant in tail, the rent shall be apportioned. Paget v. Gee, Amb. 198 ; 3 Swanst. 694.

The 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22, s. 2, applies to cases in which the interest of the person interested in such rents is terminated by his death, or by the death of another person ; but does not apply to the case of a tenant in fee, or provide for apportionment of rent between the real and personal representatives of such person, whose interest is not terminated at his death. Brown v. Amyot, 3 Hare, 173 ; 13 L. J., Ch. 232. Approved in Beer v. Beer, 12 C. B. 60 ; 21 L. J., C. P. 124 ; 16 Jur. 223.

Rights of Lessee.]—Where a lease was made to A. of two houses adjoining each other, at one entire rent of 65*l.* 10*s.*, and the lessor conveyed one of the houses by deed (to which the lessee was no party) to B. in fee, at an apportioned rent of 40*l.* :—Held, that such apportionment should have been made by a jury to give it validity, inasmuch as the grantee had not acquired the same rights and remedies against A., the lessee, as he would have acquired under the legal apportionment by a jury ; the lessee not being bound by the apportionment in the conveyance to which he was no party, and the propriety of which he might dispute. Bliss v. Collins, 5 B. & Ald. 876 ; 1 D. & R. 291 ; 24 R. R. 601.

One lessee alone cannot come into chancery for apportionment. Stafford v. London City, 1 Stra. 95.

What Apportionable.]—An owner of a house, having mortgaged it in fee, and continuing in possession, let it as a ready-furnished house to the defendant. He afterwards became bankrupt, and then with the assent of his assignees, let the house ready furnished to the defendant by the week, who, after three weeks' occupation, received notice from the mortgagee to pay rent to him :—Held, in an action brought by the assignees for use and occupation of the house and furniture, that they were entitled to recover for the use of the furniture ; that the rent of the house and furniture might be apportioned, or if not, that upon the entry of the mortgagee claiming the house, and having no interest in the furniture, a new agreement might be inferred, to take the house at a reasonable rent from the mortgagee, and to pay a reasonable amount as compensation for the use of the furniture to the assignees. Salmon v. Matthews, 8 M. & W. 827 ; 11 L. J., Ex. 59.

Semble, that if an act of parliament takes away a portion of the subject-matter of a demise, the lessee is not entitled to an apportionment of the rent. Harris v. Morrice, 10 M. & W. 260 ; 12 L. J., Ex. 42.

Where land in the possession of a tenant for years is conveyed by deed, the right of the purchaser, as assignee of the reversion, to receive the whole rent for the current quarter cannot be controlled by a contemporaneous parol agreement to apportion the quarter's rent between assignor and assignee. Flinn v. Calow, 1 Man. & G. 589.

A lease for years by a rector having ceased by his death, the succeeding incumbent received from the lessee a sum of money as the rent due for the whole year, in the course of which the lessor died :—Held, that the executor was entitled to an apportionment. Hawkins v. Kelly, 8 Ves. 308.

B. mortgaged certain premises to C., and covenanted to insure, and, in the event of fire, to apply the insurance moneys in rebuilding the mortgaged premises. A fire took place, and B. rebuilt, but the premises so erected extended beyond the boundary line of the mortgaged property on to an adjoining slip of land belonging to the mortgagor. B. subsequently mortgaged this slip of land to H., and also gave him a second mortgage on the premises in mortgage to C. ; and H. afterwards joined with C. in a demise of the whole of the property, the rent being made payable to C., all parties being under the impression that the premises originally mortgaged to C. comprehended the property subsequently mortgaged to H. Upon a bill filed by H., praying an apportionment of the rent :—Held, that it was a mistake of facts, against which the court would relieve ; and an apportionment of the rent was decreed accordingly. Harryman v. Collins, 18 Beav. 11 ; 18 Jur. 501.

—— Determination by Value.]—When a gift of part of a farm, subject to an entire rent, described it as "containing about ninety-eight acres, subject to the proportion of rent same bears to the whole," and the gift of the other part of the farm had described it as "containing about twenty acres, subject to the proportion of rent to which the entire of the lands is subject," the proportion of the rent to be borne by the twenty acres and ninety-eight acres respectively is to be determined by their relative value, and not by acreage. O'Connor v. O'Connor, 19 W. R. 90.

—— Of Leases for Lives.]—An equitable tenant for life under a settlement of freehold leases for lives obtained a renewed grant for lives to himself. At his death the property was in the occupation of yearly tenants, under parol demises by him :—Held, that the rents were not apportionable either under 11 Geo. 2, c. 19, or under 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22. Mills v. Trumper, L. R. 4 Ch. 320 ; 20 L. T. 384 ; 17 W. R. 428.

—— Of Land Tax.]—Land-tax, quit-rent, &c., are not apportionable as between tenant for life and remainderman. Sutton v. Chaplin, 10 Ves. 66.

Prior Lease existing.]—A lessee of 100 acres of land accepted the lease, and entered upon the land. Upon his entry he found eight acres in the possession of a person entitled under a prior lease from the lessor, and that person kept possession of the eight acres until half a year's rent became due, and excluded the lessee from the enjoyment during that period, the lessee continuing in possession of the remainder. The prior lease was for a term extending beyond the duration of the latter lease :—Held, that the latter demise was wholly void as to the eight acres ; and that the rent was not apportionable, and the lessor was not entitled to distrain for the whole rent or any part of it. Neale v. Mackenzie, 1 M. & W. 747 ; 2 Gale, 174 ; 6 L. J., Ex. 263—Ex. Ch. Reversing 2 C. M. & R. 84 ; 5 Tyr. 1106 ; 4 L. J., Ex. 185.

Under 11 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 15, and 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22, s. 2.]—The 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22, s. 2, does not apply to cases where the party entitled to the rent himself puts an end to the term. Oldenshaw v. Holt, 4 P. & D. 307 ; 12 A. & E. 590 ; 1 A. & H. 1 ; 11 L. J., Q. B. 221 ; 4 Jur. 1012.

A., in 1836, let land to B. under a building agreement ; the rent was to commence at Christmas, 1838, and A. to have a right of re-entry in case of non-performance on the part of B. A. availed himself of this right of re-entry, and brought an ejectment, laying the demise on the 1st January, 1839. In September, 1838, he had relet the land to C., at a rent to commence in 1840, which was equivalent in amount to that provided for by the first agreement. In an action by A. for breaking the first agreement :—Held, first, that the demise in the ejectment was to be taken as the date of the re-entry by A. ; and that he was not entitled to that portion of the rent between the previous Christmas and that day, under 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22, s. 2. Ib.

Held, that, secondly, it was properly left to the jury, as a mere money calculation, to say whether A. had sustained more than nominal damages by breach of the agreement. Ib.

The 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22, s. 2, does not apply to rents payable by tenants from year to year, which have not been reserved by an instrument in writing. Markley, In re, 4 Myl. & C. 484 ; 3 Jur. 767.

The 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22, applies where either the instrument creating the life interest or the lease under which the rent is payable is dated after the statute. Llewellyn v. Rous, 35 Beav. 591 ; L. R. 2 Eq. 27 ; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 580.

The 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22, s. 2, applies to rents reserved by leases granted after the passing of the act, in pursuance of a power created before the act. Plummer v. Whiteley, Johns. 585 ; 29 L. J., Ch. 247 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1416 ; 1 L. T. 230 ; 8 W. R. 120. S. P., Lock v. De Burgh, 4 De G. & S. 470 ; 20 L. J., Ch. 384 ; 15 Jur. 961.

The devisee of an estate for life is not entitled, as against him in remainder, to an apportionment of rents upon parol leases from year to year, created by his testator, and not since determined by himself by any act inter vivos. Cuttley v. Arnold, 1 Johns. & H. 551 ; 28 L. J., Ch. 352 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 361 ; 7 W. R. 245.

A tenant from year to year has a lease for a year certain, with a growing interest, during every year thereafter, springing out of the original contract and parcel of it, and therefore, where such a tenancy has been created by an owner in fee of lands, who devises them to one for life with remainders over, the interest of the tenant from year to year, unless terminated by the devisee for life by some act inter vivos, does not determine upon the decease of the tenant for life ; and, consequently, the rent then accruing due is not apportionable under 11 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 15. Nor, unless reserved by an instrument in writing, is such rent apportionable under 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22. Ib.

A. by will directed that, for twenty-one years next after his death, his trustees should receive and accumulate the rents and profits of his real estate, and apply them towards payment of his debts and legacies, and, subject to that term, he gave the beneficial interest in the income of his estate to B. for life :—Held, under 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22, s. 2, that the rent which fell due after the expiration of the twenty-one years must be apportioned between those beneficially interested in the accumulations, and the tenant for life who was entitled on the expiration of the term. St. Aubyn v. St. Aubyn, 1 Drew. & Sm. 611; 30 L. J., Ch. 917; 5 L. T. 519; 9 W. R. 922.

A portion of the income was derived from royalties payable under mining sets or leases, when the ore should be obtained:—Held, that the rent not becoming due at fixed periods, it did not come within 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22, s. 2. Ib.

When a tenant for life, under a settlement of an estate pur autre vie, renewed the lease for lives to himself and his heirs, purchased the fee, made a parol demise for a year, but died before the end of the current half-year, and a remainderman entered and received the rent:—Held, that the rent must be apportioned between the executor of the tenant for life and the remainderman, under 11 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 15. Mills v. Trumper, L. R. 1 Eq. 671; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 329; 14 L. T. 220; 14 W. R. 630.

A tenant in fee demised lands from year to year. He died, having devised the lands for life. The devisee for life received rent, but did not live long enough to have a right to determine the yearly tenancy:—Held, that the administrator of the tenant for life was not entitled to an apportionment of the rent under 11 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 15. Botheroyd v. Woolley, 5 Tyr. 522; 1 Gale, 66; 4 L. J., Ex. 153.

Under Act of 1870.]—Rent as between landlord and tenant is apportionable under the Apportionment Act, 1870. Hartcup v. Bell, 1 Cab. & E. 19. Affirmed in C. A.

—— Eviction.]—A landlord who has wrongfully evicted his tenant between two quarter days is not entitled to the apportioned rent up to the day of eviction under the Apportionment Act, 1870. Clapham v. Draper, 1 Cab. & E. 484.

—— Eviction by Title Paramount.]—Where rights of shooting were demised by deed at a yearly rent (without specified gale-days) for a term of years, and during the currency of one of the years, the lessee was evicted from the premises by title paramount:—Held, that the annual rent was apportionable under the Apportionment Act, 1870, and that the lessee was bound to pay a proportionate part of the year's rent, to be apportioned in respect of time. Elvidge v. Meldon, 24 L. R., Ir. 91.

—— Liability.]—The Apportionment Act of 1870 not only affects the right to receive rent but the liability to pay it. Hastings (Lord), Ex parte, Wilson, In re, 62 L. J., Q. B. 628; 5 R. 455; 10 Morrell, 219.

—— Valuation — Outgoing Tenant — Custom of Norfolk.]—According to the custom of the county of Norfolk, the amount payable by the landlord in respect of valuation to the outgoing tenant is not the absolute value put by the valuers on the subject-matter of the valuation, but is the balance of that sum after deducting any arrears of rent. Ib.

4. ABATEMENT.

Misrepresentation as to Value.]—Reference, under the circumstances, to master upon petition of tenant to inquire into the expediency of abatement of rent both for the past and future, the landlord having been guilty of misrepresentation as to the value of the premises. Millbank v. Stevens, C. P. Cooper, 45.

By an indenture of lease a farm was demised by A. to B. at a yearly rent of 1,320*l.* for a term of twenty-one years. B., the lessee, alleged that he had taken the demised premises at the above rent upon A.'s representations of the value, which were found to be incorrect, and A. thereupon suffered the rent to remain in arrears; and about 1,000*l.* was in arrear on A.'s death in December, 1833. A.'s will contained trusts for persons, some of whom were married women and infants. The trustees of the will had forborne to sue B. for the arrears, but he had been compelled to pay the whole rent due after A.'s death. On B.'s affidavit of the above circumstances, and on affidavits of surveyors and farmers as to the exorbitancy of the rent, and from the fact that the testator himself had not enforced the rent, a reference was directed as to the proposed abatement of the rent. Ib.

Destruction of Premises.]—A lease contained a proviso that, in case the warehouse, or any part thereof, should at any time during the term "be destroyed or damaged by fire, flood, storm, tempest, or other inevitable accident," the rent, or a just proportion of it, should cease or abate so long as the premises should continue wholly or partly untenantable or unfit for use or occupation in consequence of such destruction or damage. During the period in which the lessor was executing the repairs the lessee was excluded from the use and occupation of the whole or a part of the premises, and he claimed an abatement of rent under the proviso:—Held, that the words "inevitable accident" imported something ejusdem generis with what had been previously mentioned, and did not apply to that which, though not avoidable so far as the lessee was concerned, was not in its nature inevitable, but resulted from the default of the lessor, and that the lessee was not entitled to an abatement of rent. Saner v. Bilton, 47 L. J., Ch. 267; 7 Ch. D. 815; 38 L. T. 281; 26 W. R. 394.

—— By Fire.]—See infra, col. 928.

Lease by Assignees of Bankrupt.]—On an application of a tenant of the assignees, a reference was made to the commissioner, who reported the rent should be reduced, which was done. On the application of some creditors, one of whom offered higher rent, the court refused to interfere. De Begnis, Ex parte, Chambers, In re, 1 Mont. & Ayr. 277; 4 Deac. & C. 225; 3 L. J., Bk. 43.

Landlord a Minor.]—This court will not make any abatement of rent of tenant of minor who holds for lives renewable for ever. Hamilton v. Hamilton, 1 Hog, 71.

If receiver, or those concerned for minor, offer any unreasonable opposition to tenant who applies for an abatement of rent, they will be compelled to answer petition of tenant and court will judge of abatement of rent. Anon., 1 Hog, 68.

Landlord a Lunatic.]—The court will not direct a reference as to the reduction of rent, upon the petition of a tenant of lunatic's estate. Town, Ex parte, Turn. & R. 137.

In Foreclosure Suit.]—Where tenants hold under leases of a date prior to that of the appointment of a receiver in a foreclosure suit over the lands which they hold, the court has not jurisdiction either to remit arrears or to grant a prospective abatement of the rents which by their leases the tenants are bound to pay, unless the owner of the lands, and the plaintiff, and other parties interested in the rents, consent to such remission or abatement; secus autem, in the case of the estate of an infant or lunatic under the control of the court. Hamilton v. Nagle, 1 Ir. Ch. R. 513.

Agreement for — Specific Performance.]—A bill will not lie by a tenant against his landlord for a specific performance of a promise in writing signed by him to reduce the rent of lands demised by indenture in consideration of previous expenditure thereon, though there had been an acceptance of the reduced rent for seven years. Fitzgerald v. Portarlington, 1 Jones, 431.

But the tenant ought to have reasonable notice from his landlord, that he would insist on the rent reserved by the lease. Ib.

A. being possessed for a term of 820 years of lands and premises at B. in 1832 demised them to C. for 800 years, at a rent of 140*l.*, subject to the usual covenants to repair and pay the yearly rent. C. having entered and expended money on the premises, conceiving the reserved rent too high, at his solicitation A., in 1838, agreed by letter to reduce the rent, "in consideration of the permanent improvements made and promised to be made at 130*l.* per annum for the residue of the term." C., after the date of the letter, continued making improvements, and then sublet at a fine to D. at the original rent of 140*l.* D. afterwards, for 100*l.*, purchased from C. a similar reduction in his rent, and thereupon A.'s letter was handed over from C. to D. A. received the reduced rent for some years from D., but then insisting on the full rent, on a bill filed by C., to which D. was no party, against A. for a specific performance of this agreement:—Held, that the consideration for the promise by A. to reduce the rent was too vague and uncertain to allow a court of equity to decree a specific performance. Held, also, that there must be mutuality in the agreement, and it ought to be enforced. Held, also, that D. ought to have been a party to the bill. Morgan v. Rainsford, 8 Ir. Eq. R. 299.

And see M'Kay v. M'Nally, ante, col. 904.

—— Non-payment—Distress for full Rent—Recovery of Difference.]—Where a landlord had, on an assignment of the lease, assented to a readjustment in the mode of paying the rent, and the tenant made default in payment at the reduced rate, and subsequently became bankrupt, when the landlord distrained for the full rent reserved under the lease, the court held that the tenant's trustee in bankruptcy could not recover from the landlord the difference between the full and reduced rent, the landlord's rights having revived on non-performance by the tenant of the terms of the agreement. Fitzgerald v. Portarlington (supra), explained. Smith & Hartogg, In re, Official Receiver, Ex parte, 15 R. 641; 73 L. T. 221; 44 W. R. 79; 2 Manson, 400.

—— Presumption of.]—An agreement for the reduction of rent presumed from the receipt of the reduced rent, which was consistent with the recital in a settlement, though, during the greater part of the period, a tenant for life received the rent; and the reduction held to extend to the entire interest, which was an estate for lives and a term of years in remainder, and not to be confined to the estate for lives. Enraght v. Haughton, 8 Ir. Eq. R. 274.

Reference as to.]—Where a tenant applied for a reference as to whether a composition should be accepted for his arrears of rent, it was granted at his expense, and upon other very strict and special terms. Fitzgibbon v. Flynn, Sau. & Sc. 687.

In an administration suit reference was made, under the circumstances, on the petition of the tenant, to inquire whether there ought to be an abatement of his rent. Lateward v. Schreiber, C. P. Cooper, 46, n.

Motion for.]—A motion for an abatement by a tenant who held at an exorbitant rent, was refused with costs, though not opposed by the parties in the cause. Maguire v. Richards, Sau. & Sc. 690.

5. Premises Let for Immoral Purposes.

An action will not lie at the suit of a party who has let lodgings to an immodest woman to enable her to consort with the other sex; otherwise, if the woman merely lodges there, and receives her visitors elsewhere. Appleton v. Campbell, 2 Car. & P. 347.

So, where the lodging was under a weekly tenancy, and it did not appear that the premises had been originally let for the purpose of prostitution:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover the weekly rent which accrued after he was fully informed of the defendant's mode of life. Jennings v. Throgmorton, R. & M. 251; 27 R. R. 746. And see Lloyd v. Johnson, 1 Bos. & P. 340; 4 R. R. 822.

In an action for use and occupation of a lodging, it being set up that the defendant was an infant and a prostitute, and shewn that the lodging was so let with the plaintiff's knowledge, for the purpose of prostitution, the action was held not to be maintainable. Crisp v. Churchill, 1 Bos. & P. 340; 4 R. R. 822. S. P., Girardy v. Richardson, 1 Bos. & P. 341, n.; 1 Esp. 13.

6. Premises not Tenantable.

Implied Condition.]—There is no implied warranty attached by law to a demise of land or the vesture of land, that it will answer the purpose which the lessee had in view when he took it. Sutton v. Temple, 12 M. & W. 52; 13 L. J., Ex. 17; 7 Jur. 1065. S. P., Hart v. Windsor, 12 M. & W. 68; 13 L. J., Ex. 129; 8 Jur. 150.

Therefore, where a party entered into a written agreement to take certain acres of eatage for cattle, from the 8th September, 1842, till the 6th April, 1843; and after he had put in his cattle, discovered that the land was covered with lumps of refuse paint, which poisoned several of the cattle; but there was no evidence to shew that the paint was put there by the landlord, or that he knew of its being on the land:—Held, that the tenant was not released from the obligation of paying the rent stipulated for up to the end of the term. Ib.

The decision in Smith v. Marrable, 11 M. & W. 5; 12 L. J., Ex. 223 (post, col. 1281), that every ready-furnished house is let under an implied condition that it is in a fit state for immediate occupation, is distinguishable on the ground that it is a mixed contract for a house and for personal chattels. Ib.

In an action by a landlord for rent, the tenant pleaded, in substance, that through the neglect and default of the landlord the house and premises which formed the subject of the letting had become unfit for habitation, in consequence of defects which the tenant was not bound to rectify, and that the landlord having refused to remedy these defects when required to do so, the tenant quitted, and gave up to the landlord possession of the house and premises before any of the rent claimed had accrued :—Held, a bad plea. Murray v. Mace, Ir. R. 8 C. L. 396.

In the absence of any agreement on the subject, a person who agrees to take a house must take it as it stands, and cannot call on the lessor to put it into a condition which makes it fit for living in. Chappell v. Gregory, 34 Beav. 250.

—— Furnished Apartments.]—See post, O. 2 (cols. 1281 et seq.)

Express Condition.]—Where a party was tenant from year to year of malting premises, which, by reason of the default of the landlord in not repairing, according to his agreement so to do, had become unfit for malting purposes :—Held, that this was no defence to an action for rent due subsequently to the premises becoming so unfit. Surplice v. Farnsworth, 7 Man. & G. 576 ; 8 Scott (N.R.) 307 ; 13 L. J., C. P. 215 ; 8 Jur. 760.

Upon the letting of a furnished house for immediate occupation, with an express condition that it is fit for occupation, if it is not so, and is at once given up on that account, the landlord cannot recover either the rent or for use and occupation. On such a contract, whether express or implied, it is a breach of the condition if the house is so infested and overrun with bugs, as to render it unfit for occupation ; and as the condition applies to the whole house, it is a breach if any of the rooms are in that state. But it must appear that the nuisance exists to a serious and substantial extent, and is such as the tenant cannot reasonably be expected either to endure or to extirpate. Campbell v. Wenlock (Lord), 4 F. & F. 716.

7. Premises Let Pending Contract for Sale or Lease.

Sale—When Abortive.]—Where a man agrees to purchase premises on an assurance that the person of whom he purchases has a long term in them, and on the faith of such assurance, at a considerable expense, enters into the possession of them, he will not, on his refusing to complete his purchase (on account of the seller having a shorter term), be charged in an action for use and occupation. Hearn v. Tomlin, 1 Peake, 253 ; 3 R. R. 684.

Where a party is let into possession of land under a contract of purchase, which afterwards goes off, he is liable to an action for use and occupation at the suit of the vendor, for the period during which he continues in possession after the contract went off. Howard v. Shaw, 8 M. & W. 118.

If a purchaser takes possession of premises under a contract of sale, which on account of a defect in the vendor's title, fails to be completed, the vendor cannot afterwards recover rent for the period of the purchaser's possession, upon an implied contract for use and occupation. Kirtland v. Pounsett, 2 Taunt. 145.

Where a person was in possession of premises under an agreement for a lease, which was never executed by reason of a default of the lessor, and afterwards gave up the possession :—Held, that he was not liable, although he had received rent from the under-tenants during the period of his occupation. Rumball v. Wright, 1 Car. & P. 590.

Where the owner of an estate contracted to sell it to another, who thereupon sold part of the property so contracted for by auction, to a third person, and the sub-vendee obtained possession, and the original vendor afterwards refused to perform his contract ; on which a suit in equity was brought, pending which the original vendor obtained possession from the sub-vendee, on a demand to be restored to it, it being rumoured that the original purchaser had failed in the suit instituted for specific performance ; if, in fact, the plaintiff should ultimately succeed in that suit, and the estate is in consequence conveyed to the purchaser under a decree of the Court of Chancery, the sub-vendee may maintain an action for use and occupation against the original vendee, for all the time during which he held the possession so obtained from the second purchaser. Hull v. Vaughan, 6 Price, 157.

Where a vendee of an estate sold by auction has been suffered to enter upon and hold the premises while the title was under investigation, and the contract has afterwards been determined for want of title the vendor cannot on these grounds only recover for use and occupation, although the occupation has been beneficial. Winterbottom v. Ingham, 7 Q. B. 611 ; 14 L. J., Q. B. 298 ; 10 Jur. 4.

A. purchased lands from B. under a contract of sale not in writing, went into possession, and under such contract remained in such possession for several years without paying rent :—Held, that B. could not maintain an action for use and occupation against A., as the facts of the case rebutted the implied contract to pay rent for the lands. Corrigan v. Woods, Ir. R. 1 C. L. 73 ; 15 W. R. 318.

When a purchaser has entered into possession of lands under a contract of sale, which is subsequently rescinded, he is not liable for use and occupation during the period between the entry and the rescission. Markey v. Coote, Ir. R. 10 C. L. 149.

If, after the rescission, the purchaser remains in possession, he is liable in respect of his subsequent occupation, and it is for the jury to say whether there was a creation of a new tenancy at will, containing an implied agreement on the part of the purchaser to pay a fair compensation for his occupation, or whether the former tenancy had simply been determined without the creation of any new tenancy, and the purchaser had become liable as a trespasser. Ib.

When a purchaser enters under a contract of sale, the tenancy at will arising therefrom is determined by a rescission of the contract, without any demand of possession. Ib.

Claim, that by an agreement for the purchase by the plaintiff of property belonging to the defendant, the purchase was to be completed on the 29th of September, 1869, from which time the plaintiff was to receive all rents and profits and to pay interest on the purchase-money until the completion of the purchase. That the purchase was not completed until the 13th of March, 1876, and that the plaintiff had duly paid the interest. That the defendant had remained in possession, but had paid no rent. That the plaintiff claimed rent for use and occupation at the rate of 150*l.* per annum as a fair value. The defendant demurred:—Held, that under the agreement a fair rent must be paid by the defendant for the time he remained in possession, and that by demurring he had admitted 150*l.* a year to be a fair rent. Metropolitan Ry. v. Defries, 2 Q. B. D. 387; 36 L. T. 494; 25 W. R. 841.

In July, 1867, L. sold to a railway company a house in which he was carrying on the business of a victualler, the terms being that the purchase-money was to be paid on the 25th of March, 1869, or at such earlier time as the company should choose, possession to be given on payment, they paying 5 per cent. interest in the meantime; and he was to be their tenant at a given rent, the tenancy not to be determined before the 25th of March, 1869, unless the company, after three months' notice, paid the money sooner, but to be determinable on the 25th of March, 1869, by a week's notice. The interest and rent were paid up to the 25th of March, 1869. L. gave due notice to determine the tenancy on that day; but the company not having the purchase-money ready, he refused to give up possession, and in April filed a bill for specific performance. On the 18th of November, 1869, a decree for specific performance, with a declaration that the title had been accepted, and an order for payment of the purchase-money, with interest from the 25th of March, 1869, was made; and an inquiry was added whether, having regard to the circumstances and conduct of the parties, the company was entitled to any and what allowance in respect of L.'s occupation of the premises after the 25th of March, 1869:—Held, that the company was not entitled to any allowance by way of occupation rent. Leggott v. Metropolitan Ry., L. R. 5 Ch. 716; 18 W. R. 1060.

Lease.]—An occupation under an agreement for assigning a lease, where it was agreed that the assignee should pay the lessee, until the completion of the assignment, at the rate of 100*l.* per year, constitutes the relation of landlord and tenant between the lessee and assignee. Saunders v. Musgrave, 6 B. & C. 524; 9 D. & R. 529; 2 Car. & P. 294; 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 192; 30 R. R. 414.

Agreement to grant a lease to S., when he should have erected certain buildings on the premises to be demised. No covenant to pay rent before the execution of the lease. S., after the buildings were erected, holds the premises, subject to the terms in the lease, but is liable for use and occupation. Banister v. Usborne, Peake, Ad. C. 76.

A receiver of an estate in which the plaintiff had an equitable interest under a settlement vesting it in trustees, let the defendant into possession under an agreement with himself in writing, in which he described himself as agreeing, "on behalf of the estate," to let for a term of years. The plaintiff declining to sanction any other than a yearly letting, a correspondence ensued between him and the defendant, in which the latter intimated that, as he could not get a lease, he should leave as soon as he could; and he did leave before he had been six months in possession:—Held, that he was not liable to the plaintiff, either in trespass or for use and occupation; and, semble, that he was not liable at all. Sloper v. Saunders, 29 L. J., Ex. 275.

8. After Premises have been Destroyed by Fire.

Generally.]—The landlord of premises demised under a written agreement may recover against his tenant in an action for use and occupation, for the rent accruing after the premises are burnt down, and no longer inhabited by the tenant. Baker v. Holtpzaffell, 4 Taunt. 45; 4 Ves. 115; 13 R. R. 556.

There is no equity in favour of a lessee of a house liable to repair with the exception of damage by fire, for an injunction against an action under the contract for payment of rent, upon the destruction of the house by fire. Ib.

Tenants from year to year occupied a second floor, which, during their occupation, was consumed by an accidental fire:—Held, that, notwithstanding the destruction of the premises, they were liable to an action for use and occupation for the period which had elapsed between the fire and the regular determination of their tenancy. Izon v. Gorton, 5 Bing. (N.C.) 501; 2 Arn. 39; 7 Scott, 537; 8 L. J., C. P. 272; 3 Jur. 653.

Where furnished apartments in a house have been let by verbal contract at a sum payable quarterly, and the premises are destroyed by fire in the middle of the quarter, an action lies for the use and occupation during the current quarter, until the fire, at a rate proportioned to the time of actual occupation, if it appears that both parties have agreed that the occupier's liability does not continue after the occurrence of the fire; for such agreement negatives the supposition of a demise for a certain time, and shews a contract in respect of the occupation de die in diem. Parker v. Gibbins, 1 Q. B. 421; 1 G. & D. 10; 5 Jur. 1036.

A lessee who covenants to pay rent and to repair, with an express exception of casualties by fire, is liable upon the covenant for rent, though the premises are burnt down, and not rebuilt by the lessor after notice. Belfour v. Weston, 1 Term Rep. 310; 1 R. R. 210.

No equity in favour of a lessee of a house liable to repair with the exception of damage by fire, for an injunction against an action under the contract for payment of rent upon the destruction of the house by fire. Holtpzaffell v. Baker, 18 Ves. 115.

Lessee of a house and wharf covenants to repair, accidents by fire excepted. The house is burned down, and the lessor having insured, received the insurance money, but neglected to rebuild, and brought an action at law for the rent. Bill for an injunction, and held proper till the house is rebuilt, but went off on another matter. Brown v. Quilter, Ambl. 619; 2 Eden, 210. But see 1 Sim. 146.

A tenant covenanting to repair, damage by fire only excepted, continues liable to payment of rent notwithstanding the premises are destroyed by fire. Hare v. Groves, 3 Anstr. 687; 4 R. R. 835.

When Tenant liable to reinstate.]—A testator directed his trustees to allow A. to occupy a mill, so long as he should think proper to do so, "he, nevertheless, keeping the premises in good and tenantable repair, and repairing," at a rent of 100*l*. A. accepted the gift, but the premises were afterwards totally destroyed by accidental fire :—Held, that he was bound to reinstate them, and was liable for the rent in the meanwhile, and that he could not escape from the liability to rebuild by declining any longer to retain them. Gregg v. Coates, 23 Beav. 33 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 964 ; 4 W. R. 735.

Letting of Premises and Steam Power—Liability of Tenant.]—The plaintiffs agreed to let and the defendants to take, in consideration of a yearly payment, all the room and power in a mill, except a portion of the premises in which the machinery stood. The agreement provided that the plaintiffs should put in steam pipes, find certain machinery and put the place in tenantable repair, and that the engine should run a certain number of hours a week. The payment was to commence in proportion to the amount of machinery running. During the defendants' occupation the premises were burnt down. The plaintiffs sued for payment for a period after the fire :—Held, that, notwithstanding that the fire had prevented the plaintiffs from performing their part of the agreement in keeping the machinery at work, still the payment sued for was rent, and the defendants were liable. Selby v. Greaves (L. R. 3 C. P. 594) approved. Marshall v. Schofield, 47 L. T. 406 ; 31 W. R. 134—C. A.

Deduction in Rent made.]—By an agreement between F., the receiver appointed in chancery for lands and buildings thereon, and J., it was recited that J. had expended money in improving the premises on the understanding that a lease should be granted to him, on the terms after mentioned, pursuant to a previous agreement with parties at the time interested, in consideration whereof F. had consented to enter into this agreement. And it was witnessed that F., in consideration of the premises, and according to his power, agreed with J. to let to him, and J. agreed to take the land, with the buildings thereon lately converted at J.'s expense into a mill, and other things to hold for twenty-one years, at rent payable quarterly ; and it was agreed that, when that agreement should have been approved of by the court of chancery, or the master, or if it should be ascertained that such sanction was not necessary, a lease should be executed by F. to J. (and a counterpart by J.) under the terms of the agreement stipulated, which should contain covenants on the part of J. to pay the said rent in manner before mentioned, damage by fire excepted ; and that, until the lease should be granted, F. might distrain "for all or any part of the rent hereby agreed to be paid." Provided that the agreement should be in all respects subject to the approbation of the court of chancery or the master, F. undertaking to endeavour to obtain such approbation, but if the approbation were refused, the agreement to be void. J. entered into possession, and erected new buildings :—Held, that J. was tenant from year to year on such terms as would be inserted in a lease pursuant to the agreement so far as they were applicable to a tenancy from year to year. That, if any part of the premises originally demised was destroyed by fire, the result would be, not to destroy or suspend the whole rent, but to entitle J. to a deduction from the rent according to the proportion which the annual value of the destroyed part bore to the annual value of the whole, taking the whole to be the premises as originally demised, not as improved by subsequent additions made by J. Bennett v. Ireland, El. Bl. & El. 326 ; 28 L. J., Q. B. 48 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1104.

9. Eviction and Surrender.

Eviction.]—Where a tenant from year to year, at a rent payable half-yearly, quitted at the end of a current year without giving notice ; and the landlord relet the premises before the end of the next half-year to another tenant :—Held, that the landlord had evicted the first tenant, and could not maintain use and occupation against him for any rent subsequent to the period when he quitted. Hall v. Burgess, 8 D. & R. 67 ; 5 B. & C. 332 ; 4 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 172.

Where premises are let at an entire rent, an eviction from part, if the tenant thereupon gives up possession of the residue, is a complete defence to an action for use and occupation. Smith v. Raleigh, 3 Camp. 513 ; 14 R. R. 829. Newton v. Allin, 1 G. & D. 44 ; 1 Q. B. 518 ; 10 L. J., Q. B. 179 ; 6 Jur. 99.

Where lands have been let to one, who underlets to others, and the latter receive a notice to quit from the original landlord, in consequence of which one of them does so, and the lands occupied by him remain unlet for a year, and are then let by the original tenant, the original landlord cannot recover for the rents of the unoccupied premises ; such circumstances amount to an eviction, and may be pleaded to the whole demand. Burn v. Phelps, 1 Stark. 94 ; 18 R. R. 749.

An eviction by a landlord of his tenant from a part of the demised premises creates a suspension of the entire rent during the continuance of the eviction, but the tenancy is not thereby put an end to, nor is the tenant thereby discharged from the performance of his covenants other than the covenant for the payment of the rent. Morrison v. Chadwick, 7 C. B. 266 ; 6 D. & L. 567 ; 18 L. J., C. P. 189.

To constitute an eviction of a tenant by his landlord, which will operate as a suspension of rent, it is not necessary that there should be an actual physical expulsion from any part of the premises ; but any act of a permanent character, done by the landlord or by his procurement, with the intention of depriving the tenant of the enjoyment of the premises as demised, or any part of them, will operate as such eviction. Upton v. Townend, 17 C. B. 30 ; 25 L. J., C. P. 44 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1089 ; 4 W. R. 56.

The existence of the intention is a question for the jury. Ib.

Where, after a fire on premises let to two different tenants by A., who was entitled to have the premises restored by the superior landlord, out of certain insurance moneys, A. approved of a new plan, submitted to him by the superior landlord without the consent of the tenants, and the premises when rebuilt on that plan, were, in the one case, a little smaller, and in the other a little larger than before, and there was evidence of an intention to oust the tenants :—Held, in an action by A. for use and occupation, for rent accruing after the premises were so far advanced in rebuilding as to be permanently altered, that there was an eviction to which A. was a party, and that, therefore, the rent was suspended. Ib.

The rent of four houses, demised for a term of years, being in arrear, and the lessee having assigned his lease, and two of the houses being unoccupied, the lessor took possession of these two, first by putting a police constable in charge of them, and subsequently by putting a person in possession, under a parol agreement to grant a lease of the four houses as soon as possession of the two others was obtained:—Held, that taking possession of the unoccupied houses did not amount to an eviction. Wheeler v. Steverson, 6 H. & N. 155; 30 L. J., Ex. 46; 3 L. T. 702; 9 W. R. 233.

A lessee of mines of ironstone, coals, and other minerals demised the same for a term of years to the defendant, reserving a royalty upon the ore and coal raised by him, or an annual sum in lieu, if the royalties in any year should not amount to that sum, with power to the lessee to distrain for the rents, reservations and royalties, and with liberty to the defendant, during the demise, to use jointly with the lessee a railway then on the land demised; the defendant covenanting to repair the same or to do so jointly with others who might use it, he having leave to divert it at his own expense if he thought fit:—Held, that the fact that the defendant had been prevented by the plaintiff from using the railway, did not constitute an eviction so as to disentitle the plaintiff to the rent, the use of the railway being an easement, and not part of the demise. Williams v. Hayward, 1 El. & El. 1040; 28 L. J., Q. B. 374; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1417; 7 W. R. 563.

An owner of a house let the first floor to the defendant, who being desirous to underlet, put a man in to show the rooms, and put up a bill in the window, stating that the rooms were to be let. The owner, annoyed by this proceeding, and by the conduct of the man, turned him out of the house, and took the bill down, but left the keys in the rooms. In an action for rent, the judge left it to the jury to say whether the assault upon the man was for the purpose of expelling him, or with the intention of evicting the defendant:—Held, right. Henderson v. Mears, 28 L. J., Q. B. 305; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 709; 7 W. R. 554. S. C., at nisi prius, 1 F. & F. 636.

—— Subsequent Possession.]—If the tenant, after eviction from part, continues in possession of the residue, he is liable upon a quantum meruit. Stokes v. Cooper, 3 Camp. 513, n.

In an action upon a parol demise, a plea that during the term it was agreed that the tenant should relinquish the possession to the landlord for a month, after which the possession should be resumed by the tenant; and that he did relinquish the possession, but the landlord would not restore the possession, is bad, as not showing an eviction or a surrender. Dunn v. Di Nuovo, 3 Man. & G. 105; 3 Scott (N.R.) 487; 10 L. J., C. P. 318.

Surrender.]—A. demised rooms of a house to B. for a year, at a rent payable quarterly. During the current quarter, in consequence of disputes, B. told A. that he would leave; A. assented, and, on B.'s leaving, accepted possession of the rooms:—Held, that A. could recover neither the whole quarter's rent nor rent pro ratâ for occupation for any period short of the quarter. Grimman v. Legge, 8 B. & C. 324; 2 M. & Ry. 438; 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 321.

If a landlord, in the middle of a quarter, accepts from his tenant the key of the house demised, under a parol agreement that, upon her then giving up the possession, the rent shall cease, and she never afterwards occupies the premises, he cannot recover for the time subsequent to his accepting the key. Whitehead v. Clifford, 5 Taunt. 518; 15 R. R. 579.

In an action to recover a quarter's rent for the use and occupation of a house, under the terms of a lease held by the defendant of the plaintiffs, who were joint-tenants of the reversion, it appeared that there had been a concealment, at the time of the execution of the lease, of the fact that arrears of ground-rent and land tax were due upon the premises, and that the supply of water had been cut off, and it also appeared that other disputes had afterwards arisen between the parties:—Held, that the delivery of the key of the street door by the defendant's wife to one of the plaintiffs, and its acceptance by him, was a surrender of the lease by operation of law, there being evidence from which the jury inferred an authority in the wife to act for her husband, and in the plaintiff who received the key to act for his co-tenant; and that such surrender, having been made before the rent sued for had become due, was a good defence to the action Dodd v. Acklom, 6 Man. & G. 672; 7 Scott (N.R.) 415; 13 L. J., C. P. 11; 7 Jur. 1017.

—— Of Part of Premises.]—Semble, a surrender of part of the lands demised by a lease will destroy a power of entry for nonpayment of rent. Mortimer v. Shortall, 1 Con. & L. 417; 2 Dr. & War. 363.

Landlord Advertising Premises to Let.]—In an action for use and occupation of apartments, which the defendant had quitted without giving notice, the plaintiff having put up a bill to let the apartments will not prevent his recovering. Redpath v. Roberts, 3 Esp. 225.

Landlord in Profitable Occupation.] — If a tenant has left a house unoccupied, and the landlord enters and is in the profitable occupation of the house, he cannot recover rent from the tenant for any time after such profitable occupation; but if he merely puts a person into the house to take care of it and prevent depredations, it would be otherwise. Bird v. Defonvilele, 2 Car. & K. 415.

Pleadings—Defence.]—To a declaration by A. against B. for 191*l.* 5*s.*, due for two and a half years' rent under a demise by deed, B. pleaded, as to 40*l.* 10*s.*, that before the making of the deed, A. conveyed parcel of the premises to C. in fee, who devised the same to D., his wife and their heirs; that, after the commencement of the suit, D. and E. gave notice of their title, and required of him payment of such portion of the rent not paid over to the plaintiff at the time of such notice as might, on a just apportionment, be the just proportional part thereof in respect of the parcel of the premises; and D. and E. then gave notice to and threatened B., that, if he should neglect or refuse forthwith to pay over such proportional part to D. and E., they would immediately eject and expel him from the parcel; that 40*l.* 10*s.* was the sum which, upon a just apportionment of the rent, would be and was the proportional part of the rent in respect of the parcel, and was, at the time of the notice, unpaid to A.; that the rent sued for accrued after the death of C.; that if B. had not paid the 40*l.* 10*s.* to D. and E., they would have proceeded to eject the defendant from the parcel of the premises; wherefore B., after the commencement of the suit, necessarily and unavoidably paid them that sum; and that A. never had anything in the parcel of the premises, except as appeared in the plea:—Held, that this was neither a good plea of eviction, the notice being subsequent to the rent becoming due, nor a good plea of payment, inasmuch as the alleged payment was not in satisfaction of any charge upon the land, or of any debt due from A. Boodle v. Cambell, 7 Man. & G. 386; 2 D. & L. 66; 8 Scott (N.R.) 108; 13 L. J., C. P. 142; 8 Jur. 475.

In an action for nonpayment of rent, on an indenture by husband and wife, and under seal of the wife (according to the provisions of 32 Hen. 8, c. 28, s. 3), the declaration stated that the husband and his wife, since deceased, demised the premises to the defendant for twenty-one years, and that he covenanted to pay rent to the husband and wife, and heirs of the wife; that the wife died, and that after her decease, rent became due to her husband: plea, that the husband never had anything in the premises, but in right of his wife, whose estate they were, and that she died before the rent became due, without issue, and that her heir threatened to eject the defendant unless he would attorn and become tenant to him, and that he was accordingly obliged to do so:—Held, that it was not necessary for the defendant to shew actual eviction by the heir, and that the plea was a discharge to the action; on the grounds that the lease was not voidable by the heir, but was a good and subsisting lease, and that he was only entitled to the rent, and could not have entered to evict or eject the defendant without being considered as a trespasser. Hill v. Saunders, 7 D. & R. 17; 4 B. & C. 529; 9 Moore, 238; 2 Bing. 112; 1 Car. & P. 80; 4 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 2; 28 R. R. 375.

In an action by a landlord against his tenant, on a farming lease, assigning breaches on his covenants: — 1, to repair; 2, not to plough meadow land; 3, or depasture orchards; 4, or cut, lop or injure trees, woods or plantations; 5, or assign or underlet the premises, or any part thereof, without the landlord's consent in writing; he pleaded that, before any of the breaches assigned, he was evicted and kept out of part of the demised premises by the authority of the plaintiff:—Held, that the plea afforded no defence to the action. Newton v. Allin, 1 G. & D. 44; 1 Q. B. 518; 10 L. J., Q. B. 179; 6 Jur. 99.

Proof.]—Action for rent on a lease. Plea, that, before the lease was made, P. impleaded the plaintiffs, and had judgment of elegit against their lands; that the inquisition found the plaintiffs seised of the demised premises then leased to B., subject to two mortgages for years; that the sheriff delivered the premises to P., to hold the same till his damages and costs should be levied; that before the rent became due the defendant was evicted by P., who entered, and ejected, expelled, put out and amoved the defendant therefrom, and kept and continued him so ejected; that the sum of 1,000*l.* was still due to P., which was not levied. At the trial the lease, elegit and inquisition was put in, and it was proved that P. had called on the defendant to pay him rent, or he, P., would turn him out; on which the defendant attorned to him without privity of the plaintiffs, his lessors:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover, as P.'s elegit only entitled him to the reversion expectant on the mortgages by the lessors. Poole Corporation v. Whitt, 15 M. & W. 571; 16 L. J., Ex. 229.

Held, also, that the expulsion as pleaded, was not established by the evidence. Ib.

10. Recovery of.

a. By Action.

When Maintainable.]—By a lease it was stipulated that the lessees should be at liberty to retain a rent of 1,100*l.* a year, or any part thereof, upon giving the lessor a bond to pay whatever they so retained, at the end of seventeen years, with interest. The lessees having omitted to pay the rent or give a bond, and the lessor having sued for the rent, the court refused to stay proceedings, on an affidavit, that, since the commencement of the suit, the lessees had executed and tendered to the lessor a bond for the amount retained and to be retained. Jones v. Wingfield, 3 M. & Scott, 846; 10 Bing. 308.

An action lies for rent reserved by indenture, and accruing before a re-entry for a forfeiture, notwithstanding the lessor, under such re-entry, is to have the premises again, "as if the indenture had never been made." Hartshorne v. Watson, 4 Bing. (N.C.) 178; 5 Scott, 506; 6 D. P. C. 404; 1 Arn. 15; 7 L. J., C. P. 138; 2 Jur. 155.

Where premises are demised by indenture at an entire rent, and there is a covenant by the lessee to pay such rent, no action for rent in arrear can be brought on such covenant, unless the lessee has been let into the full possession of the premises demised. Holgate v. Kay, 1 Car. & K. 341.

Where in such an action, the defendant in his plea sets forth the lease, and then avers, that "he entered and was possessed" of the premises thereunder, this will not estop him from proving that, when he entered, he found some part of the premises in the possession of a third party under an adverse title. Ib.

A landlord cannot maintain an action of covenant for rent against an under-tenant. Halford v. Hatch, 1 Dougl. 183. See also cases, col. 902, et seq.

—— Surrender by Operation of Law.]—The right to recover rent accrued due, and which has been reserved on a parol demise, is not extinguished by a surrender of the term by operation of law, notwithstanding the absence of a personal covenant by the tenant to pay such rent, but can be enforced by an action for the use and occupation of the premises demised, under the provisions of s. 14 of 11 Geo. 2, c. 19. Shaw v. Lomas, 59 L. T. 477; 52 J. P. 821.

—— Agreement for Surrender between Lessor and Assignee, saving Rights against Lessee.]—Where a lessor agrees in writing with an assignee of the lease to accept a surrender without prejudice to his rights against the original lessee, and takes actual or constructive possession of the premises, there is a surrender of the lease by operation of law, and the lessor is not entitled to subsequent rent from the original lessee. Clements v. Richardson, 22 L. R. Ir. 535.

—— Under Process of Outlawry—Equitable Relief.]—Under process of outlawry, even in a civil action, the landlord of the defendant is not in strictness entitled to rent by 8 Ann. c. 14, s. 1. The defendant's goods being forfeited in point of law, the landlord's remedy is by motion to the equitable jurisdiction of the court from which the process issues, and not by action against the sheriff. Brandling v. Barrington, 6 B. & C. 467; 5 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 181.

Semble, the court will give relief, by equity of the statute, where the crown is not interested. Ib.

—— By Coparcener.]—One coparcener cannot sue separately for his portion of rents accruing to him and his fellows. Decharms v. Horwood, 4 M. & Scott, 400; 10 Bing. 526; 3 L. J., C. P. 198.

An action will not lie by one of three coparceners to recover his portion of rents of the estate received by an agent, where the agent claims the rents under a devise to himself. Ib.

—— By Grantee under Agreement for Overlease not carried out.]—The defendant having received possession of the premises as tenant for a short period, from trustees of the property, shortly afterwards the trustees entered into a written agreement with the plaintiff, by which, upon the performance of certain conditions, they were to give her a lease of the premises for a long term. This fact was communicated to the defendant; he expressed his satisfaction and the plaintiff's agent made some repairs by his desire. The defendant paid the plaintiff the rent of the running quarter, under a threat of distress; and under a notice, he paid the rent of the ensuing quarter to the trustees. In an action for use and occupation for the quarter's rent thus paid:—Held, that it was competent to the defendant to shew that the agreement for giving the lease was not carried into effect, and consequently that the parties had reverted to their original position, and the plaintiff had no right to receive the rent. Brook v. Biggs, 5 L. J., C. P. 143; 2 Bing. (N.C.) 572; 2 Sc. 803.

—— Against Person Occupying in place of Original Tenant.]—A., the landlord of premises, sued B. as an assignee of a lease, for rent due, with a count for use and occupation. At the trial A. put in the lease, which was a lease to W., who had taken the benefit of the Insolvent Debtors' Act. It was proved that B. had occupied the premises and had treated A. as landlord, and had paid rent to him; but that the lease had never been assigned:—Held, that A. could not recover against B., either for the rent, or for the use and occupation. Hyde v. Moakes, 5 Car. & P. 42.

Ranks as a Specialty.]—Rent arrear, either by deed or parol, ranks as a specialty. Thompson v. Thompson, 9 Price, 471.

Form of Action.]—In debt for rent by the assignee of the lessor, the venue is local, but, in covenant under the same circumstances, it is transitory. Thrale v. Cornwall, 1 Wils. 165.

The assignee of rent may maintain debt for arrears of the rent. Allen v. Bryan, 5 B. & C. 512; 4 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 210; 29 R. R. 307.

Debt lies on an express covenant for payment of a freehold rent charged on land conveyed in fee. Varley v. Leigh, 2 Ex. 446; 17 L. J., Ex. 289.

Pleadings—Claim.]—A declaration for rent stated a demise of a messuage, land and premises, with the appurtenances. The proof was of a demise of a messuage and land, together with the furniture, utensils and implements:—Held, that as the rent issued out of the real property, and not out of the furniture, it was sufficient to allege and prove a demise of the real property, and therefore there was no variance. Farewell v. Dickenson, 6 B. & C. 251; 9 D. & R. 345; 5 L. J. (o.s) K. B. 154.

The proper mode of declaring in an action on a covenant in a lease, is to set out, that by indenture certain premises therein mentioned were demised, without stating them particularly, subject amongst other things to a proviso, setting out the substance of the covenant and the breach. Dundas v. Weymouth (Lord), Cowp. 665.

A declaration at the suit of the executor of a termor, for a breach of covenant after the death of the termor, should state the interest and title of the latter in the premises. Mackay v. Mackreth, 2 Chit. 461; 4 Dougl. 213.

A declaration for rent, by the assignee of a reversion for the life of a third person against the assignee of the term omitted to aver that the cestui que vie was living when the rent accrued due:—Held, that the continuance of the life was not to be implied from the mere assertion of title, and an averment in the breach, that, "after the plaintiff became so seised the rent became due, and still is in arrear to the plaintiff"; was insufficient, and that the declaration was bad on general demurrer. Fryer v. Coombs, 4 P. & D. 120, n.; 11 A. & E. 403.

In covenant for rent by a devisee against the assignee on a lease by the testator, the declaration alleged generally that the testator was seised, but did not say of what estate. On motion in arrest of judgment:—Held, that the ambiguity was cured by the verdict. Harris v. Beavan, 4 Bing. 640; 1 M. & P. 633; 6 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 149.

—— Defence.]—In an action on a covenant for seven quarters' rent, a plea shewing a surrender before the last four of the seven quarters' rent accrued, is bad on demurrer, because it does not go to the whole breach, and the breach is not entire, but part of it may be proved. Barnard v. Duthy, 5 Taunt. 27.

In an action for nonpayment of rent, on an indenture by assignee of the lessor against the lessee, the declaration alleged that the lessor was possessed for the remainder of a term of 22 years, commencing from the 25th December, 1797, and that, on the 7th of March, 1811, he, by indenture, demised to the defendant to hold from the 20th of December then last past. Plea, that the lessor was not at the time of making the indenture possessed for the residue of the term as alleged:—Held, that such plea was good on general demurrer, as the averment in the declaration was material and traversable. Carrick v. Blagrave, 4 Moore, 303; 1 Br. & B. 531; 21 R. R. 710.

If both lessee and lessor sign a lease, the former is estopped to plead nil habuit in tenementis to an action of debt for rent by the lessor. Wilkins v. Wingate, 6 Term Rep. 62.

In an action for rent on an indenture brought by the assignees of the lessor (a bankrupt), the lessee cannot plead that the lessor nil habuit in tenementis. Parker v. Manning, 7 Term Rep. 537.

The plaintiff in 1887 granted a lease of certain premises to the defendant. The premises had belonged to the plaintiff since 1884. In 1885 the plaintiff was adjudicated a bankrupt, and his discharge was granted conditionally upon his paying his creditors 5*s.* in the pound, which had not been paid. The plaintiff sued the defendant for arrears of rent under the lease, and the defendant applied that the trustee in bankruptcy should be joined as a plaintiff:—Held, that the defendant was estopped from setting up the plaintiff's bankruptcy. Cook v. Whellock, 59 L. J., Q. B. 329; 24 Q. B. D. 658; 62 L. T. 675; 38 W. R. 534—C. A.

Riens in arrere is a good plea to an action of debt for rent. Warner v. Theobald, Cowp. 588.

If one is sued for rent he cannot, under a plea of never indebted, avail himself of a part payment of money obtained under a distress, or of a judgment obtained against him in a county court for part of the same rent. Harmer v. Bean, 3 Car. & K. 307.

A declaration alleged a demise to the defendant of a messuage for forty-five years, at a rent payable quarterly, and averred that two years and a quarter's rent was due. Plea, that before that rent became due, it was agreed that the defendant should deliver up the messuage, and that, in consideration thereof, the defendant should be discharged from all liability to pay the rent which should subsequently accrue; that the defendant did deliver up the premises, and that the plaintiff accepted the possession thereof, and that the tenancy, and the defendant's interest in the premises, were thereby then surrendered and extinguished:—Held, after verdict, that the plea did not set up a surrender of the tenancy, but afforded a valid excuse for the nonpayment of the rent. Gore v. Wright, 3 N. & P. 243; 8 Ad. & E. 118; 1 W. W. & H. 266; 7 L. J., Q. B. 147; 2 Jur. 840.

If a lessor has no title, and the lessee is evicted by title paramount, he may plead that as a defence to an action by the lessor. Cuthbertson v. Irving, 6 H. & N. 135; 29 L. J., Ex. 485; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1211; 3 L. T. 335; 8 W. R. 704—Ex. Ch.

Action for 163*l.* 16*s.* for fifty-two weeks' rent on a parol demise for twelve months, from 25th of February, 1839 (Monday), at 3*l.* 3*s.* per week. A plea, as to so much of the rent as accrued due before and on the 27th of July, 1839 (Saturday), of payment and acceptance in satisfaction, is bad, as no weekly rent could have become due on the latter day, and no apportionment of the rent for the fraction of a week was shewn. Dunn v. Di Nuovo, 3 Man. & G. 105; 3 Scott (N.R.) 487; 10 L. J., C. P. 318.

Semble, in an action for rent it is no answer that the landlord has distrained goods for it to the full value of the rent, if he has sold them for a less sum. If he has sold them at too low a price, the tenant's remedy is by action. Efford v. Burgess, 2 M. & M. 23.

Furnished Houses.]—See post, cols. 1281, et seq.

Suit in Equity.]—Bill may be brought in equity for rent, when the remedy at law is lost or becomes very difficult; and the court will relieve, on the foundation of payment for a length of time. Benson v. Baldwyn, 1 Atk. 598.

The court will not make an order upon a tenant to pay rent in arrear, though a receiver of the estate has been appointed. Samuel v. ——, 1 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 90.

As to whether a bill in equity, to enforce payment of a rent or annuity, is sustainable. See Williams v. Brown, C. P. Cooper, 360.

Bill for specific performance of agreement to take lease, and action for rent of occupation, not allowed at the same time. On motion, court will order rent to be paid. Carrick v. Young, 4 Madd. 437.

Where a landlord has a remedy by distress, either nonpayment of rent or a penalty, equity will not interfere to assist him, unless some fraud be proved. Doneraile v. Charters, 1 Ridgw. P. C. 135.

Lease of a coal mine to A. reserving a rent; A., the lessee, declares himself a trustee for five persons, to each a fifth: the five partners enter upon work and take the profits of the mine, which afterwards becomes unprofitable, and the lessee insolvent; the cestui que trusts not liable, but for the time during which they took the profits. Clavering v. Westley, 3 P. W. 402.

In pursuance of an arrangement made on behalf of a company with certain persons to purchase the beneficial interest in a colliery lease agreed to be granted to them for a term of forty years, a lease was granted in March, 1842, to three persons, as trustees for the company, for a period of forty years, at a fixed rent, together with a royalty. The lease contained a stipulation enabling the lessees, at the end of any period of three years from its commencement, to determine the lease by giving twelve months' notice. The company entered into possession in December, 1841, and remained in such possession till November, 1842, when the working proving unprofitable, was abandoned, and never afterwards resumed. In January, 1850, the company was dissolved, and its affairs ordered to be wound up under the provisions of the Winding-up Acts. The lessor became bankrupt in August, 1853. Some time prior to his bankruptcy his interest in the mine became vested in the plaintiff. In May, 1852, the official manager of the company under protest that the lease was not binding on the company gave notice to terminate the lease on the 31st of May following, when one of the triennial periods expired. On the 23rd February, 1853, the plaintiff filed his bill against the official manager, praying a declaration that the company had accepted the lease, and was bound thereby, and that the official manager might be ordered to pay the arrears of the stipulated rent since March, 1842, together with compensation for all breaches of covenant:—Held, that no relief in the nature of specific performance, nor any equitable relief, could be granted either against the persons to whom the demise was made, or against the company in respect of their occupation, the rights of the plaintiff, if any, being legal. Walters v. Northern Coal Mining Co., 5 De G. M. & G. 629; 25 L. J., Ch. 633; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1; 4 W. R. 140.

The case of Clavering v. Westley (3 P. Wms. 402), so far as it might be an authority for the recovery of rent as an equitable debt, disapproved of. Ib.

—— For Rent accrued before Defendant came into Possession.]—On application to put plaintiff to his election, leave was given to make a special election to proceed in this court for the two years' rent in question, accrued due before defendant came into possession, and at law for the rent accrued due in defendant's own time. Joyce v Barker, Dick. 182.

—— Rent Payable to two Persons Successively — Action for Account, by Person last Entitled—Parties.]—A. was entitled to rents up to a certain time, and B. was entitled to them subsequently. B. filed a bill for an account of the rents for the whole period, alleging that he had satisfied all A.'s claims out of his own moneys, but did not make A. a party:—Held, that A. was a necessary party. Att.-Gen. v. Pearson, 7 Sim. 290.

11. Payment of Rent.

a. Generally.

When Payable.]—The plaintiff and defendant agreed that the plaintiff should let, and the defendant take, premises, subject to the approval by the superior landlord of the lease; that the plaintiff should forthwith apply to the superior landlord for a licence to demise, and for the defendant to carry on a certain trade, and that the defendant, "until the lease should be granted, should hold and occupy the premises at the annual rent of 130*l.*":—Held, that the rent was not payable until the required consent had been obtained. Brook v. Fletcher, 37 L. T. 100.

Under Protest.]—When money is paid and received as rent under a lease, a mere protest that it is accepted conditionally and without prejudice to the right to insist upon a prior forfeiture cannot countervail the fact of such receipt. Davenport v. Reg., 47 L. J., P. C. 8; 3 App. Cas. 115; 37 L. T. 727.

When Good.]—B., having leased his land to the plaintiff at a rent payable quarterly, subsequently mortgaged the land to the defendant, who allowed B. to remain in receipt of the rent. Subsequently to the mortgage, B. applied to the plaintiff, who was not aware of the mortgage, to pay him a year's rent in advance, and the plaintiff did so. After the payment, and before the rent had become due, the defendant gave notice to the plaintiff to pay the rent to him, and the plaintiff refusing to pay it, the defendant distrained for it:—Held, that payment of the rent before it became due was not a good payment as against the mortgagee, and that the plaintiff was still liable to pay him the rent. De Nicols v. Saunders, 39 L. J., C. P. 297; L. R. 5 C. P. 589; 22 L. T. 661; 18 W. R. 1106.

In Priority.]—The estate of a deceased lessee which was being administered by the court was indebted to the lessor in 210*l.* for rent secured by covenant in the ordinary way:—Held, that the lessor was not entitled, since 38 & 39 Vict. c. 46, to be paid in priority to other creditors. Sherreff v. Hastings, 47 L. J., Ch. 137; 6 Ch. D. 610; 25 W. R. 842.

Where sequestrators seized, under the writ, the issues and profits of the lands before the second gale of rent became due to the head landlord, but the two gales were due before accounting:—Held, that the landlord was entitled in the first instance to the two gales out of the funds. Stafford v. Stafford, 7 Ir. Eq. R. 197.

Under sequestration landlord is entitled to be paid the arrears of rent without a reference to master. Dixon v. Smith, 1 Swanst. 457.

The sheriff of S., having in his hands a sum of 35*l.*, which he had reserved for rent due to the landlord out of moneys levied under a fi. fa. issued against a tenant of the property in dispute in the cause, over which a receiver was appointed, moved that an action brought against him by the plaintiff in the cause for the money might be stayed, on the sheriff paying the 35*l.* into court. The motion was refused with costs. Trye v. Trye, 20 L. J., Ch. 368; 15 Jur. 809.

A receiver in a legatee's suit advertised furniture, in a leasehold house, for sale. The superior landlord claimed rent, but took no other steps, and the furniture was sold:—Held, that the landlord had no lien on the proceeds of the sale, but must come in with the other creditors. Sutton, In re, Sutton v. Rees, 32 L. J., Ch. 437; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 456; 11 W. R. 413.

Where bankrupt's goods are sold under commission, landlord can only come in pro ratâ with other creditors for his rent due. Anon., 1 Atk. 102. S. P., Descharmes, Ex parte, Id. 103.

Mortgagee, who has paid arrears of rent on bankrupt's estate, unless he has an order to stand in landlord's place, shall not be preferred to the creditors under the commission. Anon., 1 Atk. 103.

An equitable mortgagee of leasehold property must satisfy a distress for rent out of the proceeds of the sale, and can only prove for the deficiency, although occasioned by the payment of the rent. Cocks, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & C. 8.

By Sheriff under Executions.]—The 8 Ann. c. 14, s. 1, applies only to a case where there is a subsisting tenancy; and therefore, where the sheriff seizes goods after the tenancy has been determined, he will not be liable to an action for selling the goods upon the land without paying over a year's arrears of rent to the landlord. Cox v. Leigh, 43 L. J., Q. B. 123; L. R. 9 Q. B. 333; 30 L. T. 494; 22 W. R. 730.

To whom.]—One of several joint-tenants may demand and receive the whole rent due, and give a discharge for it, and such a discharge is good and binding on his companions. Robinson v. Hoffman, 1 M. & P. 474; 4 Bing. 562; 3 Car. & P. 234; 6 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 113; 29 R. R. 627.

Extinguishment of Claim.]—On the trial of an ejectment in 1835, between landlord and tenant, a verdict was taken by consent for the plaintiff, it being then agreed that the defendant "is not to be called upon for any rent now due." The defendant had, with another person, given a promissory note to his landlord, to secure the payment of a half-year's rent due at Lady-day, 1834:—Held, that this agreement extinguished the landlord's claim on the note. Howell v. Lewis, 7 Car. & P. 566.

Effect of Payment and Receipt.]—Submitting to a distress or paying rent is only a primâ facie evidence of a landlord's title as against a tenant. Cox v. Knight, 18 C. B. 645; 25 L. J., C. P. 314.

Where the only evidence of a tenancy is payment of rent, the person paying is in all cases at liberty to explain the payment and to shew on whose behalf it was received. Doe d. Harvey v. Francis, 2 M. & Rob. 57.

Where payment of rent unexplained would ordinarily imply a yearly tenancy, it is open to the payer or receiver of such rent to prove the circumstances under which such payment was made, for the purpose of repelling such implication. Doe d. Lord v. Crago, 6 C. B. 90; 17 L. J., C. P. 263; 12 Jur. 705. S. P. Hurley v. Hanrahan, 15 W. R. 990.

In an action by overseers for use and occupation, and for rent of parish lands, evidence that the defendant and his ancestors had for upwards of a century, up to the last ten years, paid rent for the land as "common land" (he refusing to produce the deeds under which he professed to hold), is sufficient evidence to go to the jury in the absence of any evidence that the payments were made by way of chief rent or rent-charge. Harden v. Hesketh, 28 L. J., Ex. 137; 4 H. & N. 175; 7 W. R. 186.

The receipt of rent is no waiver of a continuing breach of covenant. Doe d. Batter or Baker v. Jones, 5 Ex. 498; 19 L. J., Ex. 405.

In 1635 the Earl of Pembroke became tenant, either at will or from year to year, of six acres and a half of charity lands lying interspersed within his Roehampton estate, for which 6*l.* per annum had ever since been paid. In course of time this estate became split up into several portions, passing into the hands of new purchasers from time to time. From recitals in early conveyances it appeared that the whole estate was treated as subject to this charge of 6*l.* per annum; together with three other perpetual charges of 40*l.*, 10*l.* and 1*l.* per annum. According as parts of the estate were sold off, those parts were exonerated from these charges, until at last the mansion-house and thirty-one acres of the estate, the property of the defendant, alone remained charged therewith. The defendant and his ancestor had paid this 6*l.* per annum for many years. Upon an information by the trustees of the charity for a commission to mark out the boundaries of the six acres and a half:—Held, that although the defendant had for a long series of years paid the 6*l.* to the parish, upon receipts purporting to be for rent of parish land, he was not precluded from saying that he did not hold the land; and that he was at liberty to refer to his title deeds to shew the animus solventis, and to rebut the entries in the parish books, which were relied on to shew that he had by his payments admitted himself to be an occupier of parish land. Att.-Gen. v. Stephens, 6 De G. M. & G. 111; 25 L. J., Ch. 888; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 51; 4 W. R. 191.

—— By Mistake.]—A payment of rent by mistake or misrepresentation to a person not entitled to demand it, does not preclude the tenant from shewing that the person to whom it was paid was not entitled to it. Rogers v. Pitcher, 1 Marsh. 541; 6 Taunt. 202.

Evidence as to Title.]—The payment of rent by a tenant to an authorised agent, who pays over the rent to his principal, is evidence as against the tenant of the principal's title, although the agent do not disclose his principal's name at the time. Hitchings v. Thompson, 5 Ex. 50; 19 L. J., Ex. 146.

The plaintiffs were children of L. The tenant paid rents to an agent of the family, who gave a receipt "on account of the family of the late Mrs. L.":—Held, that this was evidence of a joint letting, and of a tenancy to them jointly. Last v. Dinn, 28 L. J., Ex. 94.

Payment of rent is primâ facie evidence of title in the landlord. Doe d. Clun v. Clarke, Peake, Ad. C. 239.

Authority to Receive.]—B. leased a farm to A. for fourteen years by deed, reserving rent payable quarterly. The lease contained various clauses by which A. and B. agreed to do certain things, and concluded with the following clause: "And the landlord further agrees and orders that K., or his appointed agent, is to receive all rents from the tenant at all times when it becomes due during the term thereby granted, and his receipt to be a full and sufficient discharge from all liability":—Held, that K., having no interest in the rent, the agreement or authority for him to receive it was revocable. Venning v. Bray, 2 B. & S. 502; 31 L. J., Q. B. 181; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1039; 6 L. T. 327; 10 W. R. 561.

Tender of Rent.]—The plaintiff tendered rent to the defendants, his landlords, with the words, "Here is your quarter's rent":—Held, that this did not require the landlord to make any admission as to the amount due, as a condition of its receipt, and was therefore a good tender. Jones v. Bridgman, 39 L. T. 500.

Lessee must Tender.]—A covenant for the payment of rent, at a specified time, when no particular place of payment is mentioned, is analogous to a covenant to pay a sum of money in gross on a day certain, and it is accordingly incumbent on the covenantor to seek out the person to be paid, and pay or tender him the money. Haldane v. Johnson, 8 Ex. 689; 22 L. J., Ex. 264; 17 Jur. 937.

By advancing Money to a Firm of which Lessor is a Member.]—A tenant having made payments to his landlord, and also advances at his request to a firm of which he was a member, on account (as the tenant alleged) of rent not then due:—Held, that if the advances were made on account of the rent, they were an answer to an action for the rent by the landlord's executors. Nash v. Gray, 2 F. & F. 391.

b. Salvage Payments.

First Charge on Estate.]—A tenant for life of a leasehold estate purchased a mortgage affecting the inheritance, and assigned same to the plaintiff as a security for moneys advanced. The head rent of the property having fallen into arrear, the plaintiff, at the instance of the tenant for life, paid what was required to preserve the interest from being evicted, and subsequently, upon the accruing of another arrear of head rent, made a further advance for the same purpose:—Held, that the plaintiff, in respect of such payments, was to be regarded as a salvage creditor, and entitled as such to the first charge upon the estate. Hill v. Browne, Dr. 426; 6 Ir. Eq. R. 403.

A sub-tenant, having redeemed his landlord's interest by advances for head rent, filed a bill for the sale of that interest, and subsequently made further advances for the same purpose:—Held, that these advances were the first charge on the mesne landlord's interest in priority to incumbrancers prior in date, and that the salvagor was entitled to a sale for payment. Locke v. Evans, 11 Ir. Eq. R. 52.

Mortgage to Person Making—Priority to other Incumbrance.]—A devised fee-farm lands to B., subject to a charge of 1,500*l.* for his daughter; B. mortgaged the lands in trust for the landlord, and to secure an arrear of rent, part of which had accrued due in the lifetime of A. On a bill filed for sale of the mortgaged lands:—Held, that as so much of the mortgage as was for rent due in the lifetime of the testator, the mortgage was prior to the charge of 1,500*l.*, being for the security of the common fund. Brice v. Williams, Wall. Lyn. 325.

An incumbrancer agreed to advance a sum of of money to preserve the lands of K. from eviction for nonpayment of rent; and took a security by deed affecting the lands of K. and other lands, for the repayment of the money so to be advanced. She afterwards paid the rent, and redeemed the lands of K.:—Held, that, under the circumstances, she was entitled, as against a person who was an incumbrancer on the lands at the time when they were redeemed, to be paid the sum advanced, in priority; and that, as full effect could not be given to her security by deed, she was remitted to her lien. Kehoe v. Hales, 5 Ir. Eq. R. 27.

Voluntary Conveyance to Person Making—Right to Repudiate Conveyance and Claim as Incumbrancer.]—A. devised certain freehold lands, held by a lease of lives renewable to C. and G., and directed in what proportions they should pay the head rent; C. suffered a judgment to be entered against him, and allowed an arrear of head rent and renewal fines to accrue in respect of his share, and then by a voluntary deed conveyed the share to G., who paid off the arrears of rent and fines, and entered into possession of C.'s share. On a bill filed by the judgment creditor:—Held, that G. was not entitled to repudiate the conveyance as an absolute sale to him, and to claim as an incumbrancer against the estate the amount of the fines and rents so paid by him, but that he was a purchaser thereof, and a sale was decreed against him. Barker v. Roe, 1 Longf. & T. 655; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 692.

By Person having no Interest in the Premises.]—A. being lessee of certain lands under a lease containing the ordinary covenants by him as lessee for payment of rent, and a condition of re-entry in case of nonpayment, assigned his interest under lease to B., who covenanted with A. to pay the rent and to keep him indemnified against it. B. mortgaged the premises comprised in the lease to C. by way of subdemise. Arrears of rent became due which the lessor compelled A. to pay under the covenant in the lease. In an action against B. and C., A. sought for a declaration that the sum so paid by him for rent was a salvage payment, and was charged on the premises in priority to C.'s mortgage:—Held, that A. had no interest in the premises authorising him to make a salvage payment, and that therefore he had no lien on the premises for the rent so paid by him. O'Loughlin v. Dwyer, 13 L. R., Ir. 75.

Priority of Annuities Charged on Lease.]—B. N. having an interest in lands, which he held, subject to head rents, under the see of Kilmore, for terms of years, renewable periodically on the payment of fines, granted underleases at certain annual rents, and subject to fines for renewal; and he covenanted with the sub-lessees to renew the underleases as often as he should obtain renewals from the see of Kilmore, the sub-lessees paying all head rents and renewal fines. The interest in these underleases vested in R., who assigned and conveyed to a trustee his interest in the terms, together with other lands, to secure the payment of annuities which he had granted to E. The trust as to the leases was first to pay the rents and fines, and then the annuities. The interest of B. N. in the leaseholds was mortgaged and sold under a decree of foreclosure, and finally assigned to H., in August, 1814. In September, 1814, the interest of R. in the underleases was assigned to H., as purchaser under a commission of bankruptcy. In 1815 the annuitants filed a bill praying a sale of the lands charged with the annuities, and payment, subject only to the head rents; and afterwards, upon discovery that the leases had expired, a supplemental bill was filed against H., praying that they might be renewed upon reasonable terms. Upon a reference under the decree, the master having found that the rents and fines were paid by H. and the lessees under the see for renewals, his report was in this respect overruled by the court, upon exceptions; and upon a second report, the court below held that the annuities were a charge prior to the fines. In such a case, the covenant does not run with the land, but is personal, and the right under the lease, to deduct the rent and fines, is not merged by the union of the principal and underleases in the same person. Haig v. Homan, 4 Bligh (N.S.) 380.

12. Set-off Against Rent.

Payment of Ground Rent.]—A payment of ground rent by the occupier, in default of the mesne tenant, will operate as a discharge of the growing rent as well as of the rent actually due. Carter v. Carter, 5 Bing. 406; 2 M. & P. 723; 7 L. J. (O.S) C. P. 141; 30 R. R. 677.

To an avowry for rent, the tenant may plead payment of a ground rent to the original landlord. Sapsford v. Fletcher, 4 Term Rep. 511.

To an avowry for rent a plea in bar of payment to a ground landlord or other incumbrancer amounts to a plea of riens in arrere, and should be so pleaded. Jones v. Morris, 3 Ex. 742; 18 L. J., Ex. 477.

Payment of Rent-charge in Lieu of Tithes—Effect of Agreement for Lease.]—Where in an agreement between defendant and D., under which defendant entered upon D.'s land, D. then being lessee of a part of the great tithes on the land demised, it was agreed that defendant should pay 375*l.* yearly rent, and all rates, taxes and assessments, and also the vicarial tithes:—Held, that defendant, in an action for rent by plaintiff, who had purchased the demised farm from D., was not entitled under 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, s. 80, to set-off a payment made by him to a bishop on account of rent-charge in lieu of tithes, after the lease of the tithes to D. had expired; the agreement contained nothing to shew that the land was demised by D. free of rectorial tithes, although it did contain the stipulation that defendant should pay the vicarial tithes, and although defendant had never paid anything by way of tithes to D. or to plaintiff. Forbes v. Elderfield, 4 W. R. 15.

Payment of Annuity.]—So, to an avowry for rent, the plaintiff in replevin may plead payment of an annuity, secured out of the lands demised previously to their demise to him, for the arrears of which the grantee of the annuity threatened to distrain. Taylor v. Zamira, 2 Marsh. 220; 6 Taunt. 524; 16 R. R. 668.

Payment of other Charges.]—In an action on a covenant for rent, the defendant pleaded that he was under-tenant of parcel of certain premises for the whole of which the plaintiff, his lessor, covenanted to pay rent to the landlord paramount, and shewed that he, the defendant, paid to the landlord paramount, under threat of distress, more rent than he owed to the plaintiff; the plaintiff traversed that any rent was due from himself to the landlord paramount:—Held, that this replication was not supported by proving that the plaintiff assigned his term in the residue of the premises to K., who assigned them to the defendant, who covenanted to pay in discharge of the plaintiff the whole rent reserved to the landlord paramount. Sturgess v. Farrington, 4 Taunt. 614.

A plaintiff in replevin cannot plead in bar a set-off to an avowry for rent. Laycock v. Tuffnell, 2 Chit. 531.

If a tenant, with the assent of his landlord, pays interest upon a mortgage charged on the premises demised, it is equivalent to a payment of rent pro tanto. Dyer v. Bowley, 9 Moore, 196; 2 Bing. 94.

To an avowry of a distress for rent, the plaintiff pleaded that, before the defendant had any interest in the premises they were mortgaged in fee; that the mortgagor remained in possession, and demised to the defendant; that the defendant, the mortgage-money being still due, demised to the plaintiff; that afterwards, the mortgage-money being still due, and interest thereon, and 14*l.* avowed for by the defendant, being also in arrear, the mortgagee gave notice to the plaintiff to pay the 14*l.* to him, instead of the defendant, and threatened, in case of nonpayment, to put the law in force, and was then about to put the law in force, wherefore the plaintiff necessarily paid that sum to the mortgagee, and so the said sum was not in arrear:—Held, that the plea was good, being a plea of payment, and not of nil habuit in tenementis. Johnson v. Jones, 1 P & D. 651; 9 A & E. 809; 8 L. J., Q. B. 124.

On a bill in equity for an injunction to restrain proceedings at law for rent, on the ground of an agreement under which the landlord was indebted more than the amount of the rent:—Held, that it was a legal set-off. Townrow v. Benson, 3 Madd. 203.

A. rented land of B., who was trustee of property (a part of which was this land), the rents of which B. was to pay in certain shares: one of those shares belonged to the wife of A.; B. had in his hands a greater amount due to A. in right of his wife than the rent amounted to:—Held, that this could not be set off against the rent without a special agreement to that effect. Wilson v. Davenport, 5 Car. & P. 531.

Where a tenant of leaseholds who had paid certain rents to one of the persons beneficially entitled thereto, filed a bill against the landlord, claiming to set off such payments and a private debt due from the landlord, against the rent due to the landlord as trustee, a demurrer for want of equity was allowed. Pratt v. Keith, 33 L. J., Ch. 528; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 305; 10 L. T. 15; 12 W. R. 394; 3 N. R. 264.

To an action for two and a half years' rent, a plea, that, before the premises were demised to the defendant by the plaintiff, the plaintiff conveyed all her interest therein to A.; that the plaintiff, up to the time of the demise, was in possession of the premises; that, after the commencement of the suit, A. gave notice to the defendant, and demanded payment of such portion of the rent reserved as might, on a just apportionment, be found due, and threatened the defendant, in case of nonpayment, to eject him, and put the law in force; that 40*l.* 10*s.* was the sum due on a just apportionment, wherefore the defendant paid the same to A., is bad, as a plea of payment, inasmuch as the alleged payment was not in satisfaction of any charge upon the land or of any debt due from A. Boodle v. Cambell, 8 Scott (N.R.) 104; 2 D. & L. 66; 7 Man. & G. 386; 13 L. J., C. P. 142; 8 Jur. 475.

In 1840 A. being lessee of a warehouse and cellar, under a demise from B., and also lessee, under C. of other adjoining property, comprising a vault, D. became tenant from year to year to A. of the warehouse and cellar, and the vault, at an annual rent of 185*l.*, made up of 140*l.* for the warehouse and cellar, and 45*l.* for the vault. On the 27th October, 1845, A. became bankrupt, 92*l.* 10*s.* being at that time due as rent from D. to A. His assignees, upon being appointed, elected to take the property held under B., and on 26th of February, 1846, elected not to take the property held under C. At Christmas, 1845, rent to the amount of 114*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.* became due from A. to C., for which amount, on the 19th February, 1846, C. distrained upon the goods in the vault, held by D., who, to relieve himself of that distress, paid that sum to C. An action having subsequently been brought by the assignees of A. against D. to recover the 92*l.* 10*s.*, and also 35*l.* for a quarter's rent, due at Christmas, 1845, for the warehouse and cellar:—Held, that D. was not entitled in such action to avail himself of the payment of 114*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.*, made by him to C. Graham v. Allsopp, 3 Ex. 186; 18 L. J., Ex. 85.

Possession by Landlord for Part of Term—Mesne Profits.]—The defendant, who held lands from the plaintiff, under a lease for an unexpired term, at a reserved rent of 205*l.* yearly, was evicted for nonpayment of a year's rent due up to the 25th March, 1887. The plaintiff went into possession, and so continued from 23rd of August to 27th September, in the same year, when the defendant paid to the plaintiff the year's rent, and was restored to possession, no account for mesne profits being claimed. This transaction took place at the especial request of the defendant, to enable him to serve an originating notice to fix a fair rent before the 29th September. In a subsequent action by the plaintiff to recover possession for nonpayment of a year's rent, due the 25th March, 1888, the defendant pleaded a set-off of the value of the profits received by the plaintiff while in possession, and which were assessed by the jury at the trial at 34*l.*, and the defendant's counsel called upon the judge to direct a verdict for him, on the grounds—1st, that the rent was suspended during the period the plaintiff was in possession; 2ndly, that the set-off of 34*l.* reduced the arrears below one year's rent. The judge having refused to do so, and directed a verdict for the plaintiff in possession:—Held that this direction was right. Wilson v. Burne, 24 L. R., Ir. 14—C. A.

Deduction of Rates and Taxes.]—See post, M. 6, (cols. 1168, et seq.)

—— Upon original or improved Rent.]—A. demised land to B. upon a building lease, at the yearly rent of 60*l.* clear of all rates, assessments, &c., the sewers-rate, land-tax, and landlord's property or income-tax only excepted, with the usual covenants for the payment of rent, &c. B. having by building on the land increased its rateable value to 300*l.* per annum :—Held, that he was only entitled to deduct the sewers-rate and land-tax upon the original rent, and not upon the improved value. Smith v. Humble, 15 C. B. 321 ; 3 C. L. R. 225.

Covenant that Lessee retain Rent in Satisfaction of Debt due from Lessor—Specific Bequest of Premises by Lessee—Rights of Executors and Specific Legatees.]—By a deed of even date with a lease, the lessor covenanted that the lessee should retain part of each year's rent until satisfaction of a debt due from the lessor to the lessee :—Held, that though the covenant might be pleaded at law as a release pro tanto of the rent, this was only to avoid circuity of action, and the covenant was not for all purposes a release. Ledger v. Stanton, 2 John. & H. 687 ; 9 W. R. 848.

Therefore, the lessee having specifically bequeathed the premises subject to the rent :—Held, as between the executors and the specific legatees, that specific legatees took subject to the whole rent, and that the benefit of the covenant for reduction of rent went to the executors. Ib.

13. Double Rent.

Holding over after Notice.]—In an action for double rent, for holding over after notice, the jury may find for so much as the tenant appears to have overheld, without reference to the sum demanded, so that it is not more than that sum. Anon., Lofft, 275.

Though a demise is for a certain time, a demand of possession and notice in writing are necessary to entitle the landlord to double rent or value ; but such demand may be made above six weeks afterwards, if the landlord has done no act in the meantime to acknowledge the continuation of the tenancy : and if the tenant holds over, he will be entitled to double value from the time of such demand : but if the rent is reserved quarterly, and the demand is made in the middle of a quarter, the landlord cannot recover single rent for the antecedent fraction of such quarter. Cobb v. Stokes, 8 East, 358 ; 9 R. R. 464. And see Lake v. Smith, 1 Bos. & P. (N.R.) 174 ; and Wilkinson v. Colley, 5 Burr. 2694.

11 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 18, only applies to those cases where the tenant has the power of determining his tenancy by a notice, and where he has actually given a valid notice sufficient to determine such tenancy. Johnstone v. Huddleston, 7 D. & R. 411 ; 4 B. & C. 922 ; 4 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 71 ; 28 R. R. 505.

A tenant who, after having given notice to quit, holds over for a year, paying double rent, may quit at the end of such year without fresh notice. Booth v. Macfarlane, 1 B. & Ad. 904 ; 9 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 161.

If a landlord gives notice to his tenant to quit at the expiration of the lease, and the tenant holds over, he is liable to double rent. Messenger v. Armstrong, 1 Term Rep. 53 ; 1 R. R. 148.

When a tenant holds over after the expiration of a notice to quit, the landlord is entitled to recover against him the reasonable damages and costs sustained by him in an action at the suit of a party to whom he had contracted to let the premises, but to whom the tenant's wrongful act had prevented him from delivering possession. Bramley v. Chesterton, 2 C. B. (N.S.) 592 ; 27 L. J., C. P. 23 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1144 ; 5 W. R. 690.

Notice to Quit on Contingency which happens.]—If a tenant from year to year gives his landlord notice that he will quit upon a contingency, and does not quit when the contingency happens, he is not liable for double rent. Farrance v. Elkington, 2 Camp. 591 ; 11 R. R. 807.

14. Double Value.

By whom Recoverable.] — The remedy for double value, conferred by 4 Geo. 2, c. 18, s. 1, against a tenant wilfully holding over after the determination of the term, and after demand and notice in writing, is given only to the lessor or landlord, or to the person entitled to the reversion, and not to one to whom the landlord has granted a fresh lease, to commence from the expiration of the former term ; such new lessee having no estate, but a mere interesse termini. Blatchford v. Cole, 5 C. B. (N.S.) 514 ; 28 L. J., C. P. 140 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 412.

One tenant in common may bring an action for the double value of his moiety. Cutting v. Derby, 2 W. Bl. 1077.

But tenants in common cannot sue jointly for double value for holding over, where there has been no joint demise. Wilkinson v. Hall, 1 Scott, 675 ; 1 Bing. (N.C.) 713 ; 1 Hodges, 170 ; 6 L. J., C. P. 82.

The administratrix of an executor cannot sue for the double value of lands held over, after notice to quit under a demise from the testator, without taking out administration de bonis non ; even though the tenant has attorned to her. Tingrey v. Brown, 1 Bos. & P. 310 ; 4 R. R. 805.

In an action for double value the declaration stated that the plaintiffs were seised in their demesne as of freehold in right of the plaintiff, Caroline, during her life, of a messuage held by the defendant as tenant to the plaintiffs for a year, terminable on the 11th of October, 1844, the reversion thereof belonging to the plaintiffs, in right of Caroline. That the plaintiffs, on the 1st of September, gave notice in writing and demanded of the defendant to deliver up possession of the premises to the plaintiffs on the 11th of October, which he refused to do. The defendant became tenant to Mr. H., one of the plaintiffs, for one year from the 11th of October, 1843, to the 11th of October, 1844, of a house, farm, &c., at a certain rent, and occupied the same as tenant to him for that year. The contract for this tenancy was by parol, and was made by the defendant expressly with Mr. H. alone in his own right, and Mrs. H. was no party thereto. A demand and notice in writing for delivering up of the possession by the defendant were made and given by the agent of the plaintiffs. The defendant retained possession of the premises :—Held, that the two plaintiffs were not entitled to recover in this joint form of action, the defendant not being the tenant of the two plaintiffs, and the reversion not being in the two plaintiffs, but in the husband alone, and that neither the averment of the tenancy nor the words, "to the plaintiffs," in the allegation of the tenancy, could be rejected. Harcourt v. Wyman, 3 Ex. 817 ; 18 L. J., Ex. 453.

Against whom Maintainable.]—Where there was a demise to a wife, and notice to quit given to her, after which, but before the time it expired, she married:—Held, that it was not necessary to give a notice to the husband subsequent to the marriage, in order to support an action for double value. Lake v. Smith, 1 Bos. & P. (N.R.) 174. And see Wilkinson v. Colley, 5 Burr. 2694.

An action for double value does not lie against a weekly tenant. The statute being penal, is to be construed strictly. Lloyd v. Rosbee, 2 Camp. 453; 11 R. R. 764.

A tenant holding over the premises after his term has expired, is not within the penalty imposed by the statute, unless he holds over wilfully and contumaciously, and with a consciousness that he has no right to do so. Swinfen v. Bacon, 6 H. & N. 184; 30 L. J., Ex. 33; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1257; 3 L. T. 440; 9 W. R. 105. Affirmed 6 H. & N. 846; 30 L. J., Ex. 368; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 897; 5 L. T. 83; 9 W. R. 740—Ex. Ch.

Where, on the receipt of a notice to quit to two joint-tenants, one of whom only actually occupied the land, the other said "that he had nothing to do with the land":—Held, that this statement was not admissible to shew that a holding over after the expiration of the notice was not wilful on the part of the latter. Hirst v. Horn, 6 M. & W. 393.

Quære, whether a quarterly tenant, who wilfully holds over after his tenancy is expired, is liable to pay double value to his landlord. Wilkinson v. Hall, 4 Scott, 301; 3 Bing. (N.C.) 508; 3 Hodges, 56; 6 L. J., C. P. 82.

When Maintainable.]—After a landlord has recovered in ejectment against his tenant, he may maintain an action for double the yearly value of the premises, during the time the tenant held over after the expiration of the landlord's notice to quit. Soulsby v. Neving, 9 East, 310; 9 R. R. 567.

In an action by a landlord against his tenant for double value under 4 Geo. 2, c. 28, s. 1, he must shew a wilful holding over by the tenant; and it is not enough to shew that the premises were held over by a sub-tenant, without his assent or authority. Rands v. Clark, 19 W. R. 48.

Sufficiency of Notice and Demand of Possession.]—Notice to quit under the statute may be previously to the expiration of the lease. Cutting v. Derby, 2 W. Bl. 1075.

A notice to quit lands on a given day, "or at such time as your holding shall expire next after the expiration of half a year from the receipt of this notice," is a sufficient demand of possession, to render the tenant liable for holding over after the determination of the notice. Hirst v. Horn, 6 M. & W. 393.

A joint authority by mortgagors and mortgagee of premises to a person to be the receiver, agent, and attorney of the mortgagors, to receive the rents until satisfaction of the mortgage, to bring actions in case of nonpayment of rent, to give notices to quit, to bring ejectment in case of non-compliance, &c., as fully as the mortgagors might have done, is a sufficient authority to him to demand possession of the tenants, so as to make them liable in double value for holding over. Poole v. Warren, 3 N. & P. 693; 8 A. & E. 582; 3 Jur. 23.

An action for double value is not supported by a notice that the landlord requires the tenant to give up possession at twelve at noon, on, &c. (the day when the tenancy was determinable), at which time the landlord will attend to receive the keys and rent; and that in the event of the tenant not so surrendering, the landlord will demand 7*s.* daily rent (a rate more than double the original rate of rent), till he can obtain legal possession. For the requisition to deliver up the premises at noon is premature and insufficient, as a notice to determine the tenancy. Page v. More, 15 Q. B. 684.

Waiver.]—Acceptance of single rent is a waiver of the double value. Doe d. Cheney v. Batten, Cowp. 243; 9 East, 314, n; 9 R. R. 570, n.

A landlord declared, first, for the double value, and secondly, for use and occupation. The tenant pleaded nil debet to the first, and a tender of the single rent before action to the second count, and paid the money into court, which the plaintiff took out before trial, and still proceeded: the court held, that this was no case for a nonsuit, upon the ground of such acceptance of the single rent being a waiver of the plaintiff's right to proceed for the double value; but that the case ought to have gone to the jury: and that the plaintiff's going on with the action, after taking the single rent out of court, was evidence to shew that he did not mean to waive his claim for the double value, but to make it pro tanto. Ryal v. Rich, 10 East, 48.

It is not necessary, in order that the tenant may avail himself of a waiver of the double value on the part of the landlord, that such waiver should be specially pleaded. Rawlinson v. Marriott, 16 L. T. 207.

In what Court.]—An action for double value may be brought in a county court. Wickham v. Lee, 12 Q. B. 521; 18 L. J., Q. B. 21; 12 Jur. 628.

Estimation of Value.]—An owner of a woollen mill and steam-engine, let a room in the mill, together with a supply of power from the steam-engine by means of a revolving shaft in the room:—Held, in an action against the tenant, for holding over after the expiration of a notice to quit, that, in estimating the double value, the value of the power supplied could not be included. Robinson v. Learoyd, 7 M. & W. 48; 10 L. J., Ex. 166.

15. By Way of Penalty.

For Ploughing up Pasture Land, &c.]—Upon a covenant not to plough up any ancient meadow, and, if the tenant does, to pay an additional yearly rent per acre:—Held, that the increased rent was not a penalty, but a liquidated satisfaction fixed and agreed upon by the parties; and therefore a court of equity ought not to interpose in an action brought for the recovery of it. Rolfe v. Peterson, 2 Bro. P. C. 436.

Reservation of 5*l.* per acre during the last twenty years of a term for every acre of meadow thereby demised, which the tenant should plough, dig, ear, break up, or convert into tillage during the last twenty years of the term, and so after that rate for any greater or less quantity than an acre, or less term than a year. The rent is due in the last twenty years if the land is then ploughed, whether it was first ploughed within the last twenty years or before; and the rent continues payable during the twenty years, though the land is again laid down to permanent grass. Birch v. Stephenson, 3 Taunt. 469; 12 R. R. 679. And see Howell v. Richards, 11 East, 633; 11 R. R. 287.

In an action of covenant by lessor against lessee, on a lease reserving an increased rent for every acre of certain lands converted into tillage; the jury having given damages for the actual injury sustained instead of the increased rent, the court granted the plaintiff a new trial, although it was urged that the verdict was consistent with justice, the judge having expressly directed the jury to find damages to the amount of the increased rent; and it was granted without payment of costs. Farrant v. Olmius, 3 B. & Ald. 692.

A lease granted by virtue of a power, enabling a tenant for life to make leases without impeachment of waste, contained a proviso, that the tenant should pay a further rent of 10*l.* per acre for ploughing up pasture land, or for managing the farm contrary to the covenants. In an action to recover the penalty, a motion in arrest of judgment, on the ground that this amounted to a licence to commit waste, was disallowed. Bringloe v. Goodson, 8 Scott, 71; 5 Bing. (N.C.) 738; 1 Arn. 322.

Action on an indenture, whereby the tenant covenanted to pay the rent of 50*l.* half-yearly, and, over and above the reserved rent, the further yearly rent of 5*l.* for every acre of the demised premises which the defendant should covert into tillage, over and above one-third part thereof. Breach assigned for over-tillage, whereby the defendant became liable to pay 75*l.* additional rent. Pleas, first, that the plaintiff, with a full knowledge of the supposed breaches of covenant, accepted and received from the defendant 25*l.* as and for all the rent due in respect of the premises, up to and inclusive, &c. (covering the time alleged in the breach), without demanding or requiring the payment of such penalty or additional rent, and thereby then and there waived, gave up, and dispensed with his right to receive or recover any nomine pœnæ, or penalty, or such additional rent; and, secondly, that the plaintiff, with a full knowledge, waived, gave up, and dispensed with all claim or right on his part to receive, recover, or to be paid such penalty, nomine pœnæ, or additional rent:—Held, that both pleas were insufficient. Denton v. Richmond, 1 C. & M. 734; 3 Tyr. 630; 2 L. J., Ex. 269.

A lease contained covenants by the lessee to pay an increased rent of 20*l.* for every acre which he should plough up over and above one-third part of the demised lands; and also that, in case he should plough up one-third, or greater or less part, he should lay down the same with clover or grass seeds. The lessee ploughed more than one-third, paid the increased rent for it, and then laid it down in pasture:—Held, that upon the construction of both the covenants taken together, the increased rent ceased to accrue from the time that the ploughed land had been restored to pasture. Domville v. Forde, Ir. R. 7 C. L. 534.

A declaration on an indenture stated, that the plaintiff demised to the defendant a farm for ninety-nine years, at a yearly rent of 100*l.*; and also yielding and paying unto the plaintiff, upon the days of payment of the yearly rent first reserved, over and above the same rent, a further yearly rent or sum, according to the rate of 20*l.* the acre, of any grazing or mowing land which the defendant should cause to be ploughed or used in tillage without the consent of the plaintiff; and also yielding and paying unto the plaintiff, upon the days of payment of the yearly rent first named, over and above the rent so reserved, according to the rate of 20*l.* the acre of any of the land which the defendant should under-let, or upon which he should sow potatoes, or from which he should take more than three crops of corn or grain in any one course of tillage, or from which should be taken a second or other crop of wheat without making a clean summer fallow, or from which should be taken a third crop in any one course of tillage, without seeding down the same. "The several eventual or contingent rents, if any such should become due, to be additional to the first-mentioned rent, and to be paid and payable half-yearly, by equal portions, and the first payment to become due and be made at that day of payment of the first-mentioned rent which should first or next happen after such eventual or contingent rent should be incurred, and to continue payable from thenceforth during all the residue of the term created." A breach, that the defendant, in three successive years and in one course of tillage, to wit, 1843, 1844, and 1845, took three successive crops of corn, to wit, of oats, and did not seed down, whereby he became liable to pay a certain other yearly rent of 125*l.*; and although one half-yearly payment of the rent had become due—viz., on the 25th March, 1845, yet the defendant had not paid the same. Another breach, that although two other half-yearly payments of the rent had become due—viz., on the 29th September, 1845, and the 25th March, 1846, yet defendant had not paid the same. Upon the production of the lease at the trial, it appeared, that in addition to the reddendum as set out in the declaration, it contained the following:—"And also yielding and paying unto plaintiff, upon the days for payment of the rent first reserved, over and above the same rent, the further yearly rent or sum of 20*l.* the acre of land which should be mowed, unless the defendant should once at least in every three years bring thereon sufficient manure:—Held, that the variance could not be taken advantage of on a plea of non est factum. Bowers v. Nixon, 13 Jur. 334—Ex. Ch. S. C., in court below, 12 Q. B. 558, n.; 18 L. J., Q. B. 35.

Held, also, that the defendant was liable to the contingent rent reserved in the third branch of the reddendum for taking three successive crops of oats without seeding down. Ib.

In a subsequent action to recover the half-yearly payments due on the 29th September, 1846, and the 25th March, 1847, the declaration was as before:—Held, that the sums reserved in the third clause of the reddendum were payable as rent annually during the residue of the term, and not as a penalty on the occurrence of every breach of the covenant. Ib. See also post, cols. 1184, 1185.

—— Burning Land.]—Where a lessee covenanted not to burn any part of the demised premises, under a penalty of 10*l.* per acre, to be recovered as the additional rent, for every acre so burned:—Held, that he was not entitled to burn upon payment of the specified sum as liquidated damages, and that the jurisdiction of equity to grant an injunction to restrain the lessee from burning was not ousted by the imposition of the penalty. French v. Macale, 2 Dr. & War. 269; 1 Con. & L. 459; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 568.

—— Using Land as Race-course.]—In a lease of land, the lessee, in addition to a reserved rent, covenanted to pay a penal rent for pasture land broken up, or "used or converted to any other use than for meadow land":—Quære, whether using the land as a race-course and ground for training horses was a breach of the covenant: at all events, the question is one for a jury, and not determinable by the court on demurrer. Aldridge v. Howard, 5 Scott (N.R.) 623; 4 Man. & G. 921.

For Breach of other Farming Covenants.]—A lease contained a stipulation, that, for every acre, and so on in proportion for a less quantity of the land which the lessee should suffer to be occupied by any other person without the consent of the landlord, an additional rent should be paid. The tenant undertook to use, occupy, dress, and manure the land according to the custom of the country. The tenant, without the consent of the landlord, suffered other persons to use small portions of the land for the purpose of raising a potato crop. It was proved to be the custom of the country for farmers to pursue that course:—Held, that the landlord was entitled to the additional rent, this being an occupation by other persons. Greenslade v. Tapscot, 1 C. M. & R. 55; 4 Tyr. 566; 3 L. J., Ex. 328.

A farm and lands were demised to a tenant at a yearly rent, and also under and subject to certain yearly payments in case the tenant should not crop, manure and manage the farm in manner therein specified and covenanted; and also, in case the tenant, in the last three years of the term, should sow more than seventy acres of clover in one year, the additional rent of 10*l.* an acre, for every acre above seventy acres, for the remainder of the term:—Held, that the additional rents were in the nature of liquidated damages, and not of penalties. Jones v. Green, 3 Y. & J. 298.

A lessee covenanted not to do a certain act, "under the penalty of double the yearly rent herein reserved, same to be recovered by distress or otherwise, the same as the said yearly rent":—Held, to be a case of liquidated damages, and not of penalty. Gerrard v. O'Reilly, 3 Dr. & War. 414; 2 Con. & L. 165.

Covenant not to use as Public-house.]—A lease contained a covenant that a house, to be built immediately adjoining the house in which the lessor lived, should be built fit for a private family, under a penalty of 10*l.* yearly additional rent, unless the lessor should convert his house to any public use:—Held, the 10*l.* a year rent was a penalty, and that the lessor was not restricted to suing for such rent, but was entitled to an injunction to restrain the tenant's converting the house into a public-house. Bray v. Fogarty, Ir. R. 4 Eq. 544; 18 W. R. 1151.

For any Breach.]—A tenant agreed, in case of breach of all or any of the conditions contained in the contract, to pay an additional or penal rent, to be recovered by distress or otherwise as the reserved rent was recoverable by law as between landlord and tenant:—Held, that the additional rent was not a penalty. Wright v. Tracey, Ir. R. 7 C. L. 134.

16. Recovery Back by Tenant.

If A., who is tenant for life, subject to forfeiture, with remainder over to B., leases to C. for a term, and afterwards, apprehending that he has forfeited, acquiesces in B.'s claiming and receiving the rent from C.; his executor may, on shewing that he acquiesced under a false apprehension, recover from C. the amount of the rent erroneously paid to B. Williams v. Bartholomew, 1 Bos. & P. 326; 4 R. R. 81.

Where a tenant pur autre vie pays rent by mistake, after the life has dropped, he may recover back the rent, as money had and received, such action not being brought for the purpose of trying the title to the land. Barber v. Brown, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 121; 26 L. J., C. P. 41; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 18; 5 W. R. 79.

I. ACTIONS FOR USE AND OCCUPATION.

1. When Maintainable.

a. Express or Implied Contract.

At Common Law.]—Debt for use and occupation lies at common law, and is not defeated by proof of a demise (not under seal) reserving a certain rent, though 11 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 14, is confined to "an action upon the case." Gibbon or Gibson v. Kirk, 1 Q. B. 850; 1 G. & D. 252; 10 L. J., K. B. 297; 6 Jur. 99.

Ineffectual Agreement to Demise.]—If there is an agreement by deed to demise a house, by words not amounting to an actual demise, the party may maintain an action for use and occupation. Elliott v. Rogers, 4 Esp. 59.

When under Agreement.]—A. agreed with B. to take a lease of B.'s iron ore at R. for forty years, at a certain rent, engaging to work the several veins of ironstone, limestone, &c., in certain stipulated proportions; and B. agreed to grant such lease:—Held, that, by this agreement, B. took, not a mere licence, but a right constituting a hereditament, in respect of which A. might sue him for use and occupation. Jones v. Reynolds, 4 A. & E. 805; 6 N. & M. 441.

A. having mortgaged a piece of land to the plaintiff, a railway company afterwards occupied it by laying rails upon it, and being subsequently called upon by the plaintiff for compensation, negotiated with him in respect thereof. The plaintiff had never been in possession of the land, but gave notice of the mortgage to the company, and brought an action for use and occupation. The judge directed the jury that the plaintiff was in a condition to waive the trespass in respect of the occupation of the land by the company, and to bring an action for use and occupation:—Held, that there was evidence of the company having held the land on the terms of paying for it. Turner v. Cameron's, &c., Ry., 5 Ex. 932; 20 L. J., Ex. 71.

A. entered into an agreement in writing, with B., to take premises at a yearly rent, the premises to be put into repair by B., and the rent not to be payable until the repairs were completed. A. by his tenant occupied the premises for six months, and then quitted, the stipulated repairs not having been done:—Held, that B. was entitled to maintain an action as upon an implied agreement to pay so much as the occupation might be reasonably worth. Smith v. Eldridge, 15 C. B. 236 ; 2 C. L. R. 855.

Receipt of Rent after Termination of Tenancy —Ignorance of Landlord.]—The last life in a lease died in New Zealand on 21st July, 1864. A gale of rent due the following September was paid and received in ignorance of death. A rumour of the death reached the lessee in May, 1865, when it was at once communicated to the lessor. In August, the lessee wrote a letter to the lessor, enclosing the May gale of rent and saying that he had written to New Zealand for intelligence, and this rent the lessor received. Authentic information was received in December, 1865, when possession was given up :—Held, that the lessee was liable to an action for use and occupation at full value of lands from 21st July, 1864, when the life actually dropped, the receipt of the old rent in ignorance of fact not amounting to a new tenancy at the old rent. Hurley v. Hanrahan, 15 W. R. 990.

When Contract will not be implied.]—Copyhold lands were demised to the plaintiffs, in trust, for F. for life, but the plaintiffs were never admitted to the copyhold. At the time of the death of the testator the lands were in possession of the defendant, to whom F., with the assent of one of the plaintiffs, afterwards re-let them in her own name. The plaintiffs then gave notice to the defendant to pay the rent to them :—Held, that an action for use and occupation would not lie by the plaintiffs against the defendant, because no contract could be implied between them, there having been an existing contract between the defendant and F., and the occupation having been by permission of F. Churchward v. Ford, 2 H. & N. 446 ; 26 L. J., Ex. 354 ; 5 W. R. 831.

A. purchased lands from B. under a contract of sale not in writing, went into possession, and under such contract remained in possession for several years without paying rent :—Held, that B. could not maintain an action for use and occupation against A., as the facts rebutted the implied contract to pay rent for the lands. Corrigan v. Woods, Ir. R. 1 C. L. 73 ; 15 W. R. 318.

Necessity of Actual Occupation.]—Where there has been an actual enjoyment, an action for use and occupation lies in respect of incorporeal hereditaments. Bird v. Higginson, 4 N. & M. 505 ; 1 H. & W. 61 ; 2 A. & E. 696 ; 4 L. J., K. B. 124. Affirmed 6 A. & E. 824—Ex. Ch.

After a recovery of possession of the premises by ejectment, the plaintiff may maintain use and occupation for the rent to the time of the demise, but not after. Doe d. Batten v. Cheney, Cowp. 246.

A. and B. being entitled to copyhold premises in shares, B. demised the whole to the defendant in his own name by a lease in writing (not under seal) for one year, at a rent payable half-yearly ; and B. agreed for himself, his heirs, executors, and assigns, with the defendant, that he should peaceably hold the premises. Before the first half-year's rent became due, B. surrendered his interest to A., of which the defendant had notice, and afterwards paid that rent to an agent employed by A. and B. In an action for use and occupation by A. to recover the last half-year's rent :—Held, that the occupation of the defendant having become in point of law an occupation by the permission of A., as soon as his interest accrued, the action was maintainable. Standen v. Christmas, 10 Q. B. 135 ; 16 L. J., Q. B. 265 ; 11 Jur. 694.

The action does not lie where there has not been an actual entry by the lessee. Lowe v. Ross, 5 Ex. 553 ; 19 L. J., Ex. 318.

A plaintiff alleged by his statement of claim that he was owner in fee of premises which he had, on the 26th September, 1859, leased to M. for thirty-one years from the 25th December then next, at a yearly rent of 105*l*., payable quarterly. The statement then set forth the covenants in the lease to pay rent, repairs, and the condition for re-entry for breach of covenant ; and alleged that in 1870 the defendant took possession of and had since occupied the premises, and that subsequently he had become assignee of the lease, and had paid rent to the plaintiff in accordance with the terms of the lease from 1870 to March, 1874. The statement alleged breaches of the various covenants, and the plaintiff claimed possession of the premises, 157*l*. 10*s*. for arrears of rent to the 29th September, 1875, or for use and occupation, damages for breaches of the covenants in the lease. and mesne profits from the 29th September, 1875, to the date of recovery of possession. The defendant in his statement of defence denied that he was assignee of the lease, or that it ever became vested in him, or that he had broken the covenants in the lease. He admitted that the lease had been avoided, and that the plaintiff was entitled to possession of the premises ; he also admitted that he was in possession up to the 20th September, 1875, but alleged that he ceased to have possession from that date, and he paid 25*l*. into court to answer the plaintiff's claim in respect of mesne profits : —Held, that the facts as set out in the pleadings did not support the claim made by the plaintiff upon the defendant for use and occupation of the premises up to the 29th September, 1875, and that the plaintiff was not entitled to sign judgment for the amount he claimed in respect of such use and occupation. Hanmer (Lord) v. Flight, 36 L. T. 279—C. A.

A. entered on, and enjoyed for a time, a shooting belonging to B., in the expectation that a lease would be executed. They could not come to terms, no lease was signed, and at the end of six weeks A. left, and refused to pay any rent : —Held, that, although there was no agreement, yet A. was liable in an action for use and occupation, inasmuch as he had enjoyed the beneficial occupation of the premises. Dawes v. Dowling, 31 L. T. 65 ; 22 W. R. 770.

An action may be maintained for use and occupation, if a party holds premises under a contract or an agreement, and actual occupation is not necessary. Pinero v. Judson, 3 M. & P. 497 ; 6 Bing. 206 ; 8 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 19 ; 31 R. R. 388.

But a tenant who agrees to take furnished lodgings, but does not enter, is not liable for use and occupation. Edge v. Strafford, 1 C. & J. 391 ; 1 Tyr. 293 ; 9 L. J. (o.s.) Ex. 101.

See also cases, post, cols. 962, et seq.

Between Lessee and Under-lessee.]—A. being tenant of B. of a house, sub-let it to C., and afterwards B. told A. that he had no objection to accepting C. as tenant, but that he would not exonerate A. from the rent :—Held, that as B. still held A. liable for the rent, A. might suc C. for the rent, as due from C. to him. Dawson v. Lamb, 3 Car. & K. 269.

Where a party entitled to a term in land demises the land to another at a weekly rent for the whole of such term, and it is the intention of the two to create the relation of landlord and tenant, use and occupation may be brought for the whole of such term, although the lessee has given a week's notice to quit before the expiration of the term, and has quitted accordingly. Pollock v. Stacey, 9 Q. B. 1033; 16 L. J., Q. B. 132; 11 Jur. 267.

What sufficient Evidence of, to go to Jury.]—A lease of premises from the plaintiff to P., containing the usual words "signed, sealed and delivered," was executed by both parties, pursuant to a previous agreement to let, in which the rent was stated to be 55*l.*, and by which it was agreed that P. should pay 100*l.* for the plaintiff's goodwill and fixtures, and that the lease should not be delivered, but remain in the plaintiff's possession until the whole of the 100*l.* was paid. P. paid 50*l.* and entered into possession, and carried on his business, the plaintiff keeping possession of the lease. P. became bankrupt without paying the remaining 55*l.*, the lease remaining with the plaintiff. The defendant became assignee in bankruptcy:—Held (the defendant having accepted the tenancy), that the evidence warranted the jury in finding that there had been no delivery of the deed so as to operate as a lease, and that until the payment of the remaining 55*l.* only a tenancy from year to year existed, and, therefore, that the defendant was liable for rent in an action for use and occupation. Gudgen v. Besset, 6 El. & Bl. 986; 26 L. J., Q. B. 36; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 212; 5 W. R. 47.

The defendant and his predecessors in estate had paid to the plaintiffs and their predecessors, overseers of the poor of a township, an annual sum of 6*l.* 14*s.* 8*d.*, expressed to be for rent for common lands. It was admitted that the defendant was in possession of the lands out of which the rent issued, but they were not identified, and no evidence was given of their extent or value. The defendant would not produce his deeds:— Held, that there was evidence on which a jury might find for the plaintiff on a count for use and occupation. Harden v. Hesketh, 4 H. & N. 175; 28 L. J., Ex. 137; 7 W. R. 186.

The defendant agreed to rent a house, the landlord to put it in repair before the tenancy should commence. While the men employed by the landlord were at work, the defendant went on the premises and gave them some directions as to the colour of the staircase:—Held, no evidence of an entry such as would support an action for use and occupation. Towne v. D'Heinrich, 13 C. B. 892; 1 C. L. R. 335; 22 L. J., C. P. 219; 17 Jur. 1102; 1 W. R. 370.

Evidence of occupation and payment of rent is sufficient evidence of tenancy. Jenkins v. Hill, 2 W. R. 268.

After Notice to Quit.]—Notice to quit was given, and it expired at Lady Day, 1840; the tenant held on till Lady Day, 1841; but since the former period there had been no payment of rent, nor any other overt act to shew that a new tenancy was created. The landlord distrained for rent due at Lady Day, 1841:—Held, that the distress was not justifiable. The landlord ought to have sued for use and occupation. Alford v. Vickery, Car. & M. 280.

b. After Change in Title.

By Grantee of Annuity.]—An action for use and occupation may be maintained by a grantee of an annuity, after a recovery in ejectment against a tenant who was in possession under a demise from year to year, for all rent in his hands at the time of notice by the grantee, and down to the day of the demise in the ejectment, but not afterwards. Birch v. Wright, 1 Term Rep. 378; 1 R. R. 228.

By Assignee of Equity of Redemption.]—Premises came into the defendant's possession through J. S., who afterwards mortgaged to W. S., and assigned the equity of redemption to the plaintiff:—Held, that he could only recover rent from the time when he acquired the legal estate from W. S. Cobb v. Carpenter, 2 Camp. 13, n.

By Trustees.]—An action for use and occupation is maintainable without attornment, under 4 & 5 Anne, c. 16, ss. 9, 10, by the trustees of one whose title the tenant had notice of before he paid over his rent to his original landlord, though the tenant had no notice of the legal title being in the plaintiffs on the record. Lumley v. Hodgson, 16 East, 99; 14 R. R. 315.

Agreement for Lease by Husband—Refusal of Wife to execute.]—Where a house was devised to a trustee, in trust for a devisee, for her sole and absolute use, and she afterwards married B., who let part of it, under a written agreement signed by himself only, to the defendant, as a yearly tenant, and afterwards granted a lease for years of the whole of the house to the plaintiff, which the wife refused to execute, although she was named therein; and the defendant had notice of the lease, and was required to pay any rent that might subsequently accrue to the plaintiff:—Held, that the defendant was liable to the plaintiff, and that he could not impeach his title, as he must be taken to stand in the same situation as B., whose title as landlord the defendant had acknowledged, by occupying and enjoying the premises under him. Rennie v. Robinson, 7 Moore, 539; 1 Bing. 147; 1 L. J., (O.S) C. P. 30; 25 R. R. 604.

Person occupying in place of original Tenant.]—Where premises had been let to B. for a term determinable by a notice to quit, and, pending such term, C. applied to A., the landlord, for leave to become the tenant instead of B., and, upon A.'s consenting, agreed to stand in B.'s place, and offered to pay rent:—Held, that (though B.'s term had not been determined either by a notice to quit, or a surrender in writing) A. might maintain an action for use and occupation against C., and that the latter could not set up B.'s title in defence to that action. Phipps v. Sculthorpe, 1 B. & Ald. 50; 18 R. R. 426. But see also Hyde v. Moakes, 5 Car. & P. 42.

Estoppel.]—The plaintiff came into occupation under one who had paid rent upon a distress by the defendant:—Held, that, after proof of this fact, the plaintiff was estopped from disputing the defendant's title to the rent, notwithstanding the defendant inadvertently put in evidence a document which shewed that the plaintiff's predecessor occupied under a lease to which the defendant was in law a stranger. Cooper v.

Blandy, 1 Bing. (N.C.) 45 ; 4 M. & Scott, 562 ; 3 L. J., C. P. 274.

Where the defendant has come in under the plaintiff he cannot shew that his title has expired, unless he solemnly renounced the plaintiff's title at the time, and commenced a fresh holding under another person. Balls v. Westwood, 2 Camp. 11.

Other Cases.]—The father of the plaintiff died seised of a copyhold tenement of a manor, in which there was a custom for widowhood ; his widow occupied after his death, and the defendant having married her daughter, remained in possession after her death :—Held, that the plaintiff might maintain an action for use and occupation against the defendant. Hellier v. Silleox, 19 L. J., Q. B. 295 ; 14 Jur. 573. See Blundell v. Drummond, 14 Jur. 573, n.

By indenture of lease, dated the 26th June, 1810, between A. (the father of the plaintiff) and B. (the father of the defendant), reciting a former lease of the 27th July, 1810, between S. and M. his wife, and A., which recited that M. was entitled to a moiety of lands in West Fen, and two-thirds for life, or for some other estate of freehold, and that A. was entitled to the other moiety and the other third part respectively, or some other share of the same lands, for some estate of freehold, and by which S. and M. his wife demised the moiety and two-third parts respectively of M. to A., for forty years, from the 5th of April, 1801 ; A. demised to B. the lands of which M. was, by the recital in the lease of 1801, said to be entitled to two-thirds, and himself, A., to one-third (of the lands in West Fen), for the remainder of the term of forty years, except the last ten days. A. died in 1813, and B. in 1818, leaving the plaintiff and the defendant their respective representatives. The defendant continued in the occupation of the lands in West Fen to the time of the trial, he and his father having regularly paid rent to the plaintiff and his father to Lady Day, 1841, when the lease of 1801 expired :—Held, that the recital in the lease of 1801 was primâ facie evidence that A. was entitled to one-third of the lands in West Fen in fee, and that the plaintiff had a right to treat the defendant as a tenant at sufferance of such undivided third part, for the period during which he held on after the expiration of the lease, and to sue him for use and occupation in respect thereof. Bayley v. Bradley, 5 C. B. 396 ; 16 L. J., C. P. 206.

A. being in possession of premises under a lease from two trustees, for a term which had expired, a new lease was granted for a further term, but was executed by one of the trustees only. A. paid the rent to both trustees, until one of them died ; and for the rent due after his death the other trustee brought an action for use and occupation against A. :—Held, that he might maintain the action in his own right, and was not bound to sue as surviving trustee. Wheatley v. Boyd, 7 Ex. 20 ; 21 L. J., Ex. 39.

c. Proof of Written Contract.

Production.]—Where premises have been demised by an agreement in writing, but not on stamped paper, the plaintiff is bound to give the writing in evidence ; and if not stamped at the trial, he will be nonsuited, and will not be allowed to go for use and occupation generally. Brewer v. Palmer, 3 Esp. 213.

Unless the evidence given by the plaintiff in support of his case does not disclose the existence of such an agreement. Fry v. Chapman, 5 D. P. C. 265.

A defendant cannot shew, by the cross-examination of the plaintiff's witnesses, that the premises are held under a written agreement, but if it afterwards appears by the evidence of the defendant's witnesses that the premises are so held, the plaintiff is not bound to put in the written agreement. Marston v. Dean, 7 Car. & P. 13.

In an action for rent of land verbally let on the same terms as the former tenant's lease, such lease must be produced, properly stamped. Turner v. Power, 7 B. & C. 625 ; M. & M. 131 ; 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 122.

A witness for the plaintiff having stated that he had never heard of an agreement in writing respecting the board and lodging, the agreement was put into his hands, and he was asked by the defendant whether he had seen an agreement respecting the subject-matter of the action ; he replied, "Never before I came into court" :—Held, that the defendant, if he wished the agreement read, must put it in as his own evidence. Keys v. Harwood, 2 C. B. 905 ; 15 L. J., C. P. 207.

One of the plaintiff's witnesses, on cross-examination, said that he had heard from the plaintiff's attorney that there was an agreement in writing :—Held, no evidence of the existence of an agreement, so as to render its production by the plaintiff necessary. Watson v. King, 3 C. B. 608.

—— Memorandum—Unaccepted Proposal.]—Where, on the letting of land to a tenant, a memorandum was drawn up, the terms of which were, that he should on a future day bring a surety and sign the agreement, neither of which he ever did :—Held, that the memorandum was a mere unaccepted proposal, and need not be produced, but that the terms of the letting might be proved by parol evidence. Doe d. Bingham v. Cartwright, 3 B. & Ald. 326 ; 22 R. R. 413.

—— Unstamped Agreement.]—Where a witness deposed that the settled draft of a lease was the final agreement between the parties, for one of whom he acted as agent :—Held, that an unstamped memorandum, written afterwards by himself, but not signed by anybody, was admissible as a mere proposal, to shew that the settled draft was not the final agreement between the parties. Hawkins v. Warre, 5 D. & R. 512.

A company, of which the plaintiff and the defendant were directors, occupied a house belonging to the plaintiff. A draft agreement, prepared by the plaintiff's attorney, was submitted to the solicitors of the company, and by them approved and returned ; and, at a subsequent meeting of the directors, a resolution was made empowering the solicitors to sign the agreement on behalf of the company. The agreement, however, was never executed. In an action for use and occupation the plaintiff offered the draft in evidence, not as an agreement binding per se (it being neither dated, stamped, nor signed), but to show that the occupation was to be by the other directors, exclusive of himself :—Held, that the draft was inadmissible for want of a stamp, inasmuch as it could only be relied on as proof of the special agreement, the plaintiff's position precluding him from maintaining an action against a co-director upon an implied contract. Chadwick v. Clarke, 1 C. B. 700.

After the plaintiff has proved by witnesses a case of implied or oral contract, he cannot be nonsuited by the defendant's producing an unstamped written instrument, purporting to contain the terms of contract. Feilder v. Ray, 3 M. & P. 659; 6 Bing. 332; 4 Car. & P. 61; 8 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 65; 31 R. R. 429.

Where a proposal was made in writing by A. to let a piece of land to B. on certain terms contained in a written agreement between B. and C., and A. afterwards agreed by parol that B. should have the lands upon the terms proposed:—Held, in an action for a breach of the agreement, that the original proposal was receivable without a stamp. Drant v. Brown, 5 D. & R. 582; 3 B. & C. 665; 3 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 111.

Parol Evidence.]—Parol evidence as to the party to whom a demise has been made is not admissible where the agreement for the demise was in writing. Rex v. Rawdon, 3 M. & Ry. 426; 8 B. & C. 708; 7 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 84.

Where a party holds land under a written agreement, parol evidence cannot be received of the fact under whom he came into possession. Doe v. Harvey, 8 Bing. 239; 1 M. & Scott, 374; 1 L. J., C. P. 9.

Parol evidence of the fact of tenancy is admissible, although the tenant hold under a written agreement. Jenkins v. Hill, 2 W. R. 268.

In an action by landlord against tenant, a witness, refreshing his memory from a memorandum, proved a parol agreement as to the terms of the tenancy; and that the plaintiff at the same time drew up a memorandum, which was read over and assented to by the defendant, but not seen or signed by him:—Held, that the parol evidence was admissible. Tyrwhitt v. Lambert, 3 P. & D. 676; 10 A. & E. 470. See also Preston v. Merceau, 2 W. Bl. 1249.

d. Amount of Rent.

Reference to Void Lease.]—Recourse may be had to the original agreement, though void under the Statute of Frauds, to calculate the amount of the rent due on such agreement. De Medina v. Polson, Holt N. P. 47.

How Assessed.]—A. took a farm under an agreement from B. that A. should have the exclusive right of sporting over the manor in which it was situate, and should also occupy certain glebe land within the parish; A. entered into possession, but did not sign the agreement, and it appeared that B. had no power of conferring the right of sporting, nor could he procure the glebe land:—Held, that evidence was admissible to shew the annual value of the land without such right, which might be ascertained by the jury, independently of the amount of the rent reserved by the agreement. Tomlinson v. Day, 5 Moore, 558; 2 Br. & B. 680; 23 R. R. 541.

A tenant of premises at 47*l.* a year received notice to quit; and the landlord agreed with another party for a holding, to commence on the expiration of the current term, at 80*l.* a year. Before the term expired, the new tenant, by consent of all parties, was admitted in place of the outgoing tenant; and the rent was paid at the rate of 47*l.* to the end of the term. Disputes arising on the new agreement, it was abandoned; but the new tenant continued to occupy:—Held, that it was a question for the jury what rent was fairly payable for the continual holding, no necessary inference arising under the circumstances from the former holding at 47*l.* Thetford Corporation v. Tyler, 8 Q. B. 95; 15 L. J., Q. B. 33; 10 Jur. 68.

Where a tenancy is continued beyond the time for which it was originally taken, and nothing is arranged respecting the amount to be paid on the new holding, the new holding is not of necessity to be on the same terms as the former; but the jury may give the landlord a larger sum for the continued occupation, if there are circumstances to shew that such increased rent was expected by him in the event of holding over, and that the understanding was not repudiated by the tenant. Elgar v. Watson, Car. & M. 494.

A. proposed to B., owner of a warehouse, that A. should occupy it as a packer, and pay B. 75*l.* a year, and as much more as half the profits came to, and a written agreement was to be drawn up between them for a term of five years. A. was let into possession provisionally, and with a view to the intended agreement. When the agreement was drawn up, A. refused to sign it; A. had occupied the warehouse for ten weeks. It was found by the jury that A. was let into possession without any agreement, and provisionally with a view to an intended agreement:—Held, that A. was liable to pay B. a reasonable sum for the time he occupied the warehouse. Coggan v. Warwicker, 3 Car. & K. 40.

When there has been no Occupation.]—The assignees of an insolvent tenant agreed to pay the landlord 7*l.* for the last quarter's rent:—Held, that the sum could not be recovered, there having been no use and occupation. Clarke v. Webb, 1 C. M. & R. 29; 4 Tyr. 673; 3 L. J., Ex. 300.

e. Proof of Occupation.

Necessity of Actual Occupation.]—See ante, cols. 955, 956.

Generally.]—Where a tenant by a written agreement has agreed to take premises from a future day, it is not enough to put in the agreement, but evidence must be also given of some occupation under it. Woolley v. Watling, 7 Car. & P. 610.

If a down is let, by an instrument not under seal, for the purpose of digging copper ore, an action for use and occupation may be maintained, if the defendant has ever taken possession; and if he has once taken possession, he is liable to all subsequent rent until the determination of the tenancy, whether he has continued to work the minerals or not; but if the defendant merely caused holes to be dug on the down, and had them filled up immediately, with a view merely to ascertain what sort of bargain he was about to make, or had made, that would not be a taking of possession. Jones v. Reynolds, 7 Car. & P. 335.

A party who had agreed to rent a house, sent in a woman to clean the house, and workmen to paper one of the rooms:—Held, to be sufficient evidence of occupation. Smith v. Towart, 2 Man. & G. 841; 3 Scott (N.R.) 172.

Although an assignment by a termor of his goods, estate and effects to trustees for the benefit of his creditors, is sufficient to vest the term in the trustees, unless disclaimed, and they do not disclaim, an action for use and occupation cannot be maintained against them without proof that they have actually occupied. How v.

Kennett, 3 A. & E. 659 ; 5 N. & M. 1 ; 1 H. & W. 391 ; 4 L. J., K. B. 220.

Where a lease of premises for a term of years expired at Midsummer, 1821, and the tenant refused to give up possession at that time, and insisted that he was entitled to a notice to quit, and continued in possession until Christmas following, and paid rent to that time, when he tendered the keys of the premises to his landlord, which the latter refused to accept :—Held, that such continuing in possession by the tenant did not amount to a holding over by him, but was conclusive evidence of a tenancy from year to year, which entitled the landlord to maintain an action to recover the amount of a quarter's rent, which became due at Lady-day, 1822. Bishop v. Howard, 3 D. & R. 293 ; 2 B. & C. 100 ; 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 243 ; 26 R. R. 291. But see 2 Esp. 717 ; 5 R. R. 769.

The putting up of a board for the purpose of letting houses, by a person who built them, and agreed to become tenant of them from a certain time, is sufficient to enable the person for whom they were erected to recover rent on a count for use and occupation. Sullivan v. Jones, 3 Car. & P. 579.

Notice to quit was given, and it expired at Lady-day, 1840 ; the tenant held on till Lady-day, 1841, but since the former period there had been no payment of rent, nor any other overt act to shew that a new tenancy was created. The landlord distrained for rent due at Lady-day, 1841 :—Held, that the distress was not justifiable. The landlord ought to have sued for use and occupation. Alford v. Vicery, Car. & M. 280.

When a tenancy from year to year has been determined by a regular notice to quit, the mere accidental detention of the key by the tenant (who has quitted the premises and removed his goods) for two days beyond the expiration of the term, does not amount to any evidence of use and occupation, so as to render him liable for another quarter. Gray v. Bompas, 11 C. B. (N.S.) 520 ; 5 L. T. 841.

Joint.]—A. let premises to four persons, B., C., D. and E., for a year certain, ending at Midsummer, 1839, with a proviso that, if a month at least before the termination of the year, a request was sent to him to that effect, A. would grant them a lease for seven, fourteen, or twenty-one years. The lessees were directors of a joint-stock bank, and occupied the premises for the purpose of its business. B. ceased to be a director in January, and C. in March, 1839. On the 31st May, the solicitor of the directors applied to A. to renew the tenancy for another year to the then directors ; but no agreement to that effect was finally executed. On the 20th June, the solicitor applied for a renewal of the agreement for a quarter of a year ; to which A., on the 23rd, replied, "that he should consider of it." Nothing further passed between the parties ; but at the Michaelmas following, the premises were delivered up to A. :—Held, that the four original lessees were liable to A. for the rent of the quarter from Midsummer to Michaelmas. Christy v. Tancred, 7 M. & W. 127 ; 10 L. J., Ex. 228 ; 4 Jur. 1064.

Where premises are let for a certain term to A. and B., and A. holds over after the expiration of the term, with B.'s assent, both are liable for rent, for so long as A. continues actually to occupy, but no longer. Christy v. Tancred, 9 M. & W. 438 ; 11 L. J., Ex. 109.

A. and B. entered into an agreement to take premises of C., from a day certain, at a yearly rent. The agreement was not signed by C. In an action for use and occupation, B. suffered judgment by default, and the evidence shewed only an entry by A. :—Held, that this entry by A. was evidence of a parol demise to A. and B. upon the terms of the agreement ; and that his entry was therefore the entry of both, and justified a verdict for C. Glen v. Dungey, 4 Ex. 61 ; 18 L. J., Ex. 359.

Under-tenancy.]—If A. agrees to let lands to B., who permits C. to occupy them, A. may recover the rent in an action against B. for use and occupation. Bull v. Sibbs, 8 Term Rep. 327.

The defendant took premises of the plaintiff for nine months, at a rent certain, with the option, at the end of that time, of taking a lease for seven, or fourteen, or twenty-one years. Before the expiration of the nine months, the defendant let the premises to a company for six months, who actually occupied them for that period :—Held, that, at the end of a year from the expiration of the nine months, the defendant was liable to the plaintiff for a year's rent. Waring v. King, 8 M. & W. 571 ; 11 L. J., Ex. 49.

A lessee of a term underlet the premises, and his under-tenant held over for a portion of a year after the expiration of the term against the will of the lessee, so that he could not give up possession to his lessor. During such holding over, the lessee distrained upon the under-tenant for rent previously due :—Held, that the lessee was liable for the period of the under-tenant's holding over, but not for a whole year's rent. Ibbs v. Richardson, 1 P. & D. 618 ; 9 A. & E. 849 ; 8 L. J., Q. B. 126 ; 3 Jur. 102.

Where a defendant, in expectation of a lease, by indenture, which he had agreed to take from the plaintiff, procured attornments from some of the tenants, and received rent from others :—Held, liable for use and occupation. Neale v. Swind or Sweeney, 2 C. & J. 377 ; 2 Tyr. 464 ; 1 L. J., Ex. 118.

If several persons rent premises to be used as a Jewish synagogue, the seats in which are let out by an officer appointed annually, who receives the rents, and applies them, partly in the payment of the rent for the premises, and partly for general purposes connected with the Jewish religion, the lessees may maintain an action for the rent due from an occupier of a seat. Israel v. Simmons, 2 Stark. 356.

A. let premises to B. for a term which expired at Lady-day, 1858. B. had underlet them for the whole term to C., who continued in possession ; and B. afterwards sued him for the half-year's rent accruing at Michaelmas, 1858. The only evidence to shew that B. still continued tenant of the premises to A. was that, after action brought, he paid to A., and A. accepted, the half-year's rent which would have been due from him, assuming his tenancy to have been still subsisting :—Held, that there was evidence for the jury that B.'s tenancy under A. continued, and consequently that the action was maintainable. Lery v. Lewis, 6 C. B. (N.S.) 706 ; 28 L. J., C. P. 304 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1408. Affirmed, 9 C. B. (N.S.) 872 ; 30 L. J., C. P. 141 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 759 ; 9 W. R. 388—Ex. Ch.

By Acknowledgments and Admissions.]—Suffering judgment by default, in an action for use and occupation, amounts to an admission that the defendant held a house of the plaintiff, who need not shew that it was his house; and it lies on the defendant to prove that he did not occupy the particular house to which the attention of the jury has been directed. David v. Holdship, 1 Chit. 644, n.

If the occupier of a house submits to a distress for rent, stated in the notice of distress to be due from him as tenant to the distrainer, this is an acknowledgment of the tenancy. Panton v. Jones, 3 Camp. 372; 14 R. R. 757.

Payment of rent is a sufficient recognition of the title of landlord to support an action for use and occupation, although it appears upon the evidence on the part of the plaintiff that the defendant originally came in under another person, or that the plaintiff has only an equitable estate. Dolby v. Iles, 11 A. & E. 335; 3 P. & D. 287; 9 L. J., Q. B. 51; 4 Jur. 432.

A. applied to B. (the proprietor of a house with cellars, which he was in the habit of letting) telling him that he wanted cellar room to do a pipe of wine; but adding, that he did not know but very shortly he might want a good deal of room; B., upon this, said that he had better put it into his (B.'s) own cellar; which he did:—Held, that B. was entitled to detain the wine till a reasonable and proper sum had been paid him for rent. Gray v. Chamberlain, 4 Car. & P. 260.

Parochial trustees, under the authority of a local act, built a workhouse on lands belonging to charity trustees in the parish, and in 1821 disputes arose between the two sets of trustees, as to whether any rent was payable therefor, and the question was brought before the Master of the Rolls by an amicable suit in 1821; who decreed that a certain rent should be paid by the parochial trustees, which was accordingly paid till 1833:—Held, that use and occupation might be maintained for rent in arrear from 1833, as the decision of the Master of the Rolls was binding upon the parties; and that the payment of rent under the circumstances was an estoppel on the parochial trustees. Allison v. Stark, 1 P. & D. 183; 9 A. & E. 255; 8 L. J., M. C. 13.

A judgment obtained by A. in an action for use and occupation against B. and C. is no evidence to charge B. in a subsequent action brought by A. against him alone, for the use and occupation of the same premises for a subsequent period. Christy v. Tancred, 9 M. & W. 438; 11 L. J., Ex. 109.

The proprietors of Drury Lane Theatre, constituted a corporation, in 1836 leased the counters of the saloon of the theatre, and the privilege of selling fruit, to Mrs. C. for seven years. She died in 1837, and her son soon after applied to the committee of the theatre to become tenant on the same terms as in the lease, and they accepted him. He occupied to January, 1843, and paid rent to the latter part of 1841:—Held, that it was a question for the jury, whether the son had occupied as assignee of the lease to his mother, or upon a fresh taking upon the same terms as the lease, and, if the latter, he was liable. Drury Lane Co. v. Chapman, 1 Car. & K. 14.

2. By and against whom Maintainable.

Auctioneers.]—Where lands were let by auction, subject to conditions of sale, and a memorandum of the terms was signed by the auctioneer and the tenant, and underneath there was a signature of approval by the owner, and a direction to pay the rent into the hands of the auctioneer; in an action for use and occupation brought by the auctioneer against the tenant, in which a verdict had been found for the plaintiff, the court granted a new trial, upon the ground that the case had been left as an entire question of fact, without the attention of the jury having been called to the legal effect of the memorandum. Evans v. Evans, 3 A. & E. 132; 1 H. & W. 239.

In an action for the hire of land let by the plaintiff to the defendant, it appeared that, by permission of a corporation and a committee of freemen, races were held annually on a common, the fee of which was in the corporation, and on which the freemen had a right of depasturing cattle, and a committee, under whose management the races were, erected a temporary grand stand, and caused the land adjoining to it and part of the racecourse to be let by public auction for the erection of booths, stalls, &c. In 1864, the plaintiff, who was employed by the rate committee, issued handbills announcing that "the ground for booths, stalls, &c. will be let by auction by Mr. J. F., on, &c." The conditions for sale were headed "Conditions for letting standings for booths, &c. on the common during the races. By Mr. J. F." At the auction the defendant was declared the taker of one of the lots, and he took possession of and occupied it during the races:—Held, that there was evidence of a contract by the defendant with the plaintiff personally, and that an action for use and occupation was maintainable. Fisher v. Marsh, 6 B. & S. 411; 34 L. J., Q. B. 177; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 795; 12 L. T. 604; 13 W. R. 834.

Bankrupts or Assignees.]—A tenant from year to year of a house at a yearly rent became a bankrupt in the middle of the year, and his assignees entered and kept possession for the remainder of the year:—Held, that the lessor could not maintain an action for use and occupation against the assignees, for the bankrupt's occupation as well as their own, without proving their special instance and request for the bankrupt to occupy, during the time that elapsed before the bankruptcy. Naish v. Tatlock, 2 H. Bl. 320; 3 R. R. 384.

Where a lessee agreed to pay, and paid in pursuance of such agreement, an additional rent in consideration of improvements executed by his landlord and the lessee afterwards became a bankrupt:—Held, that an action for use and occupation against the assignees was not maintainable for the increased rent, as the assignees held the premises under the lease; and that the lessor's remedy was against the lessee. Lambert v. Norris, 2 M. & W. 333; 6 L. J., Ex. 109.

Action for use and occupation. Plea, that before the action the plaintiff became bankrupt, that assignees were appointed, and that the debt sued for became due to the plaintiff before his bankruptcy. Replication, that the plaintiff, as trustee of A., permitted the defendant to use the premises, and that before bankruptcy he had no beneficial interest therein, and only sued as trustee:—Held, that the plaintiff was not bound by his replication to prove a declaration of trust from A. under the 7th section of the Statute of Frauds, but that it was sufficient for him to negative the title of his assignees by any other proof that he was not beneficially interested in the subject-matter of the action. Houghton v. Kœnig, 18 C. B. 235; 25 L. J., C. P. 218.

Cestui que Trusts.]—Where A. is seised in trust for B. and C., neither B. nor C. can maintain use and occupation in his own name against the tenant as principal, treating A. as his agent. Morgell v. Paul, 2 M. & Ry. 303.

The receiver of an estate, in which plaintiff had an equitable interest, under a settlement vesting it in trustees, let the defendant into possession of the premises under an agreement with himself in writing, in which he described himself as agreeing, "on behalf of the estate" to let for a term of years. The plaintiff declining to sanction any other than a yearly letting, a correspondence ensued between him and the defendant in which the latter intimated that, as he could not get a lease, he should leave as soon as he could, and he did leave before he had been six months in possession :—Held, that he was not liable to the plaintiff, either in trespass, or use and occupation ; and semble, that he was not liable at all. Sloper v. Saunders, 29 L. J., Ex. 275.

Corporations.]—A corporation aggregate may sue for use and occupation where the tenant has held premises under them and paid rent. Stafford Corporation v. Till, 4 Bing. 75 ; 12 Moore, 260 ; 5 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 77 ; 29 R. R. 511.

Where any corporation has actually used and occupied land, for a corporate purpose, by permission of the owner, it is liable for use and occupation, though there is no contract under seal for such occupation. Lowe v. L. & N. W. Ry., 18 Q. B. 632 ; 21 L. J., Q. B. 361 ; 17 Jur. 375.

Although a corporation may be liable for use and occupation of premises, it can only be so for the period of actual occupation ; and a continuous occupation for several years will not render the corporation tenants from year to year. Finlay v. Bristol & Exeter Ry., 17 Ex. 409 ; 7 Railw. Cas. 449 ; 21 L. J., Ex. 117.

A railway company hired rooms from December 16th, 1846, for one year, but occupied them till December 16th, 1848, previous to which time they removed their furniture and effects, left the keys in the doors, and paid the rent up to this day, but gave no notice to quit :—Held, that the company was not liable in an action for use and occupation for rent subsequently to December 16th, 1848. Ib.

Executors and Administrators.]—One of two executors of a deceased tenant of a term of years entered into the demised premises and occupied them :—Held, that such entry did not enure as the entry of the two executors, so as to make them both liable in an action for use and occupation—so as to make them severally liable de bonis propriis. Nation v. Tozer, 1 C. M. & R. 172 ; 4 Tyr. 561 ; 3 L. J., Ex. 234.

A lessee of a term for years underleased for a term longer than his own, the under-lessee covenanting to pay rent to the lessee :—Held, that the executor of the lessee might sue the under-lessee for rent accruing during the continuance of the lessee's term. Baker v. Gosling, 1 Bing. (N.C.) 19 ; 3 L. J., C. P. 292.

The plaintiff declared against A. and B. as executors, for use and occupation of a messuage held of him by them as executors under a demise to the testator, and that in consideration of the premises, they as executors promised to pay. Plea by A., that B. never was executor, nor ever administered :—Held, that the declaration was good in substance, and that the plea was bad, as setting up a personal discharge, of which B. only could avail himself. Atkins v. Humphrey, 2 C. B. 654 ; 3 D. & L. 612 ; 15 L. J., C. P. 120.

In an action for use and occupation against an executor he is personally liable, and not in his representative capacity. Nixon v. Quinn, Ir. R. 2 C. L. 247.

Husband and Wife.]—An action for the use and occupation of a house is not maintainable against the husband alone, if his wife held under a yearly tenancy before marriage, the rent being payable half-yearly, where part of the rent was due from the wife dum sola, and the remainder accrued after the coverture. Richardson v. Hall, 3 Moore, 307 ; 1 Br. & B. 50.

A. having an equitable title to a house under an agreement for a lease, permitted his mistress to occupy it, and it was agreed between them that she should take up bills of exchange which he had accepted in part payment of the purchase-money, and that the lease should be assigned to her. She continued in possession, but did not take up the bills, and afterwards married the defendant, who occupied the house :—Held, that A. could not recover against him in an action for use and occupation. Keating v. Bulkley, 2 Stark. 419.

Mortgagees.]—On the execution of an agreement for a lease, the party to whom the lease was to be granted entered into possession, and the lessor at the same time made an assignment of the premises for ninety-nine years, by way of mortgage, and then became bankrupt :—Held, that the mortgagee could maintain an action for use and occupation in respect of an occupation after the execution of the mortgage to him, and notice of that mortgage to the tenant. Rawson v. Eicke, 2 N. & P. 423 ; 7 A. & E. 451 ; W. W. & D. 675 ; 7 L. J., Q. B. 17.

The fact of the mortgagee of the premises having given the tenant notice to pay the rent to him may be given in evidence under the general issue, if the rent sought to be recovered accrued due after the notice ; but if the rent accrued due before the notice, this defence must be specially pleaded. Waddilove v. Barnett, 4 D. P. C. 347 ; 2 Scott, 763 ; 2 Bing. (N.C.) 538 ; 1 Hodges, 395 ; 5 L. J., C. P. 145.

To an action for use and occupation, a plea, that the premises had been mortgaged to A. to secure the repayment of 200*l.* and interest in six months ; that before the defendant began to occupy, the six months had elapsed without repayment of the 200*l.*, which remained due ; that, until the commencement of the action, the mortgagor continued the control and management of the premises ; that, before the action, the defendant was required by notice to pay to the assignee of the mortgagee the amount sought to be recovered ; and that, from the time of the giving the notice, the defendant was liable to pay the same to such assignee :—Held, that the plea was no answer. Wilton v. Dunn, 17 Q. B. 294 ; 21 L. J., Q. B. 60 ; 15 Jur. 1104.

Semble, that if payment had actually been made under a claim by the mortgagee, such payment might have been pleaded as a defence. Ib.

Tenants in Common.]—Tenants in common may join in suing for use and occupation, a tenant holding under them. Last v. Dinn, 28 L. J., Ex. 94.

Tenant in Common against Co-tenant.]—Where one tenant in common has by lease demised his interest to his co-tenant in common, if the tenant in common, who was lessee, continues in occupation as tenant at sufferance after the expiration of the lease, he will be liable in an action for use and occupation at the suit of his co-tenant in common who was lessor. Leigh v. Dickeson, 53 L. J., Q. B. 120 ; 12 Q. B. D. 194.

Lessee from Year to Year who has Assigned his Interest.]—A., a tenant from year to year under a parol demise, assigned all his interest to B. The lessor did not accept B. as tenant, and, on default being made in payment of the rent, sued A. for use and occupation :—Held, that he was liable in that form of action. Shine v. Dillon, Ir. R. 1 C. L. 277 ; 15 W. R. 847.

3. Pleadings.

Claim.]—The plaintiff may declare generally for the use and occupation of divers messuages, lands, and tenements, without specifying where they are situate. King v. Fraser, 6 East, 348 ; 2 Smith, 462.

In an action by a surviving owner, it is not sufficient to allege that the defendant held the premises by the sufferance and permission of the surviving owner only, where they were in fact held under two jointly. Israel v. Simmons, 2 Stark. 356.

A defendant took possession of premises under a demise for three years, from Christmas ; he continued to occupy until the 27th July, when he quitted the premises, having paid rent up to the previous Midsummer :—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to a count on the demise, and also a count for use and occupation, but must elect. Arden v. Pullen, 1 D. (N.S.) 612 ; 9 M. & W. 430 ; 11 L. J., Ex. 382.

It is not now necessary to put the claim in the old form of use and occupation. Metropolitan Ry. v. Defries, 2 Q. B. D. 189 ; 36 L. T. 150 ; 25 W. R. 271.

Defence.]—Nil habuit in tenementis is no plea. Curtis v. Spitty, 1 Bing. (N.C.) 15 ; 4 M. & Scott, 554 ; 4 L. J., C. P. 236. S. P., Lewis v. Willis, 1 Wils. 314.

In an action for use and occupation of lodgings by A., the defendant's wife, at his request, the defendant cannot plead that A. was not his wife, as such plea would amount to the general issue, as well as tender an immaterial issue. Sinclair v. Hervey, 2 Chit. 642.

A plea, that the plaintiff, before action, took and detained, as a distress for the rent, goods of value sufficient to satisfy the same, is bad, for not shewing that the rent was satisfied. Lear v. Edmonds, 1 B. & Ald. 157 ; 2 Chit. 301 ; 18 R. R. 448.

Under the plea of never indebted, the defendant may shew that A. had recovered judgment in ejectment for the premises, and that he had attorned and paid the rent subsequently accruing due to A., to avoid being turned out of possession. Newport v. Harley, 2 D. & L. 921 ; 14 L. J., Q. B. 242 ; 10 Jur. 333.

But, with respect to rent previously due, he cannot, under never indebted, set up as a defence that he has paid it to A. Ib.

J. Termination of the Contract.

1. Notice to Quit.

a. When Necessary.

Generally.]—A notice to quit must be given previously to bringing ejectment, whenever there is an existing tenancy from year to year. Doe d. Hollingsworth v. Stennett, 2 Esp. 717 ; 5 R. R. 769. Doe d. Martin v. Watts, 7 Term Rep. 83 ; 2 Esp. 501 ; 4 R. R. 387. Doe d. Moore v. Lawder, 1 Stark. 308. Doe d. Warner v. Brown, 8 East, 166 ; 9 R. R. 397.

Where the term of a lease is to end on a precise day, there is no occasion for a notice to quit previously to bringing an action. Cobb v. Stokes, 8 East, 358 ; 9 R. R. 464. S. P., Messenger v. Armstrong, 1 Term Rep. 54 ; 1 R. R. 148 ; and Right d. Flower v. Darby, 1 Term Rep. 162 ; 1 R. R. 169.

Where J., who was tenant at will to W., died, and the defendant, who was heir-at-law to J., entered into possession, and claimed the land as his own :—Held, that the devisees of W. might bring an ejectment against the defendant, without giving him notice to quit or demanding possession. Doe d. Burgess v. Thompson, 1 N. & P. 215 ; 5 A. & E. 532 ; 6 L. J., K. B. 57.

A notice to quit is unnecessary when, on demand of possession, the party refuses to give up possession, claiming the property as his own. Doe d. Landsell v. Gower, 17 Q. B. 589 ; 21 L. J., Q. B. 57 ; 16 Jur. 100.

Holding under Agreement for Lease—Not executed.]—A tenant holding under an agreement for a lease for seven years, which was never executed, is not entitled to a notice to quit at the end of the seven years. Doe d. Tilt v. Stratton, 4 Bing. 446 ; 1 M. & P. 183 ; 3 Car. & P. 164 ; 6 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 50.

Where a party occupies under an agreement for a lease during the whole term for which the lease was to be granted, a notice to quit is not necessary at the end of such term, as the agreement is evidence of the expiration of the tenancy, as well as of the other terms of the holding. Ib.

Under Void Lease.]—Under an agreement to let for a longer term than three years, though void as a lease for three years, under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106. s. 3, the tenant holds from year to year, subject to the terms of the agreement, and is bound to leave at the expiration of the three years, without any notice to quit. Tress v. Savage, 4 El. & Bl. 36 ; 2 C. L. R. 1315 ; 23 L. J., Q. B. 339 ; 18 Jur. 680 ; 2 W. R. 564.

A remainderman received rent from the lessee of a void lease, and having given notice to quit, conveyed the property by virtue of a power to A :—Held, that in ejectment the purchaser might take advantage of the notice given by the remainderman. Doe d. Egremont (Earl) v. Hellings, 6 Jur. 821.

After the death of the tenant for life, the remainderman sent his servant to the different tenants for the culm to be brought home. Culm was accordingly sent twice at intervals and received :—Held, that, even assuming the lease granted by the tenant for life to be invalid, the remainderman had adopted the tenant so far that the latter was entitled to a notice to quit before ejectment could be maintained. Doe d. Symmons v. Morse, 9 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 77 ; 1 B. & Ad. 365.

Liberty to reside whilst Services Rendered.]—A. being owner of a farm, let it for seven years to B., and by a written agreement of the same date it was agreed, that A. should manage the farm for B., B. allowing A. 12*s.* per week; "and allowing him and his family to reside and have the use of the dwelling-house and furniture therein, free of rent"; and this agreement was to be put an end to by three months' notice, or three months' wages:—Held, that no notice to quit was necessary, if the service was put an end to. Doe d. Hughes v. Derry, 9 Car. & P. 494.

Tenancy between Co-partners.]—So, if by the terms of a deed of co-partnership, a house is to be used and occupied by the co-partners during the co-partnership, it is not necessary, after a dissolution of partnership, to give a notice to quit previously to bringing an ejectment against a co-partner. Doe d. Waithman v. Miles, 1 Stark. 181; 4 Camp. 373; 16 R. R. 805.

If A. lets part of a house to a firm, consisting of himself and B., for the carrying on of the business of the firm, and the partnership of A. and B. is dissolved, A. may bring an ejectment against B., and recover possession of the part of the house thus let, without giving B. a notice to quit. Doe d. Colnaghi v. Bluck, 8 Car. & P. 464.

Purchaser in Possession before Completion—Tenancy at Will.]—Where under a contract of purchase by which the vendee was let into possession immediately and was to pay 5*l.* per cent. interest on the purchase-money, if the contract were not completed within three months, until its completion, and it was not completed within that time and he continued in possession, but failed to pay the interest:—Held, that only a tenancy at will existed between the parties, and consequently that no notice to quit was necessary before bringing an ejectment. Doe d. Tomes v. Chamberlaine, 5 M. & W. 14; 9 L. J., Ex. 38.

Holding under a Power.]—Lands were settled with a power to lease. A., the tenant for life under the settlement, made, in May, 1807, a lease which was not a good execution of the power, and received rent in conformity with the terms of the lease, by which the rent was payable on Lady-day, Midsummer, Michaelmas, and Christmas days. B., a succeeding tenant for life, also received rent in conformity with the terms, and afterwards, in conjunction with C., remainderman in tail expectant upon B.'s estate for life, settled the land to such uses as C. should appoint, and, in default of appointment, to C. for life, remainder to a trustee for C. for C.'s life, remainder to the right heirs of C. C. received rent before B.'s death, according to the terms of the lease; and, after B.'s death, gave notice to the lessee, on 21st March, 1838, to quit "on 29th September next, or at the expiration of the current year of your tenancy." On 19th of February, 1839, C. appointed to N. in fee:—Held, that, as between C. and the lessee, the notice was good, and determined the tenancy; and that N., at the expiration of the notice, might evict the lessee; for that, if N. held under the creator of the power of B., no notice to quit was necessary as against N., and if N. held under the appointer, C., he might take advantage of the notice at the expiration. Doe d. Egremont (Earl) v. Forwood, 3 Q. B. 627; 11 L. J., Q. B. 321.

Title founded on Judgment previous to Tenancy.]—Where a tenant came into possession of premises in 1816:—Held, that the lessor of the plaintiff in ejectment, who claimed under an elegit and inquisition issued in 1818, but founded on a judgment recovered prior to 1816, need not give a notice previous to bringing the ejectment. Doe d. Putland v. Hilder, 2 B. & Ald. 782; 21 R. R. 488.

Disclaimer of Title.]—A notice is not necessary, where the tenant does an act which amounts to a disavowal of the title of the lessor. Doe d. Grubb v. Grubb, 10 B. & C. 816; 8 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 321. Doe d. Williams v. Pasquali, 1 Peake, 259; 3 R. R. 688. Doe d. Jefferies v. Whittick, Gow, 195; 21 R. R. 828. Doe d. Clun v. Clarke, Peake Ad. C. 239.

Nor where the possession of the tenant is adverse. Doe d. Foster v. Williams, Cowp. 622. S.P., Doe d. Cheeser v. Creed, 2 M. & P. 648. S. C., nom. Doe d. Davis v. Creed, 5 Bing. 327; 7 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 138.

—— What is.]—But refusal to pay rent to the devisee under a will, which is contested, is not such a disavowal. Doe d. Grubb v. Grubb, supra.

"I have no rent for you, because A. has ordered me to pay none," is evidence of a disclaimer of tenancy. Doe d. Whitehead v. Pittman, 2 N. & M. 672.

The defendant held premises under a tenant for life, on whose death possession was claimed, and rent demanded by the heir-at-law of the devisor; whereupon the defendant wrote to the attorney of the heir-at-law, stating that he held as tenant to S. (the husband of the tenant for life), in right of his wife; that he had never considered the claimant as the landlord of the house; that he should be ready to pay the arrears to any person who should be proved to be heir-at-law; but that he must decline taking upon himself to decide upon the claim made on him, without more satisfactory proof in a legal manner:—Held, that this letter amounted to a disclaimer of the title of the heir-at-law, and that he might maintain ejectment against the tenant without giving him a previous notice to quit. Doe d. Culvert v. Frowd, 1 M. & P. 480; 4 Bing. 557; 29 R. R. 624.

So, where the tenant has attorned to some other person, or answered an application for rent, by saying that his connection as tenant with the party applying has ceased. Doe d. Grubb v. Grubb, 10 B. & C. 816; 8 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 321.

A tenant from year to year, who had agreed to buy his landlord's estate, having remained in possession for several years without paying either rent or interest on the purchase-money, the agent of the lessor applied to him to give up possession; to which he answered "that he had bought the property, and would keep it, and had a friend who was ready to give him the money for it":—Held, that this was no disclaimer; because it was not a claim to hold the estate on a ground necessarily inconsistent with the continuance of the tenancy from year to year. Doe d. Gray v. Stanion, 1 M. & W. 695; 2 Gale, 154; 5 L. J., Ex. 253.

B. had concurred, with other members of his family, in letting land to C., as tenant from year to year, and it was agreed that the rent should be paid to D., as agent for the family. B., to whom alone the land really belonged, demanded rent of C., who said, "You are not my landlord." B. then demanded possession, which C. refused to give up:—Held, that if the jury was satisfied that the fair meaning of this was, that C. asserted that B. and himself were not in the relation of landlord and tenant, this was a disclaimer, and that C. was not entitled to notice to quit. Doe d. Burnett v. Long, 9 Car. & P. 773.

The defendant held premises as tenant to H., with an agreement for a lease for seven years, or for the lease for lives under which H. held the property. The attorney for the lessors of the plaintiff, who was assignee of H.'s interest in the premises, under an impression that the seven years had expired, went to demand possession; when the defendant said, "I hold on a lease for lives, and as long as they live I will not give up possession; you know I have an agreement." The attorney then demanded a quarter's rent, which was due, but which the defendant refused to pay, saying, "I hold under H., and I was directed by him to pay to K. (the superior landlord), and I'll do so; how do I know he may not come and make a demand on me?"—Held, that this did not amount to a disclaimer of the title of the lessors of the plaintiff. Doe d. Williams v. Cooper, 1 Scott (N.R.) 36; 1 Man. & G. 135; 9 L. J., C. P. 229. See Doe d. Lewis v. Cawdor (Lord), 1 C. M. & R. 398; 4 Tyr. 852; 3 L. J., Ex. 239.

Where upon a question as to the right of possession on a particular day, one party entitles himself to such possession by a tenancy for years under the other, an acknowledgment made after action brought, of an attornment to a stranger, taking place before such day, is sufficient evidence of a disclaimer to rebut his title as tenant. Doe d. Mee v. Litherland, 6 N. & M. 313; 4 A. & E. 784; 6 L. J., K. B. 267.

The defendant had for several years occupied a cottage as tenant from week to week to M. After his death, the defendant continued to pay his rent weekly to certain persons to whom M. had devised the premises. The devise being discovered to be void by reason of the Mortmain Act, the heir-at-law of M., by his agent, demanded the rent, whereupon the defendant said he had received notice from the other party, and would not pay any more rent until he knew who was the right owner:—Held, that this did not amount to a disclaimer or a repudiation of the title of the heir-at-law, so as to entitle him to eject the defendant without any notice to quit. Jones v. Mills, 10 C. B. (N.S.) 788; 31 L. J., C. P. 66; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 387.

—— How Waived.]—In an ejectment by a landlord against his tenant, the landlord relied on a disclaimer. It was proved that the tenant disclaimed in March, 1833; in November, 1833, the landlord put in a distress for rent:—Held, a waiver of the disclaimer. Doe d. David v. Williams, 7 Car. & P. 322.

—— What amounts to a Surrender only.]—Executrices of tenant from year to year signed the following instrument:—"We do hereby renounce and disclaim, and also surrender and yield up to the lessor, all right, title, interest, use, trust, term and terms of years whatsoever, and possession of that messuage called B.":—Held, a surrender, and not a disclaimer. Doe d. Wyatt v. Stagg, 5 Bing. (N.C.) 564; 7 Scott, 690; 9 L. J., C. P. 73.

—— Effect of Parol Disclaimer on Lease.]—A lease for a term of years by deed is not forfeited by a parol disclaimer of the lessor's title by the lessee. Doe d. Graves v. Wells, 10 A. & E. 427; 2 P. & D. 396; 8 L. J., Q. B. 265; 3 Jur. 820.

Mortgages.]—It is not necessary for a mortgagee to give a notice, previously to bringing an ejectment, to a tenant who claims under a lease from the mortgagor, granted after the mortgage without the privity of the mortgagee. Keech d. Warne v. Hall, 1 Dougl. 21.

Nor where the tenant was let into possession after the original mortgage was made, but before an assignment of it for the purpose of bringing ejectment. Thunder d. Weaver v. Belcher, 3 East, 449. But see Birch v. Wright, 1 Term Rep. 378; 1 R. R. 223.

A notice was sent by mortgagees to the occupier of the premises mortgaged, demanding payment of rent to them instead of the mortgagor, and threatening distress upon non-payment. There was no evidence of a previous tenancy between the occupier and the mortgagor, and it appeared that the occupier never paid any rent before or after the receipt of the notice, nor did anything to shew his assent to the notice:—Held, that this notice was not sufficient to create a tenancy between the mortgagees and the occupier, so as to require a notice to quit before ejectment could be brought by the mortgagees. Biner v. Walters, 20 L. T. 326; 17 W. R. 649.

A notice by the assignees of a mortgagee to the tenant in possession, of the transfer of the mortgage to them, and requiring him to pay them the future rents, operates as a demise from year to year, and the assignees cannot enter upon such tenant without giving him a regular notice to quit. Browne v. Storey, 9 L. J., C. P. 225; 1 Man. & G. 117; 1 Sc. (N.R.) 9.

A lessee for years mortgaged his estate, and his term having become forfeited, the superior landlord recovered the premises by ejectment, and granted a new lease to the mortgagee, who, having received the possession of the premises from the mortgagor, returned the key of the house to him, saying, "Go on as before; pay me the money you owe me, and then you shall have a lease":—Held, that this did not create a tenancy from year to year, and that upon nonpayment of the money due, and no rent having been paid, the mortgagee was entitled to maintain an ejectment without six months' notice to quit. Doe d. Rogers v. Pullen, 3 Scott, 271; 2 Bing. (N.C.) 749; 2 Hodges, 39; 5 L. J., C. P. 229.

A mortgage deed contained a covenant, that, if the principal remained unpaid on a given day, the mortgagee might enter; and that, if not paid within a certain number of days from the day fixed for payment he might sell without the concurrence of the mortgagor:—Held, that the mortgagee might maintain ejectment against the mortgagor, although he remained in possession, without giving him notice to quit or demanding possession. Doe d. Fisher v. Giles, 2 M. & P. 749; 5 Bing. 421; 7 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 134; 30 R. R. 686.

A notice to quit was signed by the mortgagee after the mortgage of the reversion. A clause in the mortgage deed provided that if the interest was duly paid by the mortgagor, the principal was not to be called in by the mortgagee until a period after the date of the notice. There was also a covenant for quiet enjoyment:—Held, that notwithstanding this clause the signature of the mortgagee to the notice was sufficient. Burton v. Dickenson, 17 L. T. 246.

Personal Representatives.]—When a tenant from year to year dies, his personal representatives have the same interest in the land which he had, and are therefore entitled to the same notice to quit. Doe d. Shore v. Porter, 3 Term Rep. 13; 1 R. R. 626. S. P., Parker d. Walker v. Constable, 3 Wils. 24. And see Mackay v. Mackreth, 3 Term Rep. 13, n.; Gulliver d. Tasker v. Burr, 1 W. Bl. 596.

A tenant from year to year died, and a regular notice to quit was served on the widow, who remained in possession:—Held, that the landlord might recover in ejectment, unless it was shewn that some other person, and not the widow, was the executor or administrator of the tenant; and that it was not incumbent on the landlord to shew that the widow was either executrix or administratrix. Rees v. Perrot, 5 Car. & P. 230.

b. Length of Notice.

What sufficient.]—Half-a-year's notice must be given to a tenant at will, or his executor, to quit, or ejectment does not lie. Six months' notice is not sufficient. Parker d. Walker v. Constable, 3 Wils. 25.

Where rent is reserved quarterly, it does not dispense with the necessity of six months' notice to quit. Shirley v. Newman, 1 Esp. 266; 5 R. R. 737.

But if a quarter's notice is given to the lessor, and the rent paid up to the time when the tenant should quit, and the lessor neither assents nor dissents, it will be taken as a waiver of the regular notice, and an acquiescence on his part. Ib.

A month's notice is not sufficient. Gulliver d. Tasker v. Burr, 1 W. Bl. 596.

A written agreement for the letting of premises expressed the tenancy to be "for a year certain, and so on from year to year until a half-year's notice should be given by or to either party, at a yearly rent of 50*l.* payable quarterly, the first payment to be on the 25th of March next." The agreement was dated the 20th of December, 1872, and specified no date for the commencement of the term:—Held, that a notice to quit given by the landlord on the 24th of June, 1874, was a good notice. Sandill v. Franklin, 44 L. J., C. P. 216; L. R. 10 C. P. 377; 32 L. T. 309; 23 W. R. 473.

A notice to quit at Old Michaelmas, though given half a year before New Michaelmas, at which time the tenancy expired, is bad. Doe d. Spicer v. Lea, 11 East, 312.

A lease for one year and so on from year to year until the tenancy thereby created shall be determined as thereinafter mentioned, with a proviso that it shall be lawful for either of the parties to determine the tenancy by three months' notice, creates a tenancy for two years certain, and cannot be terminated by a three months' notice to quit at the end of the first year. Doe d. Chatburn v. Green, 1 P. & D. 454; 9 A. & E. 658; 2 W. W. & H. 122; 8 L. J., Q. B. 100.

A notice on the 28th of September to quit on the ensuing 25th of March is a sufficient half-year's notice. Roe d. Durant v. Doe, 6 Bing. 574; 4 M. & P. 391; 8 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 227; 31 R. R. 499. S. P., Doe d. Harrop v. Green, 4 Esp. 198.

A notice given on the 26th of September to quit at the end of six calendar months is good to determine a holding, commencing on the 25th of March. Howard v. Wemsley, 6 Esp. 53; 9 R. R. 806.

So, though the word "calendar" had been omitted, or the notice had expressed half a year. Ib.

A tenancy commenced on the 12th of May, 1840, by a lease for one year only, at a certain rent; the tenant remained in possession till 1841, without any fresh agreement. An increased rent was to commence on the 12th of May. 1842:—Held, that the tenancy was determined in 1843 by a notice to quit, given after the payment of the increased rent existing on the 12th of May, 1843. Doe d. Monck v. Geekie, 5 Q. B. 841; 1 Car. & K. 307; 13 L. J., Q. B. 239; 8 Jur. 360.

B. being possessed of a term, made an underlease for fourteen years and a half from the 25th December, 1831, which was assigned to the defendant, and expired on the 24th June, 1846. The defendant continued in possession, and paid rent to the plaintiff, who had become assignee of the original term:—Held, that a notice given on the 24th December, 1846, to quit on the 24th June next was valid. Doe d. Buddle v. Lines, 11 Q. B. 402; 17 L. J., Q. B. 108; 12 Jur. 80.

A demise for "a term of three years determinable on a six months' previous notice to quit, otherwise to continue from year to year until the term shall cease by notice to quit at the usual times," is a demise for three years certain, determinable only at the end of that period by six months' previous notice, and if not determined, a subsisting tenancy from year to year. Jones v. Nixon, 1 H. & C. 48; 31 L. J., Ex. 505; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 648; 5 L. T. 330.

Weekly Tenancy.]—A week's notice is necessary and sufficient to determine a weekly tenancy. Harvey v. Copeland, 30 L. R., Ir. 412.

A weekly tenancy commencing on Thursday, held to be duly determined by written notice on Thursday, 5th November, to quit and deliver up possession on or before Friday, the 13th November. Ib.

In the case of an ordinary weekly tenancy, a week's notice to quit is not implied as part of the contract, unless there is a usage to that effect, but, in the absence of such usage, a weekly tenant who enters on a fresh week may be bound to continue until the expiration of that week, or pay the week's rent. Huffell v. Armitstead, 7 Car. & P. 56.

A tenancy from week to week can only be determined by a week's notice. Jones v. Mills, 10 C. B. (N.S.) 788; 31 L. J., C. P. 66; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 387.

A notice to a weekly tenant, whose tenancy commenced on a Wednesday, to quit on Friday, provided his tenancy commenced on a Friday or otherwise, at the end of his tenancy, next after one week from the date of the notice, is sufficient. Doe d. Campbell v. Scott, 4 M. & P. 20; 6 Bing. 362; 8 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 110; 31 R. R. 438.

Agreement for a demise for a year, the rent to be paid weekly, and to have a month's warning, if no default was made in payment of the rent; but which agreement the lessor afterwards refused to execute, and the tenant paid his rent weekly:—Held, that he was entitled to a month's notice to quit, although the agreement was not executed, and although, if he had been a weekly tenant, a week's notice would have been sufficient. Doe d. Peacock v. Raffan, 6 Esp. 4.

Monthly Tenancy.]—In all cases the notice to quit must have reference to the terms of the letting; therefore, in ejectment for a house, where the defendant had taken the house by the month:—Held, that a month's notice to quit was sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to recover. Doe d. Parry v. Hazell, 1 Esp. 94; 5 R. R. 722.

By agreement in writing the defendant became a monthly tenant to the plaintiffs (a firm of brewers), from the 1st July, 1869, of certain licensed premises, at a monthly rent, payable on the first day of each month, over and above all taxes, &c.; and by another agreement in writing of the same date and made between the defendant, the plaintiffs, and A., reciting that the defendant had become a monthly tenant of the premises, and that the plaintiffs had, at the defendant's request, agreed to transfer the beer and spirit licences attached to the premises to A., in whose name the defendant proposed to carry on the business, in consideration of the sum of 60*l*., it was agreed that the plaintiffs should hold the licences as security for the said sum, and that the defendant and A. should deal exclusively with the plaintiffs and would keep up the said licences. The plaintiffs, on the 25th September, 1884, served notice to quit on the 1st November then next. In an ejectment on the notice to quit:—Held, that the tenancy was monthly, and determined under the contract by the month's notice given. Beamish v. Cox, 16 L. R., Ir. 270. Affirmed, 16 L. R., Ir. 458—C. A.

Tenancy from Year to Year.]—A notice to quit, served on the 26th of October, 1870, to determine a tenancy from year to year, which commenced on the 1st of May, 1869, required the tenant to give up possession on the 1st of May, 1871, "provided the tenancy originally commenced on the 1st of May, or otherwise at the end of the year of the tenancy which should expire next after the end of half a year from the date of the notice"; and, in January, 1872, the plaintiff brought an ejectment for the lands, claiming title from the 2nd of May, 1871:—Held, that the notice was effectual to determine the tenancy on the 1st of November, 1871. Ashtown (Lord) v. Larke, Ir. R. 6 C. L. 270.

To determine a tenancy from year to year commencing on the 25th of March, the landlord served, previously to the 25th of March, 1872, i.e. six months before the last gale day of the calendar year, a notice to quit and deliver up possession on the 29th of September, 1872, but by the notice informed the tenant that he did not require the possession on that day unless the tenancy then commenced:—Held, that the notice did not determine the tenancy until the 25th of March, 1873, and that an ejectment brought before that day could not be sustained. Ferguson v. Daly, Ir. R. 8 C. L. 216.

A tenancy from year to year may be determined at the end of the first year by a six months' notice to quit. Doe d. Hogg v. Taylor, 1 Jur. 960.

An agreement in writing "to let from year to year, and for so long as the lessor has power to let," creates only a tenancy from year to year, which is terminable by a legal six months' notice to quit, though the power of the lessor to let the premises has not come to an end. Wood v. Beard, 46 L. J., Q. B. 100; 2 Q. B. D. 30; 35 L. T. 866.

A tenancy from year to year, so long as both parties please, is determinable at the end of the first year, unless, in the creation of the tenancy, the parties introduce provisions shewing that they contemplated a tenancy for two years at least. Doe d. Clarke v. Smarridge, 7 Q. B. 257; 14 L. J., Q. B. 327; 9 Jur. 781.

—— Customary Six Months.]—A six months' notice to determine a yearly tenancy commencing on one of the ordinary feast-days, means a customary six months, that is, from one of the usual quarter-days to the quarter-day next but one following, though such six months should exceed or fall short of the number of days which constitute half a year. Consequently, a notice served on the 26th of March, to quit on the 29th of September then next, is not a valid notice. Morgan v. Davies, 3 C. P. D. 260; 26 W. R. 816.

In a lease for a yearly tenancy determinable on the 13th of May, in any succeeding year, it was expressly provided that six calendar months' notice to quit should be given by either side. In that part of the country (county of Durham), it was admittedly the custom for tenants of small holdings to pay rent on the 22nd of November and 13th of May in each year; and notice to quit given after the 13th but before the 22nd of November was commonly accepted as a full six months' notice, expiring on 13th May following. On 21st November, 1895, a notice to quit on 13th May, 1896, having been served on the tenant under the lease:—Held, that, notwithstanding the custom, the notice was invalid, it not being a six calendar months' notice as required by the terms of the lease. Travers v. Mason, 45 W. R. 77.

Under the Agricultural Holdings Act, 1875.]—A yearly tenancy which by express agreement of the parties is determinable on six months' notice to quit is not within the Agricultural Holdings Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 92), s. 51, which provides that "Where a half-year's notice, expiring with the year of tenancy, is by law necessary and sufficient for determination of a tenancy from year to year, a year's notice so expiring shall by virtue of this act be necessary and sufficient for the same." Wilkinson v. Calvert, 47 L. J., C. P. 679; 3 C. P. D. 360; 38 L. T. 813; 26 W. R. 829.

—— Half-year's Notice and Six Months' Notice, Distinction between.]—A tenancy under a written agreement from year to year "until six months' notice shall have been given . . . in the usual way to determine the tenancy," is not one "where a half-year's notice . . . is by law necessary" within the Agricultural Holdings Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 61), s. 33, which therefore does not apply so as to render a year's notice necessary for the determination of the tenancy. Barlow v. Teal, 54 L. J., Q. B. 564; 15 Q. B. D. 501; 54 L. T. 63; 34 W. R. 54; 50 J. P. 100—C. A.

When Tenant may allege Insufficiency of.]—If notice to quit at Midsummer is given to a tenant holding from Michaelmas, he may insist on the insufficiency of the notice at the trial, though he did not make any objection at the time when it was served. Oakapple d. Green v. Copous, 4 Term Rep. 361.

Statute of Frauds.]—A tenant held under a demise from the 26th day of March, for one year then next ensuing, and fully to be completed and ended, and so from year to year, for so long as the landlord and tenant should respectively please. The tenant, after having held more than one year, gave a parol notice to the landlord less than six months before the 25th day of March, that he would quit on that day, and the landlord accepted and assented to the notice:—Held, that the tenancy was not thereby determined, there not having been either a sufficient notice to quit, nor a surrender in writing or by operation of law, within the Statute of Frauds. Johnstone v. Huddlestone, 7 D. & R. 411; 4 B. & C. 922; 4 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 71; 28 R. R. 505.

c. By whom to be Given.

Joint Lessors.]—Where joint lessors are partners in trade, a notice to quit in the names of all signed by one only is valid. Doe d. Elliott v. Hulme, 2 M. & Ry. 483; 6 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 345.

So a notice to quit, given by a person authorised by one of several lessors, joint-tenants, determines the tenancy as to all. Doe d. Kindersley v. Hughes, 7 M. & W. 139; 10 L. J., Ex. 185.

A notice to quit by joint-tenants to a tenant from year to year must be signed by all the joint-tenants at the time it is served, if it is given by one of them: but if such notice is given by an agent on behalf of the joint-tenants, it is sufficient if his authority is subsequently recognised by all of them. Goodtitle d. King v. Woodward, 3 B. & Ald. 689. S. P., Doe d. Jolliffe v. Sybourn, 2 Esp. 677.

So, where there are three joint trustees of an estate, a notice to quit or discontinue the possession given by two is bad, even though given in the names of the three, and the third trustee afterwards adopts it and joins in the ejectment. Right d. Fisher v. Cuthell, 5 East, 491; 2 Marsh. 83: 5 Esp. 149; 7 R. R. 752.

But if four joint-tenants jointly demise from year to year, such of them as give notice to quit may recover their several shares in ejectment. Doe d. Whayman v. Chaplin, 3 Taunt. 120; 12 R. R. 615.

A., a brewer, demised a public-house to B., under an agreement that he should hold for one year certain, and that, after the expiration of that time, either party might put an end to the tenancy, by giving three months' notice to quit, the rent to be payable quarterly; the agreement contained no clause of re-entry: B. took possession, and paid rent to A., who at first gave him a receipt in his own name, and afterwards in the joint names of himself and two partners, who were interested with him in the brewery; after B. had been in possession for three years, A. gave him a notice to quit in his own name alone:—Held, in ejectment, that A. might recover on his own demise, although the latter receipts for rent were given in the names of himself and partners, and that no clause of re-entry was necessary in the agreement. Doe d. Green v. Baker, 2 Moore, 189; 8 Taunt. 241; 19 R. R. 502.

Four trustees were joint landlords of a house under a deed of trust; and notice to quit was served upon the tenant but signed by three of them only:—Held, that the notice was sufficient to put an end to the connection between all the parties as landlord and tenant. Alford v. Vickery, Car. & M. 280. See Doe d. Kindersley v. Hughes, 7 M. & W. 139; 10 L. J., Ex. 185.

Assignees of Lessor.]—Notice by I. K. (the original lessor) and V. C. K. as tenants in common (assignees of the original lessor) is a sufficient compliance with a proviso empowering I. K. "upon three months' notice of his intention to resume for building purposes any portion of the demised premises . . . to enter into such possession." Semble, that this is a condition running with the reversion. Kennedy v. Liddy, 15 W. R. 431. S. C. in H. L. on other point; L. R. 5 H. L. 134; 20 W. R. 150.

Rector and Churchwardens.]—Notice to quit to a tenant of lands, originally devised to the rector and churchwardens of a parish, and their successors in trust, signed by the rector and churchwardens, requiring him to deliver up the premises to the rector and churchwardens for the time being, is ill. Doe d. Brooks v. Fairclough, 6 M. & S. 40.

Two out of Three Commissioners.]—A lease, dated October, 1825, to which the king was a party, was granted by the commissioners of his majesty's woods and forests, containing a clause that, if the commissioners for the time being should, at any time during the term, be minded or desirous to determine the demise, and of such their mind and desire should cause "one calendar month's notice to be given under their hands" to be given to the lessee, the lease at the expiration of such notice, should cease, determine, and be absolutely void:—Held, that the lease was determined by a notice signed by two only out of three commissioners, by virtue of 10 Geo. 4, c. 50, s. 92. Coombes v. Dutton, 5 M. & W. 469; 8 L. J., Ex. 278.

Joint Lessees.]—A notice to quit signed by one of several joint-tenants on behalf of the others, is sufficient to determine a tenancy from year to year as to all. Doe d. Aslin v. Summersett, 1 B. & Ad. 135; 8 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 369.

Agent.]—A notice to quit given by a general agent in his own name is valid. Aliter, if given by an agent holding a special or limited authority. Jones v. Phipps, 9 B. & S. 761; 37 L. J., Q. B. 198; L. R. 3 Q. B. 303; 18 L. T. 813; 16 W. R. 1044.

In October, 1863, the trustees of G.'s marriage settlement purchased a farm, G. furnishing a portion of the purchase-money. From the time of the purchase G. assumed the entire control over the farm, and had for twenty-six years been allowed by the trustees to have the entire management of all the other settled estates. At the time of the purchase the defendant was yearly tenant of the farm to the vendor. G. negotiated with him as to the terms and continuance of the holding, and he treated with and considered G. as the legal owner:—Held, that G. had authority from the trustees to give the defendant notice to quit, and that a notice given in his own name, not purporting to be given as agent of the trustees, was valid. Ib.

A notice to quit must be such that the tenant may safely act on it at the time of receiving it; therefore a notice by an unauthorised agent cannot be made good by an adoption of it by the principal after the proper time for giving it. Doe d. Lyster v. Goldwin, 1 G. & D. 463; 2 Q. B. 143; 10 L. J., Q. B. 275. S. P., Doe d. Mann v. Walters, 10 B. & C. 626; 5 M. & Ry. 357; 8 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 297.

A notice to quit given by an agent in the names of A. and B., and also several other parties, is valid as a notice from A. and B. only. Doe d. Bailey v. Foster, 3 C. B. 215; 15 L. J., C. P. 263.

A notice to quit given by an agent of the landlord to receive rents is not sufficient, without a recognition by the landlord; the bringing of an action founded on the notice is not of itself a recognition. Doe d. Rhodes v. Robinson, 3 Bing. (N.C.) 677; 4 Scott, 396; 3 Hodges, 84; 6 L. J., C. P. 235; 1 Jur. 356.

An agent to receive rents and let premises has authority to determine a tenancy. In ejectment a person defending as landlord is bound by the same estoppel as the tenant in possession. Doe d. Manvers (Earl) v. Mizen, 2 M. & Rob. 56.

In ejectment by a corporation against a tenant from year to year, a notice to quit given by the steward of the corporation is sufficient without evidence that he had an authority under seal from the corporation for the purpose. Doe d. Rochester (Dean) v. Pierce, 2 Camp. 96; 11 R. R. 673. And see Doe d. Plymouth Corporation v. Fillis, 2 Chit. 170.

An agent, being authorised in writing to manage lands in the name and on behalf of their owner, to perform, in his name, certain specified duties relating to them, which would require the agent's personal attendance, and also, in his name, to sign, serve, and give notices and other documents necessary to be served upon or given to the tenants for the purpose of carrying into effect such management, served a notice to quit signed by him in his own name, but purporting to be served by him as such agent, and on behalf of the landlord:—Held, a sufficient notice to determine a yearly tenancy. Erne (Earl) v. Armstrong, Ir. R. 6 C. L. 279; 20 W. R. 370.

Receiver.]—A receiver appointed by the Court of Chancery, with a general authority to let the lands to tenants from year to year, has also authority to determine such tenancies by a regular notice to quit. Doe d. Marsack v. Read, 12 East, 57.

Infants.]—Notice to quit must be given by an infant, who becomes entitled to the reversion of an estate leased from year to year, before he can eject the tenant. Maddon d. Baker v. White, 2 Term Rep. 159; 1 R. R. 453.

Where an ejectment has been brought on the demise of an infant, which has been compromised, and the tenant in possession has attorned to the infant; though the lessor of the plaintiff, on his coming of age, does not accept rent, or do any act to confirm the tenancy, yet, as the former ejectment was brought at his suit and for his benefit, he will not be allowed to consider the tenant as a trespasser, and bring a new ejectment without giving notice to quit. Doe d. Miller v. Noden, 2 Esp. 530.

Mortgagor.]—A notice to quit signed by the mortgagor is sufficient to determine a tenancy created before the mortgage, when the tenant knew previously to the service of the notice that the mortgagor had a general authority from the mortgagee to determine tenancies. Stackpoole v. Parkinson, Ir. R. 8 C. L. 561.

A notice to quit signed by a mortgagor, who had a general authority from the mortgagee to determine tenancies, is sufficient to determine a tenancy created before the mortgage, although the notice does not purport on the face of it to be on behalf of the mortgagee. Ib.

A mortgagor remaining in possession after the day of default has passed, receiving the rents and giving receipts in his own name, cannot, by notice to quit signed by himself only, determine a tenancy which existed at the time of the execution of the mortgage. Miles v. Murphy, Ir. R. 5 C. L. 382.

A mortgage deed containing a power authorising the mortgagor to grant leases of any part of the mortgage premises that might be "out of lease," provided that the counterpart should be delivered to the mortgagee, does not enable the mortgagor to determine pre-existing tenancies. Ib.

Mortgagee.]—A notice to a tenant to quit was signed by the mortgagee after the mortgage of the reversion. A clause in the mortgage deed provided that if the interest was duly paid by the mortgagor the principal was not to be called in by the mortgagee until a period after the date of the notice. There was also a covenant for quiet enjoyment:—Held, that notwithstanding this clause the signature of the mortgagee to the notice was sufficient. Burton v. Dickenson, 17 L. T. 246.

d. To whom to be Given.

Tenants in Common.]—Where two tenants hold premises in common, notice to quit to one of them is sufficient to determine the tenancy. Doe d. Macartney (Lord) v. Crick, 5 Esp. 196; 8 R. R. 848.

At least it is evidence that the notice reached the other tenant, who lived elsewhere. Doe d. Bradford (Lord) v. Watkins, 7 East, 551; 3 Smith, 517; 8 R. R. 670.

Tenant who has Underlet.]—If, upon notice to quit given to a tenant he gives notice to his under-tenants to quit at the same time, and upon the expiration of the notice he quits so much as is occupied by himself, but his under-tenants refuse to quit, an ejectment may still be maintained against him for so much as his under-tenants have not given up. Roe v. Wiggs, 2 Bos. & P. (N.R.) 330.

A tenant from year to year underlet part of the premises, and then gave up to his landlord the part remaining in his own possession, without either receiving a regular notice to quit the whole, or giving notice to quit to his sub-lessee, or even surrendering that part in the name of the whole (supposing that anything short of a regular notice to quit from the landlord to his immediate tenant would, after such sub-letting, have determined the tenancy in the whole); yet the landlord cannot entitle himself to recover against the sub-lessee (there being no privity of contract between them), upon giving half a year's notice to quit in his own name, and not in the name of his first lessee: for, as to the part so underlet the original tenancy still continued undetermined. Pleasant d. Hayton v. Benson, 14 East, 234; 12 R. R. 507.

Party in Possession.]—Where A. had been tenant of certain premises, and upon his leaving them B. took possession:—Held, that in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, it might be presumed that he came in as assignee of A., although he never paid rent, and that notice to quit was rightly given to B. Doe d. Morris v. Williams, 6 B. & C. 41; 9 D. & R. 30; 30 R. R. 244.

Collector of Rents.]—A notice to quit given to a mere collector of rents is not good. Pearse v. Boulter, 2 F. & F. 133.

Service on Lessor's Representatives—Surrender by Operation of Law.]—Certain customary freeholds were demised by a lease of the 15th June, 1877, to two lessees, for twenty-one years from Christmas, 1876, at a rental of 130*l*. The lease was determinable at the expiration of the fourteenth year, on the lessor or lessee's giving to the other of them, "or his or their representatives or assigns," a written notice of such intention. The lessor died in December, 1877, having devised and bequeathed his customary freeholds and leaseholds to trustees in trust for his wife M. during her widowhood, and then to other beneficiaries. On the 21st December, 1889, one of the two lessees gave notice to M. of his intention to quit and yield up possession of the leasehold premises at Christmas, 1890. On the 13th August, 1890, M., purporting to act under the provisions of the Settled Estates Act, granted a lease of the same premises to one of the two original lessees for seven years from Christmas, 1890, at the reduced rent of 100*l*. The licence of the lord of the manor for this lease was not obtained. In an action by the trustees and beneficiaries of the original lessor against the two lessees:—Held, (1) that the notice of the 21st December, 1889, not having been served on the lessor's representatives or assigns, was not a good notice; and (2) that the old lease was not surrendered by operation of law, inasmuch as it was voidable if not void. Easton v. Penny, 67 L. T. 290; 41 W. R. 72.

e. Form and Validity of.

Written or Parol.]—A parol notice to quit by a tenant under a parol lease is sufficient. Timmins v. Rawlinson, 3 Burr. 1603; 1 W. Bl. 533. S. P., Doe d. Macartney (Lord) v. Crick, 5 Esp. 196; 8 R. R. 848.

Though given by a person acting as steward of a corporation. Roe d. Rochester (Dean) v. Pierce, 2 Camp. 96; 11 R. R. 673. See Smith v. Birmingham Gas Co., 1 A. & E. 526; 3 N. & M. 771; 3 L. J., K. B. 165.

Direction and Address.]—It is not necessary that a notice to quit should be directed to the tenant in possession, if proved to have been delivered to him at the proper time. Doe d. Matthewson v. Wrightman, 4 Esp. 5; 6 R. R. 834.

And if a notice to quit is directed to the tenant by a wrong christian name, and he keeps it and does not send it back, it is a waiver of the misdirection, and the lessor may recover on it if there was no other tenant of the name. Doe v. Spiller, 6 Esp. 70; 9 R. R. 810.

Signature—Formal Surrender.]—A lease contained a clause enabling the tenant "to surrender and deliver up the premises" at the end of every three years, "he first giving six calendar months' previous notice of his intention to surrender said premises." A notice was delivered at the proper time signifying such intention, but bearing no signature. When the time in the notice had expired the tenant tendered possession, which was not accepted. The tenant thereupon left, leaving a caretaker in possession:—Held, that the notice did not require signature; that no formal surrender by deed or otherwise was necessary, the words in the clause referring to the surrender of possession merely, and that, therefore, the tenancy was determined. Carleton v. Herbert, 14 W. R. 772—Ir. Ex. C.

The Court will give a Reasonable Construction to.]—A notice dated 27th and served on the 28th September, requiring a tenant to quit "at Lady-day next, or at the end of his current year," must be understood to mean a six months' and not a two days' notice to quit. Doe d. Huntingtower (Lord) v. Culliford, 4 D. & R. 249.

For the court will look to the intention of the parties, and where general language is used, which is open to doubt, they will intend if possible that the notice has a sensible meaning, and construe it accordingly; and in this case a two days' notice could not have been intended, because that would be no notice whatever. Ib.

Certainty of.]—A notice to quit, "or I shall insist upon double rent," is sufficiently certain to support an ejectment. Doe d. Matthews v. Jackson, 1 Dougl. 175.

A notice to quit at the end of the current year of tenancy, "on failure whereof, I shall require you to pay me double former rent or value for so long as you detain possession," is an unqualified notice, and does not give the tenant an option. Doe d. Lyster v. Goldwin, 1 G. & D. 463; 2 Q. B. 143; 10 L. J., Q. B. 275.

A notice to quit must be such as the tenant may act upon with safety; that is, one which is in fact, and which the tenant has reason to believe to be, binding on the landlord. Jones v. Phipps, 9 B. & S. 761; 37 L. J., Q. B. 198; L. R. 3 Q. B. 303; 18 L. T. 813; 16 W. R. 1044.

A notice to determine a tenancy, although imperfectly expressed, is a good and valid notice if accepted as such at the time by the landlord. General Assurance Co. v. Worsley, 64 L. J., Q. B. 253; 15 R. 328; 72 L. T. 358.

Notice was given to a tenant from year to year, holding from Martinmas to Martinmas, to quit "on the 13th day of May next, or upon such other day or time as the current year for which you now hold will expire." The notice was dated and served on 21st October:—Held, bad. Doe d. Richmond Corporation v. Morphett, 7 Q. B. 577; 14 L. J., Q. B. 345; 9 Jur. 776.

By an agreement for a lease of five years it was provided that the tenancy might be determined "after the expiration of the term of three years out of the term of five years" by six months' notice in writing, expiring at the corresponding quarter-day at which the tenancy commenced. The tenant entered into possession on the 29th September, 1885, and on the 23rd March, 1888, gave notice to the landlord in the following terms:—"Kindly take notice that I intend to surrender to you the tenancy of this house on or before the 29th September, 1888":—Held, that the notice to quit was equivocal in its terms, and therefore bad. Gardner v. Ingram, 61 L. T. 729; 54 J. P. 311.

A tenant wrote to his landlord, from whom he had taken a house on a lease determinable at the end of seven or fourteen years, "I have just been looking at my lease, and I see that my first seven years will be determined on 25th December, 1894. I have been making inquiries for some time past, and I find that I am paying too high a rent, and considerably higher than any of the adjoining houses are able to let for now. I understand that the rent is 50*l.* too high, and I shall not be able to stop unless some reduction is made. I give you an early intimation of this, so that you may have ample time to consider what course you would like to adopt" :—Held, that the letter constituted a good and sufficient notice to determine the lease. Bury v. Thompson, 64 L. J., Q. B. 500 ; [1895] 1 Q. B. 696 ; 14 R. 299 ; 72 L. T. 187 ; 43 W. R. 338 ; 59 J. P. 228—C. A.

Where a tenant is entitled to six months' notice, a notice to quit "at the expiration of the present year's tenancy" is sufficient, although it does not appear on the face of it that it was given six months before the period therein specified for quitting. Doe d. Gorst v. Timothy, 2 Car. & K. 351.

Where a tenancy began on the 11th October, a notice served in June, 1840, requiring the tenant to quit "on the 11th of October now next ensuing, or such other day or time as your tenancy may expire," is a three months' notice to quit in October, 1840, and not a six months' notice to quit in October, 1841. Mills v. Goff, 14 M. & W. 72 ; 14 L. J., Ex. 249.

As regards Time.]—Notice to quit at the end and expiration of "the current year of your tenancy, which shall expire next after the end of one half-year from the date hereof," was held sufficient. Doe d. Phillips v. Butler, 2 Esp. 589 ; 5 R. R. 756.

A notice to quit on the anniversary of the day "at," or "on," or "from," or "on and from" which the tenancy commenced is good. Sidebotham v. Holland, 64 L. J., Q. B. 200 ; [1895] 1 Q. B. 378 ; 14 R. 135 ; 72 L. T. 62 ; 43 W. R. 228—C. A.

A notice delivered to a tenant at Michaelmas, 1795, to quit "at Lady-day, which will be in the year 1795," was a good notice to quit on Lady-day, 1796. Doe d. Bedford (Duke) v. Knightley, 7 Term Rep. 63 ; 1 Chit. 11 ; 4 R. R. 375.

A notice to quit on one of two days, as an Old or New Lady-day, is good, if served six months before the day on which the tenancy commenced. Doe d. Matthewson v. Wrightman, 4 Esp. 5 ; 6 R. R. 834.

A notice to quit on Lady-day is a good termination of a holding either from Lady-day old or Lady-day new style. Denn d. Willan v. Walker, Peake Ad. C. 194.

If a tenant from year to year holds from Old Michaelmas, a notice to quit at Michaelmas generally is good. Doe d. Hinde v. Vince, 2 Camp. 256. S. P., Doe v. Brookes, 2 Camp. 257, n. But see Doe d. Spicer v. Lea, 11 East, 312.

A notice to quit on St. Michaelmas-day is primâ facie a notice to quit at New Michaelmas ; but, if the holding is from Michaelmas, it will be a sufficient notice to quit at that time. Doe d. Willis v. Perrin, 9 Car. & P. 467.

But a notice to quit at Michaelmas generally will be held to mean Old Michaelmas, if the custom of the country is to hold from that time. Furley d. Canterbury v. Wood, 1 Esp. 198.

Varying from Proviso in Lease.]—An indenture of lease contained a clause, that if the lessee should be desirous to put an end to the term at the end of the first fourteen years, and should leave or give six calendar months' notice in writing, immediately preceding the end of the first fourteen years, then the demise should cease and determine. The lease commenced at Michaelmas, and in November of the fourteenth year of the term the lessee gave notice, in writing, that he should deliver up the premises on the 24th June next, agreeably to the covenants of the lease. The jury found that the lessor understood the notice to be to give up at the end of the fourteen years :—Held, that it was bad, as it varied from the proviso in the lease. Cadby v. Martinez, 3 P. & D. 386 ; 11 A. & E. 720 ; 9 L. J., Q. B. 281.

Parol Evidence to explain Intention.]—Where on a written agreement to demise from the following "Lady-day," a notice to quit "on the 6th April" was given :—Held, good, parol evidence being adduced to shew that by "Lady-day" the parties meant "Old Lady-day." Denn d. Peters v. Hopkinson, 3 D. & R. 507.

Part only of Premises.]—A notice to quit a part only of premises leased together is bad. Doe d. Rodd v. Archer, 14 East, 245 ; 12 R. R. 509.

Where a farm was leased for twenty-one years at a rent of 180*l.* per annum, consisting, as described in the lease, of the Town Barton, and its several parcels described by name, at the rent of 83*l.*, other closes named, at other rents of 5*l.*, 5*l.* and 1*l.* ; the Shippen Barton, and its several parcels, described by name, at 86*l.* ; with a power reserved to either party to determine the lease at the end of fourteen years, on giving two years' previous notice :—Held, that a notice by the landlord to his tenant to quit "Town Barton, &c. agreeably to the terms of the covenant between us, on the expiration of the fourteenth year of your term," given in due time, was sufficient. Ib.

A defendant leased about twenty acres of land for five years, at a yearly rent from the owner in fee-simple, under a memorandum of agreement, and immediately afterwards sub-let about six acres, part of the premises, to another person, on a yearly tenancy. At the conclusion of the term the defendant continued in possession of the whole, and during the first year after the term expired the lessor conveyed to the plaintiff the six acres which the defendant had sub-let, and agreed with the plaintiff, but without the consent of the defendant, as to the amount of rent to be apportioned to this part of the premises out of the rent which the defendant paid. Although notice of the conveyance and agreed apportionment of rent was afterwards given to the defendant, he never recognised the plaintiff as his landlord, but continued to pay rent for the whole premises to his lessor, who handed over the agreed portion to the plaintiff. The plaintiff gave the defendant notice to quit the sub-let premises six months before the expiration of a year's tenancy ; and the defendant forwarded this notice, with a further notice to quit from himself, to his sub-tenant. At the end of the year the sub-tenant gave up possession of his premises to the plaintiff, but the defendant wrote to the latter claiming to hold the same as tenant to the original lessor, and requiring possession. The defendant then did certain acts upon the premises which had been in his sub-tenant's occupation for which the plaintiff brought an action of trespass :—Held, that his notice to the defendant to quit part only of the premises demised to him was invalid ; that his passing on the notice to his tenant did not preclude his disputing it ; and that the action could not be maintained. Prince v. Evans, 29 L. T. 835.

Notice pursuant to Proviso referring to Part —Right to Recover Possession of the Whole.]—The lessor may, under a proviso in a lease empowering him "upon three months' notice of his intention to resume for building purposes any portion of the demised premises . . . to enter into such possession," resume possession of the entire premises. Kennedy v. Liddy, 15 W. R. 431.

The fact that the sum per acre to be allowed as rebate of rent in such case exceeds the rent per acre originally reserved, will not be considered as evidence of a contrary intention. Ib.

Actual re-entry is not necessary under such a proviso, as the tenancy is determined by the notice. Ib.

Description of Premises.]—A misdescription of the premises is not fatal, if they are otherwise sufficiently designated, so that the party to whom the notice has been given has not been misled. Doe d. Cox v. Roe, 4 Esp. 185 ; 6 R. R. 850.

Where a house, lands, and tithes are held under a parol demise at a joint rent, a notice to quit "the houses, lands, and premises, with the appurtenances," includes the tithes, and is sufficient to put an end to the tenancy. Doe d. Morgan v. Church, 3 Camp. 71.

In ejectment to recover a farm at H., the notice to quit described the premises to be at D., which was a distinct parish ; but as it did not appear that the tenant was misled by the notice :—Held, that it was sufficient. Doe d. Armstrong v. Wilkinson, 4 P. & D. 323 ; 12 A. & E. 743 ; 1 Arn. & H. 39.

Additional Clause in—Increase of Rent.]—The defendant was tenant to the plaintiff from year to year of a shop and premises : the plaintiff gave the defendant a written notice to quit, which contained the following clause : "And I hereby further give you notice that should you retain possession of the premises after the day before mentioned the annual rental of the premises now held by you from me will be 160*l.*, payable quarterly, in advance" :—Held, that the notice to quit being otherwise sufficient, it was not rendered invalid by the additional clause. Ahearn v. Bellman, 48 L. J., Ex. 681 ; 4 Ex. D. 201 ; 40 L. T. 711 ; 27 W. R. 928—C. A.

f. Expiration of.

i. In Ordinary Cases.

Generally.]—In the case of a tenancy from year to year, there must be a half-year's notice to quit, ending at the expiration of the year. Right d. Flower v. Darby, 1 Term Rep. 159 ; 1 R. R. 169. And see Doe d. Puddicombe v. Harris, 1 Term Rep. 161, n.

If premises are taken "for twelve months certain, and six months' notice to quit afterwards," the tenancy may be determined by a six months' notice to quit, expiring at the end of the first year. Thompson v. Maberly, 2 Camp. 573.

Where premises are let from year to year upon an agreement that either party may determine the tenancy by a quarter's notice, the notice must expire at the period of the year when the tenancy commenced. Doe d. Pitcher v. Donovan, 1 Taunt. 555 ; 2 Camp. 78.

So, where premises are taken under an agreement, by which the tenant is always to quit at three months' notice, the notice must expire either at the same time of the year the tenancy commenced, or at any other corresponding quarter-day. Kemp v. Derrett, 3 Camp. 510 ; 14 R. R. 820.

A party took possession of premises on the 1st August, and at the Michaelmas following paid the half-quarter's rent, and continued afterwards to pay quarterly on the usual feast-days :—Held, that a notice to quit at Michaelmas was sufficient, and that although the landlord had at first given a notice, expiring within the half-quarter, it was not necessarily presumable thence that the tenancy was from year to year, commencing with the half-quarter. Savage v. Stapleton, 3 Car. & P. 275.

The defendant went into possession of certain premises under an agreement for three years by which he agreed to pay a yearly rent of 50*l.*, such rent to commence as from May 9, 1891, and the first half-quarter was to become due and payable on June 24, and after that on the usual quarter-days. At the end of the three years he stayed on, and continued to pay the rent quarterly as before. On September 28, 1896, notice to quit was served on him for March 25, 1897 :—Held, that the notice to quit was bad, as the tenancy did not commence on March 25. Simmons v. Underwood, 76 L. T. 777.

Where A. agreed to let B. premises for three years from Michaelmas, 1845, with a power for B., six months previous to the end of the term of three years, by a notice to that effect, to renew the tenancy for a further term of three years, and B. entered and paid rent, and gave notice of his desire to renew, but no further lease was granted :—Held, that a tenancy from year to year was granted, determinable during the three years by a notice to quit, but expiring at the end of that period by effluxion of time, when A. might recover in ejectment without giving any notice to quit. Doe d. Devenish v. Moffat, 15 Q. B. 257 ; 19 L. J., Q. B. 438 ; 14 Jur. 935.

By a written agreement the tenancy was to be "from year to year from Michaelmas next, at the yearly sum of 35*l.*, payable half-yearly, at Lady-day and Michaelmas, except the last half-year, which portion of the rent shall be paid on or before the 1st of August in that year, the tenant to dress the lands in the due course of husbandry, and to allow the landlord or incoming tenant in the last year to enter on the 1st of May to make fallows, the tenant to be allowed the use of barns for stacking and threshing the crops of the last year, until the 1st of May after the tenancy" :—Held, that the agreement did not create a tenancy for more than a year, and that notice to quit might be given, expiring at the end of the first year. Doe d. Plumer v. Nainby, 10 Q. B. 473 ; 16 L. J., Q. B. 303 ; 11 Jur. 308.

On 20th May, 1824, A. agreed to let to B. certain rooms. B. agreed to pay 61*l.* a year as rent, by quarterly payments, and it was stipulated that the tenancy should be determinable on three months' notice on either side. On 20th August, B. served A. with a written notice to quit on 20th November. Two months after the expiration of the notice, B. agreed to give up the keys, but soon after refused on the ground that the notice was bad :—Held, first, that the agreement created a tenancy for a year certain, and that, therefore, the notice ought to have ended with the current year, unless there was a custom to the contrary, and, secondly, that B. agreeing to give up the keys was no acquiescence in the notice. Brown v. Burtinshaw, 7 D. & R. 603.

Demise for one year and six months certain from August 13th, at a rent payable at the usual quarter-days; three calendar months' notice to be given on either side before determination of the tenancy. The tenant continued to occupy beyond the year and six months:—Held, that a three months' notice to quit, expiring on 13th August, was proper, and not a notice expiring at the end of a year from the termination of the year and six months. Doe d. Robinson v. Dobell, 1 Q. B. 806; 10 L. J., Q. B. 242.

Premises were let from 19th April, 1841, at the yearly rent of 42*l.*, payable quarterly, the first payment of 7*l.* 13*s.* 6*d.* to be made on 24th June, 1841, being the proportion down to that date; the tenant to hold and enjoy at that rent until one of the parties should give the other six calendar months' notice to quit; the tenant to leave the premises in as good a condition as at the date of the agreement:—Held, that notice might be given to quit at the expiration of any six months after 24th June, and that a notice on 24th June for 25th December, 1841, was good. Doe d. King v. Grafton, 18 Q. B. 496; 21 L. J., Q. B. 276; 16 Jur. 833.

A person entered as tenant under a written agreement on the 7th of May, 1850, but paid no rent:—Held, that a six months' notice to quit, expiring on the 7th of May, 1851, was a good notice. Doe d. Cornwall v. Matthews, 11 C. B. 675.

An agreement to give six months' notice to quit means, primâ facie, six lunar months, and cannot be explained to mean calendar months by evidence of the usage of a particular estate. Rogers v. Hull Dock Co., 34 L. J., Ch. 165; 11 L. T. 42; 12 W. R. 1101.

A. held premises of B. as tenant for a year, and so on from year to year, so long as C. should live, the tenancy commencing at Christmas, after the death of A. (C. being also dead). A.'s widow, by agreement with the landlord, continued to occupy the premises at the same rent, nothing being said about the commencement of her tenancy:—Held, that there was evidence enough to warrant the jury in assuming that the widow's tenancy was a mere continuation of the original tenancy of A., and therefore properly determined by a notice to expire at Christmas. Humphreys v. Franks, 18 C. B. 323.

W. agreed to let to H. a house quarterly, at a yearly rent, to be paid quarterly; a quarter's notice to be given on either side. H. occupied for more than a year:—Held, that the agreement shewed that, though a notice might have been given to quit within the year, both parties intended the tenancy to endure for more than a year, and, therefore, such tenancy having in fact lasted a year, it was a yearly hiring conferring a settlement. Hastings Union v. St. James's, Clerkenwell, 6 B. & S. 914; 35 L. J., M. C. 65; L. R. 1 Q. B. 38; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 977; 13 L. T. 362; 14 W. R. 175.

Under-mining Lease.]—An agreement for a mining lease contained the following clause: The lessees to be at liberty at any time hereafter to determine this agreement, or the lease agreed to be granted, and to abandon the ironworks on giving to the lessor six months' notice in writing of their intention so to do. The lessees entered and paid rent under the agreement, but no lease was executed:—Held, that this being a mining lease, and looking at the whole contract and the surrounding circumstances, the lessees were entitled to determine the tenancy at any time by six months' notice, expiring six months after the delivery of the notice, without regard to the time of the commencement of the tenancy. Bridges v. Potts, 17 C. B. (N.S.) 314; 33 L. J., C. P. 338; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1049; 11 L. T. 373.

Under Void Agreement for a Lease.]—A tenant held premises under a void agreement for a term of five years and a half from Michaelmas, 1823; before the expiration of the five years and a half, the parties entered into a negotiation for a future lease for seven, fourteen, or twenty-one years, at an increased rent, in consideration of the landlord laying out money in improvements: no lease was ever executed, but the tenant continued in the occupation of the premises, paying the increased rent from Michaelmas, 1828, down to 1835:—Held, that a notice given at Lady-day, to quit at Michaelmas, the period at which the tenancy originally commenced, was valid. Berrey v. Lindley, 4 Scott (N.R.) 61; 3 Man. & G. 498; 11 L. J., C. P. 27; 5 Jur. 1061.

Under Void Lease.]—If a landlord leases for seven years by parol, and agrees that the tenant shall enter at Lady-day and quit at Candlemas, though the lease is void by the Statute of Frauds as to the duration of the term, the tenant holds under the terms of the lease in other respects; and therefore the landlord can only put an end to the tenancy at Candlemas. Doe d. Rigge v. Bell, 5 Term Rep. 471; 2 R. R. 642.

Where a remainderman creates a new tenancy with a tenant in possession under a void lease granted by a tenant for life, and receives rent on the days of payment mentioned in the lease, a notice to quit must expire on the day of entry under the original demise. Roe d. Jordan v. Ward, 1 H. Bl. 97; 2 R. R. 728. S. P., Doe d. Collins v. Weller, 7 Term Rep. 478; 4 R. R. 496.

Holding over after.]—When a person, who held as tenant from year to year, has been permitted to remain undisturbed in possession after the expiration of a notice to quit, the question whether there is a subsisting tenancy from year to year is one of fact for a jury. Vance v. Vance, Ir. R. 5 C. L. 363.

Custom to continue in Possession.]—A tenant from year to year of a stone quarry in Yorkshire received from his landlord six months' notice to quit. The tenant claimed the right, under an alleged custom of the district, to be allowed to continue in possession a reasonable time after the expiration of the notice, to enable him to get the stone which he had "bared." At the expiration of the notice, the landlord brought ejectment against the tenant, who thereupon filed a bill to restrain the action, and setting up the custom as against the landlord:—Held, that the evidence failed to prove the existence of the custom as alleged; and that, even if it had existed, the proper remedy of the tenant would have been at law. Vint v. Constable, 25 L. T. 324.

ii. Different Times of Entry.

Which is principal Subject of Holding.]—Where a house and land are let together to be entered upon at different times, and it does not appear from the terms of the demise from what time the whole is to be taken as let together: it is a question of fact for the jury which is the principal and which the accessorial subject of demise, in order for the judge to decide whether the notice to quit the whole was given in time. Doe d. Heapy v. Howard, 11 East, 498; 11 R. R. 255.

A tenant held a house and land from year to year, the land from the 2nd February, and the house from 1st May. On 1st August, 1842, a notice to quit the whole on the 2nd February next was served on the tenant:—Held, a good notice to determine the tenancy on 2nd February. Doe d. Davenport v. Rhodes, 11 M. & W. 602; 1 D. & L. 293; 12 L. J., Ex. 382.

Under an agreement of demise, dated in January, of a dwelling-house, and other buildings for the purpose of carrying on a manufacture, together with certain meadow, pasture, and bleaching grounds, watercourses, &c. for a term of twenty-five years, to commence as to the meadow ground from the 25th of December last; as to the pasture, from the 25th of March next; and as to the housing, mills, and all the rest of the premises, from the 1st of May; reserving the first year's rent on the day of Pentecost, and the other half-year's rent at Martinmas:—Held, that the substantial subject of demise being the house and buildings for the purpose of the manufacture, which were to be entered on the 1st of May, that was the substantial time of entry to which a notice to quit ought to refer, and not to the 25th of December, when the incoming tenant had liberty of entering on the meadow, which was merely accessory to the other and principal subject of the demise; and consequently that a notice to quit served on the 28th of September (which would have been sufficient with reference even to the 25th of March, the day of entry on the pasture ground, the 29th of September being the correspondent half-yearly day of holding to the 25th of March), to quit at the expiration of the current year of holding, was sufficient. Doe d. Bradford (Lord) v. Watkins, 7 East, 551; 3 Smith, 517; 8 R. R. 670.

Land and buildings were held by a yearly tenant, the land from 2nd February to 2nd February, the buildings from 1st May to 1st May. The landlord, on 22nd October, 1833, served the tenant with a notice to quit the land and buildings at the expiration of half a year from the delivery of this notice, or at such other time or times as your present year's holding of or in the said premises, or any part or parts thereof respectively, shall expire, after the expiration of half a year from the delivery of this notice":—Held, that, as to the lands, the notice was to be considered a notice to quit on 2nd February, 1835, and that the landlord might recover both land and buildings after that day in ejectment. Doe d. Williams v. Smith, 5 A. & E. 350; 6 N. & M. 829; 2 H. & W. 176; 5 L. J., K.B. 216.

A tenant held a house and land from year to year, the land from 2nd February, the house, &c. from the 1st May. On the 16th February, 1838, a notice to quit was served on him, requiring him to quit and deliver up the farm at the end of his present year's holding:—Held, that this was a good notice to determine the tenancy of 1839; it not being shewn, on the part of the tenant, that the land was not the principal subject of the holding. Doe d. Kindersley v. Hughes, 7 M. & W. 139; 10 L. J., Ex. 185.

Where a tenant held a farm, as to the arable lands from Candlemas, and as to the buildings and pastures from May-day, and the rent was payable at Michaelmas and Lady-day, a notice to quit given six months from Lady-day, but not six months before Candlemas, was insufficient. Doe d. Grey De Wilton (Lord) v. ——, 2 East, 384.

But where, under an agreement by a tenant of a farm "to enter on the tillage land at Candlemas, and on the house and all other the premises at Lady-day following, and that when he left the farm he should quit the farm according to the times of entry as aforesaid," and the rent was reserved half-yearly at Michaelmas and Lady-day:—Held, that a notice to quit delivered half a year before Lady-day, but less than half a year before Candlemas, was good; the taking being in substance from Lady-day, with a privilege for the incoming tenant to enter on the arable land at Candlemas for the sake of ploughing, &c. Doe d. Strickland v. Spence, 6 East, 120; 2 Smith, 255; 8 R. R. 422.

So, an agreement to take a farm, the arable land from Old Candlemas, the pasture from Old Lady-day, and the meadow from Old May-day, paying rent half-yearly at Old Michaelmas and Lady-day, is substantially a taking of the whole from Old Lady-day, and a notice to quit delivered before Old Michaelmas is sufficient to determine the tenancy. Doe d. Daggett v. Snowden, 2 W. Bl. 1224.

g. Service.

With whom Left—Wife.]—If a notice to quit is served on the tenant's wife at the house, accompanied by a statement, that the paper delivered is "a notice of discharge," it is sufficient. Smith v. Clark, 9 D. P. C. 202; 1 W. P. C. 44. S. P., Pulteney v. Shelton, 5 Ves. 261, n.

—— Widow.]—A tenant from year to year died intestate, and, no administration being taken out, his widow continued in possession and paid the rent; the landlord served a notice to quit on her, and, on its expiration, he, with her assent, entered into an agreement with a new tenant for letting the premises, in pursuance of which the new tenant entered and paid rent; subsequently a son of the deceased tenant took out administration to him, and brought an ejectment as administrator to recover possession:—Held, that the service of the notice to quit on the widow, the person in possession, was sufficient, in the absence of a legal personal representative of the deceased tenant, to determine the tenancy which had been in him, and was effectual for such determination even as against the legal personal representative subsequently raised, and that therefore the plaintiff was not entitled to recover possession. Sweeny v. Sweeny, Ir. R. 10 C. L. 375.

—— Daughter.]—A. was tenant to the plaintiff from year to year. Age had made him imbecile and unable to manage his farm or any business, but his sons and daughter jointly transacted all his affairs. A notice to quit was delivered to the daughter at A.'s house upon the farm, but she was not told what it was, nor that it was for A., nor to deliver it to him. After the notice had lain in the house for some time the daughter burned it. The sons knew of the service of the notice. The jury found that it never reached A.'s hands, and that the fact of its receipt by the daughter had not been made known to him. At the trial the judge held that the service of the notice was sufficient:—Held, that the delivery to the daughter constituted legal service on A. Tanham v. Nicholson, L. R. 5 H. L. 561; Ir. R. 6 C. L. 188.

T. lived in a house where his two sons and his daughter also resided. T. was imbecile. The house was managed by his daughter, the farming business by his two sons. A notice to quit, addressed to the father, was served at the house by delivery to the daughter. She put it on the dresser in the kitchen, and afterwards burnt it. One of the sons knew of its existence, but was not shewn to have known its exact terms, though he was aware of its nature:—Held, that this was a service sufficient to entitle the landlord to maintain ejectment against the father. Liddy v. Kennedy, L. R. 5 H. L. 134; 20 W. R. 150.

—— Servant.]—The mere leaving of a notice to quit at the tenant's house with a servant, without further proof of its having been explained to the servant, or that it came to the tenant's hands, is not sufficient. Doe d. Buross v. Lucas, 5 Esp. 153; 8 R. R. 842.

Delivery of a notice to quit to the servant is sufficient, though the tenant might not have been informed of it till within the half-year after its expiration, especially as the servant might have been called, but was not. Doe d. Neville v. Dunbar, M. & M. 10.

A notice to quit served upon Thomas Mitchell, the servant of John Mitchell, instead of upon John Mitchell, although the latter afterwards acknowledged having seen the notice, and referred to the mistake, is not sufficient. Doe v. Mitchell, 1 Jur. 795.

The service of a notice to quit made at the house of the tenant upon a person whose duty it would be to deliver the notice to the tenant, is sufficient to sustain ejectment, although in fact the notice was never delivered to the tenant. Tanham v. Nicholson, L. R. 5 H. L. 561; Ir. R. 6 C. L. 188.

The presumption in such a case is that it did reach the tenant himself. Ib.

In such a case the question is not whether the servant performed his duty in delivering it to his master, but whether the servant was to be considered as the agent of the master to receive the notice. If he was, the service of the notice will effectually bind the master. Ib.

The fact that the agent who received the notice destroyed it would liberate entirely the person who delivered the notice, but would not liberate the person whose agent had received and destroyed it. Ib.

When there has been service of notice to quit left at the tenant's house with a servant of the tenant, such a fact is more than presumptive evidence of a service on the tenant. The landlord's right would otherwise be controlled by something to which the landlord was an utter stranger. Ib.

But even if only presumptive evidence of the service be adduced, the evidence to rebut it must be proof of the fact that the notice did not come to the knowledge of the tenant at all. Ib.

Service of notice upon a servant living at the house of one of several lessees, the servant "promising to give it to him on his return home in a few days," was good service upon that lessee. Liddy v. Kennedy, L. R. 5 H. L. 134; 20 W. R. 150.

—— Officers of Corporation.]—An ejectment against the plaintiffs pro tempore of a corporation, cannot be maintained by proving payment of rent for the premises, by the annual predecessors of the defendants, in the same office for several years before, and service of the notice to quit on the defendants, the existing bailiffs; for the payment of such rent by the bailiffs in succession is merely evidence of a tenancy in the corporation. But, at any rate, such tenancy may be determined by a notice to the corporation to quit, served on its officers. Doe d. Carlisle (Earl) v. Woodman, 8 East, 227; 9 R. R. 422.

—— Tenant not to be found—Delivery at Premises.]—A lease of premises for twenty-one years contained a proviso that it should be lawful for the landlord or his assigns to put an end to the demise at the end of the first fourteen years by delivering to the tenant or his assigns six calendar months' previous notice in writing of his intention to do so. In an action by the assignee of the reversion to recover possession of the premises on the ground that the demise had been duly determined by notice under the proviso, it appeared that the lessee had disappeared some years previously, after having mortgaged the premises by way of under-lease, that his address could not be found, and that written notice to determine the tenancy directed to him had been sent to his last known address, and had also been delivered to the mortgagee and to the occupier of the premises:—Held, that the action could not be maintained, as there had been no service of the notice on the lessee, and as he had not assigned the premises no other service would satisfy the terms of the proviso. Hogg v. Brooks, 15 Q. B. D. 256; 50 J. P. 118—C. A.

When—On Sunday.]—A notice to quit is good, though given on Sunday. Sangster v. Noy, 16 L. T. 157.

—— Ejectment pending.]—A notice to quit was served during the pendency of an ejectment for nonpayment of rent, in which judgment was subsequently entered and an habere executed; an order for restitution having been afterwards obtained by the tenant, an ejectment on the title was then brought, founded upon the notice to quit:—Held, that the notice to quit was not effectual to determine the tenancy. Hall v. Flanagan, Ir. R. 11 C. L. 470.

Evidence as to.]—A notice to quit is sufficiently served upon a tenant if it can be shewn that it came to his hands before the six months previously to the expiration of his year of holding, though the notice had been served only by having been put under the door of the tenant's house. Alford v. Vickery, Car. & M. 280.

The regular service of a notice to quit held to have been properly inferred from the circumstance of the tenant's speaking about "the notice to quit which he had received," and engaging a valuer to value his rights as an outgoing tenant. Doe d. Simpson v. Hall, 5 Man. & G. 795.

Where the tenant of an estate holden by the year has a dwelling-house at another place, the delivery of a notice to quit to his servant at the dwelling-house is strong presumptive evidence that the master received the notice. Jones d. Griffiths v. Marsh, 4 Term Rep. 464; 2 R. R. 441.

h. Waiver of.

Accepting or Distraining for Rent.]—If a landlord receives rent accrued due after the expiration of a notice to quit, it is a waiver of that notice. Goodright d. Charter v. Cordwent, 6 Term Rep. 219 ; 3 R. R. 161.

So if he distrains for such rent. Zouch d. Ward v. Willingale, 1 H. Bl. 311 ; 2 R. R. 770. See Jenner v. Clegg, 1 M. & Rob. 213.

But the mere acceptance of rent by a landlord, for occupation subsequently to the time when the tenant ought to have quitted according to the notice given him for that purpose, is not of itself a waiver on the part of the landlord of such notice, but matter of evidence only, to be left to the jury under the circumstances of the case. Doe d. Cheney v. Batten, Cowp. 243 ; 9 East, 314, n. ; 9 R. R. 570, n.

The receipt by an authorised agent of rent due at Michaelmas, is primâ facie a waiver of a notice to quit at Midsummer. Doe d. Ash v. Calvert, 2 Camp. 387 ; 11 R. R. 745.

But where rent is usually paid to a banker, if the banker, without any special authority, receives rent accruing after the expiration of a notice to quit, the notice is not thereby waived. Ib.

The demand and acceptance of rent due subsequent to a notice to determine a tenancy of chattels is a waiver of the notice. Keith, Prowse & Co. v. National Telephone Co., 63 L. J., Ch. 373 ; [1894] 2 Ch. 147 ; 8 R. 776 ; 70 L. T. 276 ; 42 W. R. 380 ; 58 J. P. 573.

New Term on Expiration.]—Semble, where a term in chattels has expired and rent has been subsequently accepted, a tenancy from year to year is created, and the tenant is entitled to six months' notice to determine the tenancy whatever may have been the length of notice required during the continuance of the original tenancy. Ib.

Demanding Rent.]—Though payment and acceptance of rent accruing after the expiration of a notice to quit amount to a waiver of the notice, a demand of such rent does not necessarily operate as a waiver ; and it is a question for the jury, and not for the court, whether, under the circumstances of the case, the notice has been waived. Blyth v. Dennett, 13 C. B. 178 ; 22 L. J., C. P. 79.

Accepting New Tenant.]—If, at the end of a year, when the tenancy is from year to year, the landlord accepts another person as tenant in the room of the former tenant, without any surrender in writing, such acceptance will be a dispensation of any notice to quit. Sparrow v. Hawkes, 2 Esp. 505.

Second Notice.]—A landlord gave a notice to quit different parts of a farm at different times, which the tenant neglected to do in part, in consequence of which the landlord commenced an ejectment ; and before the last period mentioned in the notice was expired, the landlord, fearing that the witness, by whom he was to prove the notice, would die, gave another notice to quit at the respective times in the following year, but continued to proceed with his ejectment :—Held, the second notice was no waiver of the first. Doe d. Williams v. Humphreys, 2 East, 237.

And a second notice, delivered to a tenant after the expiration of a former notice, to quit on a subsequent day, or to pay double rent, is no waiver of such first notice or of the double rent which has accrued under it. Messenger v. Armstrong, 1 Term Rep. 53 ; 1 R. R. 148.

If, after the expiration of a notice to quit, the landlord gives the tenant a fresh notice, that, unless he quits in fourteen days, he will be required to pay double value, the second notice is no waiver of the first. Doe d. Digby v. Steel, 3 Camp. 117 ; 13 R. R. 768.

A tenant from year to year, believing that his tenancy determined at Midsummer, gave a written notice to quit at that period, which the landlord accepted and made no objection to. The tenant having afterwards discovered that his tenancy expired at Christmas, gave his landlord another notice accordingly, and on possession being demanded at Midsummer, refused to quit the premises :—Held, that the tenancy was not determined by the notice, inasmuch as it was not good as a notice to quit, and could not operate as a surrender by note in writing within the Statute of Frauds, the first being to take effect in futuro. Doe d. Murrell v. Milward, 3 M. & W. 328 ; 1 H. & H. 79 ; 7 L. J., Ex. 57.

But a second notice to the defendant to quit at Michaelmas, 1811, is a waiver as to him of a former notice given to the original lessee, from whom he claims by assignment, to quit at Michaelmas, 1810. Doe d. Brierly v. Palmer, 16 East, 53 ; 14 R. R. 284.

Detention of Key by Tenant.]—Where a tenancy from year to year has been determined by a regular notice to quit, the mere accidental detention of the key by the tenant (who has quitted the premises and removed his goods), for two days beyond the expiration of the term, does not amount to any evidence of use and occupation, so as to render him liable for another quarter. Gray v. Bompas, 11 C. B. (N.S.) 520 ; 5 L. T. 841.

Continuance of Possession of Tenant.]—In an action for rent of coal the issue being whether or not the defendants, having given notice to quit, had afterwards waived the notice, and continued the tenancy ; it was proved that, after the time fixed by the notice had expired, they continued for two months, working out certain portions of the coal, which, however, as they contended, it was usual for a tenant to take away on abandoning such a work :—Held, that it was for the jury to decide, on this issue, whether or not the defendants, in remaining for the two months, intended to waive the notice and continue the tenancy. Jones v. Shears, 4 A. & E. 832 ; 6 N. & M. 428 ; 2 H. & W. 43 ; 5 L. J., K. B. 153.

No continuance of the tenancy is necessarily implied, from the mere fact of a tenant's continuing in possession after the expiration of a notice to quit given by such tenant. Ib.

A yearly tenancy was determined in September, 1877, by notice to quit, and possession was demanded in November, 1877 ; but the former tenant continued in possession until the present action. After the expiration of the notice to quit, the landlord never accepted rent, though tendered. He told the former tenant that he was a trespasser, and frequently demanded possession, but without success. In an action to recover possession, founded on the notice to quit :—Held, that a verdict was properly directed for the landlord. Cusack v. Farrell, 18 L. R., Ir. 494. Affirmed, 20 L. R., Ir. 56—C. A.

Conditional Promise to Re-let.]—Where a tenant gave his landlord notice to quit at Michaelmas, 1835, and subsequently made an offer to remain another year, to which the agent of his landlord replied, that "H. (the landlord) has directed me to inform you that he could only consent to accept your offer of 420*l.* for the farm from Michaelmas next to Michaelmas, 1836, subject to the existing covenants, provided I could not find a tenant at the rent it appeared to be worth by the 1st of August ;" and the tenant then assented to these terms :—Held, that if the above amounted to a substantive agreement at all, it was an implied condition on the part of the tenant to allow any one wishing to take the farm to go over the land, and the tenant having refused to do so, the agreement fell to the ground, and the notice to quit at Michaelmas, 1835, remained good. Doe d. Hertford (Marquis) v. Hunt, 2 Gale, 102 ; 1 M. & W. 690 ; 5 L. J., Ex. 241.

Promise not to eject.]—A landlord of premises about to sell them, gave his tenant notice to quit on the 11th October, 1806, but promised him not to turn him out unless they were sold ; and not being sold till February, 1807, the tenant refused on demand to deliver up possession ; and on ejectment brought, held, that the promise (which was performed) was no waiver of the notice, nor operated as a licence to be on the premises otherwise than subject to the landlord's right of acting on such notice, if necessary ; and therefore, that the tenant not having delivered up possession on demand after a sale, was a trespasser from the expiration of the notice to quit. Whiteacre d. Boult v. Symonds, 10 East, 13 ; 10 R. R. 224.

Authority to Tenant to pay Charge—Admission.]—An authority from a landlord to his tenant to pay a charge upon the estate, in respect of a period subsequent to the expiration of the notice to quit is not a waiver of the notice, nor is it an admission that the person to whom it is addressed is filling the character of tenant at that period, because the tenant would be liable to answer for the amount in an action for mesne profits. Doe d. Bath v. Scott, 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 110.

Verbal Acquiescence.]—A verbal acquiescence by a landlord on receiving from a tenant from year to year a notice to quit, determining within the six months, is not sufficient. Bessell v. Landsberg, 7 Q. B. 638 ; 14 L. J., Q. B. 355 ; 9 Jur. 576.

Effect of.]—By a notice to quit given to a tenant from year to year his tenancy is determined on the expiration of the current year, and a waiver of the notice creates a new tenancy, taking effect on the expiration of the old one. Tayleur v. Wildin, 37 L. J., Ex. 173 ; L. R. 3 Ex. 303 ; 18 L. T. 655 ; 16 W. R. 1018.

Abandonment of.]—A notice to quit which is, during its currency, abandoned by the consent of both parties, and not acted on, does not per se put an end to a tenancy from year to year. Inchiquin (Lord) v. Lyons, 20 L. R., Ir. 474—C. A.

i. Effect in Evidence.

As to the Fact of a Tenancy.]—A notice by the owner of premises, requiring a tenant in possession "to leave the premises he then rented of the owner at Lady Day next," is not conclusive evidence of a demise from a testator to the party in possession. Doe d. Wilcockson v. Lynch, 2 Chit. 683. And see Bishop v. Howard, 3 D. & R. 293 ; 2 B. & C. 100 ; 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 243 ; 26 R. R. 291.

A notice desiring the tenant to "quit the premises which you hold under me, your term therein having long since expired," does not recognise a subsisting tenancy from year to year subsequent to the term, but is a mere demand of possession. Doe d. Godsell v. Inglis, 3 Taunt. 54.

As to the Commencement of the Tenancy.]—A notice to quit is not primâ facie evidence of the period of the year when the tenancy commenced. Doe d. Ash v. Calvert, 2 Camp. 387 ; 11 R. R. 745.

A notice was given on the 22nd March, by a landlord to his tenant, to quit at the expiration of the current year ; a declaration in ejectment, laying the demise on the 1st November, was on the 16th January following served upon the tenant, who at the time made no objection to the notice to quit, but said he should go out as soon as he could fit himself :—Held, to be primâ facie evidence that the tenancy commenced at Michaelmas, and was determined before the day of the demise. Doe d. Baker v. Wombwell, 2 Camp. 559.

So, if the notice to quit is served personally on the tenant in possession, and he makes no objection to it, it is primâ facie evidence to be left to the jury, that the tenancy commenced at the season of the year when the notice to quit expires. Doe d. Clarges v. Forster, 13 East, 405 ; 12 R. R. 383. S. P., Thomas d. Jones v. Thomas, 2 Camp. 647.

Where a tenant, on being applied to respecting the commencement of his holding, informs the party that it begins on a certain day, and notice to quit on that day is given at a subsequent time, he will be bound by the information he so gave, and not be permitted to shew, that in fact it began at a different time. Doe d. Eyre v. Lambly, 2 Esp. 635 ; 5 R. R. 758.

If a tenant disputes the time when his tenancy commences, and that his notice to quit does not correspond with it, it is incumbent on him, and not on the lessor, to shew the true time of the commencement of the tenancy. Doe d. Matthewson v. Wrightman, 4 Esp. 5 ; 6 R. R. 834.

As to Performance of Covenants.]—A tenant is not absolved from the performance of the covenants of his lease by a notice to quit ; such notice ought rather to be regarded as a notice to be more vigilant in the performance of the covenant. Gregory v. Wilson, 9 Hare, 683 ; 16 Jur. 304.

As to a Surrender of the Tenancy.]—Receipts for rent received by a landlord from a third party are evidence of a surrender by operation of law, putting an end to the liability of a former tenant. Laurence v. Faux, 2 F. & F. 435.

j. Proof of.

Generally.]—A notice to quit, in writing signed by the party giving it, and attested by a witness, before 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 26, which renders it unnecessary to call the attesting witness in such a case, must have been proved by calling that witness, or his absence must have been accounted for; proof that it was served on the tenant, that he read it, and did not object to it, was not sufficient. Doe d. Sykes v. Durnford, 2 M. & S. 62.

Where it was the usual course of practice in an attorney's office for the clerks to serve notices to quit on tenants, and to indorse on duplicates of such notice the fact and time of such service: and, on one occasion, the attorney himself prepared a notice to quit to serve on a tenant, took it out with him, together with two others prepared at the same time, and returned to his office in the evening, having indorsed on the duplicate of each notice a memorandum of his having delivered it to the tenant: and two of them were proved to have been delivered by him on that occasion:—Held, on the trial of an ejectment, after the attorney's death, that the indorsement so made by him was admissible to prove the service of the third notice. Doe d. Patteshall v. Turford, 3 B. & Ad. 890; 1 L. J., K. B. 262.

In an ejectment against a weekly tenant, the notice proved was, to quit on Wednesday, the 4th August. The witness, who was called to prove that Wednesday was the expiration of the current week of the tenancy, said "that he guessed" the defendant came in "about Tuesday or Wednesday, but had no recollection which":—Held, insufficient. Doe d. Finlayson v. Bayley, 5 Car. & P. 67.

A person who was employed to serve notices to quit, and whose duty it was to inform his employer of their service, was sent with a notice to serve on R. C., and on his return he signed a memorandum, "29th September, served R. C." It turned out, in fact, that he had served, not R. C., but W. C., his father. It was proposed to shew that he stated this fact to his employer on his return, but the memorandum having been prepared beforehand, was not altered:—Held, that this evidence was not admissible after his death, as it was not made in the course of business or in discharge of a duty. Stapylton v. Clough, 2 El. & Bl. 933; 2 C. L. R. 266; 23 L. J., Q. B. 5; 18 Jur. 60; 2 W. R. 60.

Custom.]—The custom of the country is not admissible to prove that a notice to quit served on the 5th of April is a good notice to quit by reason of the tenancy being a Michaelmas tenancy, but it must be proved by direct evidence that such is the case. Hogg v. Norris, 2 F. & F. 246.

Service by Post.]—Between nine and ten o'clock on the 25th March, a tenant put into a post-office in London a letter, containing a notice to quit on the following Michaelmas, and addressed to the place of business of his landlord's agent. The agent was at his place until between six and seven o'clock in the evening, and did not receive the letter, but found it on the following morning:—Held, a sufficient notice to determine the tenancy, the jury having found that the letter was delivered on the 25th of March, after the agent had left his place of business. Papillon v. Brunton, 5 H. & N. 518; 29 L. J., Ex. 265.

By Duplicate Copy.]—Notice to quit may be proved by a duplicate or an examined copy, without any notice having been given to produce the original. Doe d. Fleming v. Somerton, 7 Q. B. 58; 14 L. J., Q. B. 210; 9 Jur. 775.

2. Forfeiture.

a. Construction and Operation of Provisoes.

Proviso for Re-entry.]—Provisoes for re-entry in leases are to be construed like other contracts; not with the strictness of conditions at common law. Doe d. Davis v. Elsam, M. & M. 189; 31 R. R. 729.

A proviso in a lease for re-entry on a condition broken can only operate during the term, and vanishes when that ends. Johns v. Whittey, 3 Wils. 127.

When a lease contains a proviso giving the lessor a right to re-enter in the event of breach of covenant by the lessee (but not making the lease ipso facto void in that event):—Quære, whether under the present practice the mere commencement of an action by the lessor to recover possession of the property for breach of covenant, or the commencement of such action followed by appearance by the trustee, will, without actual entry, operate to determine the lease. Silcock v. Farmer (46 L. T. 404) commented upon. Dyke, Ex parte, Morrish, In re, 22 Ch. D. 410; 48 L. T. 303—C. A.

Rent in Arrear.]—Where a lease contained two clauses for re-entry: the one, in case the yearly rent was in arrear thirty days after it became payable, and the other in case the yearly rent was in arrear, which was stated to be payable half-yearly at Lady-day and Michaelmas:—Held, that the landlord had a right to re-enter on nonpayment of each half-year's rent; as the former clause contained the description of the amount to be annually paid, and the latter the times for payment. Doe d. Rudd v. Golding, 6 Moore, 231; 23 R. R. 625.

—— "If and whenever" no Sufficient Distress.]—The defendant by a lease became lessee to the plaintiff of certain premises at a yearly rent, payable quarterly. The lease contained a proviso that "if and whenever" any one quarter's rent thereby reserved, or any part thereof, should be in arrear for twenty-one days, and no sufficient distress could be had or levied for the same, it should be lawful for the lessor to enter upon and take possession of the demised premises. Three quarters' rent being in arrear, the plaintiff put in a distress for the whole amount, but the proceeds of such distress were not sufficient to satisfy more than two quarters' arrears:—Held, in an action to recover possession of the premises, that the words "if and whenever" carried the case beyond the time when the distress was put in up to the commencement of the action; that as the plaintiff by bringing the action must be taken to have appropriated the proceeds of the distress to the first two quarters' arrears, there still remained another quarter's rent in arrear for twenty-one days in respect to which there was no sufficient distress upon the premises; and that, consequently, the plaintiff was entitled to recover possession under the proviso for re-entry. Shepherd v. Berger, 60 L. J., Q. B. 395; [1891] 1 Q. B. 597; 64 L. T. 435; 39 W. R. 330; 55 J. P. 532—C. A.

Covenant not to Assign.]—Where a lessee covenanted to pay the rent, and not to assign without the leave of the lessor, and there was a proviso for re-entry if the rent was in arrear, or if all or any of the covenants thereinafter contained on the part of the lessee should be broken, and there were no covenants on the part of the lessee after the proviso, but only a covenant by the lessor, that upon the lessee paying the rent, and performing all and every the covenants thereinbefore contained on his part to be performed, he should quietly enjoy:—Held, that the lessor could not re-enter for breach of the covenant not to assign, for that the proviso was restrained by the word "hereinafter" to subsequent covenants, and though there were none such, yet the court could not reject the word. Doe d. Spencer v. Godwin, 4 M. & S. 265; 16 R. R. 463.

—— Void Assignment.]—A forfeiture cannot be enforced in respect of an act which of itself might work a forfeiture but which by a subsequent act is rendered void. Thus where a lease contained a clause of forfeiture in case the tenant should assign that lease, and the tenant did assign it to trustees for the benefit of his creditors and upon this deed (treated as an act of bankruptcy) a commission issued against the tenant:—Held, that this assignment, turning out to be void, was not sufficient to entitle the landlord to enforce it as a ground of forfeiture. Doe v. Lloyd, 4 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 159; 27 R. R. 534.

Not to under-let without Landlord's Consent—Relief—Mistake—Negligence of Agent.]—A lease of business premises in the city of London contained a covenant by the lessees that they would not under-let the premises, or any part thereof, without the written consent of the landlord for that purpose first had and obtained, which consent the landlord thereby agreed should not be arbitrarily withheld in the case of a respectable and responsible person. The lease gave the landlord a power of re-entry for breach of any of the covenants. The lessees being desirous of under-letting part of the premises, sent instructions to their solicitor, in whose possession the lease was, to prepare an under-lease. The solicitor being absent, the under-lease was prepared by a clerk, who had not access to the lease, and did not know that it required the landlord's consent to the under-lease. The solicitor returned before the under-lease was executed, and the matter was concluded through him, but both he and the lessees forgot that the landlord's consent was necessary to the under-lease, and consequently the under-lease was executed without the landlord's consent being obtained. The under-lessees were respectable and responsible persons. No damage was sustained by the landlord in consequence of the under-lease, and no valid reason was given by him for objecting to the under-lessees:—Held, in an action of ejectment by the landlord upon the power of re-entry for breach of covenant, that he was entitled to recover, for there had been a forfeiture of the lease, against which the court would not grant relief to the lessees—per Lopes, L.J., and Kay, L.J., upon the ground that, assuming that the court had power to relieve in such a case, yet the lessees were responsible for the negligence of their solicitor in not examining the lease before the execution of the under-lease, and they have the means of knowledge and having neglected to inform themselves, the case was not a proper one for the exercise of the court's discretion to grant relief; per Lord Esher, M.R., upon the ground that the case was one of forgetfulness and not mistake within the meaning of the doctrine that equity will relieve against fraud, accident, or mistake. Per Lord Esher, M.R.: The mere fact that the mistake arises through the negligence of an agent does not preclude the court from relieving against a forfeiture. Barrow v. Isaacs, 60 L. J., Q. B. 179; [1891] 1 Q. B. 417; 64 L. T. 686; 39 W. R. 338; 55 J. P. 517—C. A.

—— Incorporation of Covenants.]—By an agreement in writing, but not under seal, A. agreed to let and B. to hire on lease for twenty-one years a house on the following terms: the rent to be 55*l.* per annum; the lease to commence from the 25th of March next, and to contain an extract of the covenants in the original lease which A. is bound under; that the proposed lease shall not be sold, parted with, or any portion of the property under-let without the consent in writing of A. In the original lease were six covenants by the lessee, with a proviso for re-entry on the breach of any of them; but there was no covenant not to under-let without the consent of the landlord. B. entered and paid rent, and under-let the premises without the consent of A., who thereupon brought ejectment, and was nonsuited:—Held, that the nonsuit was right. B. held as tenant from year to year on such of the terms of the agreement as were applicable to that tenancy. The agreement incorporated the six covenants in the original lease, and the proviso for re-entry on the breach of any one of those covenants: but the agreement could not be read as applying the proviso for re-entry to the new clause as to not under-letting; and on mere words of agreement a condition could not be created. Crawley v. Price, L. R. 10 Q. B. 302; 33 L. T. 203; 23 W. R. 874.

Grant by Lessee to Sub-Lessee of Residue of his Interest—Right of Re-entry by Lessor.]—When a lessor, being himself a tenant for years, grants to his sub-lessee the residue of his interest from the termination of the existing sub-lease, the grant operates as an interesse termini, and the existing sub-lease does not merge; and a right of re-entry contained in the original lease would still exist and enable the lessor to re-enter for breach of covenant. Hyde v. Warden, 47 L. J., Ex. 121; 3 Ex. D. 72; 37 L. T. 567; 26 W. R. 201—C. A.

Semble, where two pieces of land are demised by one lease containing a power of re-entry over both, and afterwards the reversion in one of them is assigned to the lessee, the right of re-entry remains intact over the piece of land of which the reversion remains vested in the lessor. Ib.

Not to imperil Licence.]—A married woman living apart from her husband had accumulated enough of her separate earnings to purchase the goodwill and stock of a beerhouse, which was taken for her by S., to whom the licence was transferred, and who agreed with the landlord not to do anything to imperil the licence, on pain of forfeiting the tenancy and the fixtures. S. executed a declaration of trust in favour of the plaintiff, and handed it to her with the licence indorsed in blank; and she carried on the business. S. having gone away to sea, the defendant (the landlord) served a notice at the house, requiring him to remove his goods by the following day, and on the following day entered and took possession, turning the plaintiff and her furniture out of the house:—Held, on action brought to recover damages for the expulsion, that, in the absence of evidence that the house had been improperly conducted, the absence of S., the licensed person, did not cause the licence to be imperilled so as to create a forfeiture, and justify the entry by defendant. Moore v. Robinson, 48 L. J., Q. B. 156; 40 L. T. 99; 27 W. R. 312.

The lessee of a public-house, the lease of which contained a proviso for re-entry on breach of covenant, covenanted not to do any act that could or might affect, lessen, or make void either or any of the licences. She, on one day, kept open the house during prohibited hours, permitted drunkenness and was herself drunk. Convictions took place in respect of the two first-mentioned offences, but they were not recorded on the licence under the Licensing Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 49), s. 13:—Held, that the covenant had not been broken. Wooler v. Knott, 45 L. J., Ex. 313; 1 Ex. D. 124; 34 L. T. 362; 24 W. R. 615. Affirmed, 45 L. J., Ex. 884; 1 Ex. D. 265; 35 L. T. 121; 24 W. R. 1004—C. A.

Not to carry Hay off the Premises.]—A lease contained a covenant that the tenant should not carry any hay, &c., off the premises under a penalty of 5*l.* per ton, and a clause followed which enumerated all the covenants except the above, and provided that, upon breach of any of the covenants, the lessor might re-enter:—Held, that the penalty of 5*l.* did not prevent the clause of re-entry from applying to the above covenant, the words of the proviso being large enough to comprehend it. Doe d. Antrobus v. Jepson, 3 B. & Ad. 402; 1 L. J., K. B. 154. See also Silcock v. Farmer, 46 L. T. 404, and cases post, M. 7, cols. 1180 et seq.

To Repair.]—A proviso in a lease, giving power of re-entry if the lessee "shall do or cause to be done any act, matter, or thing contrary to, and in breach of, any of the covenants," does not apply to a breach of the covenant to repair, the omission to repair not being an act done within the meaning of the proviso. Doe d. Abdy v. Stevens, 3 B. & Ad. 299; 1 L. J., K. B. 101.

A lessee was to incur a forfeiture if he did not do certain repairs "to the satisfaction of the surveyor" of the lessor; he did the repairs, but the lessor's surveyor was not satisfied:—Held, that if the jury thought the surveyor ought to have been satisfied, that would be sufficient, and there would be no forfeiture incurred. Doe d. Baker v. Jones, 2 Car. & K. 743.

Not to build on Premises.]—A proviso in a lease, giving power of re-entry if the tenant makes default in performance of any of the clauses by the space of thirty days after notice, does not apply to the breach of a covenant not to allow alterations in the premises, or permit new buildings to be made upon them without permission; and an under-tenant having erected a portico contrary to the covenant and notice having been given to him to replace the premises in their former state, which he neglected to do for thirty days:—Held, that no forfeiture was incurred. Doe d. Palk v. Marchetti, 1 B. & Ad. 715; 9 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 126.

Premises consisting of a wharf and dock, dwelling-house, wash-house, and courtyard, were demised under a lease, containing a covenant that the lessee, his executors, administrators, or assigns should not erect or build any edifice or structure whatsoever on the wharf or dock, or place goods thereon above a certain height, "nor do any other matter or thing of any nature or kind which might obstruct the view of the river, from the White Hart public-house, or that should grow or be a nuisance or annoyance to the occupier; nor carry on a certain trade thereon, nor make any external alteration whatsoever in the premises, nor any internal alterations in the dwelling-house that may lessen the value thereof, without the consent in writing of the lessor for that purpose," with a proviso for re-entry for a breach:—Held, that this covenant absolutely prohibited all external alterations in any part of the demised premises, and that the qualification as to lessening "the value thereof," applied only to internal alterations in the dwelling-house. Perry v. Davis, 3 C. B. (N.S.) 769.

A lease contained a covenant by the lessee not to build on the demised premises without the consent of the lessor, any dwelling-house, edifice, cabin, farm, or other building, which should in the whole or in part be occupied as a dwelling-house, with a clause of re-entry on breach. At the date of the lease, there was a dwelling-house on the premises, to which the lessee, during the continuance of the demise, and without the lessor's consent, added a building containing several apartments, communicating with the original dwelling-house, and used together with it by the occupier as one entire dwelling-house:—Held, that the erection of the additional structure, without consent, was a breach of the covenant, and occasioned a forfeiture of the lease. Domvile v. Colville, Ir. R. 7 C. L. 68.

The owner of an estate granted a lease of a plot of ground to A., who covenanted that he, his executors, administrators, or assigns, would not during the term do on the premises anything which should be an annoyance to the neighbourhood or to the lessor or his tenants, or diminish the value of the adjoining property, nor build, nor allow to be built, on the ground any building or erection without first submitting the plans to the lessor and obtaining his approval. The landlord some years afterwards granted a lease of an adjoining plot to B., who entered into a similar restrictive covenant. Within twenty years A. commenced, with the approval of the lessor, to build upon his ground so as to darken the windows of B.'s house. On a bill by B. to restrain A. from erecting and the lessor from approving the building objected to:—Held, that B. was not entitled to relief either on the principle that the lessor could not derogate from his grant, or on the ground that the restrictive covenants in A.'s lease enured for B.'s benefit. Master v. Hansard, 46 L. J., Ch. 505; 4 Ch. D. 718; 36 L. T. 535; 25 W. R. 570—C. A.

Not to commit Waste.]—Where a lease contained a proviso for re-entry, if the lessee committed waste to the value of 10*s.*, and the lessor re-entered, and brought ejectment in consequence of the tenant's having pulled down some old buildings of more than 10*s.* value, and substituted others of a different description :—Held, that the waste contemplated in the proviso was waste producing an injury to the reversion, and that it was a question for the jury whether, under all the circumstances, such waste to the value of 10*s.* had been committed. Doe d. Darlington (Earl) v. Bond, 5 B. & C. 855; 8 D. & R. 738; 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 68; 29 R. R. 436.

To produce "R."]—A lease, for a term of years, if R. should so long live, contained a covenant that the lessee should, within three months after notice from the lessor, produce R., or otherwise make it appear to the lessor, within the time aforesaid, or within a reasonable time if R. should be in foreign parts, by a good and sufficient certificate, that he was living. Proviso for re-entry on default. R. went to Brazil. The lessee, being called on under the covenant, produced an affidavit, sworn in October, 1834, stating that the deponent had seen R. in Brazil in 1831, and had often heard of him from that time till January, 1834, as residing at a place in Brazil thirty miles from that in which the deponent lived during the same period, and that the deponent was convinced that R. was alive and well in January, 1834, when deponent left Brazil :—Held, that the fact subsequent to 1831 could not be properly certified by hearsay evidence ; and that the statement of occurrences in 1831, from which R. might be presumed alive in 1834, was not equivalent to such certificate as the covenant required, that R. was then alive ; and therefore, that the affidavit was not a sufficient certificate, and a forfeiture was incurred. Randle v. Lory, 6 A. & E. 218.

To complete Cottages.]—E., a tenant of leasehold premises, under-let a portion of them to B. for a term of years, reserving a few months' reversion. B. covenanted to complete some cottages on the premises by the 25th of June. By an indenture made on the 30th of July following, which recited that E. had entered into agreements and under-leases affecting the premises, the particulars of which were known to I., it was witnessed that "E. did bargain, sell, assign, transfer, and set over the premises, with their appurtenances, and all estate, right, title, and interest of E. into or out of the premises, and every part thereof, to I., to have and to hold the premises and every part thereof for the residue of the term of years granted by the indenture of lease under which E. held, and all other the estate and interest of E. therein or thereout, subject nevertheless to the agreements and under-leases hereinbefore referred to." B. did not build the cottages by the 25th of June. It did not appear whether E. knew of the fact or elected to treat the default as a breach of covenant and a forfeiture of the lease :—Held, that assuming the non-completion of the cottages was a breach of covenant, and gave E. a right of re-entry before the assignment to I., and that the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 5, enabled E. to assign the right of entry for condition broken, yet that the language of the indenture was not sufficient to transfer that right to I., so as to enable him to take advantage of the forfeiture. Hunt v. Remnant, 9 Ex. 635; 23 L. J., Ex. 135; 18 Jur. 335; 2 W. R. 276—Ex. Ch.

Not to permit Auction to be held on Premises.]—At the trial of an ejectment for breach of a covenant contained in a lease whereby the lessee covenanted for himself and assigns not to permit any sale by public auction to take place on the demised premises without the consent in writing of the lessor, it was proved that the lessee, after mortgaging the premises, executed an assignment of his goods and chattels, and that the trustees, under this assignment, sold the goods by auction upon the premises. The judge having directed a nonsuit on the ground that the plaintiff was not called to prove that there was no assent to the sale, and that there was no evidence that the lessee knew of or permitted the sale :—Held, that the nonsuit was right. Toleman v. Portbury, 39 L. J., Q. B. 136; L. R. 5 Q. B. 288; 22 L. T. 33; 18 W. R. 579—Ex. Ch.

Negative Covenant.]—A lease contained a covenant by the lessee not to carry on any trade upon the premises other than that of a wine and spirit merchant, and not to assign or under-lease the premises without the consent in writing of the lessor. There was a proviso for re-entry if the lessee should not well and truly perform and keep all and singular the covenants, conditions and agreements thereinbefore contained to be observed, performed and kept :—Held, that the words of the proviso for re-entry were wide enough to cover a breach of the negative covenants. Timms v. Baker, 49 L. T. 106.

A proviso for re-entry, "or if the lessee shall make default in the performance of any other covenants, which on his part are or ought to be observed performed or kept," would apply to and forbid the breach of a negative as well as a positive covenant. Croft v. Lumley, 6 H. L. Cas. 672; 27 L. J., Q. B. 321; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 903; 6 W. R. 523.

Land Demised under Gilbert's Act.]—Land was demised for 1,000 years by indenture, in 1793, to A. and B., the latter described as visitor and guardian of the poor of the parish of C., their successors and assigns, under 22 Geo. 3, c. 83 (Gilbert's Act), for the purpose of erecting a poor-house thereon, and occupying and cultivating the same for the use and benefit of such poor-house and of the poor of C., and such other parishes as should be united therewith for the purposes of the act. Proviso for re-entry, if C. and all the other parishes which should or might at any time be so united, should of themselves discontinue to adopt the provisions of the statute. Further proviso, that, if during this demise, the legislature should repeal Gilbert's Act, so that the poor of the several parishes should no longer be permitted to remain under the care of the visitor and guardians of such parishes, it should be lawful for the visitor and guardians, their successors and assigns, yielding up the land, to pull down the poor-house, and carry away the materials. The house was built, and C. and other parishes adopted the provisions of the act, and C. continued to follow them till the making of the after-mentioned order; but the other parishes seceded from the union. In 1836 the poor-law commissioners incorporated parish C. in a union, and ordered all the paupers to be removed to the union workhouse, after which no paupers were received into the poor-house of C. but persons requiring only outdoor relief, and the parish officers issued a notice proposing to let part of the house and the land :—Held, no forfeiture under the first proviso. Doe d. Grantley (Lord) v. Butcher, 6 Q. B. 115.

Reference to Act of Parliament—Act altered by Later Act.]—A proviso for re-entry was contained in a lease granted in pursuance of and referring to a private act of parliament. The proviso for re-entry in the act was subsequently altered by another act:—Held, that the lessor could not afterwards enter by virtue of the proviso in the lease, on account of the subsequent act. Doe d. Bywater v. Brandling, 7 B. & C. 643; 1 M. & Ry. 600; 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 162.

In the Event of Execution, Bankruptcy or Insolvency.]—A proviso for re-entry in case the tenant shall commit an act of bankruptcy whereon a commission shall issue, is good in law. Roe d. Hunter v. Galliers, 2 Term Rep. 133; 1 R. R. 445. S. P., Church v. Browne, 15 Ves. 268; 10 R. R. 74.

A lease contained a clause of re-entry in case the term of years thereby granted should be extended or taken in execution; and before the end of the term the sheriff entered the premises under a writ of extent against the lessee at the suit of the crown, held an inquisition, and seized the lessee's interests into the king's hands:—Held, that this proceeding was a taking in execution within the latter clause of the condition, and that the term was determined and forfeited to the lessor. Rex v. Topping, M'Clel. & Y. 544; 29 R. R. 839. And see Davis v. Eyton, 4 M. & P. 820; 7 Bing. 154; 9 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 44.

Lease for twenty-one years to A., his executors, administrators, and assigns. Proviso, that if A., his executors, administrators, and assigns, should become bankrupt or insolvent, or suffer any judgment to be entered against him by confession or otherwise, or suffer any extent, process, or proceedings to be had or taken against him, whereby any reasonable probability might arise of the estate being extended, &c., the estate should determine, and the lessor have power to re-enter. A. died during the term, and by his will devised the premises to his executors on certain trusts. The surviving executor having become bankrupt:—Held, that the lessor's right of re-entering thereupon accrued. Doe d. Bridgman v. David, 1 C. M. & R. 405; 5 Tyr. 125. S. C., nom. Doe d. Williams v. David, 6 Car. & P. 614; 4 L. J., Ex. 10.

The following proviso for re-entry, "that if the lessee, his executors, administrators, or assigns shall, either by their or his own act or acts, or by bankruptcy, insolvency, writ of extent or of execution, by fieri facias or other act of law or by any other means, whereby, either voluntarily or without his or their consent, whereunder the premises demised, or any part thereof, would, in case that proviso did not exist, be liable to be seized by the sheriff or any other person, or in case the lessee, his executors, administrators, or assigns shall at any time make breach or default in performance of the covenants or any of them, on his or their parts contained," then the lease was to be void, and the lessor to re-enter, is insensible and void. Doe d. Wyndham v. Carew, 2 Q. B. 317; 1 G. & D. 640; 11 L. J., Q. B. 5; 6 Jur. 457.

A lessee, who covenanted not to assign the demised premises without the consent in writing of the lessor, executed a deed under s. 192 of the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, whereby he assigned all his property to trustees for the benefit of his creditors:—Held, that the assignment was a forfeiture of the lease. Holland v. Cole, 1 H. & C. 67; 31 L. J., Ex. 481; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1066; 6 L. T. 503; 10 W. R. 563.

A lease for years contained a proviso for re-entry in case the lessee should, at any time during the term, commit any act of bankruptcy whereupon a commission or fiat in bankruptcy should issue against him, and under which he should be duly found and declared a bankrupt. The lessee being a trader, committed an act of bankruptcy, on which a fiat issued against him, and he was found and declared a bankrupt; but the petitioning creditor's debt, on which the fiat was founded, was proved by A. and B. as partners, whereas it was due to A., B. and C., as partners:—Held, that the lessee was not duly found and declared a bankrupt within the meaning of the proviso. Doe d. Lloyd v. Ingleby, 15 M. & W. 465.

An incorporated company demised premises by a lease containing a clause that, if the lessee should become bankrupt, or become or be insolvent in his circumstances, the lease should be void at the election of the directors of the company; the lessee having presented to the Court of Bankruptcy a petition for arrangement:—Held, in an action for recovery of possession: first, that there was a forfeiture of the lease; and, secondly, that the bringing of the action was an election to avoid the lease. Kilkenny Gas Co. v. Somerville, 2 L. R., Ir. 192.

—— On Tenant "being Bankrupt."]—A lease (executed in 1880) of a mill and warehouse, for twenty-one years, contained a proviso that in case (inter alia) the lessees should during the term be bankrupts, or file a petition in liquidation, the term should cease. After the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, came into operation, the lessees presented a bankruptcy petition, and a receiving order was made:—Held, that the presentation of the petition caused a forfeiture of the term. Gould or Goold, Ex parte, Walker, In re, 13 Q. B. D. 454; 51 L. T. 368; 1 Morrell, 168.

Assignment by Lessee prior to Bankruptcy—Subsequent Bankruptcy of Lessee.]—A twenty-one years' lease of a house contained a proviso that if the lessee, his executors, administrators, or assigns, should become bankrupt, it should be lawful for the lessor to re-enter, and that the lease should become void. The lessee, with his lessor's consent, assigned the lease, and shortly afterwards became bankrupt:—Held, that the proviso referred only to the bankruptcy of the lessee, his executors or administrators, if there had been no assignment, or, if there had been an assignment, then to the bankruptcy of the assignee. The intention was that an approved assignee should take the same estate as that of his assignor; accordingly, as the assignee had not become bankrupt, no forfeiture under the proviso had been incurred. Smith v. Gronow, 60 L. J., Q. B. 776; [1891] 2 Q. B. 394; 65 L. T. 117; 40 W. R. 46.

Semble, re-entry on the bankruptcy of the lessee is not defeated by annulment of the bankruptcy after action brought. Ib.

Voidable at Election of Lessor.]—A proviso in a lease, after stating that in certain events the term should cease, determine and be utterly void, continued, "and it shall be lawful to and for (the landlord) to re-enter"; this gives the landlord a right to enter or not, at his election.

Armsby v. Woodward, 6 B. & C. 519 ; 9 D. & R. 536 ; 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 199.

A proviso in an agreement of demise that the tenant should within a certain time erect a shop-front, and that, if he did not do so, it should be lawful for the landlord or his agents to re-take possession of the premises, and the agreement should be null and void, makes it a lease voidable only at the election of the lessor. Doe d. Nash v. Birch, 1 M. & W. 402 ; 5 L. J., Ex. 185.

Where there is a proviso in a lease, that, on nonpayment of rent, the term shall cease, the lessor, and not the lessee, has the option of determining the lease upon a breach made. Reid v. Parsons, 2 Chit. 247. And see Doe d. Green v. Baker, 2 Moore, 189 ; 8 Taunt. 241 ; 19 R. R. 502.

When in a lease it is provided, that, in case of nonperformance of the covenants, the lessor may re-enter and have the premises again, "as if the lease had never been made" :—Held, that the effect of the proviso was not to render the lease void ab initio upon re-entry, but only to avoid it from the period of re-entry. Hartshorne v. Watson, 4 Bing. (N.C.) 178 ; 5 Scott, 506 ; 6 D. P. C. 404 ; 1 Arn. 15 ; 7 L. J., C. P. 138 ; 2 Jur. 155.

Where a lease of coal mines reserved a royalty rent for every ton of coal raised, and contained a proviso that the lease should be void altogether if the tenant should cease working at any time within two years, but after the working had ceased more than two years the lessor received rent :—Held, that a tenancy from year to year was not thereby created, as the lease was not absolutely void by the lessee's ceasing to work, but voidable only at the option of the lessor, and that he might avoid the lease upon any cessation to work commencing two years before the day of the demise in the ejectment. Doe d. Bryan v. Bancks, 4 B. & Ald. 401 ; Gow, 220 ; 23 R. R. 318. And see Doe d. Boscawen v. Bliss, 4 Taunt. 735.

A proviso in a lease for years (whereby the rent is payable on a day certain at the mansion-house of the lessor), that if the rent shall be unpaid for forty days after the day whereon it is reserved (although not demanded) the lease shall be void, does not make the lease voidable by the lessee, by reason of his having overstayed the forty days allowed for payment. Rede v. Farr, 6 M. & S. 121 ; 18 R. R. 329.

A clause in a lease declaring that it shall be void upon a breach of conditions by the lessee, must be held to mean that it is voidable only at the option of the lessor, even if the condition was imposed by statute. Davenport v. Reg., 47 L. J., P. C. 8 ; 3 App. Cas. 115 ; 37 L. T. 727.

Where a lease contains a proviso or condition that on breach of any of the covenants such lease "shall cease, determine and be void to all intents and purposes whatsoever," such words must be construed to mean void at the election of the lessor. Thus, where a lease contained a proviso to the effect that if the lessee should become bankrupt or insolvent the lease shall "cease, determine and be void," and, the lessee having become bankrupt, the trustee in the bankruptcy rejected a proof put in by the lessors founded on such lease upon the ground that on the bankruptcy the lease became void :—Held, that such rejection was wrong and must be reversed. Leathersellers' Co., Ex parte, Tickle, In re, 3 Morrell, 126.

Semble, a forfeiture for nonperformance of covenants does not apply to breaches of negative covenants. Evans v. Davis, 48 L. J., Ch. 223 ; 10 Ch. D. 747 ; 39 L. T. 391 ; 27 W. R. 285.

A lease provided, that, in case of any breach of covenant, it should be lawful for the lessor to re-enter and expel the lessee, and the lease should, in that case, be forfeited, and be utterly null and void. The lessee committed a breach by nonpayment of rent. Semble, such a lease is voidable and not void. Bowser v. Colby, 1 Hare, 109 ; 11 L. J., Ch. 132 ; 5 Jur. 1178.

Equitable agreements, charging the property comprised in a lease, but not accompanied with a change of possession or other alteration of the property, do not work a forfeiture of the lease in equity, notwithstanding there is a clause in the lease against assignment. Semble. Ib.

Term Conditional upon Performance of Acts.]—A term for years conditioned to be void upon non-performance of certain acts, becomes void without entry ; but if a landlord dispenses with the performance of a condition, he cannot insist upon a forfeiture for the non-performance. Freeman v. Boyle, 2 Ridgw. P. C. 79.

A lease for so long as the lessee should continue to inhabit the farmhouse and actually occupy the land, and not let or part with the lease, upon his ceasing to inhabit immediately becomes forfeited. Doe d. Lockwood v. Clarke, 8 East, 185 ; 9 R. R. 402. And see Doe d. Norfolk (Duke) v. Hawke, 2 East, 481.

Breach of Implied Warranty — Lease of Furnished House.]—See post, O. 2, col. 1281.

b. By Disclaimer.

Repudiation by Tenant of Title of Landlord.]—In an action of ejectment it was proved that the plaintiffs, who claimed to be landlords of certain tenements, had given notice to the defendants, as their tenants, that the rent of the tenements would be raised, and that the defendants had thereupon written a letter, stating that they "disputed the plaintiffs' alleged right to raise the rent, but were willing and offered to pay what was due in respect of the customary rent of 11*s.* a year, being all that they were liable to pay in respect of the property" :—Held, that this letter was a repudiation of the relation of landlord and tenant and an assertion of a right to hold the tenements upon payment of a customary rent in the sense of a quit rent, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to eject, upon proving their title, without proving a valid notice to quit. Vivian v. Moat, 50 L. J., Ch. 331 ; 16 Ch. D. 730 ; 44 L. T. 210 ; 29 W. R. 504.

Lands being held by G. as tenant from year to year to D., who died in 1837, having devised the same to trustees for a term of 140 years, to permit his wife E. to take the rents and profits during her life. G. paid the rent to E., the widow, after D.'s death, from 1837 to 1840, and on receiving a notice to quit from her in 1840, stated that he did not think she would turn him out of possession, as she had promised he should continue on as tenant from year to year :—Held, in ejectment by the trustees for the recovery of the premises, that this was sufficient evidence of a disclaimer by G. of the title of the trustees to warrant the jury in finding a verdict for the trustees. Doe d. Davies v. Evans, 9 M. & W. 48 ; 11 L. J., Ex. 9.

Parish lands had been let to the labouring inhabitants at a forehand rent of 4*s.* per acre; the lands having been afterwards inclosed, the churchwardens and overseers for the time being increased the rent to 12*s.* per acre, for the purpose of raising a fund to pay the expenses of the inclosure. The tenants having paid this increased rent for many years, conceiving that the inclosure expenses had been paid off, insisted that they were entitled to hold the land at the original rent of 4*s.* an acre, and refused to pay the 12*s.*:—Held, that this did not amount to a disclaimer of the landlord's title, so as to enable them to eject the tenants without notice. Hunt v. Allgood, 10 C. B. (N.S.) 253; 30 L. J., C. P. 313; 4 L. T. 215; 9 W. R. 536.

A denial by parol of a landlord's title does not incur a forfeiture of a lease for years. Doe d. Graves v. Wells, 2 P. & D. 396; 10 A. & E. 427; 3 Jur. 820; 8 L. J., Q. B. 265.

Giving up Possession to Third Person.]—A termor, after deserting the demised premises, delivered up the possession of them, with the lease, to a party who claimed by a title adverse to that of the landlord, with intent to assist him in setting up that title, and not that he should hold bonâ fide under the lease:—Held, that the term was forfeited by the act of betraying possession. Doe d. Ellerbrock v. Flynn, 1 C. M. & R. 137; 4 Tyr. 619; 3 L. J., Ex. 221.

A lessee who had paid his rent occasionally to a trustee, and occasionally to a cestui que trust, gave up possession on the last day of his term, but before his term was over, to the person who had been trustee, and not to the party then having the legal title:—Held, that, as the act was equivocal, it did not amount to a forfeiture of the term. Ackland v. Lutley, 9 A. & E. 87; 1 P. & D. 636; 8 L. J., Q. B. 164.

Paying Rent to Third Person.]—The mere payment by the tenant to a third person of the rent reserved by his lease does not amount to a disclaimer of the title of the landlord, so as to operate as a forfeiture of the lease. Doe d. Dillon v. Parker, Gow, 180; 21 R. R. 827.

Right of Tenant to Maintain Possession.]—Though a lessee sets up an adverse claim to the property in the premises which he holds under the lease, yet that does not incapacitate him from maintaining possession under the lease. Rees d. Powell v. King, Forrest, 19; 2 Br. & B. 514.

Acquiescence by Landlord—Effect of.]—The act of a tenant disclaiming his landlord's title and admitting title in a third person shall not affect his landlord's title, if the landlord have no knowledge of, or does not acquiesce in such act. Hovenden v. Annesley (Lord), 2 Sch. & Lef. 624; 9 R. R. 119.

But if the landlord, having given notice of such act of disclaimer, does not proceed for the forfeiture, but acquiesces, the Statute of Limitations will run against him, as in ordinary cases. Ib.

c. Who may Re-enter.

Right of Lessor.]—A lessor who has demised his whole interest, subject to a right of re-entry on breach of a condition, may enter on the condition being broken, though he has no reversion. Doe d. Freeman v. Bateman, 2 B. & Ald. 168; 20 R. R. 399.

In an agreement between A. and B., not under seal, expressed to be made "in consideration of the rents and covenants to be reserved and contained in the lease agreed to be granted," it was provided that as soon as B. should have executed certain specified repairs, A. would lease certain premises to him for thirty-five years from a day passed, at a yearly rent, such lease to contain certain covenants on the part of B. as to rent and other matters, and also all other usual and proper covenants, and especially a proviso for re-entry for nonpayment of rent or nonperformance of covenants; and until the lease should be granted, A. should have the same powers and remedies for recovering and enforcing payment of the rent and performance of the covenants, as fully as if the lease had been actually granted, the repairs to be completed by a given day. Then followed this proviso: "Provided always, that if the rent should be in arrear, or if B. should make default in the observance and performance of the covenants and conditions, then, and in either of the cases, it shall be lawful for B. to enter the premises, and the same to have again and enjoy as in his former estate, and B. and all other occupiers thereout to remove, and thenceforth these presents and everything herein contained, shall cease and be void. B. was let into the premises, and paid rent. The repairs not having been done by the time agreed on:—Held, that A. was entitled to re-enter. Hayne v. Cummings, 16 C. B. (N.S.) 421; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 773; 10 L. T. 341.

—— Unconditional Option of Purchase by Tenant—Exercise of Option after Default.]—A building agreement gave the tenant an option of purchasing the fee, not conditioned on his due performance of the contract. Whilst in default he exercised the option; whereupon the lessor, under a power in case of such default, determined the contract and sought to recover possession from the tenant:—Held, that, pending completion of the purchase, the tenant was owner in equity, and entitled, as such, to maintain existing tenancies, and that the lessor's interest, as vendor, did not justify the tenant's possession being determined. Ruffety v. Schofield, 66 L. J., Ch. 448; [1897] 1 Ch. 937; 76 L. T. 648; 45 W. R. 460.

Right of Reversioner.]—A house was demised, habendum, for twenty-one years from March 25th, 1809, paying rent on certain days, of which March 25th was one. The estate, of which the house formed part, had been devised by the landlord to trustees, to receive the rents and apply them to certain purposes. After the landlord's death, and before the trusts were completely executed, and during the tenancy the reversion was sold. For a year after this sale the purchasers received the rents, but, during the subsequent years, from Christmas, 1817, to Lady-day, 1830, they were received by the trustees. The trusts were completely executed in 1821. On March 25th, 1830, the lessee came to the house (no one being therein), gave the keys to the trustees, and departed. The trustees entered and the purchasers, who had been present at the above proceedings, and had come to take possession, entered also, but were put back by the trustees, and the latter remained on the premises :—Held, that if the lessee's term had expired, the reversioner's entry would have been good, notwithstanding the entry of the trustees ; but that the term, under the lease, did not expire till the end of March 25th, 1830. Ackland v. Lutley, 9 A. & E. 879 ; 1 P. & D. 636 ; 8 L. J., Q. B. 164.

—— Assignee of Reversion—Notice of Assignment.]—The assignee of the reversion of a lease may maintain ejectment for breach of a covenant to repair, without giving the tenant notice of the assignment. Scaltock v. Harston, 45 L. J., C. P. 125 ; 1 C. P. D. 106 ; 34 L. T. 130 ; 24 W. R. 431.

Right of Stranger.]—B. bequeathed leasehold premises to trustees, on trust to permit and suffer his wife to receive the rents during her life. Afterwards, the surviving trustee and the widow granted a lease of the premises, the rent to be paid to the widow, and the lessor to have a power of re-entry upon nonpayment of rent ; the lease disclosed the title of the widow, who, after the death of the trustee, entered on the premises :—Held, that, being a stranger to the legal estate, the power of re-entry could not be reserved to her, and that the lease operated as a lease by the trustee, and a confirmation by the widow. Doe d. Barker v. Goldsmith, 2 C. & J. 674 ; 2 Tyr. 710 ; 1 L. J., Ex. 256.

Under a Power.]—Lease by a mortgagee and the executrix of the mortgagor, the mortgagee demised, and the executrix of the mortgagor demised and confirmed :—Held, that a re-entry under a power reserved for that purpose "to them or either of them," enured to revest the former estate, and to give the legal estate to the mortgagee. Doe d. Barney v. Adams, 2 Tyr. 289 ; 2 C. & J. 232 ; 1 L. J., Ex. 105*.

Effect of Re-entry—Rights of Sub-lessees.]—When a lessor re-enters on a forfeiture, the rights of under-lessees are gone. G. W. Ry. v. Smith, 45 L. J., Ch. 235 ; 2 Ch. D. 235 ; 34 L. T. 267 ; 24 W. R. 443—C. A. S. C., sub nom. Smith v. G. W. Ry., 47 L. J., Ch. 97 ; 3 App. Cas. 165 ; 37 L. T. 645 ; 26 W. R. 130—H. L. (E.)

d. Sufficiency of Re-entry.

Agreement to Let premises to Under-tenant.]—A lessor, finding the demised property out of repair, intending to take advantage of a clause of forfeiture contained in the lease, entered into an agreement with an under-tenant, whom he found there, to let them to him as a yearly tenant, and subsequently received rent from him :—Held, a sufficient re-entry to avoid the lease. Baylis v. Le Gros, 4 C. B. (N.S.) 537 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 513.

e. Operation of Licences.

What is a Breach of.]—The lease of a farm contained a covenant by the lessees, "that they would not assign or otherwise part with possession of the premises without the written consent of the lessor," with a proviso that "in case the lessees should fail in the observance or performance of any or either of the covenants and agreements on his or their part," it should be lawful for the lessor to re-enter. The lessees sold their interest to W., and the lessor, in a letter, consented that W. should take the farm "on the same conditions and in accordance with the lease." W. entered and took possession of the farm, but no assignment of the term was executed to him :—Held, that there was no such breach of the covenant not to assign without the written consent of the lessor as to enable him to maintain ejectment ; first, because W. appeared to have entered at the instance of the lessor rather than of the lessees ; and secondly, because the consent to the assignment did not prohibit the lessees from parting with possession of the premises till a lease had been executed. West v. Dobb, 10 B. & S. 987 ; 39 L. J., Q. B. 190 ; L. R. 5 Q. B. 460 ; 23 L. T. 76 ; 18 W. R. 1167.

The predecessor in title of the plaintiff let about thirty-three acres of land to B., who covenanted that he, his executors, administrators, or assigns, or any of them, should not during the term demise, let, assign, make over, or part with the possession of the lands (except to the extent of three acres therein described), without the licence and consent in writing of the lessor, his heirs or assigns. There was a proviso in the lease for re-entry upon breach of a covenant. After the passing of the 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, the lessor gave B. a licence in writing to assign, transfer, and set over the premises to the defendant, his executors, administrators, and assigns, upon condition that he would not at any time assign or transfer the premises without the consent of the lessor, his heirs or assigns. The defendant assigned the three excepted acres to another defendant, Edge, for the remainder of the term, and let the rest of the premises by the year to another defendant, Jones ; Jones let the thirty acres to Edge by the year. There was no other licence by the lessor but that mentioned :—Held, that the words of the licence did not justify the letting of the thirty acres without a further licence ; and that this breach of covenant created a forfeiture of the whole of the premises let under the original lease. Eyton v. Jones, 21 L. T. 789.

A corporation by agreement under their seal, dated 24 July, 1811, covenanted to grant E. a building lease of certain ground for ninety-nine years, as soon as certain houses thereon were finished. E. proceeded to build the houses, and on 21 January, 1812, got a licence from the corporation to build a particular house as a baker's shop, which he proceeded with, but put in no shop-front, the space left for it being boarded up. On 30 December, 1812, the corporation, according to their agreement, granted a lease to E. containing a covenant by him not to injure any of the main timbers or walls of the demised premises, nor to convert, use, or occupy them into or for any shop, &c., without the previous written consent of the lessors, and a proviso for re-entry on breach. In 1814, the house which had been left unfinished was completed by E., as a private house, the space for the shop-front being filled by a brick wall with two windows. The house was occupied as a private dwelling till October, 1822, when E. took out the last-mentioned brick wall, and placing a shop window in its place, commenced the business of a baker there :—Held, a breach of covenant by which a forfeiture was incurred ; and that the original licence to build the house as a baker's shop had no operation as such after the lease executed containing the above covenants. Doe d. Foundling Hospital v. Evans, 4 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 231.

Breach of—Delay in exercising Remedy.]—After twenty years' user of demised premises, converted into a shop without licence contrary to the covenants contained in the lease, an assignee of the reversion cannot take advantage of a condition of re-entry for such user subsequently to the assignment. Gibson v. Doeg, 2 H. & N. 615; 27 L. J., Ex. 37; 6 W. R. 107.

f. Waiver.

By Acceptance of Rent.]—Where in a lease a power of re-entry for a breach of covenant is reserved to the lessor, a forfeiture may be waived, as the lease is thereby rendered voidable only. Doe d. Bryan v. Bancks, 4 B. & Ald. 401; Gow, 220; 23 R. R. 318.

But it is otherwise where the lease is declared absolutely void. Ib.

Acceptance of rent after a forfeiture is a waiver of the forfeiture. Arnsby v. Woodward, 6 B. & C. 519; 9 D. & R. 536; 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 199.

If the fact of forfeiture was known to the lessor at the time. Roe d. Gregson v. Harrison, 2 Term Rep. 425; 1 R. R. 513. S. P., Goodright d. Walter v. Davids, Cowp. 803. Doe d. Cheney v. Batten, Cowp. 243; 9 East, 314, n.; 9 R. R. 570, n. Hume v. Kent, 1 Ball & B. 554.

Acceptance of rent with knowledge of breach of covenant is a waiver of the breach of covenant. Walrond v. Hawkins, 44 L. J., C. P. 116; L. R. 10 C. P. 342; 32 L. T. 119; 23 W. R. 390.

If ejectment is brought on a forfeiture of a lease and after the bringing of such ejectment the landlord accepts rent, it is no waiver of the forfeiture. Doe d. Morecraft v. Meux, 1 Car. & P. 346; 7 D. & R. 98; 4 B. & C. 606; 4 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 4; 28 R. R. 426.

And upon a clause of re-entry on breach of covenant, ejectment may be supported in respect of a continuing breach, as by user of rooms in a manner prohibited by the lease, though rent has been accepted with knowledge of the original breach. Doe d. Ambler v. Woodbridge, 4 M. & Ry. 303; 9 B. & C. 376; 7 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 263; 28 R. R. 426.

A forfeiture of a lease accruing on the lessee's insolvency, is waived by acceptance of rent from him after his discharge under the Insolvent Debtors Act; and the nonpayment of a debt specified in the schedule to be due to the lessor, is not a continuing insolvency, to constitute a new forfeiture after such acceptance of rent. Doe d. Gatehouse v. Rees, 4 Bing. (N.C.) 384; 6 Scott, 161; 1 Arn. 159; 7 L. J., C. P. 184.

The receipt of rent is no waiver of a continuing breach of covenant. Doe d. Baker v. Jones, 5 Ex. 498; 19 L. J., Ex. 405.

The receipt of rent is not a waiver of a forfeiture, unless it is rent due on a day after the forfeiture is incurred. Price v. Worwood, 4 H. & N. 512; 28 L. J., Ex. 329; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 472; 7 W. R. 506.

Ejectment upon a forfeiture of a lease for not insuring, and continuing to insure, a house in the name of the lessor and lessee, according to the covenant. On the 24th January, 1836, a policy of insurance had been effected in the sole name of the lessee, which had been shewn to A., the then lessor, and approved of by him, and the premiums had been paid upon it up to Christmas, 1842. On the 14th January, 1843, A. conveyed his interest in the reversion to the plaintiff, and on the same day received from the defendant the rent due up to the 25th December, 1842:—Held, that though A. by his conduct might have waived the forfeiture up to the 25th December, 1842, yet that, there being a continuing covenant, a subsequent breach would entitle the plaintiff to enter. Doe d. Muston v. Gladwin, 6 Q. B. 953; 14 L. J., Q. B. 189; 9 Jur. 508.

The plaintiff leased premises to A. for a term of years, and A. died intestate pending the term, and the plaintiff considering that no one would administer to A.'s estate, agreed with A.'s son that he should occupy the premises as yearly tenant, at the same rent as that reserved under the lease to his father, and the son did so, and paid rent. The plaintiff repaired the premises at or about Michaelmas, 1861, and having afterwards discovered that the defendant, a daughter of A., had taken out letters of administration to his estate, and as such claimed to hold the premises for the remainder of the term, the plaintiff sued her on the covenant to repair, and in ejectment, as for a forfeiture for non-repair. In the action of covenant, however, the defendant paid money into court, which the plaintiff took out in satisfaction. There was no want of repair in the premises after the plaintiff had repaired them, and the rent due up to Michaelmas, 1861, was paid by A.'s son, and received by the plaintiff, before either action was commenced:—Held, that either the rent so paid was to be taken as a satisfaction of the rent due under the lease, and so the acceptance of it to operate as a waiver of the forfeiture, or that there had been an eviction of the defendant by the plaintiff, which prevented his taking advantage of a forfeiture for non-repair during the eviction. Pellatt v. Boosey, 31 L. J., C. P. 281; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1107.

In a crown lease, a lessee covenanted not to convert the premises into a shop or a place of sale of any kind, without consent of the commissioners of woods and forests. The trade of an engraver had been carried on in it, without consent or objection, but rent had afterwards been received:—Held, that the forfeiture had been waived. Bridges v. Longman, 24 Beav. 27.

After forfeiture of a lease had been incurred, the time having come when the rent would become due, the lessee tendered the rent to the lessor. He refused to take it, except on the terms that it should be taken not as rent, but as compensation for use and occupation subsequent to the forfeiture. The lessee refused to agree to any such condition. The lessor then took the money, declaring he would not take it as rent, or as waiving the forfeiture:—Held, that in legal effect money must be taken according to the intent of the party paying it, in this case as rent; and that the receipt of rent, as a matter of law, operated to waive all forfeitures then known to the lessor, and that no protest on his part could prevent this legal effect. Croft v. Lumley, 5 El. & Bl. 648; 25 L. J., Q. B. 223; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 275; 4 W. R. 357—Ex. Ch. See S. C., in H. L., post, col. 1019.

At the time of the receipt of the money, the lessor knew of most of the judgments by virtue of which a forfeiture had been incurred, but did not know of every instance:—Held, that he must be taken to waive all forfeitures by that breach of which he had notice, though it was more extensive than he was aware of. Ib.

When a lease contains a proviso for re-entry for nonperformance of covenants, and a covenant is broken for want of the previous consent of the lessors to alterations, the receipt of rent is a waiver of the forfeiture. Miles v. Tobin, 17 L. T. 432; 16 W. R. 465.

The Australian Agricultural Reserves Act (27 Vict. No. 23) enacts (s. 8), "If any person selecting lands in an agricultural reserve shall fail to occupy and improve the same, as required by s. 7, then the right and interest of such selector to the land selected shall cease and determine." The Leasing Act, 1866 (30 Vict. No. 23) enacts (s. 8), "Lands in agricultural reserves . . . if taken up on lease shall be subject to the same condition . . . as to cultivation, &c., as if they were selected by purchase." D.'s predecessor in title became lessee of crown lands under this act, but failed to cultivate or improve his allotment as required by the former act. After becoming aware of the non-improvement, the government received rent for the allotment; but a notice was issued to the effect that "Rents which may be received upon such selections as may have been forfeited by operation of law will be deemed to have been received conditionally, and without prejudice to the right of the government to deal with the same according to the provisions contained in the act in that behalf." In an action of ejectment brought to recover the land:—Held, that notwithstanding the notice, the receipt of rent operated as a waiver of the forfeiture. Darenport v. Reg., 47 L. J., P. C. 8; 3 App. Cas. 115; 37 L. T. 727.

The plaintiff, E. C., by lease of the 28th December, 1854, demised the premises for which the ejectment was brought to P. R. and T. R., their heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, for lives still in being. The lease contained a clause that the lessees, their heirs, executors, or assigns, would not assign, sub-let, alien, convey away, mortgage, or otherwise incumber all or any part of the demised premises without the consent in writing of the lessor, his heirs or assigns, first had and obtained, under pain of forfeiture of the lease. On the 1st January, 1863, P. R. and T. R., by deed assigned their estate and interest in the lease to C. R. This assignment was without consent of the lessor; but he became aware of it, and subsequently received rent from C. R. In 1868 C. R. applied to the lessor for his assent to an assignment to P. S. The plaintiff refused. C. R. assigned to S. on the 2nd June, 1868, without assent; and the plaintiff brought ejectment against P. T., C. R. and P. S. P. S. defended; the other defendants allowed judgment to go by default:—Held, following Butler v. Smith (16 Ir. C. L. R. 213), that no estate whatever passed under the assignment of 1863; but that the assignment, though void, would cause a forfeiture of the lease, if the breach were not waived. That the clauses as to waiver of breach of covenant against alienation in the Sub-letting Acts being repealed by the Landlord and Tenant Act, 1860, and there being no provision as to waiver in such cases (though there is as to sub-letting), except in reference to leases made after the passing of the act (s. 43), the case rested as at common law, and therefore the receipt of rent would prevent the plaintiff from relying on the assignment of 1863. That the case of Leinster (Duke) v. Metcalf (11 Ir. L. R. 365) was not satisfactory. That there was no surrender by operation of law, and creation of a tenancy from year to year in C. R. by the change of possession, and payment of rent by him with the assent of the original lessees, as what the parties intended was that the lease should continue to subsist. That the attempted assignment in 1868 by C. R., who had no estate in the premises, would not work any forfeiture. That the decision of Burton, J., in O'Brien v. Bernard (6 Ir. L. R. 6), was wrong; and that the defendant S. had a right to rely on the outstanding estate in P. R. and T. R., though they had allowed judgment to go by default against them. Clifford v. Reilly, Ir. R. 4 C. L. 218.

The defendants held certain premises of the plaintiffs for a term of years under a lease, whereby the lessees covenanted not to permit or suffer, at any time during the said term, to be used, exercised, or carried on upon the premises, or any part thereof, any art, trade, profession, or business whatsoever, without the licence or consent in writing of the lessor, first obtained for that purpose. The lease contained a power of re-entry upon breach of covenant. The lessees had, by consent, made some alterations in the premises, and part of the new building was occupied by two of the defendants as plumbers, and they carried on their business there in a shop suited for the purpose. There was no written licence or consent of the lessor for this business, but two quarters' rent was paid as usual by the lessees after the business commenced, with the lessor's knowledge of this use of the premises. There was no evidence of the nature of the plumber's tenancy, but within a year of its commencement the plaintiffs took proceedings to recover the land on the ground of a forfeiture by a continuing breach of the covenant:—Held, that it could not be presumed that a plumber's business would be commenced upon a less tenancy than a year of the shop in which it was to be carried on; and that the plaintiff's waiver of the breach by receipt of rent was sufficient under the circumstances to render these proceedings ineffectual. Griffin v. Tomkins, 42 L. T. 359; 44 J. P. 457.

In an action of ejectment to recover possession of premises for breaches of covenants contained in certain leases, the defendant pleaded that after the bringing of the action the plaintiff, with the intention of waiving the breaches of covenant, accepted rent which was accrued due after the bringing of the action, and that thereby the breaches of covenant were waived:—Held (on demurrer), a good statement of defence, for the facts pleaded amounted to an agreement for a new tenancy on the terms of the old lease. Evans v. Wyatt, 43 L. T. 176; 44 J. P. 767.

A lease to two tenants containing a proviso for re-entry in case either of them should assign the premises without the landlord's consent. One of the tenants assigned his interest to the other, without the consent of the landlord, and the landlord from that time accepted the rent from the other tenant alone:—Held, that, although the landlord had waived the forfeiture by acceptance of rent after the assignment, he could not be compelled to grant a renewal to one only of the lessees, so long as the other was living. Finch v. Underwood, 45 L. J., Ch. 522; 2 Ch. D. 310; 34 L. T. 779; 24 W. R. 657.

—— Without prejudice to Breaches of Covenant.]—A tenant was in possession of plots of land under an agreement for leases to be granted when he should have fulfilled certain conditions as to building. The intention of the parties was, in the view of the court, that the agreement should be regarded as a lease. The conditions were (to the landlord's knowledge) not fulfilled within the appointed time, but after that date the landlord demanded rent as under the leases, and the tenant paid it:—Held, that the landlord could not, on receiving the rent, stipulate that it was received "without prejudice to any breaches of covenant, made up to that time in the agreement for leases." Strong v. Stringer, 61 L. T. 470.

Rent Tendered—Received, but not as Rent.]—Where a lessee tendered rent which had accrued subsequently to breaches of covenant, as rent, but the lessor took it as compensation for occupation, expressly reserving the right of re-entry, it is, by force of the rule, "solutio accipitur in modum solventis," a waiver of the forfeiture in respect of such breaches as were known to the lessor—By a majority of the judges. Croft v. Lumley, 6 H. L. Cas. 672; 27 L. J., Q. B. 321; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 903; 6 W. R. 523.

Bringing Action for Rent accruing subsequent to Breach.]—A right of re-entry for breach of a covenant in a lease is waived by the lessor's bringing an action for rent accruing subsequently to the breach, with a knowledge of its existence. Dendy v. Nicholl, 4 C. B. (N.S.) 376; 27 L. J., C. P. 220; 6 W. R. 502.

—— Where Breach Continuing.]—A lease under which rent was payable quarterly on the usual quarter days contained a covenant by the tenant to keep the demised premises in repair, and gave the landlord a right of re-entry for breach of covenant. The premises being out of repair, the landlord on September 22, 1896, served a notice upon the tenant under s. 14, sub-s. 1, of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, requiring him to execute certain specified repairs within three months. The repairs were not executed, and on January 14, 1897, the physical condition of the premises being then the same as on September 22, 1896, the landlord commenced an action by which he claimed possession of the premises and rent for the quarter ending December 25, 1896:—Held, that the action was maintainable, for the breach of covenant being a continuing one, the landlord by claiming rent up to December 25, 1896, did not preclude himself from insisting upon his right of re-entry in respect of the continuing breach subsequent to that date, and, the physical condition of the premises being the same, the notice of September 22, 1896, was a good notice of the breach complained of within the meaning of s. 14, sub-s. 1, of the Conveyancing Act, 1881. Penton v. Barnett, 67 L. J., Q. B. 11; 46 W. R. 33—C. A.

By Particulars of Breaches.]—The plaintiff demised a house to C., who covenanted not to permit or suffer any sale by auction to take place on the premises. C. subsequently granted a bill of sale under seal assigning his goods in the house as security for a loan, and empowering the grantees to sell them by auction on the premises in default of repayment. He next mortgaged the house by an under-lease to the defendant, and finally executed a deed of assignment conveying all his estate to trustees for his creditors; he nevertheless remained in possession. The grantees of the bill of sale sold the goods by auction on the premises. The plaintiff brought an ejectment, and, in compliance with a judge's order, delivered particulars of the following breaches of covenant, upon which she relied as causing a forfeiture of the lease, namely: first, nonpayment of rent accrued since the day of the sale; and secondly, the permitting and suffering a sale by auction to take place on the premises. The arrears of rent were tendered to the plaintiff, and being refused, were paid into court, whereupon the proceedings on the first breach were stayed, but the action went to trial on the second. The jury found that C. permitted the sale:—Held, that he had power to do so, notwithstanding the conveyance of his estate, and having done so, had committed an act of forfeiture which was not waived by the plaintiff stating in the particulars of breaches the nonpayment of subsequent rent. Toleman v. Portbury, 41 L. J., Q. B. 98; L. R. 7 Q. B. 344; 26 L. T. 292; 20 W. R. 441—Ex. Ch.

By Pleading.]—A landlord suing in respect of breaches of covenants agreed to be inserted in a lease contracted for, claimed an injunction and possession; his pleadings stated that he was willing to grant the lease:—Held, that forfeiture was waived by the pleadings. Evans v. Davis, 48 L. J., Ch. 223; 10 Ch. D. 747; 39 L. T. 391; 27 W. R. 285.

By Distraining.]—A lease of a farm contained a condition of re-entry for breaches of covenants. Breaches of covenants took place before the 24th June, 1871. The lessors brought ejectment against the tenant on the 21st of July, 1871; but the writ did not claim possession as from any antecedent date. After the commencement of the action, but before the trial, the lessors distrained for rent due up to the 24th of June, 1871:—Held, that by such distress they had not precluded themselves from relying at the trial on any breach of covenant before the 24th of June, 1871, on the ground that by bringing the ejectment they had unequivocally declared their election to determine the lease on any ground of forfeiture which had not been waived before the commencement of the action, and that the subsequent distress, if not justifiable under the 8 Anne, c. 14, s. 7, which enables the landlord under certain circumstances to distrain after the determination of the tenancy, was a trespass. Grimwood v. Moss, 41 L. J., C. P. 239; L. R. 7 C. P. 360; 27 L. T. 268; 20 W. R. 972.

A distress and continuance in possession may be a waiver of an existing forfeiture, but not so as to any right which accrues subsequently. Doe d. Taylor v. Johnson, 1 Stark. 411; 18 R. R. 791. And see Zouch d. Ward v. Willingale, 1 H. Bl. 311; 2 R. R. 770.

Taking an insufficient distress after the forfeiture, for rent accruing before, is not a waiver of the right to re-enter. Brewer d. Onslow (Lord) v. Eaton, 3 Dougl. 230.

By a deed for twenty-one years from the 24th June, at a rent payable half-yearly, the lessor granted the lessee leave and licence to pick all the copperas stone over certain land, with a proviso that, if any part of the rent should be in arrear for twenty-one days, it should be lawful for the lessor, without any demand, to determine the grant by notice in writing. In March, 1858, he distrained the goods of the lessee for five and a half years' rent, due the preceding Christmas, whereupon an action was commenced for an illegal distress. In May and June of the same year, negotiations took place between the parties for a settlement of the action, and for granting a new lease, commencing on the 24th of June, 1864, when the former grant would expire; but the terms arranged were not carried out by the lessor, who, on the 3rd of July, 1858, gave the lessee a written notice that he determined the grant, on the ground that half a year's rent, due at Christmas, 1857, was in arrear:—Held, that the conduct of the lessor in making the distress (though it was an illegal act), together with the negotiations, was satisfactory evidence that he treated the licence as still subsisting, and was therefore a waiver of the forfeiture. Ward v. Day, 5 B. & S. 359; 33 L. J., Q. B. 254; 10 L. T. 578; 12 W. R. 829—Ex. Ch.

A lessee covenanted that his executors or assigns would insure the demised premises, and keep them insured during the term, and deposit the policy with the lessor. The lease contained a proviso for re-entry on breach of any of the covenants. The lessee assigned, and the premises were never insured either by him or his assignee. The lessor distrained on the 30th September for rent then due, and afterwards brought an ejectment on a demise laid on the 24th October:—Held, that though the distress was an acknowledgment of a tenancy to the 30th September, and a waiver of any forfeiture to that time, yet the lessor was entitled to recover in ejectment for the forfeiture incurred by the breach of covenant between the 30th September and the 24th October. Doe d. Flower v. Peck, 1 B. & Ad. 428; 9 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 60. See also Doe d. De Rutzen v. Lewis, infra.

Where a landlord has distrained for rent, but after the realisation of the distress half a year's rent still remains due, the distress does not operate as a waiver of the landlord's right to re-enter for nonpayment of rent, so as to prevent him from serving a writ in ejectment for the recovery of the premises under s. 210 of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852. Thomas v. Lulham, 64 L. J., Q. B. 720; [1895] 2 Q. B. 400; 14 R. 692; 73 L. T. 146; 43 W. R. 689; 59 J. P. 709—C. A.

Bringing Ejectment.]—The service by a lessor upon the lessee of a declaration in ejectment for the demised premises for a forfeiture, operates as a final election by the lessor to determine the term; and he cannot afterwards (although there has not been any judgment in the ejectment) sue for rent due or for covenants broken after the service of the declaration (or by 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, s. 168, after the service of the writ). Jones v. Carter, 15 M. & W. 718.

Notice to Repair.]—A forfeiture incurred by the breach of a general covenant to keep the premises in repair, is not waived by a notice given under a covenant to repair within three months. Roe d. Goatly v. Paine, 2 Camp. 520.

A lease of lands and houses by A. to B. contained a general covenant by B. to repair, and a further covenant that A. might give notice to B. of all defects and want of repairs, and if B. did not repair the said defects within two months, A. might enter and do the repairs himself, the expense of which B. was to repay at the time of paying his next rent; and if he did not do so, A. might distrain on him for the expense, as in case of rent in arrear. There was also a power to A. to re-enter, upon breach of any covenant. The premises being out of repair, A. gave B. notice to repair within six months, and that, if B. did not repair within that time, he would perform the repairs, and charge B. with the expense. The premises were not repaired within the six months; during that time a negotiation was entered into by A. and B., and, after the expiration of the six months, A. gave notice to B. that, if he did not agree to certain terms in three days, A. would hold him to the covenants in his lease. B. did not agree:—Held, that A. could not recover in ejectment for a forfeiture, he having elected to perform the repairs, and distrain on B. for the expense, and the general power to re-enter not being revived by the three days' notice. Doe d. De Rutzen v. Lewis, 5 A. & E. 277; 6 N. & M. 764; 2 H. & W. 162; 5 L. J., K. B. 217.

Where a landlord, finding the premises out of repair, gave the tenant three months' notice to repair, pursuant to his covenant:—Held, first, that he could not maintain ejectment for a forfeiture until the three months had elapsed; and, secondly, that the notice was a waiver of the breach of the general covenant to repair. Doe d. Morecraft v. Meux, 7 D. & R. 98; 4 B. & C. 606; 1 Car. & P. 346; 4 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 4; 28 R. R. 426.

A right of re-entry, acquired by an omission to repair three months after notice, is suspended, but not waived, by an agreement to allow the tenant further time to repair. Doe d. Rankin v. Brindley, 1 N. & M. 1; 4 B. & Ad. 84; 2 L. J., K. B. 7.

Where a lease contains a covenant by the lessee to repair and keep in repair, and also to repair within three months after notice, with a clause of re-entry for nonperformance of covenants, the landlord may re-enter, as for a forfeiture, on finding the premises out of repair. Baylis v. Le Gros, 4 C. B. (N.S.) 537; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 513.

A lessee, under a covenant to repair on three months' notice, with a penalty of re-entry, received notice on the 16th September to repair according to a specification, and out of the twenty-two items specified only two were not commenced, and eight not completely finished, on the 18th December, the latter having been delayed by the state of the weather. There was no entry by the lessors to inspect, and no notice from them to expedite the works during the interval, and the whole of the works were completely finished in the second week in January:—Held, that the lessee was entitled to be relieved against an ejectment for the breach of covenant. Bargent v. Thomson, 4 Giff. 473; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1192; 9 L. T. 365.

Permitting or Recognising Breach.]—If a lessee exercises a trade on the demised premises by which his lease is forfeited, the landlord does not, by merely lying by, and witnessing the act for six years, waive the forfeiture. Doe d. Sheppard v. Allen, 3 Taunt. 78; 12 R. R. 579.

Some positive act of waiver, as the receipt of rent, is necessary. Ib.

If, on the trial of an ejectment against the assignee of a tenant on a forfeiture of a lease by breach of covenant, it appears that the landlord so acted as to induce the tenant's assignee to believe that the latter was doing all that he ought, the landlord cannot recover, although the covenants are actually broken, and there is neither a release nor a dispensation on the part of the landlord. Doe d. Knight v. Rowe, 2 Car. & P. 246; R. & M. 343. See West v. Blakeway, 3 Scott (N.R.) 199; 9 D. P. C. 846; 2 Man. & G. 729; 10 L. J., C. P. 173; 5 Jur. 630.

On an action of ejectment for the breach of a condition that the lessee should not under-let, in an agreement amounting to a lease, it appeared that the lessor of the plaintiff asked the defendant what he would take for his land; and on the defendant naming a price, said, "Then let it, and I shall know what it will produce next year": —Held, that this was a waiver of the forfeiture on a breach of such condition. Doe d. Henniker v. Watt, 1 M. & Ry. 694; 8 B. & C. 308; 6 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 185.

If a lessor, after a forfeiture, advises a person to purchase the term of his lessee, he cannot maintain an ejectment for such forfeiture against such purchaser; but he may do so if the party has an interest, viz. an annuity secured on the premises, and the advice is merely "to take to them." Doe d. Sore v. Eykins, 1 Car. & P. 154; R. & M. 29.

Land was demised to the lessee, who covenanted in the lease to build and complete certain houses thereon within a year, and that if he did not the lease should be void; the houses not being completed within the specified period:— Held, that the forfeiture was not waived by the steward of the lessor having permitted the lessee to employ workmen in completing the houses for a short period after such forfeiture. Doe d. Kensington v. Brindley, 12 Moore, 37; 5 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 3.

An owner of an estate covered it with houses, and sold some of them, subject to a covenant not to carry on any trade, business, or calling therein, or to otherwise use or suffer the same to be used, to the annoyance, nuisance, or injury of any of the houses on the estate:—Held, that the carrying on of a girls' school in one of the houses was a breach of the covenant, and that the covenantee had not waived the benefit of the covenant, though he had permitted other houses, held under the like covenant, to be used as schools. Kemp v. Sober, 1 Sim. (N.S.) 517; 20 L. J., Ch. 602; 15 Jur. 458.

Mere standing by and seeing the lessee making alterations which are in breach of his covenant, does not operate as a waiver on the part of the lessor. Perry v. Davis, 3 C. B. (N.S.) 769.

By a lease empowering the lessee to build, he covenanted to cultivate part of the land, on which no buildings should be erected, in a husbandlike manner, and there was a clause of forfeiture for breach of covenant. The lessee built a vitriol factory on the land, with the knowledge of the lessor, but being obliged to discontinue the manufacture by an indictment he pulled down the manufactory, and paid part of the proceeds of the building materials to the lessor in pursuance of an agreement between them:—Held, that the lessor had not in equity precluded himself from entering for the non-cultivation of the land after the manufactory was pulled down. Hills v. Rowland, 4 De G. M. & G. 430; 1 W. R. 422.

To permit a tenant to remain in possession and expend his money in building with the knowledge of the landlord, after an eviction for nonpayment of rent, is a waiver of the forfeiture under the ejectment statutes. Hume v. Kent, 1 Ball & B. 554.

A lease was granted of coals and ironstone for 300 years at a fixed rent and paying certain royalties not fixed, and the lease contained a stipulation that the working shall not be delayed more than five years from the date of the lease; also that as to three out of four of the mines, the lessees may either work or relinquish, but shall not under-let or assign without the consent of the lessor, except to responsible persons. The mines were worked for twenty-four years, when the lessee died, and a suit was instituted to administer his estate and a receiver appointed. The ironstone mine was then no longer worked, and ten years after the working of the coal mines was also stopped. Rent continued to be received, and a correspondence ensued, not assuming a peremptory tone, until fifteen years after the mines were shut up, the lessors having had knowledge of the abandonment all along. An ejectment was brought, but restrained by reason of there being a receiver; and on summons for liberty to proceed with the action:— Held, that the lessors had no right to prohibit the letting to responsible persons, and that by acquiescence with knowledge of the breaches of covenant, they had lost their right to proceed to recover possession immediately, but must give the lessees a reasonable time for restitution of the works; and the application for liberty to proceed at law ordered to stand over for three months. Whitehead v. Bennett, 9 W. R. 626.

—— Effect of.]—A lessor, who has a right of re-entry reserved on breach of a covenant not to under-let, does not, by waiving his re-entry on one under-letting, lose his right to re-enter on a subsequent under-letting. Nor, by waiving his right to re-enter on a breach of covenant to repair, does he waive his re-entry on a subsequent want of repairs. Doe d. Boscawen v. Bliss, 4 Taunt. 735.

Where circumstances occur which entitle a party to take advantage of a clause of forfeiture, and he does acts which shew that he waives that forfeiture (though the acts were such as he was not entitled to do), he cannot afterwards take advantage of the forfeiture. Ward v. Day, 5 B. & S. 359; 33 L. J., Q. B. 254; 10 L. T. 578; 12 W. R. 829—Ex. Ch.

None where Forfeiture Complete.]—When a forfeiture is complete, there can be no waiver of it. Thus, where a condition is annexed to a lease for years, upon breach of which the lease becomes void, the forfeiture works the instant such breach happens, and is then complete without entry, so that there can be no waiver; but where the condition is annexed to a freehold, there may be a waiver after the breach, and before the entry, for until then the forfeiture is not complete. Sexton v. Boyle, Vern. & Scriv. 414.

Other Matters as to.]—Where, during the existence of a lease containing a proviso for re-entry in case of assignment or under-letting without licence in writing, the lessor, who had purchased the remainder of the interest in it, engaged to grant a new lease to the defendant to take effect on the expiration of the old lease:— Held, that the lessor could not maintain ejectment against the defendant on the fact of his possession, though no licence in writing had been granted, as there was a waiver of the forfeiture if any had taken place, or else there was no forfeiture at all, for the defendant came in with the lessor's consent. Doe d. Weatherhead v. Curwood, 1 H. & W. 140.

A tenant is not absolved from the performance of the covenants of his lease by a notice to quit such notice ought rather to be regarded as a notice to be more vigilant in the performance of the covenants. Gregory v. Wilson, 9 Hare, 683; 16 Jur. 304.

g. Demand of Rent.

When Necessary.]—Upon a lease reserving rent payable quarterly, with a proviso that if the rent is in arrear twenty-one days next after the day of payment, being lawfully demanded, the lessor may re-enter:—Held, that five quarters being in arrear, and no sufficient distress on the premises, the lessor might re-enter without a demand. Doe d. Scholefield v. Alexander, 2 M. & S. 525; 15 R. R. 338. See S. C., 3 Camp. 516; 14 R. R. 830.

Where a lease contained a proviso that if the rent was in arrear for twenty-one days, the lessor might re-enter, although no legal or formal demand should be made:—Held, that the rent having been in arrear for twenty-one days, the lessor might maintain ejectment without actual re-entry or demanding the rent. Doe d. Harris v. Masters, 4 D. & R. 45; 2 B. & C. 490; 2 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 117; 26 R. R. 422. And see Rede v. Farr, 6 M. & S. 121; 18 R. R. 329.

Where a landlord has a right to re-enter for nonpayment of rent, he cannot recover in ejectment at common law, unless he demands the rent on the day when it becomes due; nor under 4 Geo. 2, c. 28, s. 2, if there is a sufficient distress on the premises. Doe d. Forster v. Wandlass, 7 Term Rep. 117; 4 R. R. 393.

A lease contained the following clause: "And it shall be lawful for the lessor, her executors, &c. to call on tenant for quarterly payment of rent, or, if otherwise, as now accepted, at Michaelmas and Lady-day, as a matter of favour, with a quarter remaining in hand, and, if not paid in twenty days after, rent as stated, and 10*l.* of increased rent for breaking up land by acre, then the tenant shall be liable to have the rent due recovered by sale and distress, or to enter on the premises for the same till it be fully satisfied":—Held, first, that the clause might be understood as reserving a right of entry, upon nonpayment of rent, to hold the premises till the arrears were paid. Doe d. Durke v. Bowditch, 8 Q. B. 973; 15 L. J., Q. B. 266; 10 Jur. 637.

Held, secondly that under the clause the lessor could not enter without the common-law formalities, the 4 Geo. 4, c. 28, s. 2, applying only where there is a right of re-entry by which the lease is avoided. Ib.

An agreement of tenancy contained the following clause: This agreement is entered into upon the express condition that, if the tenant shall make default in payment of the rent, or any part thereof, within twenty-one days after the same shall become due, being demanded, it shall be lawful for the landlord, without giving any notice to quit, and without any other warrant, authority, or proceedings, to re-enter: — Held, that, to entitle the landlord to avail himself of the right of re-entry, the rent must be in arrear twenty-one days, and a demand (but without the formalities of a common-law demand of payment) be then made. Phillips v. Bridge, 43 L. J., C. P. 13; 9 L. R. C. P. 48; 29 L. T. 692; 22 W. R. 237.

What is Sufficient.]—A demand of rent due from the lessee to the lessor, though made of a stranger, if made upon the land, is a sufficient demand, and need not be general to sustain ejectment for a forfeiture for nonpayment of rent, being lawfully demanded. Doe d. Brooke v. Bridges, 2 D. & R. 29; 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 9.

A demand within the twenty-one days is insufficient. Phillips v. Bridge, supra.

A lease for years contained a covenant to pay rent, and a proviso for re-entry on nonpayment of rent, the rent "being first lawfully demanded." The property being vacant, the landlord asked for payment of rent from the person liable to pay it, and not receiving it, re-entered:—Held, that there had been a sufficient demand, and that the lease was effectually determined. Manser v. Dix, 8 De G. M. & G. 703; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 252.

By a lease, rent was payable on the usual quarter days, provided that if the rent should be in arrear for twenty-eight days after any of the days appointed for payment after the same had been lawfully demanded, it should be lawful for the lessor to re-enter and take possession if necessary, without bringing an ejectment. The rent being unpaid:—Held, that a demand made on the premises at half-past ten o'clock on the morning of the last day was not sufficient to entitle the lessor to re-enter without action. Acocks v. Phillips, 5 H. & N. 183.

Invalid Notice or Demand.]—By an agreement in writing dated the 7th March, 1884, made between the plaintiffs and defendants, the defendants agreed to lease to the plaintiffs the advertisement spaces on the cars of the defendants running at N. for three years, from the 7th January, 1884, at a rent of 120*l.* a year payable quarterly. The agreement provided that the advertising boards and fittings should be found by the plaintiffs; and it contained a condition that in the event of default by the plaintiffs in payment of any moneys due under the agreement for thirty days after demand in writing, the defendants should be at liberty at once to determine the agreement or lease, and on the determination thereof the boards were to become the property of the defendants, who were to have the option of purchasing the other fittings. The plaintiffs usually paid the rent upon the first day of the month. Upon the 7th April, 1885, the plaintiffs not having paid the rent for the past quarter, the defendants sent a written demand for the payment of 30*l.*, "being one quarter's rent under the advertising agreement due on the 1st inst.," and on the 30th May, the rent being still in arrear, they wrote to the plaintiffs determining the agreement:—Held, that the demand of 7th April being inaccurate, was not a demand on which a forfeiture could be founded, and that the agreement was not properly determined. Jackson v. Northampton Street Tramways Co., 55 L. T. 91.

When Excessive.]—In ejectment to recover premises for nonpayment of rent under the usual proviso for re-entry on nonpayment for twenty-one days, it appeared that the rent was payable quarterly, and that a demand of more than one quarter's rent was made on the twenty-first day at one o'clock:—Held, that only one quarter's rent should have been demanded, and that at sunset. Doe d. Wheeldon v. Paul, 3 Car. & P. 613.

Effect of Tenant Refusing to Pay after.]—A tenant for a definite term of years does not forfeit his term by orally refusing, upon demand of the rent made by his landlord, to pay the rent, and claiming the fee as his own. Doe d. Graves v. Wells, 10 A. & E. 427; 2 P. & D. 396; 8 L. J., Q. B. 265; 3 Jur. 820.

h. How Available in Pleading.

Defence—Of Lessor.]—Where a right of entry accrues by forfeiture, and several forfeitures of the same kind have happened, though the landlord has not availed himself of them, if he pleads his right of entry in trespass brought against him by his tenant, he must set out the specific forfeiture on which he grounds such right. Kavanagh v. Gudge, 6 Scott (N.R.) 508; 5 Man. & G. 726; 12 L. J., C. P. 258; 7 Jur. 352.

—— Of Lessee.]—To an action for rent, the defendant pleaded a plea to the further maintenance of the action, setting out an indenture, by which premises were demised by S. to the plaintiff, with a power of re-entry in favour of S., in case of nonperformance by the plaintiff of the covenants contained therein; that, before the rent accrued due, the plaintiff broke one of such covenants; and that, by means of the premises, the estate and interest of the plaintiff in the premises became forfeited, and that, by reason and in consequence of the forfeiture, S. brought an ejectment. The plea set out the proceedings and judgment in ejectment given after the commencement of the action, and that the defendant afterwards on being required to do so, attorned tenant to S., and paid him the rent:—Held, a good answer to the further maintenance. Franklin v. Carter, 3 D. & L. 213; 1 C. B. 750; 14 L. J., C. P. 241; 9 Jur. 874.

i. Relief against.

i. In Equity.

The court refuses to relieve lessees against the legal consequences of breaches of covenant, as well in cases which rest in contract as where the legal relation between the parties is fully established. Gregory v. Wilson, 9 Hare, 683; 16 Jur. 304.

It must be a strong case of equity created by a landlord against himself to control his legal right. Ib.

Grounds for—No one to Perform.]—The fact of there being no personal representative of a lessee on whom the duty of performing the covenants of the lease has devolved cannot be set up against the landlord. Ib.

—— Conduct of Lessor.]—Where a lessee had forfeited his lease at law, but shewed reasonable ground for belief that he had a good defence in equity, the landlord was restrained from proceeding to execution at law until the hearing of the cause. North Staffordshire Steel, &c. Co. v. Camoys, 11 Jur. (N.S.) 555.

Semble, that where a landlord is aware that a lease is or must be forfeited, and allows the tenant to go on spending money on the property, the landlord will be restrained from availing himself of the forfeiture at law. Ib.

Relief lies in general against a forfeiture of a lease during a period when the landlord dealt with the tenant so as to lead him to suppose the forfeiture would not be insisted on; but where a subsequent forfeiture was incurred after such dealings had ceased:—Held, that the prior transactions raised no equity. Flattery v. Anderson, 12 Ir. Eq. R. 218.

—— Possibility of Compensation.]—Relief against forfeiture by breach of covenant by lessee, where compensation can be made. Davis v. West, 12 Ves. 475.

Relief against forfeiture where compensation can be made; as against a clause of re-entry for breach of a covenant to lay out a specific sum in repairs in a given time, and not limited to cases of accident, &c. but even against negligence and voluntary acts. Sanders v. Pope, 12 Ves. 282.

Action for—Payment into Court—Payment out.]—The arrears of rent and amount of costs brought into court by the plaintiff, in a suit to redeem a lease forfeited, by nonpayment of rent, must, if the bill is dismissed, be repaid to the plaintiff semble. Bowser v. Colby, 1 Hare, 109; 11 L. J., Ch. 132; 5 Jur. 1106.

ii. Under Common Law Procedure Acts.

Act of 1860—Nonpayment of Rent—Costs.]—Where in an action of ejectment upon a forfeiture by non-payment of rent the plaintiff obtains judgment but without costs, the defendant may obtain relief from the forfeiture under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1860 (23 & 24 Vict. c. 126), s. 1, without being required to pay the plaintiff any costs other than those of the summons for relief. Croft v. London and County Banking Co., 54 L. J., Q. B. 277; 14 Q. B. D. 347; 52 L. T. 374; 49 J. P. 356—C. A.

—— Necessary Parties—Original Lessee.]—After judgment in an action of ejectment for nonpayment of rent, a mortgagee of land by subdemise when applying under s. 1 of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1860, for relief against forfeiture, must make the original lessee a party to the proceedings. Berney v. Moore (2 Ridgway, 310) explained; Doe d. Whitfield v. Roe (3 Taunt. 402) distinguished. Hare v. Elms, 62 L. J., Q. B. 187; [1893] 1 Q. B. 604; 5 R. 189; 68 L. T. 223; 41 W. R. 297; 57 J. P. 309.

Act of 1852—Nonpayment of Rent—Bankruptcy of Lessee—Assignment by Trustee to Mortgagee—Re-entry without Process of Law—Form of Order—Damages.]—Relief against forfeiture for nonpayment of rent is not confined to the case impliedly referred to in the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852,—namely, recovery by process of law—but will extend also to a case where there has been peaceable resumption of premises without such process. Such relief will be given to a mortgagee to whom the trustee in bankruptcy of the lessee has assigned the lease.

The time for applying for relief is, however, by analogy to the statute, limited to six months after recovery of possession. In such a case the plaintiff, an equitable mortgagee to whom a lease had been assigned by the trustee in bankruptcy of the lessee, was declared to be entitled, on payment of the arrears of rent, to enjoy the demised land according to the lease, already in existence. But no damages can be awarded to the plaintiff as compensation in respect of the time during which he has been kept out of possession. Howard v. Fanshawe, 64 L. J., Ch. 666; [1895] 2 Ch. 581; 13 R. 663; 73 L. T. 77; 43 W. R. 645.

iii. Under Conveyancing Acts.

Statutes.]—44 & 45 Vict. c. 41 (Conveyancing Act, 1881), s. 14, and 55 & 56 Vict. c. 13 (Conveyancing Act, 1892), ss. 2, 4 and 5.

Notice to Remedy Breach—Form of.]—The notice required by s. 14 of the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881, to be served by a lessor on a lessee before enforcing a right of re-entry or forfeiture for breach of covenant, must specify the particular breach complained of with sufficient clearness to enable the lessee to remedy the same. Fletcher v. Nokes, 66 L. J., Ch. 177; [1897] 1 Ch. 271; 76 L. T. 107; 45 W. R. 471; 61 J. P. 232.

A notice stating that "you have broken the covenants for repairing the inside and outside of the houses (naming them all) contained in a lease of the said premises (describing it)," was held insufficient, as it did not distinctly specify the particular houses in respect of which the covenants had been broken. Ib.

A notice by the lessor under s. 14, sub-s. 1, specifying the breach complained of, and requiring the lessee to remedy it, is not invalid because it does not contain a claim for compensation in money for the breach. North London Land Co. v. Jacques (49 L. T. 659), overruled. Lock v. Pearce, 62 L. J., Ch. 582; [1893] 2 Ch. 271; 2 R. 403; 68 L. T. 569; 41 W. R. 369.

—— Service of—"Lessee."]—An assignee of a lease is a "lessee" withing the meaning of s. 14, sub-s. 1, of the Conveyancing Act, 1881. A notice, under s. 14, sub-s. 1, of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, addressed to A. B. (the original lessee), and "all others whom it doth or may concern," and served on the persons in occupation of the premises demised, is sufficiently addressed to, and validly served on, the assignee of the lease. Cromin v. Rogers, 1 Cab. & E. 348.

—— Sufficiency of.]—A lease under which rent was payable quarterly on the usual quarter days contained a covenant by the tenant to keep the premises in repair, and gave the landlord a right of re-entry for breach of covenant. The premises being out of repair, the landlord on 22nd September, 1896, served a notice on the tenant under s. 14, sub-s. 1 of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, requiring him to execute certain specified repairs within three months. The repairs were not executed, and on 14th January, 1897, the physical state of the premises continuing the same, the landlord brought an action claiming possession and rent for the quarter ending 25th December, 1896:—Held, that the action was maintainable for the breach of covenant being a continuing one, the landlord, by claiming rent up to 25th December, 1896, did not preclude himself from insisting on his right of re-entry in respect of the continuing breach subsequent to that date, and the state of the premises continuing the same, the notice of 22nd September, 1896, was a good notice of the breach complained of within s. 14, sub-s. 1, of the Conveyancing Act, 1881. Penton v. Barnett, 67 L. J., Q. B. 11; 46 W. R. 33—C. A.

A lessee of building property, with a covenant in his lease to complete the buildings by a certain date, failed to complete them within the required time. The lessor commenced an action to eject him, and, in default of his appearance, signed judgment and issued a writ of possession. The lessor, before commencing his action, served the lessee with a notice stating the breach, but not requiring him to remedy it, or to make compensation, as required by s. 14, sub-s. 1, of the Conveyancing Act, 1881. An application was made by equitable mortgagees of the property to be relieved against the forfeiture on the ground of this informality in the notice. They offered to submit to such terms as the court thought fit:—Held, that no notice sufficient for the purposes of the act had been given, and the equitable mortgagees were entitled to be relieved against the forfeiture on the terms of their undertaking to complete the buildings by a certain time, and, if not so completed, to re-deliver possession of the property to the lessor, and the lessor was ordered to give immediate possession to the mortgagees. North London Land Co. v. Jacques, 49 L. T. 659; 32 W. R. 283; 48 J. P. 505.

—— Want of—Effect.]—Where a person has gained possession of property, but has no title to it, being, in fact, a trespasser, the rightful owner is entitled to use force in ejecting him, so long as he does him no personal injury. Lessors had not, before re-entering upon premises for nonpayment of rent and breach of covenant, served upon the tenant the notice required by s. 14, sub-s. 1, of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, specifying the breach of covenant complained of:—Held, that by reason of sub-s. 8 of the section, its provisions did not affect the law relating to re-entry for nonpayment of rent; and under sub-s. 2 the court had a discretion to refuse relief against re-entry for breach of covenant on the ground of want of notice, and the circumstances of this case were such that the court would refuse such relief. Scott v. Brown, 51 L. T. 746.

—— Expenses of.]—By the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881, s. 14, sub-s. 1, it is provided that a right of re-entry or forfeiture under any proviso or stipulation in a lease, for a breach of any covenant or condition in the lease, shall not be enforceable . . . unless and until the lessor serves on the lessee a notice specifying the particular breach complained of, and, if the breach is capable of remedy, requiring the lessee to remedy the breach, and in any case requiring the lessee to make compensation in money, for the breach, and the lessee fails within a reasonable time thereafter to remedy the breach, if it is capable of remedy, and to make reasonable compensation in money, to the satisfaction of the lessor, for the breach:—Held, that the expenses to which a lessor might be put in the preparation of the notice specifying the breach complained of were not payable as compensation within the meaning of this enactment. Skinners' Co. v. Knight, 60 L. J., Q. B. 629; [1891] 2 Q. B. 542; 65 L. T. 240; 40 W. R. 57; 56 J. P. 36—C. A. But see 55 & 56 Vict. c. 13, s. 2, and Bridge v. Quick, post, col. 1032.

Sub-s. 3 of s. 14 of the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881, which provides that for the purposes of that section a lessee includes an under-lessee and a lessor an under-lessor, applies also to s. 2, sub-s. 1, of the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1892; but that provision only has the effect of making what is enacted in those sections as between lessor and lessee applicable as between under-lessor and under-lessee, and does not create any rights or liabilities as between lessor and under-lessee. Nind v. Nineteenth Century Building Society, 63 L. J., Q. B. 636; [1894] 2 Q. B. 226; 9 R. 468; 70 L. T. 831; 42 W. R. 481; 58 J. P. 732—C. A.

Per Lord Esher, M.R., and Davey, L.J.: A lessee who has complied with a notice under s. 14, sub-s. 1, of the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881, to remedy a breach of covenant, has not been "relieved" so as to be liable to an action, under s. 2, sub-s. 1, of the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1892, for costs and expenses in reference to such breach, "relieved" in that subsection meaning relieved by the court. Ib.

Application — Originating Summons.]—An application by a lessee, under s. 14, sub-s. 2, of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, for relief against forfeiture by reason of a breach of covenant cannot be made by originating summons. Lock v. Pearce, 62 L. J., Ch. 582; [1893] 2 Ch. 271; 2 R. 403; 68 L. T. 569; 41 W. R. 369—C. A.

—— Time for.]—An application for relief against re-entry, under 44 & 45 Vict. c. 41, s. 14, sub-s. 2, cannot be granted if made after actual re-entry by a landlord who has duly given notice under sub-s. 1. North London Land Co. v. Jacques (9 Q. B. D. 672) distinguished. Rogers v. Rice, 61 L. J., Ch. 573; [1892] 2 Ch. 170; 66 L. T. 640; 40 W. R. 489—C. A.

Jurisdiction—Action pending at Commencement of Act—Power of Court of Appeal.]—A landlord brought an action to recover the demised property under a proviso of re-entry for breach of covenant to insure. The defendant claimed relief under statute 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 4. The plaintiff obtained judgment on the 4th of July, 1881. On the 4th of August the defendant appealed. A stay of proceedings was granted and continued, so that the plaintiff never obtained possession. On the 1st of January, 1882, the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 41), came into operation, after which the appeal came on to be heard:—Held, that the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881, s. 14, sub-s. 2, is not confined to breaches taking place after the act came into operation, but extends also to breaches committed before the act, and to proceedings pending when the act came into operation, and that as the landlord had not obtained possession, but the action was still pending, there was jurisdiction to grant relief to the tenant under that sub-section. Quilter v. Mapleson, 52 L. J., Q. B. 44; 9 Q. B. D. 672; 31 W. R. 75—C. A.

Held, also, that assuming the judgment of the court below to have been correct according to the law as it then stood, the Court of Appeal could grant to the tenant the relief to which he was entitled according to the law as it stood at the hearing of the appeal, since the general orders provide that appeals shall be by way of rehearing, and give power to the Court of Appeal not merely to make any order which ought to have been made by the court below, but to make such further or other order as the case may require. Ib.

—— Stay of Action—Terms—Lessor's Costs as between Solicitor and Client — Surveyor's Charges.]—Where in an action for re-entry upon breach of covenant to repair, the defendant applies to the court for relief under s. 14, sub-s. 2, of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, the court may, in its discretion, make an order to stay the action upon payment by the defendant of the plaintiff's costs as between solicitor and client, as well as the costs of surveys and schedules of dilapidations. Skinners Co. v. Knight ([1891] 2 Q. B. 542), distinguished. Bridge v. Quick, 61 L. J., Q. B. 375; 67 L. T. 54; 56 J. P. 696.

Relief when Granted—Nonpayment of Rent.]—See Scott v. Brown, supra, col. 1030.

—— Nonpayment of Renewal Fines.]—Where the right of renewal of a lease for lives renewable for ever had been forfeited by non-payment of renewal fines within the time prescribed by the lease, though demanded in writing by the reversioner, the court refused to grant relief against the forfeiture under s. 14, sub-s. 2, of the Conveyancing Act, 1881. Ruttledge v. Whelan, 10 L. R. Ir. 263.

—— Breach of Covenant to Repair.]—In an action for the recovery of land for breach of a covenant to repair, relief will be granted under the Conveyancing Act, 1881, although the premises are in a very dilapidated condition, and the relief was not claimed in the pleadings. Mitchison v. Thompson, 1 Cab. & E. 72.

—— Tenancy determined by Bankruptcy.]—Where a tenant presents a petition in bankruptcy by reason of which the lease is determined:—Held, that s. 14 of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, has no application. Gould or Goold, Ex parte, Walker, In re, 13 Q. B. D. 454; 51 L. T. 368; 1 Morrell, 168.

—— Two Houses in same Lease—Covenant broken as to one.]—The doctrine established by the case of Darlington v. Hamilton (Kay, 559), —namely, that where two houses are comprised in one lease, and subject to covenants common to both, an under-lessee of one house is liable to have his underlease determined by re-entry by the original lessor for breach of any covenant relating to the other house—still prevails, and is not affected by s. 14 of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, which merely protects a lessee or under-lessee against re-entry or forfeiture by giving him an opportunity of making good any breach of covenant. Creswell v. Davidson, 56 L. T. 811.

Agreement for Lease.]—Sect. 14 of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, applies to an agreement for a lease of which the tenant is entitled independently of the act, to demand specific performance. Dicta in Swain v. Ayres (21 Q. B. D. 289), adopted. Strong v. Stringer, 61 L. T. 470.

An agreement for a lease is not a lease within the meaning of s. 14 of the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881, and therefore the terms of that section do not apply to a mere tenancy under an agreement for a lease, where there is no actual lease in existence, nor any title to specific performance. The defendant in an action for recovery of land was in possession of the premises as tenant, under an agreement for a lease, which provided that the lease to be executed thereunder should contain (inter alia) a covenant to keep the premises in repair, and a condition for re-entry for breach of such covenant. Rent had been paid under the agreement, but no lease had been executed. The premises being out of repair, the landlord brought the action to recover them as upon a forfeiture. No notice had been given before action under the above-mentioned section: — Held, that there being no lease in fact executed, or title shewn to a decree for specific performance by execution of a lease, the section did not apply, and the action was maintainable. Swain v. Ayres, 57 L. J., Q. B. 428; 21 Q. B. D. 289; 36 W. R. 798—C. A. Affirming 52 J. P. 500.

—— Tenancy at Will.]—The plaintiff entered into possession of a farm under an agreement for a lease for twenty-one years from the defendant. Before any rent was due or had been paid the landlord gave the plaintiff notice to quit, and turned him out of possession, because he had done that which had amounted to a breach of a covenant contained in the agreement and intended to be inserted in the lease. The tenant brought an action for trespass:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover; that as he was in possession under an agreement for a lease for twenty-one years, and had paid no rent, he was only a tenant at will; that his landlord was therefore entitled so to determine that tenancy; and that the tenancy was not subject to or controlled by the provisions of the Conveyancing Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 41), s. 14. Coatsworth v. Johnson, 55 L. J., Q. B. 220; 54 L. T. 520—C. A.

Right of Sub-lessee to Relief.]—A sub-lessee of part of the premises leased is not entitled to relief as against the principal lessor, under s. 14, sub-ss. 2 and 3, of the Conveyancing Act, 1881. Burt v. Gray, 60 L. J., Q. B. 664; [1891] 2 Q. B. 98; 65 L. T. 229; 39 W. R. 429.

In an action by a lessor to recover possession of premises on the ground of forfeiture by the lessee, the court will, under the power conferred upon it by the Conveyancing Act, 1892, s. 4, grant relief to an under-lessee, and vest the property in him for the whole of his term, on condition that such under-lessee pays all rent due, and executes a deed containing the same covenants as the lessee had entered into with the lessor; and the court will do this, notwithstanding that it is prevented by the Conveyancing Act, 1881, s. 14, sub-s. 6, from granting similar relief to the lessee. Highgate School or Cholmeley's School v. Sewell, 63 L. J., Q. B. 820; [1894] 2 Q. B. 906; 10 R. 368; 71 L. T. 88; 58 J. P. 531.

Sect. 4 of the Conveyancing Act, 1892, is not a section amending s. 14 of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, but is an independent enactment. Imray v. Oakshette, 66 L. J., Q. B. 544; [1897] 2 Q. B. 218; 76 L. T. 632; 45 W. R. 681—C. A.

The court has jurisdiction to relieve an under-lessee upon forfeiture of the superior lease for breach by the lessee of a covenant not to assign or underlet without consent, although it could not grant such relief to the lessee himself; but this jurisdiction is discretionary and must be exercised with caution. Ib.

A person who accepts an underlease without inquiring into the superior title is guilty of such negligence as disentitles him to relief. Ib.

—— Application for Vesting Order.]—Where a lessor has brought an action against the lessee and his under-lessees, claiming possession of the demised premises under a proviso for re-entry upon the bankruptcy of the lessee, it is competent for the under-lessees to set up by way of defence and counterclaim in that action a claim for an order vesting in them the property in question for the remainder of their lease under s. 4 of the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1892. It is not necessary that the application for such an order should be made by summons at chambers. Highgate School or Cholmeley's School v. Sewell, 62 L. J., Q. B. 476; [1893] 2 Q. B. 254; 5 R. 501; 69 L. T. 118; 41 W. R. 637; 57 J. P. 680.

3. Resumption of Premises.

See post, M. 8 (cols. 1206, et seq.).

4. By Surrender.

a. Of Lease.

By Writing.] — A surrender might be by writing without a deed, or sealing, before 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 3. Farmer d. Earl v. Rogers, 2 Wils. 26.

Executrices of tenant from year to year signed the following instrument: — "We do hereby renounce and disclaim, and also surrender and yield up to the lessor, all right, title, interest, uses, trust, and terms of years whatsoever; and possession of that messuage called B.:—Held, a surrender, and not a disclaimer. Doe d. Wyatt v. Stagg, 5 Bing. (N.C.) 564; 7 Scott, 690; 9 L. J., C. P. 73.

Effect of Cancelling Lease.]—The fact of a lease being found in the possession of the lessor in a cancelled state is no evidence of a surrender by deed or note in writing. Doe d. Courtail v. Thomas, 4 M. & Ry. 218; 9 B. & C. 288; 7 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 214.

The mere cancelling in fact of a lease is not, under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 3, a sufficient surrender of the term thereby granted. Roe d. Berkeley (Earl) v. York (Archbishop), 6 East, 86; 2 Smith, 166; 8 R. R. 413.

To whom made.]—A surrender of a lease cannot be made to sequestrators from the Court of Chancery; it must be to the lessor, or to a party legally entitled under him. Cornish v. Searell, 1 M. & Ry. 703; 8 B. & C. 471; 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 254.

—— To One of Two Joint Tenants.]—Where a tenant had taken a house from two joint tenants, who had both signed the lease, but one of them only had afterwards interfered in the management of the house:—Held, that a surrender to one was a surrender to both. Dodd v. Acklom, 6 Man. & G. 673; 7 Scott (N.R.) 415; 13 L. J., C. P. 11.

—— To Lessor who has Sold.]—A leasehold house was underlet for twenty-one years to P. by trustees. The trustees afterwards granted a fresh under-lease to K. for twenty-one years, and sold the property by auction to a purchaser, who had no notice of the first under-lease. P. after the sale, by deed, purported to surrender his interest to the trustees:—Held, that as the first lessee had not attorned to the second, the surrender was rightly made, and the purchaser must complete. Edwards v. Wickwar, 35 L. J., Ch. 309 ; L. R. 1 Eq. 403 ; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 158 ; 14 W. R. 363.

Where Infant Beneficially Entitled.]—The provisions of the act 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 65, for the surrender of a lease to which an infant is entitled, apply to a lease to which an infant is only beneficially entitled, the legal estate being vested in a trustee for him. Griffiths, In re, 54 L. J., Ch. 742 ; 29 Ch. D. 248 ; 53 L. T. 262 ; 33 W. R. 728.

Direction to Under-tenant to attorn.]—In 1699 certain land was leased by a parish for a term of 1000 years at a rent of 10*l.* per annum. The land was subsequently built upon, pursuant to the provisions of the lease, and part of it had devolved upon G. and part upon F. The parish officers sought to induce G. and F. to give up possession by threatening them with an information in chancery, and by offering them leases for twenty-one years at two-thirds of the annual value, which offers were refused. G., however, verbally promised the attorney of the officers to give up possession, and directed his under-tenant of part of the premises to attorn to the officers as from last quarter-day. The under-tenant did so, and the officers took possession of the untenanted houses and afterwards received the rents. F., who was a trustee for others, refused the offered lease, but one of his cestui que trusts directed the under-tenant in possession to attorn to the officers. This direction was obeyed, and the officers thereafter, with the knowledge of F., received the rents. Ejectment having been brought by the officers and special cases stated for the opinion of the court :—Held, that in the case of G., the circumstances did, but that in that of F. they did not, amount to a surrender of his term in the land. Gray v. Balls, 5 L. T. 395.

By Operation of Law.]—The mere surrender of a small part of demised premises and proportionate reduction of the rent does not in itself amount to a surrender by operation of law of the old tenancy, and the creation of a new one. Holme v. Brunskill, 47 L. J., Q. B. 610 ; 3 Q. B. D. 495 ; 38 L. T. 838—C. A.

The plaintiff, while lessee of five rooms from the defendants for a term, entered into negotiations with them by which he was to hold three only of the rooms at a diminished rent, and on the next quarter-day he paid and took a receipt for rent at the lesser rate. There was evidence that the parties intended a written agreement to be prepared, embodying the terms of the new agreement, but they ultimately disagreed, and such agreement was never, in fact, signed. On the following quarter-day the defendants claimed rent of the plaintiff under the old lease, which he repudiated. There was evidence that the plaintiff had given up possession of two of the rooms :—Held, that the jury were justified in finding that there was a new tenancy, and therefore that there was a surrender by operation of law. Jones v. Bridgman, 39 L. T. 500.

A., the tenant of a house, three cottages, and a stable and yard, let at an entire rent, for a term of seven years, before the expiration of the term assigned all the premises to B. for the remainder of the term, the house and cottages being in the possession of under-tenants and the stable and yard in that of A. The landlord accepted a sum of money as rent up to the day of the assignment, which was in the middle of the quarter. B. took possession of the yard and stable only. The occupiers of the cottages having left them after the assignment, and before the expiration of the term, the landlord relet them. A. paid no rent after the assignment, but the landlord received rent from the under-tenants. Before the expiration of the term the landlord advertised the whole of the premises to be let or sold :—Held, that this was a surrender by operation of law of all the premises. Reeve v. Bird, 1 C. M. & R. 31 ; 4 Tyr. 612 ; 3 L. J., Ex. 282.

A surrender by deed is unnecessary where the former lessee is the party who takes the new lease, as the fact of his doing is evidence that the new lease has been accepted by him, and such an acceptance operates as a surrender in law ; but it is not enough that the lessee agrees to an act done by the reversioner. Lyon v. Reed, 13 M. & W. 285 ; 13 L. J., Ex. 377 ; 8 Jur. 762.

The term "surrender by operation of law" is properly applied to cases where the owner of a particular estate has been a party to some act, the validity of which he is by law afterwards estopped from disputing, and which would not be valid if his particular estate continued to exist. Ib.

Thus, when a lessee for years accepts a new lease from his lessor, he is estopped from saying that his lessor had not the power to make a new lease ; and as the lessor could not grant the new lease until the prior one had been surrendered, the acceptance of such new lease is of itself a surrender of the former one. Ib.

Such surrender is the act of the law, and takes place independently of, and even in spite of, the intention of the parties. Ib.

The defendant held premises, as tenant to the plaintiff, under a memorandum of agreement for three years. He left the premises in the first year. On application being then made by the plaintiff for rent due, the defendant, by letter, authorised the plaintiff to let the premises to anyone else. The plaintiff then let them to another tenant for three years, and gave him possession :—Held, in an action for rent on the original agreement, that these facts constituted a surrender by operation of law. Nicholls v. Atherstone, 10 Q. B. 944 ; 16 L. J., Q. B. 371 ; 11 Jur. 778. See also, Page v. Mann, 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 63.

A lessee, who had paid his rent occasionally to a trustee, and occasionally to a cestui que trust, gave up possession on the last day of his term, but before his term was over, to the person who had been trustee, and not to the party then having legal title :—Held, that, as the act was equivocal, it did not amount either to a surrender or a forfeiture of the term. Ackland v. Lutley, 1 P. & D. 636 ; 9 A. & E. 809 ; 8 L. J., Q. B. 164.

R. was entitled to one-half of the equitable interest, and to one-sixth of the legal estate, by descent ex parte maternâ, in lands held under a lease of 1740 for lives, renewable for ever. In 1766 X., being the surviving cestui que vie in that lease, and R. being then a minor, his father, who took no interest under the lease of 1740, procured a renewal of it, by a demise of the lands, to be made to himself for the lives of X. and two new lives, with a covenant for perpetual renewal. On his death in 1779, the legal estate under the lease of 1766 descended upon R. as his heir, X. being at that time the only surviving life in it:—Held, that upon the death of R. intestate, his heir ex parte maternâ was entitled to the lands; that under the circumstances it could not be presumed that the persons entitled to the legal estate under the lease of 1740 had conveyed or surrendered it to the lessee in the lease of 1766, or that they had assented to the lessor therein making the renewal of 1766 to the lessee therein. The doctrine of Thomas v. Cook (2 B. & Ald. 119; 20 R. R. 374), viz. surrender by operation of law resulting from acquiescence by the tenant in a new demise by the landlord, is not to be extended. Lynch (Lessee of) v. Lynch (6 L. R., Ir. 131) doubted. Lyon v. Reed (13 M. & W. 285), approved. Quære, what is the precise operation of the indenture of 1766. Creagh v. Blood, 3 Jo. & Lat. 138; 8 Ir. Eq. R. 688.

The court has no authority to set up a lease, which, by the bonâ fide exercise of the power vested by law in a tenant for life to grant a new lease, has by the doctrine of surrender by operation of law been determined, there being no fraud or collusion, or other circumstance, to justify the interference of the court. Nixon v. Robinson, 2 Jo. & Lat. 4; 7 Ir. Eq. R. 520.

—— What Necessary to Effect.]—To effect a surrender of a lease by operation of law there must be an agreement by landlord and tenant that the term shall be put an end to, acted upon by the tenant's quitting the premises and the landlord, by some unequivocal act, taking possession. Panther Lead Co., In re, 65 L. J., Ch. 499; [1896] 1 Ch. 978; 44 W. R. 573; 3 Manson, 165.

—— Delivery of Key to Landlord.]—It is not necessary that a surrender should be in writing; but the jury may presume a surrender from the delivery up of the key to the landlord, coupled with other facts, shewing reasons for the landlord accepting a surrender, and the tenant giving up the tenancy. Ackland v. Lutley, supra.

When a tenant has quitted the demised premises before the expiration of the term, and has sent the key to the landlord with the intention of giving up possession, the mere fact that the landlord has received the key, and attempted unsuccessfully to relet the premises, does not estop him from alleging that the tenancy still subsists. And if afterwards, before the expiration of the term, the landlord relets the premises, the surrender by operation of law takes effect from such reletting, and does not relate back to the original receipt of the key by him. Oastler v. Henderson, 46 L. J., Q. B. 607; 2 Q. B. D. 575; 37 L. T. 22—C. A.

An agreement by landlord and tenant that the term shall be put an end to, acted upon by the tenant's quitting the premises, and the landlord by some unequivocal act taking possession, amounts to a surrender by operation of law. Phené v. Popplewell, 12 C. B. (N.S.) 334; 31 L. J., C. P. 235; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1104; 6 L. T. 247; 10 W. R. 523.

Where, therefore, a tenant left the key at the counting-house of the landlord, and the latter, though he at first refused to accept it, afterwards put up a board to let the premises, and used the key to shew them, and painted out the tenant's name from the front:—Held, sufficient evidence of a surrender by operation of law. Ib.

A. and B. demised a house, by lease in writing to C., at a rent payable quarterly. The key was delivered to C.'s wife. C. entered into possession; but before the first quarter's rent became due (there having been some dispute as to arrears of rent and taxes), C.'s wife delivered the key back to A., who accepted it. B., after signing the lease, had never interfered:—Held, that the delivering back of the key by the tenant, animo sursum reddendi, and the acceptance thereof by the landlord, amounted to a surrender of the term by act and operation of law. Dodd v. Acklom, 6 Man. & G. 673; 7 Scott (N.R.) 415; 13 L. J., C. P. 11.

Held, also, that the jury was, upon the facts warranted in finding that C.'s wife acted as his agent in surrendering the term, and that A. acted as agent for B. in accepting such surrender, and that B. was bound by such surrender and acceptance. Ib.

A. was tenant to B. of rooms for a term of years. Upon the bankruptcy of B., A. sent the key of the rooms to the office of the official assignee, where it was left with a clerk, who was told that it was the key of the rooms which A. had occupied. A. immediately quitted possession, and no further communication took place:—Held, not to amount to a surrender by act or operation of law. Cannan v. Hartley, 9 C. B. 634; 19 L. J., C. P. 323; 14 Jur. 577.

Lessee for years having agreed to surrender his lease to the lessor, delivers up the key, which the lessor accepts, but afterwards refuses to accept the surrender. Lessee decreed discharged from the rent. Natchbolt v. Porter, 2 Vern. 112.

Condition Precedent to Staying an Action for Rent.]—To an action upon an indenture of lease for nonpayment of rent and for nonrepair, the defendant proposed to plead, that it was agreed between the plaintiff and the defendant that the latter should surrender the tenancy to the plaintiff, by yielding up possession of such portion of the premises as was in his occupation, and by permitting the plaintiff to receive all future rents of such part as was occupied by the defendant's tenants, and by permitting the tenants to attorn to the plaintiff, the defendant to pay a certain sum of money, and give up certain machinery, all of which was to be done by the defendant, and accepted by the plaintiff, in satisfaction of the covenants of the lease, and that the lease and counterpart should be given up to be cancelled. The plea alleged that the defendant paid to the plaintiff the money, and gave up the machinery, and delivered the lease to him, and that the plaintiff excused himself from delivering up the counterpart; that the defendant accordingly withdrew from the possession of the premises which he occupied, and had never since been in the occupation or in the receipt of the rents, and that he had always permitted the plaintiff to receive the same, and the tenants to attorn. Upon an application to plead several matters, the court refused to allow the plea to be pleaded, as not disclosing an equitable defence, on the ground that a court of equity would require the execution by the defendant of a valid surrender of the term as a condition precedent to staying the action, and that a court of common law has no power to enforce such condition. Mines Royal Society v. Magnay, 10 Ex. 489; 2 C. L. R. 171; 24 L. J., Ex. 7; 18 Jur. 1028; 3 W. R. 75.

Acceptance of a New Lease.]—Acceptance of a new good lease implies the surrender of a former. Davison d. Bromley v. Stanley, 4 Burr. 2210.

A recital in a second lease, that it was granted in part consideration of the surrender of a prior lease of the same premises is not a surrender by deed or note in writing of such prior lease; it not purporting in the terms of it to be of itself a surrender or yielding up of the interest; though, in some instances, the acceptance of a second lease for part of the same term before demised, may be a surrender of such prior term by operation of law; and this even though the second lease is voidable, if it is not merely void. Roe d. Berkeley (Earl) v. York (Archbishop), 6 East, 86; 2 Smith, 166; 8 R. R. 413.

A fire having occurred upon leasehold premises, the lessor entered. Subsequently an executory agreement was entered into between the parties for a new lease at an increased rent, as was evidenced by letters which passed between them, in one of which a suggestion was made that a memorandum should be indorsed upon the old lease referring to the increase of rent. This was not carried out, but payments of the increased rent were demanded and made, but under protest by the lessee's solicitor. Upon the bankruptcy of the lessee the lessor distrained for rent at the increased rate. The county court judge held that the old lease was still subsisting, and that consequently the old rental alone could be distrained for:—Held, on appeal, reversing that decision, that the old lease was surrendered by operation of law, and that the agreement for an increased rent having been made and acted upon, the distress for such increased rent was lawful. Vitale, Ex parte, Young, In re, 47 L. T. 480.

A new letting to an old tenant, commencing immediately, operates as a surrender of the original term, because the lessor could have no power to create the new term if the original term had subsisted; and, for a like reason, a new letting to a third party, with the assent of the original tenant, has the same operation. M'Donnell v. Pope, 9 Hare, 705; 16 Jur. 771.

A quasi tenant in tail of a freehold lease for lives may, by surrendering the old lease, without the trustees joining, and taking a new lease to himself, bar the remainders over; notwithstanding there were prior existing trusts at the time of making such surrender. Blake v. Luxton, G. Coop. 178; 3 P. Wms. 10; 6 Term Rep. 290, n.; 14 R. R. 235.

Where a lease by a bishop, which had been granted in consideration of the surrender of a prior lease by deed-poll, had been avoided by the successor, the first lease was not revived by such avoidance. Doe d. Rochester (Bishop) v. Bridges, 1 B. & Ad. 847; 9 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 113.

Where a landlord grants a new lease to a stranger with the assent of the tenant under an existing lease, and the latter gives up his own possession, that is a surrender by operation of law. Davison v. Gent, 1 H. & N. 744; 26 L. J., Ex. 122; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 342; 5 W. R. 229.

A lease of lands was granted conformably to a power to lease. A later lease was expressed to be granted "for the consideration of the surrender of the present lease, and which is hereby surrendered accordingly," and of a sum of money. The earlier lease was actually given up on the execution of the second. The second lease was not valid as an execution of the power; but rent was received according to its terms, by successive tenants for life and in remainder under the settlement:—Held, that the surrender of the first lease was good. Doe d. Egremont (Earl) v. Forwood, 3 Q. B. 627; 11 L. J., Q. B. 321.

Lands, which were devised for life, remainder over, with a power of leasing to the tenant for life, were held under two leases, of 1760 and 1784, for ninety-nine years, determinable on lives. In 1788, S., the lessee, agreed to sell a parcel to A.; and G., tenant for life under the will, in consideration of the surrendering into his hands of the two indentures, 1760 and 1784, and in order to effectuate the agreement between S. and A. with respect to that parcel which was intended to be demised by an indenture bearing even date therewith, demised the residue of the lands to S., with an apportionment of the rents and heriots, the parcel being severed. The lease of 1788 was not a due execution of the power. In ejectment by the remainderman after the death of the tenant for life:—Held, that the acceptance by S. of the lease of 1788 did not, as to the lands thereby demised, operate as an absolute surrender in law of the lease of 1784, which was then subsisting, but as a conditional surrender only during the life of the tenant for life. Doe d. Biddulph v. Poole, 11 Q. B. 713; 17 L. J., Q. B. 143; 12 Jur. 450.

A subsisting tenancy is not determined by an agreement, whereby the landlord lets to his tenant at a valuation to be made by two persons, and stipulating that the tenant is to give sureties to answer for the rent, if no valuation be made and no sureties given. John v. Jenkins, 1 C. & M. 227; 3 Tyr. 170; 2 L. J., Ex. 83.

Lands were demised for life, remainder over, with a power of leasing to the tenant for life. In 1755 the testator made a lease for ninety-nine years, if certain lives should so long live. In 1812 the tenant for life under the will made a lease, "in consideration of the surrendering up into the hands of the lessor by the lessee" the lease of 1755, "which surrender was thereby made and accepted accordingly"; this lease was invalid, being not made conformably to the power:—Held, that as the new lease did not pass an interest according to the contract, the acceptance of it did not operate as a surrender of the former lease. Doe d. Egremont (Earl) v. Courtney, 11 Q. B. 702; 17 L. J., Q. B. 151; 12 Jur. 454. But see Brinkley v. M'Munn, 32 L. R., Ir. 532, post, col. 1050.

In 1742, a farm was demised by the Broderers' Company to F. for 100 years, with a covenant for perpetual renewal. In 1827 the residue of this term had become vested in B., who in that year assigned it, by way of mortgage, with a proviso for redemption. On the 22nd May, 1828, H. demised the farm for twenty-one years to the plaintiff. On the 12th January, 1836, the mortgagees and H. surrendered the premises to the Broderers' Company. On the 13th January, 1836, the company demised them to H. for 100 years, and shortly afterwards the unexpired residue of that term, and all the estate and interest of H. in the premises, were assigned to the defendant. In an action by the plaintiff against the defendant on a covenant in the lease from H. to the plaintiff to keep down the rabbits on the farm, the defendant pleaded that H. did not demise to the plaintiff; that the reversion on that lease did not vest in the defendant:—Held, that both these issues ought to be entered for the plaintiff, for that the lease being by deed was a demise by way of estoppel, and a reversion in H. by estoppel was thereby created which, primâ facie, was a reversion in fee, and therefore was not surrendered to the Broderers' Company, but passed from H. to the defendant. Sturgeon v. Wingfield, 15 M. & W. 224; 15 L. J., Ex. 212.

And see Forquet v. Moore, 7 Ex. 870; 22 L. J., Ex 35, ante, col. 805.

Acceptance of New Tenant by Landlord.]—A tenant by his own act alone, and contrary to the terms on which he holds, cannot dissolve the relationship of landlord and tenant and discharge himself from the liabilities to which he is thereby subject. But where the landlord by the express acceptance of a second tenant, or by acts shewing such acceptance, shews that he considers the first tenancy at an end, the first tenant is discharged from liability. Page v. Mann, 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 63.

—— Assent of Tenant—Change of Possession—Statute of Frauds.]—The oral assent by the tenant of an existing lease to his lessor granting a new lease of the premises to a new tenant does not constitute a surrender of the existing lease unless the existing tenant gives up possession to the new tenant at or about the time of the grant of the new lease. Davison v. Gent (1 H. & N. 744), Thomas v. Cook (2 B. & Ald. 119; 20 R. R. 374), and Lyon v. Reed (13 M. & W. 285) considered. Dictum in Baring v. Abingdon ([1893] 2 Ch. 374) explained. Wallis v. Hands, 62 L. J., Ch. 586; [1893] 2 Ch. 75; 3 R. 351; 68 L. T. 428; 41 W. R. 471.

—— Rights of Under-Tenant.]—A. demised premises to B., which B. demised to C., reserving rent; the interest of B. was afterwards sold to D., upon which D. obtained from A. a new lease, the lease to B. having been cancelled; B. and D. afterwards distrained for rent in the name of D., upon which occasion D. declared that the premises belonged to him:—Held, in an action against B., D. and their servants, that the cancellation and new lease did not operate as a surrender of the interest of B., and that rent being due to B. by effluxion of time, B., D. and their servants were justified in making the distress, though in the name of D. Wootley v. Gregory, 2 Y. & J. 536; 31 R. R. 626.

Validity of, as affecting Assignee under Bill of Sale—Growing Crops.]—B., the tenant from year to year of a farm of the defendant, assigned by bill of sale to the plaintiff all his property upon the farm together with all growing and all other crops, which at any time thereafter should be in or about the same or any other premises of his. On the 25th of April, after the execution of this bill of sale, the defendant distrained for rent, and while in possession under that distress, he, having no knowledge of the bill of sale, agreed with B. that he would forego all claim for rent, that B. should surrender the farm to him, and that the tenancy should be determined as from the 24th of June next ensuing. In May, B. having made default in payment of the instalments under the bill of sale, the plaintiff took an inventory of the goods on the farm, and put locks on the gates of the fields in which the crops were growing. The defendant then informed the plaintiff of the agreement between himself and B.; whereon the plaintiff removed the locks and shortly after gave the defendant notice of the assignment to him by the bill of sale of the crops. The defendant attended to the cultivation of the crops, took possession of the farm on the 24th of June, and reaped and sold the crops as they came to maturity. In an action of trover, and for the conversion of the crops:—Held, that although the plaintiff was in equity entitled to relief, yet an action of trover could not be maintained; that the surrender by the tenant to the landlord was a valid surrender at law, but that it could not affect prejudicially the equitable rights of the plaintiff as assignee of the crops; that if there could be no valid surrender as against the plaintiff, and if the tenant must still be considered with regard to the plaintiff to be in possession, so that the plaintiff could claim to be by the assignment in the same position as the tenant, then the plaintiff, although entitled to the value of the crops when sold, was also liable to pay the rent of the farm and the expenses of cultivating and harvesting the crops, and that as the balance on a settlement of account was in favour of the defendant, judgment must, in the circumstances of the case, be entered for the defendant. Clements v. Mathews, 52 L. J., Q. B. 772; 11 Q. B. D. 808—C. A. Reversing 47 L. T. 251.

Unstamped Agreement for.]—An agreement between a landlord and tenant for the latter to give up possession, and the former to take the stock at a valuation, and to make compensation for fallows, to pay all taxes, and permit the tenant to keep possession of part of the messuage and some of the outhouses up to a certain day, without paying rent or taxes, was held to operate as a surrender of the term, and not being on a deed stamp was void. Williams v. Sawyer, 6 Moore, 226; 3 Br. & B. 70.

Surrender of Lease in consideration of Interest in New Lease.]—R., the last life in a bishop's lease, agrees with C. to surrender this lease on a promise of the bishop to grant a new one for the lives of R. and C., and the son of C.; and in consideration of C. surrendering the old lease, it was agreed the new one should be in trust for the infant son of C. The whole purchase-money was paid by C. to the bishop, but the legal estate was granted on the new lease to R. and his heirs, during his own life and the lives of C. and his son. C., after the death of R., took upon him to dispose of it; R., by a deed dated the day after the lease, declares his intention to be that C. and his son should, after his decease, hold to them and their heirs during the remainder of the term:—Held, that R. had a valuable share in the consideration of the new lease, having given up his interest in the old, and that having a right to declare the trust, C. had his life only in the lease. Crop v. Norton, 2 Atk. 74; 9 Mod. 233; Barnard. 179.

Agreement for, without Consideration.]—T. L. holding lands under the see of D. for a renewable term of twenty-one years, demised them in 1787 to two persons for a like term, with a toties quoties covenant for renewal. These sold their interest in part of the lands, and divided the rest equally among them. On the death of one, his share passed to his two sons, A. and A. Lowry; the share of the other was sold to P. The two Lowrys obtained a renewal of the lease of all the lands to themselves in 1822 without P.'s knowledge, and then mortgaged them to M., and obtained a judgment in ejectment against P., who thereupon filed a bill against them and M., and obtained in 1826 a decree for an account and reconveyance of his part on payment of his proportion of the renewal fines and costs. W., who had been the attorney of the Lowrys in all these matters, obtained an assignment of their interest in 1829. P. did not make up the decree of 1826, but he made several payments to W. in respect of the renewal fines and costs, and urged him to reconvey to him his part of the lands and grant a renewal, but being in distress he signed an agreement to surrender his lands to W. and take part of them as his tenant:—Held, that the agreement signed by P. to surrender was without consideration and void, and that he was entitled to the value of his lands while they were in the possession of W. and to a reconveyance and renewal upon payment of the balance found due from him. Wallace v. Patten, 12 Cl. & F. 491. Affirming S. C., sub nom. Patten v. Wallace, Longf. & T. 470.

Suit on promise to surrender lease, dismissed to court of law. Greville v. Bowker, Cary, 95.

Surrender after Notice of Assignment of future Rent.]—The plaintiffs sub-let a portion of premises, of which they had a lease, to the defendant. They afterwards assigned their interest in the premises to B., and agreed in writing with B., that notwithstanding this assignment they should receive the rent due from the defendant for the remainder of her lease, and notice of this agreement was given to the defendant. The defendant afterwards surrendered her lease to B. In an action for rent claimed as accruing after the surrender:—Held, that even if there was a valid assignment of a chose in action, still that the plaintiffs could not recover, for that the assignment was of rent to become due, whereas no rent had accrued due after the surrender, and the defendant could not be prevented by the agreement between the plaintiffs and B. from surrendering her lease to B. Southwell v. Scotter, 49 L. J., Ex. 356; 44 J. P. 376—C. A.

Surrender by Assignee of Part of Premises—Covenant to pay Rent—Liability of Lessee.]—The plaintiff demised a house and premises for a term of years by deed containing a covenant by the lessee to pay the rent reserved. The lessee assigned the term, and the assignee surrendered a small portion of the premises, upon which was a scullery, to the plaintiff, who, in consideration therefor, paid the assignee 25*l.* and built for him a new scullery of equal value upon another part of the premises. The rent apportionable for the part surrendered was 4*l.* a year. In an action against the lessee upon the covenant for a quarter's rent less the sum apportioned for the part surrendered:—Held, without deciding whether the covenant was apportionable or not, that the lessee, by assigning his interest in the term, empowered the assignee to surrender any part of the premises; that therefore there had not been any eviction of the lessee by the plaintiff; that the lessee, notwithstanding the surrender, was still liable on the covenant, and that the liability of the lessee upon the covenant after assignment was not that of surety for the assignee. Baynton v. Morgan, 58 L. J., Q. B. 139; 22 Q. B. D. 74; 37 W. R. 148; 53 J. P. 166—C. A. Affirming 59 L. T. 478.

Premises Relet to Lessor.]—Where a lease came into the hands of the original lessor, by an agreement entered into between him and the assignee of the original lessee, "that the lessor should have the premises as mentioned in the lease, and should pay a particular sum over and above the rent, annually, towards the goodwill already paid by such assignee"; such agreement operates as a surrender of the whole term. Smith v. Mapleback, 1 Term Rep. 441; 1 R. R. 247.

Other Modes of.]—A. demised a farm to B. under an agreement to hold from Michaelmas, 1799, to Michaelmas, 1816, at a yearly rent. A. died, and devised the premises to C., who in 1813 put them up to sale by auction: D. became the purchaser, and also agreed to buy B.'s outstanding term, without C.'s knowledge or assent. D., having let E. into possession, became bankrupt. In 1814, C., by letter to B., admitted that E. occupied the premises, and afterwards demanded rent from him. C. and D.'s assignees afterwards executed mutual deeds of release, and D.'s assignees released E.:—Held, that C. was entitled to recover the rent from 1813 to 1816 from B., as there had been no surrender in writing of his interest to D., and as C. had not assented to E.'s being let into possession. Matthews v. Sawell, 2 Moore, 262.

By an agreement dated in May, to which A., B. and C. were parties, A. and B. agreed to sell by auction an estate to which they were entitled as tenants in common, or in default of such sale, that such parts of it as should not be sold after the 1st August and before the 1st September following should be divided into two equal lots between A. and B., and that 100*l.* should be paid by A. to C., the principal tenant, as a remuneration for his giving up possession of his farm at Michaelmas following; and C. agreed to give up possession of his farm accordingly. No part of the estate was sold by the 1st September, but some portions were sold subsequently, and the remainder was divided between A. and B., but such division was not completed till the following March. C. continued in possession, by the desire of A. and B., until that time, and then quitted:—Held, that the agreement was not a surrender of A.'s term. Weddall or Weddle v. Capes, 1 M. & W. 50; 1 Gale, 432; 1 Tyr. & G. 430; 5 L. J., Ex. 111.

Although a surrender of a life estate to the owner of the fee is as between the parties an extinguishment of the estate surrendered, yet it may have continuance to uphold a prior interest derived under it. Doe d. Beadon v. Pyke, 5 M. & S. 146; 17 R. R. 296.

A. being seised in fee of premises, by indenture of the 5th July, 1814, demised them for twenty-one years to B., who entered, and was possessed accordingly. B., by indenture of the 3rd November, demised the premises to C. for the residue of his term therein, excepting the last twenty-one days; and, on the 12th February, 1816, B., by deed-poll, indorsed on the counterpart of the lease to C., granted all his (B.'s) estate and interest in the premises to A., to hold to him for all such time or term in the counterpart of the lease mentioned, namely, the next immediate reversion expectant on the determination of B.'s lease. A., by deeds of lease and release, of the 15th and 16th July, 1822, granted, sold, and assigned all his estate and interest in the premises to the plaintiff by way of mortgage. On the 19th October, 1816, C. assigned all his interest in the premises to the defendant, who never entered, and C. remained in possession. In an action against the defendant for nonpayment of rent:—Held, that the deed-poll did not operate as a surrender of B.'s reversion of twenty-one days to

A., but only of his interest for the term co-extensive with C.'s lease; and that the plaintiff might sue the defendant on the covenants contained in such lease. Burton v. Barclay, 5 M. & P. 785; 7 Bing. 745; 9 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 231.

Defence—To forego Rent in consideration of Possession.]—To an action for rent due under a demise, the defendant pleaded that, before the rent became due, it was agreed between the plaintiff and the defendant that, in consideration of his giving up possession, he should be discharged from any further rent, and that he had given up possession accordingly, concluding with an allegation that the tenancy was thereby surrendered:—Held, that the plea was not to be taken as setting up a surrender so as to require a memorandum in writing; but that it afforded a valid excuse for the non-payment of the rent, by shewing the agreement and the giving up of possession. Gore v. Wright, 3 N. & P. 243; 8 A. & E. 118; 1 W. W. & H. 266; 7 L. J., Q. B. 147; 2 Jur. 840.

Bill to restrain the prosecution of an action at law for rent and dilapidations; the defendant at law applied for and was refused leave to plead with other pleas, by way of equitable defence, an agreement to surrender his lease on certain terms. There was conflict of evidence whether the agreement was complete. An injunction was granted on the plaintiff giving judgment at law, bringing in the money, and undertaking to bring in further amounts of rent. Magnay v. Mines Royal Co., 3 Drew. 130; 24 L. J., Ch. 413; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 153; 3 Eq. R. 377; 3 W. R. 258.

Observations on special injunctions to restrain proceedings at law. Ib.

Power of Court to compel.]—Lessee of a church lease makes an under-lease, and would have under-lessee to surrender, in order to enable him to renew with the church. There being no covenant in the tenant's lease to surrender, the court cannot compel him to do it. Colchester v. Arnott, 2 Vern. 283; Pre. Ch. 124.

Specific Performance of Agreement for—Sale by Mortgagee of Lease.]—An agreement was entered into between a lessor and lessee for releasing the lessee from all liability on certain payments being made by the lessee to the lessor, and on the lessee assigning to the lessor all his interest in the lease. At the date of the agreement the lessor had notice that the lessee had demised the property by way of mortgage, with a power of sale, which had become absolute. In a suit by the lessee for a specific performance of the agreement, one of the witnesses deposed that this power of sale had been exercised, but that fact was not put in issue by the pleadings:—Held, that it might constitute a defence if the lessor had no notice of it, and that the plaintiff was entitled to the option of having his bill dismissed without costs, or of having an inquiry as to the circumstances of the sale. Phelps v. Prothero, 2 De G. & Sm. 274. And see S. C., 17 L. J., Ch. 404.

b. Presumption of.

Generally.]—An acceptance of a surrender of a lease is not to be presumed from the circumstances of the rent having been paid by a third person, and not by the original tenant. Copeland v. Watts, 1 Stark. 96.

Under certain circumstances the jury may presume a satisfied term to have been surrendered to the cestui que use; but if no such presumption is made, and it appears in a special verdict in ejectment that such a term is still outstanding in a trustee who is not joined in bringing the ejectment, the cestui que use cannot recover. Goodtitle d. Jones v. Jones, 7 Term Rep. 47. S. P., Godfrey v. Hudson, 2 Esp. 499, n.

A satisfied term may be presumed to be surrendered: but an unsatisfied term, raised for the purpose of securing an annuity, during the life of the annuitant, cannot; and may be set up as a bar to the heir-at-law, even though he claims only subject to the charge. Doe d. Hodsden v. Staple, 2 Term Rep. 684; 1 R. R. 595.

In 1772 a term of 1,000 years was created by deed, for the purpose of securing 5,000*l.*; and in 1787, the principal and interest having been paid, the residue of the term was assigned in trust for the devisees of the person who created the term. In 1789, the premises were conveyed to a purchaser by deed, and the residue of the term was assigned in trust for the purchaser, her heirs and assigns, or as she should appoint, and in the meantime to attend the inheritance. The purchaser entered into possession of the premises, and continued so possessed till her death. In 1808, she executed a marriage settlement, reserving to herself a power of appointment by deed or will; and after the marriage, she, in December, 1813, devised all her real estate. Neither in the marriage settlement nor in the will was any mention made of the term of 1,000 years. She and her husband having both died:—Held, on ejectment brought by her heir-at-law, that there were no premises from which a surrender of the term could be presumed. Doe d. Blacknell v. Plowman, 2 B. & Ad. 573; 9 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 289.

Mortgage Terms.]—Where an old mortgage term of 1,000 years, created in 1727, was recognised in a marriage settlement of the owner of the inheritance in 1751, by which a sum was appropriated to its discharge; and no further notice was had of it till 1802, when a deed, to which the then owner of the inheritance and the representatives of the termors were parties, reciting that the term was still subsisting, conveyed it to others to secure a mortgage:—Held, that it could not be presumed to have been surrendered against the owner of the inheritance, who was interested in upholding it. Doe d. Graham v. Scott, 11 East, 478.

A testator, in a codicil to his will, stated that certain premises mentioned in the will were charged with a mortgage for 500*l.*, which he directed his executors to pay off:—Held, that after the lapse of nearly forty years, during all which time the testator's representatives had been in the perception of the rent, the mortgagee might be presumed to have been satisfied, and the term surrendered. Doe d. Mantin v. Austin, 2 M. & Scott, 107; 9 Bing. 41; 1 L. J., C. P. 152.

Evidence to go to Jury as to.]—A. devised an estate to trustees for years with remainder to B., which B., eighteen years after the death of A., treated as his freehold, and leased for lives. In an action by the lessee of B., as reversioner, the jury was told that they could not presume a surrender of the term by the trustees to B.; and, upon motion for a new trial, the direction was held right. Day v. Williams, 2 C. & J. 460; 1 L. J., Ex. 168.

Where an alleged outstanding term appears to have done the duty for which it was created, the jury is at liberty to presume a surrender of it. Bartlett v. Downes, 5 D. & R. 526; 3 B. & C. 616; 1 Car. & P. 522; 3 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 90; 27 R. R. 436.

A. having granted a lease to B. for twenty-one years, before the expiration of the term, granted another lease of the same premises to C. No surrender in writing of B.'s interest was shewn, but the lease granted to him was produced from A.'s custody, with the seals torn off; and it was proved to be the custom to send in the old leases to A.'s office, before a renewal was made, and which old leases were thereupon cancelled by A.'s officer:—Held, that this was evidence from which the jury might presume that B. had assented to the grant of the lease to C., so as to determine his interest by act and operation of law within the 29 Car. 2, c. 3, s. 3. Walker v. Richardson, 2 M. & W. 882; M. & H. 251; 6 L. J., Ex. 229.

In the case of a plain trust, where the trustees were directed to convey to a devisee on his attaining twenty-one, the jury may be directed to presume a conveyance at any time afterwards, though considerably less than twenty years. England d. Sybourn v. Slade, 4 Term Rep. 682; 2 R. R. 498.

The jury may presume an old satisfied term surrendered to the cestui que use in order to substantiate a lease executed by him. Doe d. Bowerman v. Sybourn, 7 Term Rep. 2; 2 Esp. 496; 4 R. R. 363.

By a marriage settlement, the settlor limited his estate to A. and B., as trustees, "to the only proper use and behoof of them, their heirs and assigns, for ever," in trust for the settlor until his marriage, in trust for husband and wife for life and the longest liver; then in trust for a term to other trustees to raise portions for younger children; then in trust for the first son and heirs male of the body; then to the second son in like manner; and then to the daughters; and, for default of such issue, then over to the right heirs of the settlor:—Held, that the first set of trustees took the legal estate by common law, and not by the Statute of Uses; and the second use could not be executed by the statute. The purposes of the settlement, however, being at an end, in ejectment by the devisee of the person last seised, after the lapse of forty years:—Held, that it might be left to the jury to presume a reconveyance of the legal estate from the trustees. Doe d. Lloyd v. Passingham, 9 D. & R. 416; 6 B. & C. 305; 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 146; 30 R. R. 327.

Where the defendant's ancestor came into possession of certain lands seventy years ago, as a creditor under a judgment obtained against the then owner, and the defendant's family had continued in possession ever since:—Held, that the original possession not having been taken under any conveyance, the length of possession was only primâ facie evidence from which the jury might infer a subsequent conveyance by the original owner, or some of his descendants; but that it might be rebutted by other evidence; and that the jury was not to presume such conveyance from length of possession, unless satisfied that such conveyance had actually been executed. Doe d. Fenwick v. Reed, 5 B. & Ald. 232; 24 R. R. 338.

A term of years was created in 1762, and assigned over to a trustee in 1779 to attend the inheritance. In 1814, the owner of the inheritance executed a marriage settlement, and, in 1816, he conveyed his life interest in the estate to a purchaser, as a security for a debt; but no assignment of the term or delivery of the deeds relating to it took place on either occasion. In 1819, an actual assignment of the term was made by the administrator of the trustee in 1779, to a new trustee for the purchaser in 1816:—Held, that, under these circumstances, on an ejectment brought by a prior incumbrancer against the purchaser, the jury was warranted in presuming that the term had, previously to 1819, been surrendered. Doe d. Putland v. Hilder, 2 B. & Ald. 782; 21 R. R. 488.

The plaintiff was tenant to A. of one close; K. was tenant to B. of another close; the plaintiff and K. verbally agreed to exchange their holdings; "the plaintiff to have B.'s land and pay K.'s rent, K. to have A.'s land and pay the plaintiff's rent." On the same day each took possession of the other's land. K. undertook to communicate their bargain to C., who was the agent of both A. and B.; he did accordingly, some days afterwards, communicate it to him, and C. expressed his concurrence:—Held, that this was evidence to go to the jury of a surrender by K. to B. of his interest in B.'s close. Bees v. Williams, 2 C. M. & R. 581; 1 Tyr. & G. 23; 1 Gale, 332.

A term of 1,000 years was created by deed in 1717, and in 1735 was assigned for the purpose of securing an annuity to A., and after that to attend the inheritance. A. having died in 1741, and the estate having remained undisturbed in the hands of the owner of the inheritance and her devisee from 1735 to 1813, without any notice having been in the meantime taken of the term, except that, in 1801, the devisee, in whose possession the deeds creating and assigning it were found, covenanted to produce those deeds when called for:—Held, that, under these circumstances, the jury was warranted, in an ejectment brought for the premises by the heir-at-law, to presume a surrender of the term. Doe d. Burdett v. Wrighte, 2 B. & Ald. 710; 21 R. R. 461.

Feoffee not taking Possession.]—A tenant in tail conveyed by feoffment in 1779: but the feoffee never entered, and the tenant in tail and those claiming under him remained in possession till 1829; they were also in possession of the deed of feoffment and suffered a recovery:—Held, that a reconveyance from the feoffee might be presumed. Jenny v. Jones, 10 Bing. 75.

Where Term subservient to Leasing Power.]—An estate was settled on A. for life, with power to charge it with an annuity for her husband, and portions for their younger children, and to grant leases. A. granted the estate to trustees for 500 years, on trust, if she should so direct, to raise portions by mortgages or sale:—Held, that the term till called into operation, was subservient to the leasing power, and was no answer to an ejectment by a lessee holding under a lease granted subsequently to the settlement. Doe d. Courtail v. Thomas, 4 M. & Ry. 218; 9 B. & C. 288; 7 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 214.

Agreement, Lessor and Lessee and Lessor and Under-Lessee.]—A. demises to B., who underlets to C. In the middle of both terms it is agreed between A. and B., that B.'s tenancy shall cease, and between A. and C., that C. shall hold under A. for a longer term. This arrangement enures as a surrender from B. to A., and a new demise from A. to C. Rex v. Banbury, 3 N. & M. 292; 1 A. & E. 136; 3 L. J., M. C. 76.

Acts of Ownership on part of Lessor.]—If a tenant quits apartments without giving notice, the landlord may recover the rent, although he has put up a bill in the window for the purpose of letting the apartments. Redpath v. Roberts, 3 Esp. 225.

So, if the landlord lights fires in the rooms, or even uses the fires, it will not deprive him of his right to rent. Griffith v. Hodges, 1 Car. & P. 419.

Lessee expecting Goods to be seized for Rent—Quitting.]—A tenant of apartments is not justified in quitting without notice, merely from a fear, however reasonable, that his goods may be seized for his landlord's rent. Rickett v. Tullick, 6 Car. & P. 56.

c. Of Tenancies from Year to Year.

Generally.]—A tenancy from year to year cannot be determined, so as to bar the interest of the tenant's creditors, unless there is either a legal notice to quit, or a surrender in writing. Doe d. Read v. Ridout, 5 Taunt. 519.

A verbal agreement to lease a ferry for a year may be put an end to by a verbal agreement before the expiration of the year. Peter v. Kendal, 6 B. & C. 703; 5 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 282; 30 R. R. 504.

Acceptance of another Tenant.]—A parol agreement between a landlord and a tenant from year to year, that another tenant should be substituted in his place, who was accordingly substituted, is a sufficient surrender according to the Statute of Frauds to determine the former tenancy. Stone v. Whiting, 2 Stark. 235; 19 R. R. 710.

But it is not sufficient if the third person does not take possession. Taylor v. Chapman, Peake, Ad. C. 19; 4 R. R. 884.

A., being tenant from year to year, underlet the premises to B., and the original landlord, with the assent of A., accepted B. as his tenant, but there was no surrender in writing of A.'s interest; rent being subsequently in arrear, the landlord distrained on B.'s goods:—Held, that these circumstances constituted a valid surrender of A.'s interest by act and operation of law within the Statute of Frauds. Thomas v. Cook, 2 B. & Ald. 119; 2 Stark. 408; 20 R. R. 374. But see Matthews v. Sawell, 2 Moore, 262.

Where premises had been let to B. for a term determinable by a notice to quit, and pending such term C. applied to A., the landlord, for leave to become the tenant instead of B., and upon A. consenting, agreed to stand in B.'s place, and offered to pay rent:—Held, that (though B.'s term had not been determined either by a notice to quit, or a surrender in writing) A. might maintain an action for use and occupation against C., and that the latter could not set up B.'s title in defence to that action. Phipps v. Sculthorpe, 1 B. & Ald. 50; 18 R. R. 426.

Where a lessee quitted, in the middle of his term, apartments which he had taken for a year, and the lessor let them to another tenant:—Held, that she could not recover rent against the lessee for a subsequent portion of the year, during which the apartments had been unoccupied. Walls v. Atcheson, 3 Bing. 462; 11 Moore, 379; 2 Car. & P. 268; 4 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 154; 28 R. R. 657.

A tenant from year to year, at a rent payable half-yearly, without giving any notice to the landlord, quitted the premises at the expiration of the current year. Before the next half-year expired, the landlord let the premises to another tenant, who occupied the same:—Held, that the landlord was not entitled to recover rent from the first tenant from the expiration of the current year, when he quitted the premises, to the time when the landlord relet the same to the second tenant. Hall v. Burgess, 5 B. & C. 332; 8 D. & R. 67; 4 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 172.

A., being tenant from year to year to B., died, leaving his widow in possession. C., some time after, took out letters of administration to the deceased, and the widow continued in possession, paying rent to B., with the knowledge of C., who never objected to such payment, or made any demand of rent:—Held, that there was no evidence of a surrender by operation of law, so as to create the relation of landlord and tenant between B. and the widow. Doe d. Hull v. Wood, 14 M. & W. 682; 15 L. J., Ex. 41; 9 Jur. 1060.

Acceptance of New Lease Exceeding Lessor's Power.]—A tenant for life made a lease, for a term exceeding his power, of two parcels of land, of one of which the lessee, previous to the commencement of the lease, had been tenant from year to year. In an action of ejectment on the title brought upon the death of the tenant for life by the remainderman:—Held, that the lessee could not rely, as a defence, upon his former tenancy from year to year as unsurrendered or rehabilitated. Doe d. Egremont v. Courtney (11 Q. B. D. 702) distinguished. Brinkley v. M'Munn, 32 L. R., Ir. 532.

Acceptance of Old Tenant jointly with New One.]—Where a sole tenant from year to year, before the termination of his tenancy, entered into an agreement with his landlord for a lease to be granted to him and another jointly, and both entered upon and occupied the premises jointly:—Held, that the first tenancy was determined, though the lease was never executed pursuant to the agreement. Hammerton v. Stead, 5 D. & R. 206; 3 B. & C. 478; 3 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 33; 27 R. R. 407.

Insolvency of New Tenant to Knowledge of Original Tenant.]—Where A. at the request of B., his yearly tenant, accepted C. as tenant in his stead, who proved to be insolvent, and it appeared that B., when he proposed C. to A., knew that C. had compounded with his creditors, but did not communicate the fact to A.:—Held, that the suppression of such a fact was a fraud in B., which rendered him still liable to A. for the rent. Bruce v. Ruler, 2 M. & Ry. 3; 6 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 228.

Tenants Exchanging Premises.]—Two persons being tenants from year to year of two closes, under different lessors, agreed to exchange them; both the lessors had the same steward, to whom the arrangement was mentioned; he expressed his assent to it:—Held, that this amounted to evidence of new demises of the respective closes, and of a surrender by operation of law of the previous interests of the tenants. Bees v. Williams, 1 Gale, 332; 2 C. M. & R. 581; 1 Tyr. & G. 23.

Defence in Action for Rent.]—The plaintiffs declared that they were tenants of chambers to

H., at a certain rent, and that in consideration that they would let the chambers to the defendant, he promised to pay the same rent to H., and that if he did not do so he would indemnify the plaintiffs. The declaration averred the letting to the defendant on such terms, and that the defendant did not pay to H. rent which afterwards become due, nor indemnify the plaintiffs who paid it. The defendant pleaded, first, that before rent became due the tenancy of the defendant to the plaintiffs was ended by surrender and operation of law; and secondly, that before rent was due the defendant agreed with the plaintiff C., on behalf of himself and the other plaintiff, to deliver up possession of the chambers to the plaintiff C., and that the defendant did accordingly so deliver up possession:—Held, that the pleas were good. Coles or Smith v. Lovell, 1 L. M. & P. 794; 10 C. B. 6; 20 L. J., C. P. 37; 15 Jur. 250.

To an action for a quarter's rent from Lady-day to Midsummer, the defendant pleaded that by agreement between the plaintiffs, executors of A., and the defendant, the defendant agreed to take of the plaintiffs' executors the premises; that it was afterwards agreed between them and B., that B. should become tenant to the plaintiffs from Lady-day, and that the defendant should be discharged from liability for subsequent rent; that the defendant accordingly gave up possession to B., and the plaintiffs accepted him as tenant:—Held, that the plea was not proved by evidence that one of the plaintiffs had so agreed to accept B. as tenant in lieu of the defendant. Turner v. Hardey, 9 M. & W. 770; 1 D. (N.S.) 954; 11 L. J., Ex. 277.

—— In Trespass.]—A plea to a declaration in trespass quare clausum fregit stated that B. was seised in fee of the locus in quo, and that the plaintiff held it of him as tenant from year to year, upon terms that B. or his in-coming tenant at any time after a certain day, when the plaintiff should have received notice to quit, should have liberty to enter and plough the arable land held by the plaintiff. Averment of notice to quit; that B. agreed to let, and the defendant agreed to take, the premises as tenant from year to year from and after the expiration of the plaintiff's tenancy; and that the defendant thereupon became the in-coming tenant, and entered after the certain day to plough the land:—Held, that the plea was good, inasmuch as enough appeared to warrant the allegation that the defendant was the in-coming tenant, which might have been traversed. Milner v. Myers or Gordon, 8 Q. B. 615; 15 L. J., Q. B. 157; 10 Jur. 472.

Evidence of Surrender of Tenancy—Admissions.]—In an action of trespass to premises which had been held by the plaintiff under a tenancy from year to year, determinable by notice of surrender:—Held, that in order to prove a surrender defore the acts complained of, evidence was admissible on behalf of the defendent of oral admissions made by the plaintiff, and made in his presence by his son, who had been acting as his manager, that notice of surrender had been given by the plaintiff. Slatterie v. Pooley (6 M. & W. 664), followed. Martin v. Doherty, 6 L. R., Ir. 194.

Licence to Quit and Delivery of Possession.]—A tenancy from year to year, created by parol, is not determined by a parol licence from the landlord to the tenant, to quit in the middle of a quarter, and the tenant's quitting the premises accordingly. Mollett v. Brayne, 2 Camp. 103; 11 R. R. 676. S. P., Thomson v. Wilson, 2 Stark. 379; 20 R. R. 696.

If a landlord in the middle of a quarter accepts from his tenant the key of the house demised, under a parol agreement, that, upon her then giving up the possession, the rent shall cease, and she never afterwards occupies the premises, he cannot recover in an action for the use and occupation of the house for the time subsequent to his accepting the key. Whitehead v. Clifford, 5 Taunt. 518; 15 R. R. 579.

One being in possession of premises as tenant from year to year, under an agreement for a lease for fourteen years, and, the rent being in arrear, entered into an indenture with his landlords, whereby, reciting such tenancy and arrears of rent accrued, and that he had agreed to quit and to deliver up the premises to them, and that a valuation should be made of his effects on the premises by two indifferent persons, and that the same should in the meantime be assigned and delivered up to a trustee for the landlords, assigned his effects on the premises to such trustee, to have the valuation made, and out of the amount to retain the arrears of rent, and pay the residue to the tenant:—Held, that the tenant not having in fact quitted the possession, nor any valuation having been made of his effects, such agreement to quit being conditional, and the condition not performed, nor the agreement in any manner acted upon, did not operate as a surrender of the tenant's legal term from year to year. Coupland v. Maynard, 12 East, 134.

Upon a tenancy from year to year, determinable at a quarter's notice, the lessor licenses the tenant to quit in the middle of a quarter, and the tenant quits, and the lessor accepts possession; this is a surrender by operation of law, destroying the right to rent for the whole or any part of the current quarter. Grimman v. Legge, 8 B. & C. 324; 2 M. & Ry. 438; 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 321.

When a tenant left the key at the counting-house of the landlord, and the latter, though he at first refused to accept it, afterwards put up a board to let the premises, and used the key to shew them, and painted out the tenant's name from the front:—Held, sufficient evidence of a surrender by operation of law. Phené v. Popplewell, 12 C. B. (N.S.) 334; 31 L. J., C. P. 235; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1104; 6 L. T. 247; 10 W. R. 523.

To an action by a landlord against his tenant for breach of promise to use the premises in a tenant-like manner, he pleaded, that during the tenancy, and before any breach, the premises, and his estate and interest therein, were duly surrendered to the landlord by act and operation of law, that is to say, by the tenant's quitting the premises, and every part thereof, with the licence and consent of the landlord, and relinquishing the possession thereof to him with the intention of putting an end to the tenancy, and by his accepting such possession, with the intention of putting an end to the tenancy:—Held, that if the tenancy continued up to the time of the arrangement stated, such arrangement would not enure, as a surrender by act and operation of law. Morrison v. Chadwick, 7 C. B. 266; 6 D. & L. 567; 18 L. J., C. P. 189.

In an action upon a parol demise, a plea, that, during the term, it was agreed that the defendant should relinquish the possession to the plaintiff for a month, after which the possession should be resumed by the defendant; and that the defendant did relinquish the possession, but the plaintiff would not restore the possession, is bad, as not shewing a surrender or an eviction. Dunn v. Di Nuovo, 3 Man. & G. 105; 3 Scott (N.R.) 487; 10 L. J., C. P. 318.

A tenant remains liable for rent unless he delivers up complete possession of the premises, or the landlord accepts of another in his room. Harding v. Crethorn, 1 Esp. 57; 5 R. R. 719.

By Notice to Quit.]—If a tenant from year to year gives notice to quit, not expiring with the year, the landlord, if the notice is in writing and signed by the tenant, may, if he pleases, treat this irregular notice as a surrender of the tenancy. Aldenburgh v. Peaple, 6 Car. & P. 212.

If a landlord attests a notice given by a lessee to his under-tenant to pay rent to the landlord, and has a knowledge of its contents, it is a termination of the tenancy of the lessee, and a discharge to him to that time. Harding v. Crethorn, 1 Esp. 57; 5 R. R. 719.

Otherwise, if the landlord has no knowledge of the contents of the notice. Ib.

What insufficient to constitute Surrender.]—Where a tenant from year to year, by a Lady-day holding, agreed by parol with his landlord's agent to quit at the ensuing Lady-day, which was within half a year, and the premises were relet by auction, at which the tenant attended and bid, but the new tenant was not let into possession:— Held, that the tenancy was not determined; there not having been either a sufficient notice to quit, nor a surrender by operation of law, within the Statute of Frauds, 29 Car. 2, c. 3, s. 3. Doe d. Huddleston v. Johnston, M'Clel. & Y. 141. And see Johnstone v. Huddleston, 4 B. & C. 922; 7 D. & R. 411; 4 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 71: 28 R. R. 505. Doe d. Murrell v. Milward, 3 M. & W. 328; 1 H. & H. 79; 7 L. J., Ex. 57.

A party who occupied a house as tenant from year to year, entered into the following agreement with his landlord: "1831, September 2. S. S. (the tenant) purchased an estate in the parish of Corbeg, bought of R. G. (the landlord) at the sum of 100*l.* Received on account 10*s.* Mr. R. G. is willing to let the sum lie, by paying 4 per cent." :—Held, that as there was an implied condition in the contract that the landlord should make out a good title, the agreement for the purchase did not operate as a surrender of the tenancy by operation of law. Doe d. Gray v. Stanion, 1 M. & W. 695; 2 Gale, 154; 1 Tyr. & G. 1065; 5 L. J., Ex. 253.

d. Where there is an Under-Tenant.

Effect of.]—A voluntary surrender by a tenant to his landlord does not affect the rights of a person holding on a sub-tenancy created by the tenant, nor is the sub-tenant's knowledge of the surrender equivalent to notice to him to quit. Mellor v. Watkins, L. R. 9 Q. B. 400; 23 W. R. 55.

When a lessor re-enters on a forfeiture the rights of under-lessees are gone, but where a lessor accepts a surrender from a lessee the rights of the under-lessees remain, although the lessee was at the time liable to forfeiture. G. W. Ry. v. Smith, 45 L. J., Ch. 235; 2 Ch. D. 235; 34 L. T. 267; 24 W. R. 443—C. A. S. C., in H. L., sub nom. Smith v. G. W. Ry., 3 App. Cas. 165; 47 L. J., Ch. 97; 37 L. T. 645.

Premises being demised and underlet, the first tenant surrendered his lease, and took a new one with similar covenants. The under-tenant continued in possession, and never surrendered. Quære, whether special covenants in the new lease co-extensive with those in the old (as not to erect new buildings without leave), could be enforced by the head landlord against such under-tenant, as "duties reserved" by the second lease, within the above provision. Doe d. Palk v. Marchetti, 1 B. & Ad. 715; 9 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 126.

The effect of 4 Geo. 2, c. 28, s. 6, while it gives a lessee the right to surrender notwithstanding his contracts with his under-lessee, leaves untouched the sub-interest, though it is merely an agreement for an underlease; and the effect of a new demise after the surrender for the residue of the original term is to make the new lessee the assignee of the reversion of the terms created by the surrenderor. Cousins v. Phillips, 3 H. & C. 892; 35 L. J., Ex. 84.

The defendant held two plots of building land, B. and C., under a lease which contained a covenant to build the houses not less than thirty feet apart, the effect of which was to secure to houses on plot B. a sea view over plot C. H. having entered into a treaty with the defendant for an underlease of B., made inquiries of the defendant as to what could be built on the land in front. The defendant replied that he, the defendant, could not build on C. closer than thirty feet, as his lease did not allow it. H., after having inspected the original lease, took an underlease of B., containing a covenant by the defendant that he, his executors, administrators, and assigns, would observe the lessee's covenants in the original lease. The defendant afterwards surrendered his lease to the ground landlord, took a new lease not containing the old restrictions, and commenced building on C. in a way which would obstruct the sea view from houses on B., belonging to the plaintiff, who was the assignee of H.:—Held, that the rights of H., under the defendant's covenant to observe the covenants in the original lease, were not affected by the defendant's surrender of that lease, and that the plaintiff was on that ground entitled to an injunction to restrain the defendant from building in contravention of those covenants. Piggott v. Stratton, 1 De G. F. & J. 33; 29 L. J., Ch. 1; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 129; 1 L. T. 111; 8 W. R. 13.

Held, also, that even if, by reason of the surrender, the covenant was gone, the plaintiff was entitled to an injunction, on equitable grounds, for that what the defendant had said to H. amounted to a representation that the defendant could not, during the term of his lease build otherwise than in a particular way, which representation he was bound to make good. Ib.

5. Merger.

Statute.]—By the Judicature Act, 1873 (36 & 37 Vict. c. 66), s. 25, sub-s. 4, there shall not after the commencement of the act be any merger by operation of law only of any estate, the beneficial interest in which would not be deemed to be merged or extinguished in equity.

Lease for Years in Estate in Fee.]—A. was lessee of premises for a term of twenty-one years, which would expire at Michaelmas, 1809; in December, 1799, A. took a further lease of the same premises for sixty years, to commence from Michaelmas, 1809; the lessor died in December, 1800, and devised the premises to A., the lessee, for his life: by lease and release, A., in 1806, conveyed his life estate to B.:—Held, that A.'s interest in the lease of 1799, which was to commence in 1809, was not merged in his estate for life. Doe d. Rawlings v. Walker, 5 B. & C. 111; 7 D. & R. 487; 4 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 93; 29 R. R. 184.

L., being seised in fee, demised to B. for twenty-one years from June, 1814. B. demised to M. for twenty-one years from June, 1814, wanting twenty-one days; and then by deed-poll granted to L. the indenture of lease to M., the premises thereby granted, and the rent reserved, to hold to L., his executors, &c., for the term mentioned in the demise to M.; L. conveyed the premises, the reversion and reversions, rents, issues, and profits, and all his interests in fee to the plaintiff by way of mortgage; M. assigned his term to the defendant by way of mortgage, but the defendant never entered:—Held, that the deed-poll from B. to L. did not merge the chattel interest in the fee, nor suspend the right to sue on the lease to M. Burton v. Barclay, 7 Bing. 745; 5 M. & P. 785; 9 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 231.

A lease was granted in 1759 for 99 years, if certain parties should so long live. The lessees in 1818 demised the premises to P. for 62 years, from the 25th March, 1821, if their interest should so long continue, subject to a rent of 40*l.* and various covenants, with a proviso for re-entry in case of default. P. had already the reversion in fee, subject to a mortgage granted by him before the last-mentioned demise. By lease and release executed in 1820, to which the mortgagee was a party, P. in consideration of a sum of money (part of which went to discharge the mortgage) conveyed the premises in fee to a purchaser, to whom the mortgagee also assigned his term; and it was stipulated that the purchaser should retain 300*l.* of the purchase-money upon trust, that, if P. should pay the 42*l.* rent, and perform the covenants contained in the lease of 1818, the purchaser should pay over to him the 300*l.* at the expiration of the term, or extinguishment of the lease of 1759, and interest in the meantime:—Held, that the deed of 1818 was an assignment of all the interest of the then lease to P., and that, by the conveyance of 1820, that interest, as well as the reversion in fee, passed to the purchaser, and (the mortgage being at the same time put an end to) the term became merged in the inheritance; and consequently, that, as soon as the term became vested in the purchaser, P. was discharged from the rent and covenants, and entitled to the 300*l.* Thorn v. Woolcombe, 3 B. & Ad. 586.

By an indenture in 1742, the Broderers' Company demised a farm for 100 years, with a covenant for perpetual renewal. On the 25th of August, 1827, the party in whom the term vested assigned the residue to H. On the 28th of August, 1827, he assigned the residue of the term to mortgagees, with a proviso for redemption on payment of 5,000*l.* within twelve months. In May, 1828, a lease of the premises was executed by H. and the plaintiff, for twenty-one years, under which the plaintiff entered into possession, and paid rent to H. up to 1835, and afterwards to the defendant. On the 12th of January, 1836, by an indenture between the mortgagees, H., the defendant, and the Broderers' Company, the mortgagees and H. surrendered to the company the premises, for the residue of the term, together with all covenants, to the intent that the residue of the term might be merged in the reversion, and the covenant for renewal be extinguished. On the 13th of January, 1836, the Broderers' Company demised the premises to H. for 100 years, and by an indenture of the 4th of February, 1836, the unexpired residue of the term became vested in the defendant. An action having been brought against him as assignee of H. for a breach of covenant:—Held, first, that H. did demise to the plaintiff, as the lease by him was good by way of estoppel. Sturgeon v. Wingfield, 15 M. & W. 224; 15 L. J., Ex. 212.

Held, secondly, that the reversion became vested in the defendant, as it was good by way of estoppel. Ib.

A., being tenant for life in 1769 made a lease of premises, to commence in 1784, for the term of forty-six years, and died in 1775. B., the assignee of that term, in 1795 demised the premises to C., D. and E., whose assignees the plaintiffs were, for thirty-four years and three-quarters; and the plaintiffs, in 1812, demised the premises to the defendant for eighteen years and a quarter. The declaration stated, that C., D. and E. were possessed of the premises for the residue of a term of thirty-four years and three-quarters, and that the plaintiffs were possessed of the reversion of the premises. The judge ruled at the trial that the interest of C., D. and E. was properly described in the declaration, and that the plaintiffs were possessed of the reversion. On motion for a new trial, on the ground of misdirection:—Held, that there was no ground for a new trial. Oxley v. James, 13 M. & W. 209; 13 L. J., Ex. 358.

Held, also, that the plaintiffs were possessed of the reversion. Ib.

B., after mortgaging premises in fee, demised them by deed to the defendant for thirty-one years. B. afterwards became bankrupt and died, and his assignees sold the premises to D.; and the mortgagee, being paid off, by the direction of the assignees, conveyed to D. in fee, the assignees also being parties and joining in the conveyance. D. after receiving rent for two years gave the defendant notice to quit:—Held, that the lease being good against B., by estoppel only, D. was not estopped by it in consequence of the assignees of B. having joined in the conveyance to him, and might bring ejectment and an action for use and occupation. Doe d. Downe (Lord) v. Thompson, 9 Q. B. 1037; 11 Jur. 1007.

A., in May, 1823, demised premises to B. for eighty years, with a proviso for re-entry in case the lessee, his executors, &c. should exercise or carry on, or permit to be exercised or carried on, the business of a victualler or publican. B., in November, 1823, mortgaged to C., and in 1829, the mortgage term was assigned to D., and ultimately became vested in E. After B. had assigned to C., and when he had no reversion but a mere equity of redemption, he by indenture granted an underlease for seventy-six years to F., with a proviso for re-entry similar to that contained in the original lease from A. Some of the mesne assignments were made subject to this underlease. In ejectment by the legal representatives of E., for a breach of the covenant in the original lease in using the premises as a public-house or beershop:—Held, first, that the underlease granted by B. operated merely as a demise by estoppel, inasmuch as he had not, at the time of making it, or since, any legal interest. Doe d. Prior v. Ongley, 10 C. B. 25; 20 L. J., C. P. 26.

Held, secondly, that the lessors of the plaintiff, or the persons under whom they claimed, not being parties to the underlease, or to any of the assignments which recognised and referred to it, were not bound by any covenants contained therein. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that the payment to and acceptance by E. of rent, under the underlease by B. to F., merely created a tenancy from year to year; and that such tenancy was well determined by a notice to quit served upon the attorney of the administratrix of the person who had paid the rent to the lessors of the plaintiff, and under whom the defendant claimed. Ib.

A lease of premises for a term of years was granted to K., L. and C. Some time afterwards L. granted a lease of the residue of the term, wanting one day, to the defendants, by whom the lease was executed, and rent was paid to L. Both leases contained covenants to repair and insure, and a proviso for re-entry for breach of either of them, but a performance of the covenant to insure in the lease to the defendants would not necessarily have included a performance of the corresponding covenant in the original lease. The premises being out of repair, and uninsured, the original lessor entered for a forfeiture. In an action by L. as reversioner against the defendants for a breach of their covenants to repair and insure, and for damages sustained by his loss of the term:—Held, first, that the execution of the lease and payment of rent to L. by the defendants were evidence that L. was solely entitled to the reversion, upon the determination of the lease granted to the defendants. Logan v. Hall, 4 C. B. 598; 16 L. J., C.P. 252; 11 Jur. 804.

Held, secondly, that L. (a sub-lessor) could not recover against the defendants (sub-lessees) the value of the term granted by the original lease, which he had lost by the defendants' breach of covenants. Ib.

A corporation being seised in fee of a close, by a deed of the 17th February, 1800, demised the same to H. for a term of lives and years. By deed of the 23rd July, 1803, H. assigned to C. his interest in the premises, to secure payment of 1,200*l.* lent by C. to H. By deed of the 19th February, 1804, reciting the two former deeds, and that H. agreed to sell part of the land to M. and W. for a sum out of which the sum due from H. should be paid to C., C. bargained, sold, assigned and transferred, and H. granted, bargained, sold, assigned and transferred to M. and W. part of the premises. In 1812, H. died, having made his will, whereby, after bequeathing his estates to his wife for life, he devised the same after her death to J. and M. in manner following: "Upon trust to pay and apply the rents, issues and profits of the same to and for the life and benefit of my daughter Mary and her assigns, during her life, and independent of her present or any future husband; and after her death, I give, devise and bequeath my real and leasehold estates unto and equally among all and every the children of my daughter, share and share alike as tenants in common." In 1816, the wife of H. died. By deed of the 11th December, 1817, the corporation assigned to the trustees the reversion in fee simple of the close:—Held, that, as the trustees took only an estate during the life of Mary, the lease for lives did not merge on the grant of the reversion. Cooke v. Blake, 1 Ex. 220; 17 L. J., Ex. 370.

Term in Longer Term.]—C., as administrator, held land for a term of years, which he demised to P. for a shorter period. P. soon afterwards assigned this land to C. for the shorter term. In the first deed C. was described as administrator, but not in the second:—Held, that there had been no merger in equity, and that the plaintiffs, who would be entitled to the land if the term was in existence, could maintain an action to establish their title to the land for the term and for mesne profits. Chambers v. Kingham, 48 L. J., Ch. 169; 10 Ch. D. 743; 39 L. T. 472; 27 W. R. 289.

If a tenant for life of an underlease for eighteen years, granted by a person who himself holds the premises so underlet along with other property under a lease for twenty-one years, purchases the interest of his immediate lessor, and obtains from his superior lessor a renewal of the lease thus purchased, the renewed lease is subject so far as regards the premises which were comprised in the underlease, to the same trusts as would have affected the underlease, if it had not been merged or had not expired by effluxion of time. The same rule holds, though at the time of the purchase the property was vested in a trustee upon trusts under which he could not have granted a renewal of the underlease, and though the tenant for life outlived, by twenty-five years, the time at which the underlease would have expired by effluxion of time. Giddings v. Giddings, 3 Russ. 241; 27 R. R. 78.

Effect—On Covenants.]—A., being possessed of a piece of land for a term of ninety-nine years, laid it out in plots, and underleased one plot to the defendant for the residue of the term, less three days, the defendant covenanting not to build more than twenty feet in height on that side of his plot which adjoined a narrow passage. A. underleased another plot, which abutted on the other side of the passage, to the plaintiffs. On A.'s death, the estate was sold under conditions which provided that the purchaser of the largest lot in value should take an assignment of the whole, and grant fresh underleases to the various under-lessees, for the residue of the term of ninety-nine years less two days. The defendant purchased his own plot, and the plaintiffs purchased their plot, which was the largest in value. The plaintiffs took an assignment of the whole, and granted a fresh underlease to the defendant of his lot for the residue of the term less two days at an apportioned ground rent:—Held, that though the defendant's original underlease was merged at law, he was still bound in equity to observe his building covenant; and that the plaintiffs could obtain an injunction to restrain him from infringing it. Birmingham Joint Stock Co. v. Lea, 36 L. T. 843.

If a tenant for a term of years leases for a less term, and assigns his reversion, and the assignee takes a conveyance of the fee, by which his former reversionary interest is merged, the covenants incident to that reversionary interest are thereby extinguished. Webb v. Russell, 3 Term Rep. 393; 1 R. R. 725.

—— On Charges upon Leaseholds.]—A. was beneficially entitled to renewable leaseholds for three lives held on trust to renew, and subject to certain charges. All the cestuis que vie had died. It being disputed whether the right to renew was lost, the reversioners granted a lease to A. for three new lives, without prejudice to the disputed question. A. subsequently bought the reversion:—Held, that the fee became subject to the charges. Trumper v. Trumper, 41 L. J., Ch. 673; L. R. 14 Eq. 295. Affirmed, 42 L. J., Ch. 641; L. R. 8 Ch. 870; 29 L. T. 86; 21 W. R. 692.

—— On Right of Way Reserved to Lessors.]—In 1820, A., B. and C., who were tenants in common in fee, demised a strip of land intersecting their estate to T. for 1,000 years for the purpose of making a canal. The lease reserved to the lessors and their assigns a right of way over or across the demised land. In 1838, the estate was partitioned, the reversion of part of the canal being conveyed to B. and the lands abutting on it to A. and C. respectively. In 1839, B. conveyed his reversion in that part of the canal to the lessee. On a claim by A. to enforce the right of way reserved by the lease:—Held, that that right was reserved to the lessors as owners of the reversion and not as owners of the adjoining lands, and consequently that the conveyance by B. in 1839, by causing the term to become merged in the reversion extinguished the rights of A. and C. over that part of the canal included in that conveyance. Dyneror (Lord) v. Tennant, 57 L. J., Ch. 1078; 13 App. Cas. 279; 59 L. T. 5; 37 W. R. 193—H. L. (E.)

Pleadings.]—Declaration in an action by the plaintiffs and P. on an indenture, by which, after reciting that they were owners of the premises subject to a mortgage for 3,500*l.* the interest of which was payable half yearly at the office of an attorney named, the plaintiffs and P. demised the premises to the defendant for seven years, yielding and paying the clear yearly sum of 153*l.* 11*s.* in part of interest on the mortgage. Breach, nonpayment of rent; and an averment, that the plaintiffs had not, nor had either of them, at or since the making of the indenture, any reversion of or in the premises, purported to be demised. Plea, the reversion in the premises expectant on the determination of the lease was in the plaintiffs and P., and after P.'s death was in the plaintiffs, who survived her; and, before breach, the plaintiffs conveyed their reversion to S., who became the assignee. Replication, no reversion was at the making of the indenture or since in the plaintiffs and P., nor since the death of P. in the plaintiffs:—Held, first, that the replication was not a departure from the declaration. Pargeter v. Harris, 7 Q. B. 708; 15 L. J., Q. B. 113; 10 Jur. 260.

Held, secondly, that the declaration was good, inasmuch as the facts disclosed in the lease did not estop the plaintiffs from saying that they had no reversion; and that, therefore, the covenant for payment of rent was a covenant in gross. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that the plea was bad, inasmuch as the defendant was not at liberty to assume that there was a reversion. Ib.

K. ASSIGNMENT.

1. Of Lease.

a. Agreement to Assign.

Effect of.]—A. agreed to execute to B. an effectual assignment of the two leases of a house and shop, "as he holds the same for a term of twenty-eight years," and B. agreed to accept "a proper assignment of the leases as above described, without requiring the lessor's title":—Held, that B. was bound to take an assignment of two consecutive leases, though the second was void, being under a power which had not been pursued. Spratt v. Jeffery, 5 M. & Ry. 188; 10 B. & C. 249; 8 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 114.

In an agreement for the assignment of a lease of a public-house, it was agreed that the intended assignee should take the lease, subject to the payment of the yearly rent and to the performance of the covenants thereby reserved and contained, such covenants being common and usual in leases of public-houses. The lease contained the following clause: "Provided always, and these presents are upon the express condition, that all and every underlease or underleases, deed or deeds of assignment of the premises, or of the devolution of the same by will or act of law, shall be left with the solicitor to the lessor within two calendar months from the date thereof, for the purpose of registration." In an action by the intended purchaser to recover his deposit, the jury found that the above clause was not common or usual in leases of public-houses:—Held, that the clause in question was included in the word "covenant" as used in the contract between the parties, and that the intended assignee was discharged from his agreement to accept an assignment of the lease. Brooks v. Drysdale, 3 C. P. D. 52; 37 L. T. 467; 26 W. R. 331.

Conditional.]—A. agreed, in consideration and on payment of 200*l.* at stipulated times, to assign to B. the lease of certain premises, for the residue of a term of which A. was assignee, at the yearly rent of 100*l.*, and under and subject to the covenants, provisoes and agreements in the original lease; and B. agreed to accept the lease on payment of the 200*l.* and interest, and in the meantime and until such assignment was made, to pay the rent and perform the covenants in the lease, and from the same to save harmless and indemnify A.; with a proviso, that, in case of default in payment of any or either of the instalments of the 200*l.*, A. should not be at liberty to re-enter:—Held, that this was not an absolute assignment, but only an agreement to assign on a given event. Hartshorne v. Watson, 7 Scott, 494; 5 Bing. (N.C.) 477; 2 Arn. 70; 8 L. J., C. P. 299.

Licence to Assign.]—If the vendor of a lease, in which is a covenant not to assign, contracts to assign his interest, it is incumbent on him, and not on the purchaser, to procure the lessor's licence for the assignment. Lloyd v. Crispe, 5 Taunt. 249; 14 R. R. 744.

A lease contained a covenant not to assign without the licence of the lessor, with a proviso for re-entry on breach. The lessee became bankrupt, and the assignees assigned to the defendant, who contracted to sell the term to the plaintiff. The plaintiff required the defendant to obtain the licence of the lessor, which the defendant failed to do:—Held, that the defendant was bound to obtain the landlord's licence to assign, as the assignment by the assignees was no breach of the covenant. Winter v. Dumerque, 12 Jur. (N.S.) 726; 14 W. R. 699—Ex. Ch.

A. assigned his effects to B. for the benefit of his creditors, and a lease of a farm from C., which contained a covenant not to assign without C.'s consent in writing. B. agreed to assign the lease to D.'s nominee, D. to pay the expense of the assignment, and 180*l.* on a day certain for the improvements and manure; to take the crops at a valuation, and to have immediate possession :—Held, that to support an action on this agreement, B. must shew that he had obtained C.'s consent in writing to the assignment, though D. had taken possession of the premises, had cut down the crops, and had paid part of the 180*l.* to B. Mason v. Corder, 2 Marsh. 332; 7 Taunt. 9; 17 R. R. 427.

A lease contained a covenant by the lessee not to assign without licence, and the lessor covenanted not to withhold his licence to assign unreasonably or vexatiously :—Held, that it was unreasonable and vexatious in the lessor to refuse his licence to assign to a person wholly unobjectionable, his object in refusing the licence being, avowedly, his wish to get a surrender of the lease for the purpose of rebuilding. Lehmann v. M'Arthur, L. R. 3 Eq. 746; 16 L. T. 196; 15 W. R. 551.

Consent of Landlord to Assignment not obtained—Specific Performance of Agreement.]—To a suit for specific performance by the purchaser against the vendor of a leasehold interest, it is not a defence that the lease contains a covenant against alienation without the consent of the landlord, and that it does not appear that the consent of the landlord has been obtained. Leitch v. Simpson, Ir. R. 5 Eq. 613.

The defendant, having agreed to take an assignment of an underlease from the plaintiff, found on examining the lease that it contained a covenant by the plaintiff not to underlet without the consent of the lessor, the lessor agreeing not to withhold his consent from any assignment to a respectable and responsible person :—Held, that the fact that the lessor's consent had not been obtained at the time of the agreement to take an assignment was not enough to enable the defendant to resist a claim for specific performance. Hyde v. Warden, 47 L. J., Ex. 121; 3 Ex. D. 72; 37 L. T. 567; 26 W. R. 201—C. A.

The lessee of three acres of land agreed in January, 1874, to let one acre to the plaintiff for the whole of the residue of his term and he agreed also to sell to the plaintiff his interest in the whole three acres at any time within five years from the date of the agreement. The lease contained a covenant by the lessee not to assign the property, or to part with the possession of it, or any part of it, without the written consent of the lessor. The plaintiff was not, in fact aware of this covenant. He was let into possession of the one acre, and he laid out money upon it, and also upon adjoining property of his own with the view of occupying the two together. The lessor was aware of this expenditure. In October, 1877, the lessee, without the plaintiff's knowledge, surrendered the lease to the lessor, in exchange for a new lease for a longer term of the three acres together with other property. The new lease contained a similar covenant by the lessee not to assign, &c., without licence. In November, 1877, the plaintiff gave the lessee notice of his desire to exercise his option to purchase his interest under the original lease in the three acres. The lessee declined to perform his agreement, on the ground that the lessor refused to give his licence to an assignment. The plaintiff brought the action against the lessee and the lessor, claiming specific performance of the agreement by the lessee, and to compel the lessor to give his licence, on the ground, inter alia, that he had acquiesced in the plaintiff's expenditure knowing that he was acting in the mistaken belief that the lessee was able to assign the property to him. It appeared that the lessor was not, when the plaintiff's expenditure was incurred, aware of the existence of the lessee's covenant not to assign without licence :—Held, that the lessee could not be compelled to perform his agreement, inasmuch as his doing so would involve a breach of his prior covenant not to assign without licence, for that, as the plaintiff was seeking to treat the original lease as still subsisting for one purpose, he must treat the covenant not to assign contained in it as still subsisting. Willmott v. Barber, 15 Ch. D. 96; 43 L. T. 95; 28 W. R. 911.

Held, also, that inasmuch as the lessor was ignorant of his own rights, and there was nothing to shew that he knew that the plaintiff had been acting in ignorance of his legal rights, the lessor could not be compelled to give his licence to assign to the plaintiff. Ib.

—— Determination of Lease — Right of Assignee to recover Sum paid for Lessee's Improvements.]—A lease of a house was granted by S. to the lessee for twenty-one years from Christmas, 1856, determinable at the end of the first seven or fourteen years upon six months' notice by either party, with power of re-entry if the lessee assigned possession without the lessor's consent. In October, 1861, the lessee agreed in writing, without the lessor's consent, to sell his interest in the premises to the plaintiff, the terms being that he was to pay 1,800*l.* for the lessee's improvements, which sum was to be repaid to the plaintiff if he was ejected by the lessee in the first instance; "if the lessor exercised the power of determining the lease at Christmas, 1863, and if the plaintiff then leaves the house," the sum of 1,100*l.*, part of the 1,800*l.*, was to be returned to the plaintiff. The lessor gave notice of determining the lease at Christmas, 1863, and subsequently granted a new lease at a largely increased rent to C., the aunt of the plaintiff, who had resided with him in the house, since October, 1861, and with whom the plaintiff continued to reside in the house under the new lease, so that he did not actually and as a matter of fact leave the house :—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the 1,100*l.*, inasmuch as the lease to C. was a new lease to a different person for a different term, and at a different rent from the original lease, and the plaintiff had not got the equivalent for which he bargained as a consideration for the 1,100*l.*, as he had lost his interest in the house as tenant, which, by a reasonable construction, amounted to leaving the house. Rideout v. Lucas, 14 L. T. 738—Ex. Ch.

Evidence as to.]—An averment in a declaration that the plaintiff was possessed of premises for the remainder of a certain term of years, then unexpired therein, which he agreed to assign, is supported by evidence of a tenancy from year to year. Botting v. Martin, 1 Camp. 317.

b. The Instrument.

What is an Assignment.]—A demise for a term of years, if it is by deed, and for the whole term which the lessor has in the premises, operates as an assignment. Beardman v. Wilson, 38 L. J., C. P. 91; L. R. 4 C. P. 57; 19 L. T. 282; 17 W. R. 54.

An underlease of the whole term amounts to an assignment. Ib.

Action by the assignee of the reversion of a lease on a covenant to repair. The defendant was the representative of an assignee of the lease, and had made an underlease ending at the same date as the original term :—Held, that the underlease amounted to an assignment, and that the assignee of the reversion was not entitled to recover. Ib.

The assignment of a parol lease from year to year, otherwise than by deed or note in writing, is void, under the Statute of Frauds. Botting v. Martin, 1 Camp. 318.

Where a person transfers all his interest in a term to another, reserving rent to himself, it does not operate as an assignment, but as an underlease. Preece v. Corrie, 2 M. & P. 57 ; 5 Bing. 24 ; 6 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 205 ; 30 R. R. 536. See Barrett v. Rolph, 14 M. & W. 348 ; 14 L. J., Ex. 308.

One who has a term, which expired on the 11th November, let the premises orally from the 11th September to the 11th November for 270*l.* payable immediately :—Held, that this was a lease of which parol evidence might be given, and not an assignment requiring a writing. Ib.

L., being seised in fee, demised to B. for twenty-one years from June, 1814 ; B. demised to M. for twenty-one years from June, 1814, wanting twenty-one days, and then by deed-poll granted to L. the indenture of lease to M., the premises thereby granted, and the rent reserved, to hold to L., his executors, &c., for the term mentioned in the demise to M. ; L., by lease and release, conveyed the premises, the reversion and reversions, rents, issues and profits, and all his interest in fee, to the plaintiff by way of mortgage ; M. assigned his term to the defendant by way of mortgage, but the defendant never entered :—Held, that the conveyance in fee from L. to the plaintiff passed the chattel interest created by B., as well as the fee, and that it was well described in the declaration as an assignment of the chattel interest. Burton v. Barclay, 7 Bing. 745 ; 5 M. & P. 785 ; 9 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 231.

A lessee for years under-demised for a term longer than the residue held by him, the underlessee covenanting to pay to the lessee, his executors and administrators, the yearly sum of 75*l.*, by quarterly payments :—Held, that notwithstanding the instrument amounted to an assignment, inasmuch as all the lessee's term was thereby conveyed, an action of covenant lay at the suit of the executor of the lessee, to recover arrears of this rent accruing during the continuance of the lessee's term. Baker v. Gostling, 4 M. & Scott, 539 ; 1 Bing. (N.C.) 19 ; 3 L. J., C. P. 292.

A parol assignment by a sheriff of a leasehold seized by him under a fi. fa. is void by the Statute of Frauds, even although the assignee has paid rent to the head landlord. Doe d. Hughes v. Jones, 9 M. & W. 372 ; 1 D. (N.S.) 352 ; 12 L. J., Ex. 265 ; 6 Jur. 302.

H. was tenant under an agreement for a lease. K. wrote to him "I propose to purchase your interest" on certain terms. "I am to have all the benefit and advantage of the agreement under which you hold said houses and premises from, &c., and which agreement you are to hand over to me." H. wrote at the foot, "I agree to the foregoing.—H." Afterwards K. wrote to the landlord a letter, in which after stating that he had purchased H.'s interest, he said, "I herewith, on my own part, agree to carry out all the agreements and arrangements entered into by H. in said letter of arrangement with you, a copy of which arrangement is at foot." K. went into possession and paid the rent until his death :—Held, that the former letter did not amount to an assignment of H.'s interest ; that H.'s interest was determined by surrender by operation of law ; that the latter letter contained an express contract by K. to pay the rent for which the assent of the landlord was a sufficient consideration, and which his executor could not get rid of by assigning over. Doran v. Kenny, Ir. R. 3 Eq. 148.

To constitute an assignment under s. 9 of the Landlord and Tenant Law Amendment Act, 1860, a document must purport to transfer the estate. A mere agreement to transfer is not sufficient. Ib.

Of part of Interest only.]—A demise by an assignee of a part of the premises held by him, at a different rent (payable to himself), and for a period longer than his own term, operates in law as an assignment, and may be so treated in pleading. Wollaston v. Hakewill, 3 Man. & G. 297 ; 3 Scott (N.R.) 593 ; 10 L. J., C. P. 303.

A grant by lessees for lives of all their estate, right, title, interest, &c., in the premises to one and his executors, habendum to him and his executors for ninety-nine years if the lives should so long continue, in as large, ample and beneficial, way, &c., as the grantors, their heirs, &c. :—Held, that it is no assignment of the freehold, and consequently not of the whole interest of the grantors in their lease. Derby (Earl) v. Taylor, 1 East, 502 ; 6 R. R. 337.

—— Covenant to Pay Rent, whether Divisible —Apportionment.]—The defendant, being tenant of land under a lease for years granted by the plaintiffs, and containing the usual lessee's covenant to pay rent, assigned all her interest in the term. Subsequently the plaintiffs granted their reversion in part of the demised premises. No rent having been paid by the assignees of the defendant, the plaintiffs sued her for arrears of rent accrued due since the grant of their reversion in part of the premises, the sum claimed being a fair apportionment of the rent in respect of the other part, the reversion of which remained in the plaintiffs :—Held, that the covenant to pay rent was divisible ; that the rent could be apportioned, although the action was founded on a privity of contract only ; and therefore that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover. Stevenson v. Lambard (2 East, 575 ; 6 R. R. 511) considered. Swansea Corporation v. Thomas, 52 L. J., Q. B. 340 ; 10 Q. B. D. 48 ; 47 L. T. 657 ; 31 W. R. 506 ; 47 J. P. 135.

Effect of.]—When a lease is held at a full or substantial rent, and contains onerous covenants on the part of the lessee, an assignment (free from actual fraud) to an assignee, who subjects himself to the performance of the covenants, is not voluntary. Greer, In re, Ir. R. 11 Eq. 502.

For Immoral Purpose.]—A lessee of a house which, to his knowledge, had for many years been used as a brothel, assigned the lease absolutely, knowing that the assignee intended to use the house for the same purpose. The original lease contained covenants to deliver up at the end of the term, in good repair, and not to use the house as a brothel; and the assignment contained a covenant to indemnify the lessee from the covenants in the lease. The lessee, having been compelled to pay for dilapidations at the end of the lease, sought to recover the amount from the estate of the assignee, which was being administered in equity:—Held, that the assignment, and everything arising out of it, were so tainted with the immoral purpose, that the lessee could not recover. Smith v. White, 35 L. J., Ch. 454; L. R. 1 Eq. 626; 14 L. T. 350; 14 W. R. 510.

Evidence of Indorsement on Lease.]—An assignment of a term to the defendant of certain premises indorsed on the back of the lease, which was executed by the plaintiff, but not by the defendant, is evidence for the plaintiff to shew that he has performed his part of an agreement to assign the lease. Hawkins v. Sherman, 3 Car. & P. 459.

Condition Precedent.]—A., the defendant in an action as alien, in consideration of B.'s withdrawing the record, undertook to pay B. certain moneys, B. undertaking to discharge A. from liability to the covenants of the lease, upon his assigning all his interest in the lease:—Held, that the assignment of the lease was not a condition precedent to the discharge; and that, therefore, in an action against B. on the contract, it was not necessary to aver that the defendant had assigned. Phelps v. Protheroe, 16 C. B. 779; 3 C. L. R. 906; 24 L. J., C. P. 225; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1170.

c. On Death.

Personal Representatives.] — In a case of tenancy from year to year, the personal representatives of the tenant have the same interest in the land which he had. Doe d. Shore v. Porter, 3 Term Rep. 13; 1 R. R. 626. S. P., James v. Dean, 15 Ves. 241; 8 R. R. 171.

Where a tenant is in possession under an agreement, which is a mere agreement for a lease until his death, his interest is then determined; and the lessor may maintain ejectment against his executrix, who has possessed herself of the premises. Doe d. Bromfield v. Smith, 6 East, 530; 2 Smith, 570.

The executor of a lessee cannot be made liable as assignee of a term without an entry and an actual taking possession by him of the demised premises; but if he enter and take possession he may be made liable as assignee, though, by proper pleading, he may limit such liability for rent to the yearly value which the premises might have yielded. Rendall v. Andrew, 61 L. J., Q. B. 630.

In an action charging the defendant in his own character, who was an administrator of the original lessee, for rent due after the intestate's death:—Held, that although the defendant had taken possession, yet, having proved that the premises had been productive of no profit to him and that, eight months after the death of the intestate, he had offered by parol to surrender them to the plaintiff, such proof constituted a good defence to the action. Remnant v. Bremridge, 2 Moore, 94; 8 Taunt. 191; 19 R. R. 495.

An executor who has occupied premises held by his testator under a lease, which covenants for payment of rent and taxes, and to keep the premises in repair, sued as assignee, in respect of the privity of estate, is liable on the covenant for payment of rent and taxes to the extent only of the profits, but, for a breach of the covenant to repair, he is liable to the same extent that any other assignee is liable. Tremeere v. Morrison, 4 M. & Scott, 603; 1 Bing. (N.C.) 89; 3 L. J., C. P. 260.

Semble, that an offer by an executor to a lessor to surrender to him a lease granted to his testator is an answer to an action against him as assignee for breaches of a covenant to repair, as to all breaches accruing after that offer. Reid v. Tenterden (Lord), 4 Tyr. 111.

To an action for rent against an assignee of a term, he pleaded that he was administrator; that the premises were of less value, and had yielded less profit than the arrears of rent; that he had paid over to the plaintiff all the profit received from them, and had offered to surrender before any rent became due, and had fully administered:—Held, that the averment in the plea as to the value of the premises was not supported by showing that the intestate had underlet them, and that the defendant had been unable to get the rent from the under-tenant; or by proof that they were out of repair, as the lease to the intestate contained a covenant to repair, and it was therefore the defendant's duty to repair them. Hornidge v. Wilson, 3 P. & D. 641; 11 A. & E. 645; 9 L. J., Q. B. 72.

Where a lease for years, by which the rent reserved is more than the value of the premises, vests in an executor, the executor is liable as assignee, for the amount of rent for which the premises could have been let. Hopwood v. Whaley, 6 C. B. 744; 6 D. & L. 342; 18 L. J., C. P. 43; 12 Jur. 1088.

A bill for an account of dilapidations was filed by the reversioner of a lease against the personal representatives of a person whose interest in the lease appeared to be that of equitable tenant for life, with remainders over, alleging that such person in his lifetime was in possession, during which time the dilapidations accrued; that he paid rent, and was liable to the covenants in the lease, and that on his death the defendant entered into possession as his administrator, paid rent, and became liable under the covenants:—Held, that there was not a sufficient allegation of debt to support the bill. Arkwright v. Colt, 2 Y. & Coll. C. C. 4; 6 Jur. 941.

Executor de son tort.]—Where a lessee died intestate during the term, and his widow entered and paid rent, and afterwards her son-in-law took the premises with the assent of the landlord, and paid rent, and continued to occupy during the remainder of the term:—Held, first, that, there being no assignment in writing, he was not chargeable as assignee in fact. Paull v. Simpson, 9 Q. B. 365; 15 L. J., Q. B. 382; 11 Jur. 13.

Held, secondly, that he could not be considered an assignee in law, for, though the widow might have been chargeable as executrix de son tort, the defendant had not made himself executor de son tort by taking the premises after her. Ib.

Plene administravit.]—In an action by the plaintiff, as executor of an original lessee, against the executor of the assignee of the lease, upon a covenant by the assignee to indemnify the lessee against breaches of the covenants in the original lease, the defendant, under plene administravit, is protected by proof that he sold the lease in question, and had exhausted all the assets in his hands, by payment of simple contract debts, before the breaches of covenant declared on were committed. Collins v. Crouch, 13 Q. B. 542 ; 18 L. J., Q. B. 209 ; 13 Jur. 361.

Assignment by Executors—Premium — Personal Liability.]—When executors received a premium upon the assignment of a lease and paid the amount into their testator's estate :—Held, that they were not personally liable for rent accrued due after the assignment in respect of the premium so paid in. Goodland v. Ewing, 1 Cab. & E. 43.

For Rent and on Covenants.]—The lessee under express covenant to pay the rent and perform the covenants is liable during the whole term, notwithstanding assignments. Staines v. Morris, 1 Ves. & B. 9.

A common assignment by a lessee without acceptance of rent from the assignee to the lessor, or some other evidence of his assent, is not sufficient (though the lessor has notice) to discharge the lessee from an action of debt. Wadham v. Marlowe, 4 Dougl. 54 ; 1 H. Bl. 438, n. ; 2 Chit. 600 ; 8 East, 314 ; 9 R. R. 456.

A lessee cannot plead to an action on a covenant for rent an assignment and tender by the assignee. Orgill v. Kemshead, 4 Taunt. 642 ; 13 R. R. 712.

It is no defence to an action on an indenture of lease by the trustee of a party who has become bankrupt, that the lessees have performed their covenants with the assignees of the cestui que trust. Britten v. Perrott, 2 C. & M. 597 ; 4 Tyr. 473 ; 3 L. J., Ex. 181.

A lessee of a messuage and premises for a term of years assigned the unexpired residue to one who was afterwards adjudicated bankrupt under the act of 1869. The trustee in bankruptcy disclaimed the lease :—Held, that the lessor could maintain an action on the covenants in the lease against the lessee for the rent which became due between the adjudication and the disclaimer. Smyth v. North, 41 L. J., Ex. 103 ; L. R. 7 Ex. 242 ; 20 W. R. 683.

An account of rent decreed, under the circumstances, against the personal representatives of a lessee who had assigned his interest. Trant v. Bury, Ll. & G. t. Sugd. 78.

No equity in favour of a lessee of a house liable to repair, with the exception of damage by fire, for an injunction against an action under the contract for payment of rent upon the destruction of the house by fire. Holtzapffel v. Baker, 18 Ves. 115.

A lessee, by his lease had covenanted to pay rent, to insure, repair, &c., and died, leaving several years of his lease to run, but none of the covenants had been hitherto broken :—Held, that the lessor was not entitled to have any portion of the assets brought into court as a security for the performance of the covenants in the lease. King v. Malleott, 16 Jur. 237.

—— Surrender of Part of Premises by Assignee.]—The plaintiff demised premises to the defendant for a term of years by deed containing a covenant by the defendant for the payment of the rent reserved. The defendant assigned the term, and his assignee surrendered a portion of the premises to the plaintiff. In an action on the covenant the plaintiff claimed to recover the amount of the apportioned rent for the part of the premises not surrendered :—Held, that the liability of the defendant on the covenant was not extinguished by the surrender of part of the demised premises, but he still remained liable thereon, at any rate to the amount claimed. Quære, whether he remained liable to the extent of the whole of the rent originally reserved. Baynton v. Morgan, 58 L. J., Q. B. 139 ; 22 Q. B. D. 74 ; 37 W. R. 148 ; 53 J. P. 166—C. A.

—— Non-execution of Lease by Lessor — Assignment before Accrual of Rent due.]—In March, 1884, a lease from the plaintiff to the defendants, of premises at the yearly rent of 60*l.*, and containing a covenant to pay such rent, was executed by the defendants, but not by the plaintiff, in whose possession the document remained. The defendants went into possession under the lease, and paid two quarters' rent up to the 29th September, 1884. The defendants afterwards proposed to surrender the lease, or to assign their interest in it to one P., and that he should be accepted as tenant in their stead, and that they should be discharged from further liability under the lease. Both these propositions were rejected by the plaintiff. It was, however, agreed that the lease should be altered by making the rent payable in advance, and it was re-engrossed, expressed to bear date the 18th October, 1884, and executed by the defendants on the 11th December, 1884, on which day they executed an assignment of it to P., who paid rent up to the 25th March, 1885. The plaintiff did not execute the lease till the 26th April, 1886, when he executed it in the absence of the defendants, and the lease remained throughout in the plaintiff's possession. In an action to recover one year's rent, up to the 25th March, 1886, sued for upon the covenants in the lease of the 18th October, 1884, and in the alternative upon a yearly tenancy, the jury found that the plaintiff had not agreed to discharge the defendants from rent to accrue after the assignment to P., and that the alteration in the lease, making the rent payable in advance, had been made with P.'s consent. The judge at the trial thereupon directed a verdict for the plaintiff :—Held, that the direction was right. Babington v. O'Connor, 20 L. R., Ir. 246.

—— Assignment of Term and of Reversion —Privity.]—S. made a parol demise of a tenement to M. from year to year at a rent. M. by deed assigned all his estate, interest, and term in the tenement to a third party, but S. refused to accept the third party as his tenant. Afterwards S. assigned his reversion to the plaintiffs, who never accepted the third party as their tenant, and brought an action against M. for rent in arrear : — Held, that as no estate remained in M. after his assignment of his yearly tenancy, the statute 4 Anne, c. 16, s. 9, did not apply ; that there was no privity of estate or of contract between the plaintiffs and M., and therefore the action could not be maintained. Allcock v. Moorhouse, 9 Q. B. D. 366 ; 47 L. T. 404 ; 30 W. R. 871 ; 47 J. P. 85—C. A.

Duty to deliver Lease.]—On a contract in a letter of the defendant assented to by the plaintiffs, to take a farm off their hands, provided he was accepted by their landlord on the covenants in their lease :—Held, that they were bound to procure and deliver to him the lease, and it having been deposited as security for a loan, and they not having procured it, the plaintiffs were nonsuited. Barton v. Banks, 2 F. & F. 213.

ii. Of Assignee.

Generally.]—The executor of an executor de son tort may become himself executor de son tort in respect of the estate of the original intestate ; and where the father was executor de son tort with regard to a lease, and the son upon his death acted as agent to the mother till her death, and then continued in possession of the lease for the benefit of himself and the other children :—Held, that he became assignee of the lease, and liable upon the covenants therein. Williams v. Heales, 43 L. J., C. P. 80 ; L. R. 9 C. P. 177 ; 30 L. T. 20 ; 22 W. R. 317.

The plaintiff, in consideration of 530*l.* to be paid by A., demised to him premises for the term of fifty-five years at the yearly rent of 84*l.*, and subject to covenants to repair, &c. The consideration not having been paid, A. assigned to the plaintiff the residue of the term then unexpired, subject to the rent and covenants, and with a power of sale. In pursuance of that power the plaintiff, in consideration of 500*l.*, "bargained, sold, assigned, transferred and set over to the defendant the premises, to hold for the residue of the term of fifty-five years," subject to the yearly rent of 84*l.*, and the covenants contained in the lease, to A. ; and the defendant covenanted to pay the rent and perform the covenants. The defendant having entered on the premises :—Held, that, although the mortgage by A. operated as a merger of the term originally granted, yet the assignment by the plaintiff to the defendant created a new lease for the residue of the unexpired term, and consequently the defendant was liable on the covenants. Cottee v. Richardson, 7 Ex. 143 ; 21 L. J., Ex. 52.

The plaintiff being the lessee of premises assigned to A. B., who assigned to the defendants, who committed breaches of the covenant in the lease, and then assigned over. The plaintiff was subsequently sued by the lessor for the breaches of covenant committed while the defendants were assignees. He sued defendants for the amount which he had had to pay the lessor in respect thereof :—Held, per Channell, B., and Pigott, B. (dissentiente Cleasby, B.), that he was entitled to recover. Per Cleasby, B.—That he was not entitled to recover, there being no privity between him and the defendants. Mule or Moule v. Garrett, 39 L. J., Ex. 69 ; L. R. 5 Ex. 132 ; 22 L. T. 343 ; 18 W. R. 697. Affirmed, 41 L. J., Ex. 62 ; L. R. 7 Ex. 101 ; 26 L. T. 367 ; 20 W. R. 416—Ex. Ch.

An assignee of a lease, containing covenants running with the land, is liable, after he has assigned over, for a breach incurred after the assignment to him, and before his assignment over. Harley v. King, 2 C. M. & R. 18 ; 1 Gale, 100 ; 5 Tyr. 692 ; 4 L. J., Ex. 144.

In an action against an assignee of a lease, the locality of the premises not being stated in the declaration, the question of venue does not arise at the trial on a denial of the lease. Some only of the lessees having executed the assignment, but the defendant and another assignee having executed, and the other having entered :—Held, that the defendant, on a plea denying that the estate of the lessees had come to him, was liable as assignee. Electric Telegraph Co. v. Moore, 2 F. & F. 363.

There is no fraud in the assignee of a term assigning over his interest to whom he pleases, with a view to get rid of a lease, although such person neither takes actual possession nor receives the lease. Taylor v. Shum, 1 Bos. & P. 21 ; 4 R. R. 759.

In 1762 a lessor, having only an equitable estate in a field, demised a portion of the field to a lessee for 99 years. In 1773 the lessor, having acquired the legal estate in the field, demised the residue of the field to the lessee for the same term, by an indenture, which recited the former lease, stipulated for its continuing in force, but provided that no more rent should be paid for the entire field than was paid for the first portion, and that the rent to be paid for the entire field was meant to be the same as that reserved for the first portion :—Held, that the assignee of the reservation could not sue the assignee of the lessee upon the covenants in the lease of 1762. Whitton v. Peacock, 2 Scott, 630 ; 2 Bing. (N.C.) 411 ; 5 L. J., C. P. 124.

Covenants which wait on the estate are void in their creation if no estate passes by the deed ; so if the estate be evicted or surrendered they become void ; and of this description are all covenants in leases, which in any way relate to the land demised. By 32 Hen. 8, c. 34, and 10 Car. 1, c. 4, s. 2, it is now clearly settled, that to charge any person in covenant as an assignee, 1. The covenant must relate to the land demised, and 2. There must be a privity of estate between the assignee and the covenantee, and if he is to be charged as assignee of the lessee, he must have in him the whole term and interest of the lease. So, if the subject-matter of a covenant running with the land has existence at the time of the demise, the assignee is bound, though he be not named ; but a covenant in a lease can only affect assignees claiming subsequent to the lease. Chandos v. Brownlow, 2 Ridgw. P. C. 406, 412.

The lessees of a colliery having agreed to grant to the lessee of a neighbouring colliery, licence to use a right of way enjoyed by the former, and the owner of the first colliery having granted to the second lessees the same right of way during a term of years, and afterwards, by assignment from the first lessees, become possessed of the first colliery, and the right of way, an injunction was granted to restrain removing the materials, and destroying the way. Newmarch v. Brandling, 3 Swanst. 99.

Assignee of leaseholds accepting the benefit of an assignment, held in equity liable to the covenants on his part contained in the assignment, though he did not execute it. Willson v. Leonard, 3 Beav. 373.

The motive which may have induced the assignee of a lease to part with his interest is not sufficient to make the assignment by him fraudulent, if that assignment be real, and intended to operate as it appears to operate. Thus where the assignee of an equitable term, which had been granted subject to the repayment on a certain day of a sum chargeable on the lessee by the original agreement, and which it seemed might have been claimed against the assignee in possession, assigned it before such day arrived to a person in poor circumstances :—Held, that such assignment was valid, and that the first assignee was discharged from liability. Fagg v. Dobie, 3 Y. & Coll. 96 ; 2 Jur. 681.

—— Pleading.]—Semble, that in a declaration charging the assignee of a lease at the suit of the lessor, the entry of the lessee is a material averment and traversable. Wiggins v. Masson, 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 93.

In a declaration by the executors of one of several lessors against the assignee of the lease, it is necessary for the plaintiffs to shew what estate their testator had in the premises, although the covenant was with their testator alone; for the assignee is chargeable only by reason of the privity of estate and not by reason of any privity of contract. Ib.

For Rent.]—In an action against the assignee of a lessee pur autre vie for rent which accrued due after the assignment, if the defendant is entitled to plead that he is only as heir, and that the estate of the lessee was of less value than the rent reserved, he ought to aver that this was so down to the time of the commencement of the action. De la Poer v. Kirwan, Ir. R. 9 C. L. 519.

In an action for rent against an assignee, he traversed an averment in the plaint that all the estate of the original lessee in the premises vested in him; and, issue having been joined on that traverse, he proved that he was assignee of part of the demised premises in severalty and of part as tenant in common with another person: —Held, that the verdict on such an issue should be entered for him. Orme v. Wills, 2 L. R., Ir. 124.

The assignee of a lease for years, who has assigned over, is discharged from the covenant to pay rent before the entry of his assignee. Walker v. Reeve, 3 Dougl. 19; 2 Dougl. 461, n.

An assignee is not liable for rent accruing after an assignment, even though such assignment is wrongful. Paul v. Nurse, 2 M. & Ry. 525; 8 B. & C. 486; 7 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 12.

In an action on a covenant for rent against an assignee, an assignment to a feme covert before the rent accrued is a good plea in bar. Barnfather v. Jordan, 2 Dougl. 452.

A. being assignee of a lease, put it up by auction; B. became the purchaser, paid a deposit, and ordered an assignment to him to be prepared by A.'s solicitor, which was accordingly prepared and executed by A.; but, instead of its being delivered to B., it remained in the possession of the solicitor, who claimed a lien for the expense of preparing it:—Held, that to an action against A. as assignee of the term, for rent accruing due after he had executed the assignment, these facts were sufficient to support a plea, that before the rent became due he had assigned to B. Odell v. Wake, 3 Camp. 394; 14 R. R. 763.

An assignee who takes leasehold premises by an indenture indorsed on the lease, subject to the payment of the rent and the performance of the covenants and agreements reserved and contained in the lease, is not liable in covenant to the lessee, for rent which the lessee has been called on by the lessor to pay after the assignee has assigned over. Wolveridge v. Steward, 1 C. & M. 644; 3 Tyr. 637; 3 M. & Scott, 561; 3 L. J., Ex. 360—Ex. Ch.

If the original lessee is obliged to pay ground-rent, he may recover it from the assignee in possession. Stone v. Evans, Peake, Ad. C. 94.

An annuitant, taking an assignment of a lease of the lands on which the annuity is charged, cannot, in an ejectment brought by the landlord, the grantor of the annuity, for nonpayment of rent, offer his annuity deed as evidence of payment of the rent, nor set off arrears of the annuity against the rent due. Irnham (Lord) v. Luttrell, Wall. Lyn. 243.

Assignee of lease rendering rent assigns over; he is liable in equity for rent during time he enjoyed the land. Treackle v. Coke, 1 Vern. 165. And see Close v. Wilberforce, 1 Beav. 112.

Equity will decree the assignee of a lease to pay the rent become due since his assignment, and which shall become due while he continues in possession, but not during the continuance of the lease; for he may, if he can, get rid of the lease, by assigning it to another. Richmond v. London City, 1 Bro. P. C. 516.

As at law an assignee of a term may assign, and thereby get rid of his subsequent rent and the covenants which run with the land, a fortiori he may do so in equity. Valliant v. Dodemede, 2 Atk. 546.

Where assignees have accepted the lease, they may, by assigning it to an insolvent person, exonerate themselves from future claim for rent, their liability ceasing with their possession. Onslow v. Corrie, 2 Madd. 330.

The assignee of a lease may get rid of his liability by assigning it again. Rowley v. Adams, 4 Myl. & C. 534; 9 L. J., Ch. 34; 2 Jur. 915; 3 Jur. 1069.

—— Payment of whole Rent by Assignee of Part of Land—Right of Contribution.]—A lessee of land assigned part of the land to A. for the residue of the term, and other part to B. for the residue of the term, less ten days, at apportioned rents, covenanting in both cases to pay the rent due to the original lessor and to indemnify. The lessee having become bankrupt, A., on the application of the lessor and on threat of distraint, paid the whole rent under the original lease:—Held, that as A. and B. were not liable to a common demand and there being no one entitled to sue B. for his share of the rent, A. had no right of contribution as against B. Johnson v. Wild, 59 L. J., Ch. 322; 44 Ch. D. 146; 62 L. T. 537; 38 W. R. 500.

For Repairs.]—On a covenant by a lessee, not naming assignee, to repair and yield up in repair all buildings and erections, an assignee is liable in respect of the non-repair of buildings erected during the term. Minshull v. Oakes, 2 H. & N. 793; 27 L. J., Ex. 194; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 170.

A covenant to yield up in repair at the end of a term runs with the land, and binds an assignee though not named. Martyn v. Clue, 18 Q. B. 661; 22 L. J., Q. B. 147.

An action cannot be supported against the assignee of a lease, in which the lessee covenanted, from time to time, and at all times during the term, when need should require, sufficiently to repair the premises, with all necessary reparations, and to yield up the same so well repaired at the end of the term, in as good condition as the same should be in when finished under the direction of M., upon a breach that he suffered the premises to become and be in decay and ruinous during a large part of the term, and after the term wrongfully yielded them up in much worse order and condition than when the same were finished under the direction of M. Jones v. Hill, 7 Taunt. 392; 1 Moore, 100.

Where, in an action of covenant against an assignee of a lease, the plaintiff declared that all the right, &c., vested in the defendant by assignment, and that afterwards the premises were out of repair, and the defendant pleaded that for one period he was possessed of one-sixth of the premises as tenant in common with A., B. and C., and for another period of one-third as tenant in common with B. and C., and that no more or greater interest in the premises ever came to him by assignment:—Held, that the plea was bad in substance, as it could not be a bar to the whole action. Merceron v. Dowson, 5 B. & C. 479; 8 D. & R. 264; 4 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 211.

A lessee by deed-poll assigned his interest in the demised premises to A., subject to the payment of rent and the performance of the covenants contained in the lease. A. took possession, and occupied the premises under this assignment, and before the expiration of the term assigned to a third person. The lessor sued the lessee for breaches of covenant committed during the time that A. continued assignee of the premises, and recovered damages against the lessee:—Held, that the lessee might maintain an action upon the case founded in tort against A. for having neglected to perform the covenants during the time he continued assignee, whereby the lessee sustained damage. Burnett v. Lynch, 5 B. & C. 539; 8 D. & R. 368; 4 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 274; 29 R. R. 343.

Baron and feme granted a watercourse through the feme's lands, with covenants for them, their heirs and assigns, to cleanse and keep it in repair, and suffer a common recovery to establish the grant:—Held, not a personal covenant as to the baron and feme, but a covenant which runs with the lands, and shall bind the assignees, being made good by the recovery. Holmes v. Buckley, Pre. Ch. 39.

Where a lessee, who was bound by a covenant to repair premises demised to him, underlet part of them with a similar obligation by his tenant to repair them within three months after notice given to him for that purpose; and the premises underlet becoming out of repair, the superior landlord gave notice to his immediate tenant to repair them at the peril of forfeiting his lease; and the under-tenant, after receiving notice to repair, neglected to do so within three months, whereupon the lessee, in order to avoid a forfeiture of his whole estate, entered on the premises, and put them into a tenantable repair:—Held that his under-tenant was liable to pay him the whole expense so incurred, although the former had sold his interest in the premises to a purchaser, who had entirely rebuilt them before the action for the recovery of such expense was brought. Colley v. Streeton, 3 D. & R. 522; 2 B. & C. 273; 2 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 25; 26 R. R. 350.

Where an assignee of an under-lease containing a covenant to repair, suffered the premises to go out of repair, and the original lessor brought an action against the original lessee for the breach of a similar covenant contained in his lease:—Held, that the damages and costs of that action, and also the costs of defending it, might be recovered as special damages, in an action against the under-tenant for the breach of his covenant to repair; because, during the term of the under-lessee, he could not have entered for the purpose of repairing without making himself a trespasser. Neale v. Wyllie, 5 D. & R. 442; 3 B. & C. 533; 27 R. R. 418.

A. agreed to take an assignment of a lease of a house which was out of repair from B., and it was stipulated that all outgoings should be paid by B. up to the 23rd April; and by an assignment indorsed on the lease (executed by B. but not by A.), B. assigned the residue of the term, subject to the performance of all the covenants in the lease, which, from the 22nd day of April, ought to be observed on the part of the tenant. The lease contained a covenant to keep the premises in repair, and so to deliver them up; and after the assignment the reversioner sued B., and recovered for dilapidations which occurred before April 22nd:—Held, that B. could not maintain an action against A. for these dilapidations, even though it could be proved that A. gave a smaller price, because the premises were out of repair. Hawkins v. Sherman, 3 Car. & P. 459.

As to measure of Damages see further, post, M. 3, g. (cols. 1129 et seq.)

On Covenants not Running with the Land.]—The assignee of a lease is not liable to the original lessor for the breach of a covenant which does not run with the land, unless he is expressly named in the lease as a covenantor. Grey v. Cuthbertson, 2 Chit. 482; 4 Dougl. 351.

Nor is he liable for a breach in the lessee's time when he comes into possession afterwards. St. Saviour's, Southwark, v. Smith, 3 Burr. 1271; 1 W. Bl. 351.

On Covenant to Indemnify.]—The lessee of coal mines, for a term of years, by indenture assigned the same for the residue unexpired of the term to the defendant, who thereby covenanted with the lessee to pay the rents, &c., by the original indenture reserved, so long as the defendant should be in possession, or receipt of the rents, produce and profits of the premises, and at all times effectually to keep harmless and indemnified the lessee from and against all the rents, covenants, &c., of the original lease, and against all actions in respect of the same. To a declaration assigning as a breach nonpayment by the defendant of rents due whilst he was in possession or receipt of the rents, produce and profits, per quod the lessee was forced to and did pay the rents, and was put to great charges together with a breach of the covenant to indemnify the lessee against the consequences of such nonpayment by the defendant; plea, that the defendant was not in possession when the rents became due:—Held, that the restrictive words "so long as the defendant should be in possession or receipt of the rents, produce and profits," contained in the first covenant, did not extend to the covenant to indemnify, and that such a plea was no answer to the breach to that covenant. Crossfield v. Morrison, 7 C. B. 286; 18 L. J., C. P. 135; 13 Jur. 565.

In a suit by an assignor of a lease claiming from his assignee indemnity in respect of breaches of the covenants in the lease, the court will direct merely payment on account of breaches of covenant already committed, and will not make a general declaration of the assignor's right to indemnity, giving liberty to apply from time to time in case of future breach. Lloyd v. Dimmack, 47 L. J., Ch. 398; 7 Ch. D. 398; 38 L. T. 173; 26 W. R. 458.

Under a covenant to indemnify against all claims in respect of the covenants of a lease, costs properly incurred in reasonably defending an action brought for a breach of one of the covenants are recoverable as damages. Murrell v. Fysh, 1 Cab. & E. 80.

Assignee or Under-tenant—Question for Jury.]—If a person has held under the terms of a lease, and holds over after the lease is at an end, he is bound by the terms of it, although no new bargain to that effect is entered into between the parties; but if he comes in as an under-tenant, before any lease was granted to the person of whom he took the premises, and that person afterwards takes a lease, if there is no evidence that he knew of the lease, it will be for the jury to say whether he is an under-tenant, and not an assignee of the lease. Torriano v. Young, 6 Car. & P. 8.

An under-tenant of a part of the lands demised, subject to the payment of rent to the immediate lessee, is not in the eye of the law an assignee of such immediate lessee. Berney v. Moore, 2 Ridgw. P. C. 323.

Assignee or Owner.]—A railway company, having purchased and taken an assignment of the interest of a leaseholder in premises, also took, under their compulsory powers, the interest of the freeholder in the same premises, and paid the amount of the valuation of such interest, and compensation for injuriously affecting the other adjacent property of the freeholder, into court. The freeholder, afterwards objecting to the formation of a coal depôt on the premises which had been so taken, not having executed any conveyance of the property to the company, brought an action against the company, treating the company as assignees of the lease, for damages, upon the covenants therein; but the court restrained the action, without prejudice to any proceedings against the company, in which their title as owners of the land should be admitted. East and West India Docks and Birmingham Junction Ry. v. Dawes, 11 Hare, 363.

iii. Equitable Assignee.

On Covenants.]—The equitable assignee of an under-lease is clothed with the obligation to perform the covenants in the under-lease, though he is himself the original lessor, and cannot set up the non-performance of those covenants against his lessee, as a ground for refusing the performance of a covenant in the original lease. Jenkins v. Portman, 1 Keen, 435; 5 L. J., Ch. 313.

Assignee of a personal contract for a liberty of bringing water to the city of London chargeable in equity with the covenants in the original lease or contract, as an equitable assignee upon an equitable privity of estate, like the assignee of a bond. London City v. Richmond, Pre. Ch. 156; 2 Vern. 421.

Equitable assignee of leaseholds held liable at the suit of the lessee, after the expiration of the term, to the breaches of covenant committed during his possession, although such lessee was no party to the contract for purchase, and it was stipulated that the purchaser should not be entitled to an assignment. Close v. Wilberforce, 1 Beav. 112; 8 L. J., Ch. 101; 3 Jur. 35.

Parties acquiring under the Enfranchisement Acts copyhold lands under lease shall be deemed to have acquired the reversion thereon and be entitled to distrain and sue upon the covenants. See 6 & 7 Vict. c. 23, ss. 9 & 10. Liability of an equitable assignee of leaseholds, in possession, to the covenants in the lease. Sanders v. Benson, 4 Beav. 350.

The liability of an equitable assignee of leaseholds is that of simple contract, and the Statute of Limitations limits his liability to six years after the cause of suit. Ib.

The bill, which was a creditor's bill, stated that A. had been in possession, as equitable tenant for life under a settlement, of a leasehold estate, of which the reversion was in the plaintiff, that A. had paid rent during his life, and had become liable for the covenants in the lease, without saying how, and that his administrator had since his death entered into possession of the leasehold, and had paid rent. The bill asked for payment of dilapidations, out of A.'s estate:—Held, on demurrer, that there was no sufficient allegation of debt. Arkwright v. Colt, 2 Y. & Coll. C. C. 4; 6 Jur. 941.

An agreement to take an assignment of a lease followed by possession on the part of the equitable assignee is not sufficient to give the lessor any right to sue the equitable assignee in equity on the covenants in the lease. Cox v. Bishop, 8 De G. M. & G. 815; 26 L. J., Ch. 389; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 499; 5 W. R. 437.

The relation between landlord and tenant is legal and not equitable. Ib.

Assignee of leasehold accepting the benefit of an assignment:—Held, in equity liable to the covenants on his part contained in the assignment, though he did not execute it. Wilson v. Leonard, 3 Beav. 373.

—— Indemnity to Assignor.]—The equitable assignee of a lease by contract with a prior assignee, to which the original lessee was not a party, and which stipulated that the purchaser under it should not be entitled to call for a legal assignment having been in possession under such contract:—Held, liable to indemnify the lessee, after the expiration of the term, for breach of covenant committed whilst he, the equitable assignee, was in possession. Close v. Wilberforce, 1 Beav. 112; 8 L. J., Ch. 101; 3 Jur. 35.

For Rent.]—Lease of a coal mine to A., reserving a rent. A., the lessee, declares himself a trustee for five persons, to each a fifth. The five partners enter upon, work, and take the profits of the mine, which afterwards becomes unprofitable and the lessee insolvent. The cestuis que trustent not liable but for the time during which they took the profits. Clavering v. Westley, 3 P. W. 402.

Legal Assignment of Premises to.]—The defendant having taken a deposit of a lease as a collateral security, decreed to take an assignment. Lucas v. Comerford, 3 Bro. C. C. 166; 1 Ves. J. 235. But see 8 Sim. 499.

iv. Mortgagee.

An action of covenant for nonpayment of rent lies against an assignee of a lease to whom an assignment has been made by way of mortgage security, although he has never entered nor taken actual possession. Williams v. Bosanquet, 3 Moore, 500; 1 Br. & B. 238; 21 R. R. 585.

A mortgagee of a leasehold estate by assignment is liable, so long as he has the legal estate, to perform the covenants of the lease, although he does not take possession. Stone v. Evans, Peake, Ad. C. 94.

Although it was once held, that if a term was assigned by way of mortgage, with a clause of redemption, the lessor could not sue the mortgagee as assignee of all the estate, right, title, interest, &c., of the mortgagor, even after the mortgage had been forfeited, unless the mortgagee had taken actual possession. Eaton v. Jacques, 2 Dougl. 455.

A termor of years in premises belonging to B., mortgaged to C. by way of security for debt, the furniture on the premises with all the freehold hereditaments, goods, and personal property, to which the termor was or might be entitled, except any leaseholds or any portion of the term or terms for which such leaseholds might be holden, which C., by indorsement on the deed, should declare not to be therein included. The mortgage deed was dated 11th March, 1869. A quarter's rent on the premises became due 25th March. C. was apprised for the first time of the lease held by the termor on the 8th July, and at once indorsed the deed to the effect that the lease was not included in it :—Held, in an action for rent by B., that the lease passed under personal property ; that, moreover, the words of the exception evidenced such intention ; that the lease at once on execution of the deed vested in C. ; that C. could not by the indorsement divest himself of it, and so defeat the rights of B., a stranger to the deed. Debenham v. Digby, 28 L. T. 170 ; 21 W. R. 359.

If a leasehold interest is assigned by way of mortgage, the assignee, unless there is a special provision to the contrary, takes the interest subject to all the covenants and obligations of the original lessee. Haig v. Homan, 4 Bligh (N.S.) 380.

B. demised, by an instrument not under seal, three windows in a factory to the plaintiff, and stipulated to supply steam power. B. at the time of the demise was mortgagor in possession. His mortgagees sold to the defendant, who did not accept rent from the plaintiff, but continued to supply steam power. Subsequently a dispute arose as to the terms upon which the plaintiff should continue tenant of the defendant, who thereupon cut off the steam power. The plaintiff having sued the defendant for cutting off the steam power :—Held, that no action would lie against him. Ib.

A. having taken a lease of a brewhouse, and covenanted to repair, assigns it by way of mortgage to B. ; the premises being out of repair, the lessor brings his bill against B., to compel him to perform the covenant ; B. having never been in possession, the court will not decree him to perform the covenant in specie, but left the plaintiff to recover at law as he could. Sparkes v. Smith, 2 Vern. 275.

Lease for years, subject to a ground rent, is assigned over by way of mortgage to J. for 100*l.* The mortgagee never entered, and lost the 100*l.* mortgage money, and is sued by the lessor for the ground rent. No relief, it being his own fault to take the mortgage by way of assignment, and not by way of under-lease. Pilkington v. Shaller, 2 Vern. 374.

If the mortgagee enters into possession, he becomes liable to all covenants that run with the land, for he takes it cum onere ; and enjoying the profits he must submit to the losses. Traherne v. Sadleir, 5 Bro. P. C. 179.

Mortgagee of a building lease, when the lessee died insolvent, was decreed to build on the ground and not to quit the lease, though content to lose his money. Anon., 2 Freem. 253.

Property described as "all that piece of land, &c., with the messuages and buildings thereon erected," was demised to Z., who covenanted to keep the messuages, &c. in repair. The lease contained a clause of forfeiture on breach of the covenant. Z. mortgaged this and other property, by way of under-lease, to B. The mortgage deed contained a power of sale, and powers enabling B. to expend all moneys to be received by him under the deed in repairs, and a covenant by Z. to indemnify B. against the covenants in the lease until possession taken by him. At the date of the mortgage the buildings on the demised land consisted of carcases of houses only. B. entered into possession of the property comprised in the lease, but neither sold nor completed the houses, which were taken by the original lessor under the clause of forfeiture. On exception to the master's report :—Held, that in taking the accounts B. was liable to Z., and ought to be charged a sum of money in respect of the forfeiture of the lease through his default. Perry v. Walker, 24 L. J., Ch. 319 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 746 ; 3 Eq. R. 721 ; 3 W. R. 314.

v. Equitable Mortgagee.

A deposit of a lease by way of equitable mortgage does not render the depositary liable for the rent and covenants. Moores v. Choat, 8 Sim. 508 ; 8 L. J., Ch. 128 ; 3 Jur. 220. And see Lucas v. Comerford, 1 Ves. J. 235 ; 3 Bro. C. C. 166 ; restated, 8 Sim. 499 ; 8 L. J., Ch. 131.

An equitable mortgagee by deposit of a lease is not liable to the lessor upon the covenants, there being no privity between him and the lessor until he has made himself legal assignee. Moore v. Greg, 2 Ph. 717 ; 18 L. J., Ch. 15 ; 12 Jur. 952. Affirming, 2 De G. & Sm. 304.

A lessee of a factory deposited the lease, by way of equitable mortgage, and upon the landlord distraining for rent in arrear, the depositee of the lease paid the rent in arrear to the landlord, entered into possession of the factory, sold some of the machinery, including some fixed to the freehold, and otherwise acted as the owner of the lease, and was accepted by the landlord as such owner :—Held, that the landlord had no equity to compel the depositee of the lease to take a legal assignment of the lease. S. C., 2 De G. & Sm. 334.

Where equitable mortgagee of leasehold property applied for sale, the court refused to order him to indemnify the assignees in bankruptcy against any breach of covenants in the lease ; but gave assignees time to reject or accept the lease. Fletcher, Ex parte, Collins, In re, 1 Deac. & C. 318 ; 1 L. J., Bk. 44.

The depositary of a lease for securing a debt is liable to the rents and covenants, although he has not taken possession of the premises. Flight v. Bentley, 7 Sim. 149 ; 4 L. J., Ch. 262.

An equitable mortgagee of leasehold property must satisfy a distress for rent out of the proceeds of the sale, and can only prove for the deficiency, although occasioned by the payment of the rent. Cocks, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & C. 8.

An equitable mortgagee of a lease in possession is liable to the payment of rent, and performance of the covenants reserved by and contained in the lease. Malone v. Geraghty, 2 Con. & L. 240 ; 3 Dr. & War. 239 ; 5 Ir. Eq. R. 549.

e. Rights under.

Of Lessee—In Respect of Salvage Payment.] —A., being lessee of certain lands under a lease, containing the ordinary covenant by him as lessee for payment of the rent, which was payable weekly, and a condition of re-entry in case of nonpayment, assigned his interest under the lease to B., who covenanted with A. to pay the rent, and to keep him indemnified against it. B. mortgaged the premises comprised in the lease to C., by way of sub-demise. An arrear of rent becoming due, the lessor compelled A., under his covenant in the lease, to pay the amount in arrear. In an action against B. and the mortgagee, A. sought for a declaration that the sum so paid by him for rent was a salvage payment, and was charged on the premises in priority to the mortgage to C.:—Held, that A. had no interest in the premises authorising him to make a salvage payment, and he had therefore no lien on the premises for the rent so paid by him, and that his only remedy was a personal one against B. O'Loughlin v. Dwyer, 13 L. R., Ir. 75.

—— To enforce Collateral Parol Contract.]—A plaint in the county court stated that the plaintiff assigned to the defendant the agreement for a lease of certain premises, but it was alleged that there was a parol agreement that part of the premises was to be held by the defendant in trust for the plaintiff. Evidence was given on both sides, but the judge, being of opinion that actual fraud had not been proved against the defendant, and there being no resulting trust in the assignment, decided that the Statute of Frauds was applicable, and dismissed the plaint, without coming to any distinct decision upon the evidence:—Held, that the judge ought to have decided that the Statute of Frauds had no application; and the court, upon a consideration of the evidence, decided that the plaintiff was entitled to relief, and reversed the decree. Booth v. Turle, L. R. 16 Eq. 182; 21 W. R. 721.

—— On Covenant not to carry on a Particular Trade.]—A restrictive covenant in an assignment of a lease may be enforced by the covenantee against persons with constructive notice, though he has no reversion. Clements v. Welles, 35 L. J., Ch. 265; L. R. 1 Eq. 200; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 991; 13 L. T. 548; 14 W. R. 187.

C., being lessee of a house, assigned the lease to W., by a deed by which he covenanted that he, his executors, administrators or assigns, or under-tenants, would not use the premises as a hairdresser's shop. He afterwards under-leased the house, and assigned his reversion. The defendant, having constructive notice of the covenant, purchased the under-lease, and, with the licence of the reversioner, began to use the house as a hairdresser's shop:—Held, that C. was entitled to an injunction to restrain him from so doing. Ib.

Of Assignee—To Indemnity from Assignor—Dilapidations.]—On the dissolution of a partnership between H. and R., H. assigned to R. all his interest in two houses belonging to the partnership, held under sub-leases from C. and D., and R. covenanted to pay the rents and observe the covenants and keep H. indemnified against them. R.'s executors sold the house to B., and B. to a company which went into liquidation. The landlords C. and D. thereupon sued H. for the rent, and he paid it for the whole of the year 1882. D. also made a large demand against H. for breaches of covenants to repair, but H. made no payment. On the 15th of March, 1883, D. assigned his reversion to H., and in May, 1883, H. acquired C.'s reversion. In June, 1883, H. bought the leasehold interest in both houses from the liquidators of the company, and covenanted thenceforth to pay the rent and observe the covenants. H. sought to prove against the estate of R. for the sums paid for rent, for the rent payable at Lady Day, 1883, on D.'s house, and for the amount of the dilapidations in that house:—Held, that the right of H., under R.'s covenant of indemnity, to prove for the rents which he had paid, was not taken away by his covenant in the assignment by the liquidators, which could not be extended to rents already due and paid. Further, this right was not defeated on the ground that the right of R.'s representatives, if they paid rent, to recover it from the owner of the lease for the time being, was interfered with by the assignment from the liquidators to H., for that this assignment could not take away any right of action which R.'s executors might have against the persons entitled to the houses at the end of 1882, and that an assignor who pays rent has no lien on the term, and so cannot be prejudiced by its subsequent assignment. Neither was the right defeated on the ground that H. on paying the rent became entitled to a right of distress from the reversioners, which he had destroyed by taking an assignment of the leases, and had therefore discharged the estate of R. by releasing a remedy to the benefit of which R. as a surety was entitled, for that a right of distress is not a security or remedy to the benefit of which a surety paying rent is entitled under the Mercantile Law Amendment Act (19 & 20 Vict. c. 97), s. 5:—Held, therefore, that H. was entitled to prove against R.'s estate for the rent paid in 1882 on both houses, and that he was entitled to prove for the Lady Day rent on D.'s house; but that H. was not entitled to prove for the amount of dilapidations, for that he had sustained no damage by reason of them, inasmuch as he bought the leases from the liquidators at a less price in consequence of the breaches of the covenant to repair; nor for the Lady Day rent of C.'s house. Russell, In re, Russell v. Shoolbred, 29 Ch. D. 254; 53 L. T. 365—C. A.

—— On Covenant for Quiet Enjoyment.]—An action on a covenant for quiet enjoyment may be maintained by the assignee of an assignee of a lessee of a term of years, entered into by the lessee with the first assignee and his assigns, upon the assignment of the term to him. Lewis v. Campbell, 8 Taunt. 715; 21 R. R. 516.

—— On Covenant not Running with the Land.]—When in a lease, the lessee having covenanted to use the demised premises as a public-house, the lessor covenants not to build or keep any house for the sale of spirits or beer within half a mile of the demised premises, the lessor's covenant does not run with the land so as to enable the assignee of the lease to sue him upon it. Thomas v. Hayward, 38 L. J., Ex. 175; L. R. 4 Ex. 311; 20 L. T. 814.

—— On Covenant to Repair.]—See post, M. 3.

—— In Ejectment for Alleged Breach of Covenant.]—The lessor covenanted, at any time, upon request of the lessee, to cause any quantity of square oak wood to be set out within some part of the lands, that should be wanted for the benefit of the lessee, and to be used in the buildings intended to be made on the demised premises. And the lessee covenanted to pay and allow to the lessor interest for the total amount or value thereof, after the rate of 4*l.* for the value of every 100*l.*, and so in proportion for a greater or less quantity. On a bill by the assignees of the lease, for an account of what was due to the defendant in respect of the breach of that covenant, and for an injunction to restrain proceedings in ejectment for the recovery of the premises, on the ground of a breach of covenant, a general demurrer for want of equity was over-ruled. Pearson v. Hoghton, 3 Y. & J. 413.

f. Proof of Assignment.

The plaintiffs declared upon an indenture made by H. to S. of premises, to hold from Midsummer, 1786, for ninety-nine years, deducing their title to the reversion from the lessor by various mesne assignments, and alleging that "all the estate of S., of and in a great part of the premises, with the appurtenances, by asssignment, came to and vested in the defendant, whereupon and whereby the defendant became and was possessed of that part of the premises, and continued so possessed until the commencement of the suit:" and assigned breaches of covenant. The defendant traversed "that all the estate of S. of and in that part of the premises, by assignment, came to and vested in her, as alleged," upon which issue was joined:—Held, that the affirmative of this issue was sustained by proof that the defendant was the executrix of an assignee, though she had never entered or taken the profits. Wollaston v. Hakewill, 3 Scott (N.R.) 593; 3 Man. & G. 297; 10 L. J., C. P. 303.

Variance in Pleading and Proof.]—In an action for rent on a lease, by the lessor against the assignee of the lessee, the declaration stated that all the estate of the lessee came to and vested in the defendant, which allegation the defendant traversed. The defendant was assignee of only a part of the demised premises:—Held, that there was a fatal variance, and that the issue must be found for the defendant. Curtis v. Spitty, 1 Scott, 737; 1 Bing. (N.C.) 756; 1 Hodges, 153; 4 L. J., C. P. 236.

2. Of Reversion.

Nature of Estate—reversion by Estoppel.]—The assignees of a lessor in a lease by deed, who have no estate in the land, have a reversion by estoppel as against the lessee, and may sue him on the covenants accordingly; and this applies to the case where a mortgagor makes a lease by deed, and assigns his equity of redemption with words that would pass a legal reversion in fee. Cuthbertson v. Irving, 4 H. & N. 742; 28 L. J., Ex. 306; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 740. Affirmed, 6 H. & N. 135; 29 L. J., Ex. 485; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1211; 3 L. T. 335—Ex. Ch.

It makes no difference in this respect that the estates both of the mortgagor and mortgagee are equitable estates. Ib.

—— Lease subject to Sub-lease for Longer Term.]—By an indenture dated the 1st of February, 1893, B. demised to W. certain premises for a term of twenty-one years. On February 15, 1893, W. demised the premises to the defendant for a term of forty years, less three days. On January 16, 1894, W. assigned to the plaintiff the premises to hold for the residue of the term of twenty-one years, subject to the underlease of February 15, 1893, by W. to the defendant. In an action brought by the plaintiff against the defendant to recover rent due at Lady Day, 1894, the plaintiff was non-suited:—Held, that the nonsuit was right. Assuming that W. had a reversion by estoppel, subject to the lease of forty years, less three days, that reversion was not assigned to the plaintiff by the deed of January 16, 1894, because that deed only assigned to the plaintiff W.'s interest in the lease of February 1, 1894. Norris v. Craig, 64 L. J., Q. B. 432; 43 W. R. 480; 59 J. P. 264.

A termor of mines granted a lease at a rent for a longer term than his term. During the continuance of the original term, he assigned by deed the rent and his estate in the premises:—Held, that his assignee could maintain an action for rent in arrear, after the assignment and during the continuance of the original term. Williams v. Hayward, 1 El. & El. 1040; 28 L. J., Q. B. 374; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1417; 7 W. R. 563.

What amounts to.]—Quære, whether the assignment of rent by a reversioner in a lease carries the reversion. Taylor v. Martindale, 1 Y. & Coll. C. C. 658.

By Deed.]—A reversion of a tenancy from year to year cannot pass without deed. Brawley v. Wade, M'Clel. 664.

Assignee, who is.]—A grantee of part of the grantor's reversionary interest in the whole of the property in which a particular estate, as a term of years, has been created, is an assignee of the reversion within 32 Hen. 8, c. 31; but the grantee of the whole reversionary interest in part of the property is not such an assignee. Wright v. Burroughes, 3 C. B. 685; 4 D. & L. 438; 16 L. J., C. P. 6; 12 Jur. 968.

The surrenderee of a copyhold is an assignee of a reversion, within the statute of 32 Hen. 8, c. 34, and may maintain an action of covenant upon a lease made by his surrenderor, and the defendant in such action cannot protect himself by alleging the invalidity of the lease. Whitton v. Peacock, 3 Myl. & K. 325.

Parties acquiring under the Enfranchisement Acts copyhold lands under lease shall be deemed to have acquired the reversion thereon and be entitled to distrain and sue upon the covenants. See 6 & 7 Vict. c. 23, ss. 9 and 10. Sanders v. Benson, 4 Beav. 350.

Rights of Assignee — On Non-payment of Rent.]—The assignee of a reversion is not entitled under 32 Hen. 8, c. 34, to arrears of rent which became due prior to the assignment. Flight v. Bentley, 7 Sim. 149; 4 L. J., Ch. 262.

After a purchase, the tenant holds of the purchaser on the same terms as he previously held of the vendor, and the holding continues until the tenancy has been regularly determined, either by the landlord or tenant. Greenwood v. Bairstow, 5 L. J., Ch. 179.

A mortgagor in possession let the mortgaged property without the concurrence of the mortgagees. The lease was one authorised by s. 18 of the Conveyancing Act, 1881. The lessee then advanced certain moneys to the mortgagor upon the terms that the lessee should retain the rent as it became due until the moneys were repaid. Subsequently the mortgagees gave notice to the lessee informing him of the mortgage, and requiring him to pay them the rent thereafter to become due, and not to pay it to the mortgagor. The lessee having refused to comply with the notice, the mortgagees brought an action to recover possession under a condition of re-entry upon nonpayment of rent contained in the lease:—Held, that, by the combined effect of ss. 10 and 18 of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, the mortgagees, after giving the above notice to the lessee, were entitled as reversioners to enforce the covenants and provisions in the lease, and were therefore entitled to recover possession of the property under the condition of re-entry; and, further, that the agreement between the mortgagor and lessee as to the retention of the rent was not binding upon the mortgagees. Municipal Permanent Building Society v. Smith, 58 L. J., Q. B. 61; 22 Q. B. D. 70; 37 W. R. 42.

In July, 1864, L. demised premises to the defendant for five years at a rent of 55*l.* per annum, payable quarterly. Immediately after the grant of the lease the defendant advanced to L. 170*l.* on account of rent; and in September, 1865, L. mortgaged the premises to the plaintiff. In May, 1866, B., who claimed under a prior mortgage from L., dated in September, 1858, through C., his attorney, commenced an ejectment against the defendant to recover possession of the premises, but did not proceed with it; and on the 1st November, 1866, the plaintiff's attorney wrote to the defendant: "Mr. C. has written to say his clients are no longer entitled to receive your rent. I therefore request that you will have the kindness to pay the same here by Monday next":—Held, that the pre-payment of rent was no bar to his claim to the rent accruing after the defendant had notice that the plaintiff was grantee of the reversion; and that the letter, coupled with the circumstances known to the defendant, that he was raising money by mortgaging his reversion, and that the plaintiff's claim for rent could hardly be founded upon any other alleged right than one resulting from a grant of the reversion, would warrant a jury in inferring that the defendant had notice that the plaintiff was such grantee. Cook v. Guerra, 41 L. J., C. P. 89; L. R. 7 C. P. 132; 26 L. T. 97; 20 W. R. 367.

—— On Breach of Covenant.]—Tenants in common, assignees of the reversion of a lease, may join in suing on covenants therein. Womersley v. Dally, 26 L. J., Ex. 219.

C. granted and demised the exclusive right and licence to take and kill game on land, with the use of a cottage to the defendant for a term; and the defendant covenanted to leave the land at the end of the term as well stocked with game as at the time of the demise. C. assigned his reversion in the land and hereditaments to the plaintiffs, and they brought an action, at the end of the term, against the defendant for a breach of his covenant: Held, that the demise was not a mere licence, but the grant of an incorporeal hereditament; that the covenant touched the hereditament demised, and by virtue of 32 Hen. 8, c. 34, the assignees of the reversion could sue upon it. Hooper v. Clark, 8 B. & S. 150; 36 L. J., Q. B. 79; L. R. 2 Q. B. 200; 16 L. T. 152; 15 W. R. 347.

After twenty years' use of premises, converted into a shop, without licence, contrary to a covenant in a lease, an assignee of the reversion cannot take advantage of a condition of re-entry for such use, subsequent to the assignment. Gibson v. Doey, 2 H. & N. 615; 27 L. J., Ex. 37; 6 W. R. 107.

Whether the benefit of such a condition runs with the land, and can be taken advantage of by the assignees of a reversioner, depends on the nature and character of the covenant, and whether it affects the use and enjoyment of the premises, and not whether it has, in fact, deteriorated the value. Ib.

An assignment by the lessor of the reversion in one of two farms, comprised in the same lease, to the lessee himself, does not destroy the lessor's right of re-entry over the other farm. Hyde v. Warden, 47 L. J., Ex. 121; 3 Ex. D. 72; 37 L. T. 567; 26 W. R. 201—C. A.

Building lease from A. to B.; B. underlet to C.; C. was to build houses; but by his inability to do so, his lease became forfeited to B., and B.'s lease also became forfeited to A. B. assigned all his interest to D., who applied to A. for an extension of time to complete the original contract, which was granted. Hillier v. Parkinson, 9 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 156.

D. brought an ejectment against C. for his breach of covenant, and recovered a verdict. Ib.

Motion for an injunction to stay execution of the writ of possession refused. Ib.

The right of entry for a breach of covenant does not pass to the assignee of the lessor when such breach is committed during the continuance of the lessor's estate. Where B., the lessee, covenanted to insure in such office as H., the lessor should appoint in the joint names of H. and his assigns and B. and his assigns, and before assignment H. indicated the office to B., but B. did not insure and H. afterwards assigned to C. without notice to B.:—Held, that C., who after the assignment, the premises still remaining uninsured, did not before action brought appoint any office in which B. should insure in their joint names, could not maintain an action against B. for forfeiture for a breach of covenant accruing since the assignment to C. Crane v. Batten, 2 W. R. 550.

As to Covenants to Repair, see post, M. 3, a. ix., cols. 1117—1119.

Liabilities of Assignee.]—The principle, that the assignee of a reversion is not bound by the terms in a lease not under seal, applies where the demise is of three windows in a factory, with the stipulation that the lessor shall provide steam power. Smith v. Eggington, 43 L. J., C. P. 140; L. R. 9 C. P. 145; 30 L. T. 521.

The question, whether the assignee of a reversion has adopted the terms of the demise entered into by his assignor, is one of fact, and is to be disposed of by the jury. Ib.

Tenants in common, assignees of the reversion of a lease, may be jointly sued, on covenants therein. Womersley v. Dally, 26 L. J., Ex. 219.

Rights of Assignor.]—Where a reversioner conveys his legal title, he cannot maintain an ejectment for nonpayment of rent for arrears due in his own time, but there being some doubts when the deed conveying the reversion was delivered, an inquiry to ascertain the fact was directed. Blennerhassett v. Day, 2 Ball & B. 104.

L. ATTORNMENT.

What amounts to.]—Where rent is paid by succeeding tenants, after an adverse possession of twenty-three years, it does not amount to an attornment, unless the consent, or at least the knowledge, of the landlord can be shown. Meredith v. Gilpin, 6 Price, 146.

Pending a demise by deed from A. to B., a sequestration issued out of chancery against A.; B. signed an unstamped paper, purporting that he attorned, and became tenant to the sequestrators, to hold on such terms as might be afterwards agreed on:—Held, first, that the sequestrators could not maintain use and occupation against B., because an attornment infers a continuance of a subsisting tenancy, which here would be created anew by the deed; secondly, that the sequestrators could take no estate, and consequently they had no estate to which an attornment would apply; thirdly, that the instrument, if it had any operation, would operate as a new demise, and could not be read without a stamp. Cornish v. Searell, 1 M. & Ry. 703; 8 B. & C. 471; 6 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 255.

An attornment where a tenant merely puts one person in the place of another as his landlord, but continues to hold under the same terms and conditions as before, is a mere acknowledgment that the person making it is tenant, and it requires no stamp. Doe d. Linsey v. Edwards, 5 A & E. 95; 6 N. & M. 633; 2 H. & W. 139; 5 L. J., K. B. 238. S. P., Doe d. Wright v. Smith, 3 N. & P. 335; 8 A. & E. 255; 7 L. J., Q. B. 158; 2 Jur. 854.

A lessee, desiring to secure his premises for himself at the end of his lease, and being a bankrupt without a certificate, procured a friend to take the conveyance as trustee for him. This conveyance shewed the legal estate to be outstanding in a person who could not be found. The lessee continued to occupy. The creditors' assignees, becoming aware of the circumstances, induced the trustee to convey his interest to them, and forced the lessee to attorn to them, and brought ejectment:—Held, that the assignees had a sufficient title. Cooper v. Lands, 14 L. T. 287; 14 W. R. 610.

A., in 1861, granted an under-lease to B. for twenty-one years from Michaelmas, 1861, at the yearly rent of 50*l*. In 1864 he granted an underlease of the same premises to C. for twenty-one years from Michaelmas, 1863, at the same rent. B. never attorned to C.:—Held, inasmuch as there was no attornment, that the demise to C. did not pass the reversion to him, but only an interesse termini, and that, in order to establish C.'s under-lease, a surrender by B. to A., and not to C., was the effectual and proper course. Edwards v. Wickwar, L. R. 1 Eq. 403.

——Payments by Assignee.]—When a lease has been assigned in consideration of certain quarterly payments during the remainder of the term, the assignee by making one such payment does not attorn to the assignor so as to give him a right of distress for sums subsequently becoming due. Hazeldine v. Heaton, 1 Cab. & E. 40.

Unnecessary—4 Ann. c. 16, s. 9.]—A demise by way of grant for a term of years to commence immediately, made by a person entitled to an estate in tail in remainder, expectant upon the determination of a life estate during the lifetime of the tenant for life, operates as a conveyance of an estate for years carved out of the remainder, and vests the estate immediately in the grantee, without entry, by virtue of 4 Ann. c. 16, s. 9, which makes such a conveyance effectual without any actual attornment of the tenant of the particular estate upon which the remainder is expectant. Doe d. Agar v. Brown, 2 El. & Bl. 331; 22 L. J., Q. B. 432.

Replevin. Avowry, that Henry 8 was seised in fee of the shop in which, &c., and, by letters-patent enrolled, granted it to W., and the heirs male of his body, paying annually to the king a certain rent at Michaelmas. It then deduced title to the rent to Charles 2, and stated that he, by letters-patent enrolled, after referring therein to 22 Car. 2, c. 6, granted the rent to trustees mentioned in the statute, and their heirs, upon trust, for Charles 2; that the trustees, by indenture, for consideration therein expressed, conveyed the rent to the dean and chapter of St. Paul's, whereupon and whereby the dean and chapter became and were seised as of fee in the rent, and they and their successors continued to be so seised until and at Michaelmas, 1845; an avowry was then made for six years' arrears of rent due to the defendants at the time when, &c.:—Held, that an express averment of attornment by the terre-tenant, upon the conveyance of the rent by the trustees, or some equivalent allegation, was necessary, because it could not be presumed that the conveyance was made after 4 Ann. c. 16, s. 9; and that the avowment that the rent was duly paid for a certain time, and that it was due and in arrear to the dean and chapter, was not an equivalent allegation, because, to make the payment of rent an attornment in law, it must be made to the grantee of the rent, and an attornment must be in the life of the grantee; and that an attornment could not be implied. Vigers v. St. Paul's (Dean and Chapter), 14 Q. B. 909; 19 L. J., Q. B. 84; 14 Jur. 1017—Ex. Ch.

A. granted to B. a leasehold interest in premises for a term of thirty years, to be computed from the 10th of March, 1839. On the 10th November, 1846, B. demised to the defendant the same premises for the term of twenty-three years, reserving a rent, and afterwards assigned his interest to the plaintiff:—Held, first, that by the deed a rent was created, and that it was assignable; secondly, that the plaintiff, who was the assignee of the party to whom the rent was reserved, could maintain an action for the recovery of it; and thirdly, that a privity was created between the plaintiff and the defendant, the same as if the defendant had actually attorned to the plaintiff, for, by the 4 Ann. c. 16, s. 9, attornment is unnecessary. Williams v. Hayward, 1 El. & El. 1040; 28 L. J., Q. B. 374; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1417; 7 W. R. 563.

Evidence as to.]—An avowry stated a demise for two years, ending on the 29th of September, 1842. On the trial an attornment in writing, dated the 14th of October, 1842, was given in evidence, by which the plaintiff and others attorned tenants to the defendant for such parts of the premises as were in their occupation, and agreed to pay the rent set opposite to their names. Opposite to the defendant's name was written, "Rent 55*l*., from Michaelmas, 1840":—Held, that the avowry was supported by the evidence. Gladman v. Plumer, 15 L. J., Q. B. 79; 10 Jur. 109.

Distress—Tenant by Elegit.]—A tenant by elegit may distrain without attornment. Lloyd v. Davies, 2 Ex. 103.

Equitable Jurisdiction.]—Equity will not compel a man to attorn who is at liberty at the common law. Wyndham's (Sir John) Case, Cary, 4.

Attornment denied but in some cases. Philips v. Sandford, Cary, 4.

Lessee for years decreed to admit an attornment. Natchbolt v. Porter, 2 Vern. 113.

M. COVENANTS.

1. USUAL.

What Reasonable.]—The reasonableness of a covenant by a lessee, in a lease of lands renewable for ever, that he and his heirs shall always live upon the lands, or pay an additional rent, with remedies by distress and entry, is properly triable at law; and a court of equity ought not to interpose or give relief against it. Ponsonby v. Adams, 2 Bro. P. C. 431.

To Pay Taxes.]—A party contracted for an assignment of a lease of a public-house, which in the agreement was described as holden at a certain net annual rent under usual and common covenants. And the lease contained a covenant by the tenant to pay land-tax, sewers'-rate, and all other taxes, and a proviso for re-entry if any business but that of a victualler should be carried on in the house; and it was proved that a considerable majority of public-house leases contained such a proviso:—Held, that the covenant to pay land-tax, sewers'-rate, and other taxes, was a common covenant in a lease, reserving a net rent; and that the proviso for re-entry must, with reference to a lease of a public-house, also be considered usual and common. Bennett v. Womack, 7 B. & C. 627; 1 M. & Ry. 644; 3 Car. & P. 96; 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 175; 31 R. R. 270.

To Repair.]—A., who was under an agreement to take the lease of a house, the lease to contain all "usual covenants," agreed to assign all his interest to B., and forwarded him a copy of the agreement for a lease. In answer to inquiries by B., A. stated that the lessee would not have to do substantial repairs:—Held, first, that A.'s statement was a misrepresentation of a matter of law, and not of fact, and that A. was not bound by it. Kendall v. Hill, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 968.

Held, secondly, that B. was bound to repair the house in the event of damage by fire. Ib.

Under a contract for a lease of a mill, to contain "all usual and necessary covenants and provisoes," and particularly a covenant on the part of the lessee to keep the mill in good tenantable repair:—Held, that the lessee was not entitled to have introduced into the covenant the words "damages by fire or tempest only excepted." Sharp v. Milligan, 23 Beav. 419. S. C., nom. Thorpe v. Milligan, 5 W. R. 336.

To Rebuild.]—Under a power to a tenant for life to lease for years, reserving the usual covenants, a lease made by him, containing a proviso, that in case the premises were blown down or burned, the lessor should rebuild, otherwise the rent should cease, is void; the court finding that such covenant is unusual. Doe d. Ellis v. Sandham, 1 Term Rep. 705; 1 R. R. 369.

Not to Assign.]—A covenant not to assign without the leave of the landlord, is a fair and usual covenant. Morgan v. Slaughter, 1 Esp. 8; 5 R. R. 715.

Agreement to accept a lease of a dwelling-house in London "to contain all usual covenants and provisoes." The lease contained a covenant not to assign without the lessor's consent. In an action to compel specific performance of the agreement:—Held, that the covenant was not a "usual covenant," and that the agreement could not be enforced. Hampshire v. Wickens, 47 L. J., Ch. 243; 7 Ch. D. 555; 38 L. T. 408; 26 W. R. 491.

A judge cannot of his own authority say what should be "usual covenants," nor should the locality, nature or tenure of the property be, except under special circumstances, regarded. Ib.

There is nothing unreasonable in a covenant not to sub-let without licence, or in a proviso for re-entry on the whole premises on breach of any covenant in the lease. Haberdashers' Co. v. Isaac, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 611. Affirmed, 5 W. R. 855—L.JJ.

An agreement that all "usual covenants" should be inserted in a proposed lease does not include a covenant against assignment. Buckland v. Papillon, L. R. 1 Eq. 477; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 155. Affirmed, 36 L. J., Ch. 81; L. R. 2 Ch. 67; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 992; 15 L. T. 378; 15 W. R. 92.

Whether an agreement for a lease with usual covenants, includes a covenant against assigning or under-letting, without licence, quære. In this instance, upon the particular construction of the agreement for the lease of a farm, the words "such other clauses as are usual in such cases," has not that effect. Vere v. Loreden, 12 Ves. 179; 10 R. R. 77, n. S. P., Jones v. Jones, id. 186.

On an agreement for a lease, "with all usual and reasonable covenants," a covenant not to under-lease or assign is implied, where the custom of the place is not generally against it. Folkingham v. Croft, 3 Anstr. 700; 4 R. R. 844.

Under an agreement for a lease, "with usual covenants," the lessor is not entitled to a covenant against assigning or under-letting without licence. Browne v. Raban, 15 Ves. 528.

A., before his bankruptcy, agrees to take a lease of a cotton mill, and enters into possession. After his bankruptcy, one of his assignees takes possession, and agrees to accept the lease, a draft of which was sent to the assignees, containing covenants personally binding on them, and one in particular, to prevent them from assigning without the licence of the lessor:—Held, that the assignees were not bound to accept of such a lease; and even if they were, that the Court of Review had no jurisdiction to compel a specific performance of the agreement. Lucas, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & C. 144; 1 Mont. & Ayr. 93; 3 L. J., Bk. 66.

A. granted B. a lease containing a covenant against assignment. A. afterwards agreed to cancel the lease, and to grant B. a much more beneficial one, "as a reward for the great improvement he had made in the estate, and as an encouragement for his general industry." A. died before executing the second lease, and B. filed a bill for specific performance against his representatives. A compromise was effected for granting a lease for a reduced term, "the lease to contain all covenants usual and ordinary in farming leases." It was insisted by the tenant, that under the compromise there should be no restriction against assignment:—Held, that the master, in settling the lease, was to have regard to the original lease, and to the custom as to farming leases, if any. Bell v. Barchard, 16 Beav. 8; 21 L. J., Ch. 411.

A. agrees for a lease of certain lands for three lives. The lease is prepared according to the agreement, except the inserting a clause to restrain the tenant from alienation, without the consent of the landlord; this clause being no part of the agreement, the landlord is bound to execute a lease without it. Blacker v. Mathers, 6 Bro. P. C. 334.

A contract to grant a lease, with common and usual covenants, does not comprise a covenant not to assign without a licence. Henderson v. Hay, 3 Bro. C. C. 632.

A purchaser objected to complete the purchase of a term in leasehold premises upon the ground that the lease contained a covenant which had not been disclosed to him, that the lessee was not to assign or part with possession of the premises without the consent of the lessor, such consent not to be unreasonably withheld:—Held, that this was not a "usual covenant," and that the purchaser was entitled to repudiate his contract. Hampshire v. Wickens (7 Ch. D. 555) followed. Bishop v. Taylor, 60 L. J., Q. B. 556; 64 L. T. 529; 39 W. R. 542; 55 J. P. 695.

An agreement for the lease of a public-house, provided for a term of three years, with an option to renew for another seven years, but contained no reference as to the covenants to be inserted in the lease. The lessor insisted upon covenants by the lessee: (1) To reside on the premises and personally conduct the business; (2) Not to assign without consent; and that the proviso for re-entry should extend to the breach of any covenant. The lessee objected that these were not "usual" clauses:—Held, that covenants 1 and 2 could not be insisted upon as usual covenants; and, on this point, the fact that the subject-matter of the lease was a public-house made no difference, and that the proviso for re-entry must be limited to the case of nonpayment of rent. Henderson v. Hay (3 Bro. C. C. 632) followed. Lander and Bagley's Contract, In re, 61 L. J., Ch. 707; [1892] 3 Ch. 41; 67 L. T. 521.

—— "Proper Clauses."]—By an agreement in writing (contained in two letters) the defendant agreed to grant to the plaintiff, a brewer, a lease of a public-house for a certain term, at a certain rent, "a proper lease to be drawn up with all proper clauses, and approved of by" the defendant and his solicitor. Afterwards the defendant refused to grant a lease unless it contained a clause against underletting. In an action to enforce specific performance of the agreement:—Held, that the clause was not a "proper clause"; that the defendant was bound to grant a lease without putting in any such clause; and specific performance decreed. Eadie v. Addison, 52 L. J., Ch. 80; 47 L. T. 533; 31 W. R. 320.

In Restraint of Trade.]—Covenants in restraint of trade in a trading locality are not considered usual covenants. Wilbraham v. Livesey, 18 Beav. 206; 2 W. R. 281.

If an agreement for a lease contains no stipulation as to covenants, the party agreeing to take the lease has a right to a lease containing only usual covenants, and a restriction against particular trades, not being a usual covenant, cannot be introduced into the lease. Propert v. Parker, 3 Mylne & K. 280.

The usual covenants between landlord and tenant will not extend to covenants in restraint of trade. Van v. Corpe, 3 Myl. & K. 269; 6 L. J., Ch. 208; 1 Jur. 101, 149.

Upon a negotiation between A. and B. for the grant of a lease, B., the proposed lessee, informed the agent of A. that he wanted the premises for the purpose of carrying on therein the business of a retailer of beer, and inquired whether there was anything in the original lease to restrain the tenant from carrying on such business therein, to which inquiry the agent, being ignorant of the contents of the lease, but knowing that such trade had been carried on upon the premises for some years, replied that there was nothing, so far as he knew, to prevent the tenant from carrying on the proposed trade. B. therefore consented to take a lease, and a memorandum to the following effect was drawn up and signed by the parties:—"Lease, twenty-one years from Lady-day, 1853. Lease and counterpart to contain all usual and proper covenants, and particularly those contained in the lease under which the premises are held, so that the same in no way restricts the trade of a retailer of beer. Lessee not to require production of the lessor's title":—Held, that A. duly performed his contract by being ready to grant a lease without a covenant to restrict the lessee from using the premises as a beershop, notwithstanding that there was such restrictive words in the lease under which he himself held. Hayward v. Parke, 16 C. B. 295; 24 L. J., C. P. 217; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 781.

Not to convert House into a School.]—Where in an agreement for the lease of a house to be granted by the defendant to the plaintiff it was stipulated that the lease should contain the usual covenants between landlord and tenant, and that the house should not be converted into a school, it is immaterial whether the plaintiff had or had not notice that the defendant derived his title under a lease from another person; because the agreement amounts to a representation on the part of the defendant that he was at liberty to grant a lease conformably to the terms of the agreement. Van v. Corpe, supra.

To Carry on Particular Trade.]—A. agreed to let, and B. to take, a piece of land, with liberty to build thereon such warehouses, glasshouses, kilns, houses for workmen, and erections necessary for carrying on the business of a glass manufactory, as he should think fit, for sixty-one years, at a certain rent; and B. agreed to pay the rent, to build in a substantial manner, and not to use the premises for any other purpose than a glass manufactory during the term. A lease and counterpart to be executed in conformity with the agreement, in which should be inserted all usual covenants:—Held, that this agreement did not warrant the insertion in the lease of an affirmative covenant by the lessee that he would carry on the business of a glass manufactory on the premises during the term. Doe d. Bute (Marquis) v. Guest, 15 M. & W. 160.

To Pay Fines.]—Under a power to make leases for years, determinable on lives, of premises usually so leased, reserving the usual rents and heriots, and so as there should be contained usual and reasonable covenants, a lease was granted in 1831. This lease contained a covenant to do suit and service at the courts of the manor of W., but no covenant to pay fines. In what was taken as the pattern lease, executed in 1749, there was a covenant to pay fines, as well as to do suit and service. It appeared, that, from a date prior to 1749, there had been no courts baron or customary courts held for the manor, and no evidence was given of the existence of any freehold or copyhold tenants:—Held, that the covenant to pay fines was not a usual or reasonable covenant, the omission of which avoided the lease. Doe d. Egremont (Earl) v. Williams, 11 Q. B. 688; 17 L. J., Q. B. 154; 12 Jur. 455.

Proviso for Re-entry.]—Under an executory agreement to grant a lease of an hotel, with general and usual covenants:—Held, under the circumstances, that the lease ought to contain a power of re-entry on the lessee's becoming bankrupt or taking the benefit of the Insolvent Debtors Act. Haines v. Burnett, 27 Beav. 500; 29 L. J., Ch. 289; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1279; 1 L. T. 18; 8 W. R. 130.

Under an agreement for a lease to contain "all usual and customary mining clauses," the landlord is not entitled to have inserted in the lease a proviso for re-entry on breach of any of the covenants by the lessee, or otherwise than on nonpayment of rent. Hodgkinson v. Crowe, 44 L. J., Ch. 680; L. R. 10 Ch. 622; 33 L. T. 388; 23 W. R. 885.

Semble, that the rule is not limited to mining leases. Ib.

Under an agreement for a lease to contain usual and proper covenants, the landlord is not entitled to have inserted in the lease a proviso for re-entry upon breach of any of the covenants by the lessee or otherwise than on nonpayment of rent. Hodgkinson v. Crowe (L. R. 10 Ch. 622) is not affected by s. 14 of the Conveyancing Act, 1881. Anderton and Milner, In re, 59 L. J., Ch. 765; 45 Ch. D. 476; 63 L. T. 332; 39 W. R. 44.

A power of re-entry in a lease, if the lessee and his assigns become bankrupt, or make a composition with creditors, or if execution should issue against either of them, is unusual, and an intended assignee is not bound to accept an assignment of a lease containing such a covenant. Hyde v. Warden, 47 L. J., Ex. 121; 3 Ex. D. 72; 37 L. T. 567; 26 W. R. 201—C. A.

Mowing Meadow Land.]—In a lease of a farm a covenant not to mow meadow land more than once a year is not an unusual covenant, so as to excuse an intended assignee from accepting the title. Ib.

To Indemnify.]—For indemnity against payment of rent and performance of covenants, a usual covenant. Staines v. Morris, 1 Ves. & B. 8.

2. That Run with the Land.

To Insure.]—A covenant to insure premises against fire, which are situated within the weekly bills of mortality, as specified in the 14 Geo. 3, c. 78, runs with the land. Vernon v. Smith, 5 B. & Ald. 1; 24 R. R. 257.

To Supply Water.]—A covenant in a lease, by the lessor, to supply two houses with good water at a rate therein mentioned for each house, runs with the land; for the breach of which the assignee of the lessee may maintain an action gainst the reversioner. Jourdain v. Wilson, 4 B. & Ald. 266; 23 R. R. 268. S. P., Athol v. Mid. Gt. Western Ry., Ir. R. 3 Ch. 333.

Not to Assign.]—A covenant that the lessor, his executors or administrators, will not assign does not bind the assignees. Doe d. Cheere v. Smith, 5 Taunt. 795; 1 Marsh. 359; 15 R. R. 660.

A covenant, in an indenture of lease by which the lessees for themselves, their heirs, executors, administrators and assigns, covenanted that they, their executors, administrators and assigns, would not assign, underlet or otherwise part with the possession of the demised premises without first obtaining the consent in writing of the lessor, is a covenant which touches and concerns the land, and therefore runs with the land, and the lessor can sue an assignee of the lessee for the breach of it. Williams v. Earle, 9 B. & S. 740; 37 L. J., Q. B. 231; L. R. 3 Q. B. 739; 19 L. T. 238; 16 W. R. 1041. See West v. Dobb, 9 B. & S. 755; 38 L. J., Q. B. 289; L. R. 4 Q. B. 634; 20 L. T. 737; 17 W. R. 879—See S. C., in Ex. Ch., ante, col. 1162.

Of Indemnity.]—A covenant by the lessee with the lessor, his heirs and assigns, to indemnify the overseers for the time being of the parish in which the premises demised were situated from all costs and charges by reason of the lessee's taking an apprentice or a servant, who should thereby gain a settlement within, or become chargeable to, the parish, is an express covenant with the lessor, which did not run with the land. Walsh v. Fussell, 3 M. & P. 455; 6 Bing. 163; 7 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 261.

In Mortgage—To determine Term.]—A mortgagee died seised of the residue of a mortgage term, subject to a proviso that in case the mortgagor should pay him, his executors, administrators or assigns, a certain sum on a given day, the term should determine; the mortgagee bequeathed this sum to the plaintiff, whom he appointed one of his executors:—Held, that he could not maintain an action in his own name, as assignee, although his co-executor had assented to the bequest, as the covenant with the mortgagee was collateral, and did not run with the land, and because it was broken in his lifetime. Canham v. Rust, 2 Moore, 164; 8 Taunt. 230.

To Pay Rent.]—Where B., being seised in fee, conveyed to the defendant and J., their heirs and assigns, to the use that B., his heirs and assigns, might take to his use a rent certain, to be issuing out of the premises, and subject to the rent to the use of the defendant, his heirs and assigns; and the defendant covenanted with B., his heirs and assigns, to pay to him, his heirs and assigns, the rent; and to build, within one year, one or more messuages on the premises, for better securing the rent; and B., within one year, demised the rent to the plaintiff for 1,000 years:—Held, that covenant would not lie by the plaintiff for nonpayment of the rent, or for not building the messuages, for that the covenant was in gross, and only personal to B. Milnes v. Branch, 5 M. & S. 411; 17 R. R. 373.

A testator, being seised in fee of lands, and also of a corn-mill, demised the former to a tenant for three lives, covenanting for a money-rent, and in addition thereto, that the lessee should perform certain suits and services; and that he, his heirs and assigns, should do suit to the lessor's mill by grinding therein all such corn as grew upon the demised land: the testator afterwards devised the mill, and also the reversion of the land, to the same person, who became seised upon the death of the devisor. During the demise of the land, the lessee died intestate, and his wife took out administration of his estate and effects. An action being brought, assigning for a breach a neglect to grind corn at the mill during the lifetime of the lessee, and also since his death: —Held, that the reservation of the suit to the mill was in the nature of a rent, and that the covenant to render it ran with the land, whilst the ownership of the land and the mill remained in the same person, and entitled the latter to maintain an action at common law upon it against the personal representative of the lessee. Vyvyan v. Arthur, 2 D. & R. 670; 1 B. & C. 410; 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 138; 25 R. R. 437.

To Pay at Valuation at Termination of Tenancy.]—By a deed dated March 1st, 1832, the defendant leased a farm for fourteen years, the lease contained a proviso for re-entry by the lessor if the lessees should assign without his licence and a covenant by the lessees not to assign; also a covenant by the lessor at the expiration of the demise to pay for certain things at a valuation. After the expiration of the term the lessees continued to occupy the farm as tenants from year to year on the terms of the lease. In 1864, they by deed assigned their interest in the farm, with their farming stock and valuations, to the plaintiff, in order to raise a sum of money to be paid to their creditors under a composition deed executed at the same time. The plaintiff entered into occupation of the farm, but never paid rent. On the 18th March the defendant, having no knowledge of the assignment, gave the lessees notice to quit, and the plaintiff, as assignee, gave him a similar notice:—Held, that the plaintiff could not maintain an action against the defendant on the covenant for a valuation. Per Mellor and Lush, JJ., on the ground that there was no new contract between the plaintiff and defendant, and that the right of action did not pass from the lessees to the plaintiff by the assignment of the tenancy created by parol between the lessor and lessees. Per Shee, J., on the ground that the lessees, having no right to assign without the licence of the lessor, could not transfer any interest to the plaintiff. Elliott v. Johnson, 8 B. & S. 38; 36 L. J., Q. B. 41; L. R. 2 Q. B. 120; 15 W. R. 253.

—— Incoming and Outgoing Tenant—Valuation of Tenant's Crops, &c.]—An owner in fee demised a farm for seven years, and agreed at the expiration of the term to pay for the tenant's property in and upon the farm at a valuation. He devised the lands to trustees for a term of 1,000 years upon trust to raise money in aid of his personal estate for payment of debts, funeral and testamentary expenses, and legacies, and subject thereto to the plaintiff for life, with divers remainders over. On the testator's death the plaintiff took possession. On the expiration of the term a new tenant could not be found. The plaintiff paid the outgoing tenant for his property in the farm, and claimed to be repaid the amount out of the testator's estate:—Held, that the liability to pay the outgoing tenant was a liability attaching to the land, and that the landlord for the time being was the person primarily liable; that the plaintiff, being in receipt of the rents and profits, was the landlord of the term, and not the trustees; that he therefore was the person primarily liable, and had no claim to be repaid wholly or in part either, out of the testator's estate or by the persons entitled in remainder. Mansel v. Norton, 52 L. J., Ch. 357; 22 Ch. D. 769; 48 L. T. 654; 31 W. R. 325—C. A.

By an instrument of demise, after a covenant for payment of rent by the tenant, it was agreed, "that in case the tenant should duly observe and perform the several covenants and agreements thereinbefore contained on his part and behalf," and should peaceably quit the farm in pursuance of notice to do so, he should be entitled to away-going crop, to be taken from lands in seed or turnips the previous summer, such crop being to be left for the landlord, or his incoming tenant, at a valuation to be made by arbitrators or an umpire:—Held, that this clause did not give the tenant the right of possession of the land to the exclusion of the landlord, after the determination of the year's tenancy, but at most only a right to go on the land to improve the crop; and that the landlord might maintain trespass quare clausum fregit, for taking possession of the crop, and hindering him from having the use and occupation of the land, after the year was expired. Strickland v. Maxwell, 2 C. & M. 539; 4 Tyr. 346; 3 L. J., Ex. 161.

—— Custom of the Country as to Tillages.]—Primâ facie the landlord is the person liable to the outgoing tenant, at the expiration of his tenancy, for the seeds, tillages, &c., properly bestowed by him upon a farm. Although, therefore, the ordinary practice (to avoid circuity) is, for the incoming tenant to pay the outgoing tenant for the seeds, tillages, &c., upon a valuation made between them; yet a custom or usage that the outgoing tenant shall look to the incoming tenant for payment, to the exclusion of the landlord's liability, cannot be supported in law, as being unreasonable, uncertain and prejudicial to the interests both of landlords and tenants. Bradburn v. Foley, 47 L. J., C. P. 331; 3 C. P. D. 129; 38 L. T. 421; 26 W. R. 423.

To pay Interest on Incoming Valuation—Duty on Quitting.]—An agreement was entered into by a tenant under a lease to pay interest at 5 per cent. on the amount of his incoming valuation, and "upon quitting to leave a valuation of tenant rights equal in value, and of the same nature and kind":—Held, not to create a personal debt to the lessor, but to enure for the benefit of a subsequent landlord. Wagstaff v. Clinton, 1 Cab. & E. 45.

For Compensation.]—Three licencees of a right to dig minerals, jointly and severally covenanted with the grantor of the licence to pay him compensation for injury to surface. Two of them assigned their right under the licence:—Held, that the covenant ran with the land, so as to bind the assignee, and that the covenant of the three licencees being joint and several, the grantor was entitled to recover the whole compensation from the assignee of two of them. Norval v. Pascoe, 10 Jur. (N.S.) 792; 10 L. T. 809; 12 W. R. 973.

To Pay for Improvements.]—By a lease some print works, and certain articles, matters and things on the premises were demised, with power to the tenant to replace any of the articles, matters and things when worn out, and to add new ones, and to add improvements on the premises; and it was covenanted, that at the end of the term a valuation of the articles, matters and things, and of the improvements, should be made, and if they exceeded a certain sum the landlord should pay the tenant the difference:—Held, in an action by the tenant against the executor of the landlord to recover the excess, that as this was a covenant relating to chattels it did not run with the reversion, and that the executor was only liable on it in his representative character; and that as it appeared on the record that he was executor, the judgment should be that the plaintiff do recover the debt and costs de bonis testatoris, if the defendant have so much; and if not, then as to the costs de bonis propriis. Garton v. Gregory, 3 B. & S. 90; 31 L. J., Q. B. 302; 6 L. T. 656; 10 W. R. 713—Ex. Ch.

To Pay for Trees planted by Tenant.]—The assignee of a lease is not liable to the original lessor, for a breach of a covenant not running with the land, unless he is expressly named in the lease as a covenantor. Grey v. Cuthbertson, 2 Chit. 482; 4 Dougl. 351.

A covenant by the lessee, for himself, his executors and administrators, to pay to the lessor the amount of fruit trees, to be planted by the lessee, according to an appraisement to be made by two persons, one to be chosen by each of the parties, does not run with the land, and the assignee is not bound. Ib.

A covenant by the lessor to pay for all trees planted by the lessee does not run with the land. Ib.

Covenant to pay Collateral Sum of Money.]—By an underlease, dated in 1869, A. demised the Y. premises, comprised in two original leases, dated in 1848 and 1863, save and except such parts of the premises (Z.) comprised in the lease of 1848 as were comprised in an underlease, dated in 1867, to B. for the residues of the original terms except the last day of each. The underlease to B. of 1869 contained a covenant by B. for himself, his assigns, &c., that he would during the terms granted, pay all future rates, taxes, &c., payable in respect of the Y. premises, and also would, during the said term, pay all such sums (not exceeding 100*l.* in any one year) as should for the time being be payable by the lessor, his assigns, &c., on account of the like rates, taxes, &c., in respect of the Z. premises. The Y. premises were subsequently assigned to C. for the residue of the terms:—Held, that the covenant, as to taxes, &c., in respect of the Z. premises, was a covenant to pay a collateral sum of money, and did not run with the land, and, therefore, that C. was not liable. Gower v. Postmaster-General, 57 L. T. 527.

To Yield up in Repair.]—A covenant to yield up in repair at the end of a term runs with the land, and binds an assignee, though not named. Martyn v. Clue, 18 Q. B. 661; 22 L. J., Q. B. 147.

A declaration alleged that F., being seised in fee of an estate, by deed granted to the defendant licence to dig, work and search for China clay, and to raise, get and dispose of the same to his own use, to hold and exercise the liberties for the term of twenty-one years; and the defendant covenanted with F. and his assigns that he would pay compensation to F. and his assigns, and his lessees and tenants, for all inclosed lands which he might injure; the amount of such compensation to be ascertained, in case of difference, by two arbitrators, one to be appointed by the defendant and the other by F. and his assigns, and also that the defendant or his assigns, would deliver up the works in repair at the expiration of the term. That after executing the deed F. conveyed all his estate to the plaintiff; and it alleged, as breaches, first, that though, after the assignment to the plaintiff, the defendant injured certain inclosed lands, and that though the plaintiff appointed an arbitrator, yet the defendant refused to do so; and, secondly, that the defendant, at the expiration of the term, did not deliver up the works in repair:—Held, that the covenant to deliver up the works in repair ran with the interest of the owner of the fee expectant upon the determination of the term in the incorporeal right to enter and take the clay, and that therefore the plaintiff, the alienee of the land, could sue upon it. Martyn v. Williams, 1 H. & N. 817; 26 L. J., Ex. 117; 5 W. R. 351.

A first count was upon a covenant in a lease that the lessees and their assigns would maintain and keep in repair the forge and buildings demised and all buildings which should be erected during the demise, and all additions and improvements thereto, and would maintain and keep in good working order the fixtures, steam-engines, tools, utensils and other articles demised, and also which might during the demise be brought or set up on the premises, and would replace and make good all such fixtures, engines, tools, utensils and other articles as should be broken or worn out. The second count was upon a covenant that neither the lessees nor their assigns would assign or part with the possession of the demised premises without the consent in writing of the lessor:—Held, first, that so much of the covenant in the first count stated as related to buildings and to machinery, tools and utensils, which were tenant's fixtures, ran with the land. Williams v. Earle, 9 B. & S. 740; 37 L. J., Q. B. 231; L. R. 3 Q. B. 739; 19 L. T. 238; 16 W. R. 1041.

Held, secondly, that so much of it as related to tools and utensils, which were not fixtures, did not run with the land. Ib.

As to Tithes.]—A lessee of tithes covenanted for himself and his assigns that he would not let any of the farmers in the parish have any part of the tithes. This covenant runs with the tithes, and binds the assignee. Bally v. Wells, 3 Wils. 25.

To Reside.]—A covenant in a lease, that the lessee, his executors and administrators, shall constantly reside upon the demised premises, during the demise, is binding on the assignee of the lease, though not named. Tatem v. Chaplin, 2 H. Bl. 133; 3 R. R. 360.

To Endeavour to procure Renewal of Letters-patent.]—A covenant in a lease by the lessor, being the grantee of the land under letters-patent, that he will use his best endeavours to procure a renewal of the letters-patent, is a covenant which runs with the land. Sampson v. Clayton, 4 Bing. (N.C.) 758; 6 Scott, 469; 1 Arn. 299.

To Use as Dwelling-house.]—A covenant in a lease to use a house as a private dwelling-house only runs with the land, though the word "assigns" is not used. Wilkinson v. Rogers, 10 Jur. (N.S.) 5; 9 L. T. 434; 12 W. R. 119.

Covenant to Repair and Maintain Road.]—The doctrine in Tulk v. Moxhay (2 Ph. 774) is limited to restrictive stipulations, and will not be extended so as to bind in equity a purchaser taking with notice of a covenant to expend money on repairs or otherwise which does not run with the land at law. Semble, that the burden of a covenant (not involving a grant) never runs with the land at law, except as between landlord and tenant. Cooke v. Chilcott (3 Ch. D. 694) overruled on this point. Morland v. Cook (L. R. 6 Eq. 252) explained. Holmes v. Buckley (1 Eq. C. Ab. 27) discussed. Austerberry v. Oldham Corporation, 29 Ch. D. 750; 53 L. T. 543; 33 W. R. 807; 49 J. P. 532—C. A.

A. by deed conveyed for value to trustees in fee a piece of land as part of the site of a road intended to be made and maintained by the trustees under the provisions of a contemporaneous trust deed (being a deed of settlement for the benefit as a joint stock company established to raise the necessary capital for making the road); and in the conveyance the trustees covenanted with A., his heirs and assigns, that they, the trustees, their heirs and assigns, would make the road and at all times keep it in repair, and allow the use of it by the public subject to tolls. The piece of land so conveyed was bounded on both sides by other lands belonging to A. The trustees duly made the road, which afforded the necessary access to A.'s adjoining lands. A. afterwards sold his adjoining lands to the plaintiff, and the trustees sold the road to the defendant, both parties taking with notice of the covenant to repair:—Held, that the plaintiff could not enforce the covenant against the defendants. Ib.

Consideration of the circumstances under which a covenant will be held to touch or concern the land of the covenantee so that the benefit may run with the land. Ib.

Lease of Public House—Act affecting Licence.]—The lessee of a public-house covenanted with the lessor to keep the premises open at all proper and legal hours, and conduct and manage the business of a beerhouse-keeper in such proper and orderly manner as to afford no ground or pretext whatever whereby the licence should be, or should be in danger of being, suspended, discontinued or forfeited. There was a proviso for re-entry in case of breach of covenant. A person in occupation of the premises with the lessee's permission was convicted of selling drink within prohibited hours. The conviction was not indorsed on the licence, and the licence was transferred after the conviction. In an action by an assignee of the reversion to recover possession:—Held, that the covenant run with the land, but that the licence had not been put in danger by the conviction, and that, if it had been, the case was one in which the lessee would have been entitled to relief under s. 14 of the Conveyancing Act, 1881. Fleetwood v. Hull, 58 L. J., Q. B. 341; 23 Q. B. D. 35; 60 L. T. 790; 37 W. R. 714; 54 J. P. 229. See also Clegg v. Hands, post, col. 1230.

Giving Right to Distrain.]—A proviso in a lease of a seam of coal under lands empowered the lessor to distrain for rent the chattels, effects, goods, &c., employed upon or under the lands, in connection with the working of the coal, as well within the limits of the lands as also in, under or about any other lands in which there should be any pits or openings, through which the coal demised should be for the time being in course of working by the lessees, their executors, administrators and assigns, and for that purpose to enter into and upon such other lands:—Held, that such a proviso or covenant could not attach to land in which the lessor had no interest, and that he could not by virtue of it distrain on any "such other lands" after an assignment of the lessees' interest therein. Daniel v. Stepney, 41 L. J., Ex. 208; L. R. 7 Ex. 327; 27 L. T. 380; 21 W. R. 17. See S. C., in Ex. Ch., L. R. 9 Ex. 185; 22 W. R. 662.

Not to Hire Workpeople outside the Parish.] In a lease of ground, with liberty to make a watercourse and erect a mill, the lessee covenanted for himself, his executors, administrators and assigns not to hire persons to work in the mill who were settled in other parishes, without a parish certificate:—Held, that this covenant did not run with the land, nor bind the assignee of the lessee. Congleton Corporation v. Pattison, 10 East, 130.

To Erect Buildings.]—By a deed B., a lessee for himself, his executors, administrators and assigns, covenanted with the lessor to build four messuages on the land within a specified time from the date of the demise, and to pay rent; and there was a clause for re-entry on nonperformance of this or certain other covenants. By a subsequent deed B. demised to A. (the houses not having been built), and covenanted with A. that B., his heirs, executors or administrators (not adding assigns), would pay the rent reserved by the former deed, and perform or effectually indemnify A. from and against all the covenants therein contained on the lessees' or assignees' part to be performed. B. afterwards assigned to C.:—Held, that the covenant to A. was not such a covenant as would pass with the reversion of the land, and bind assignees not named; and therefore that A. could not recover against C. for not building a wall, or idemnifying A. against eviction for breach of the covenant to build. Doughty v. Bowman, 11 Q. B. 444; 17 L. J., Q. B. 111; 12 Jur. 182—Ex. Ch.

In a lease from B. to A. of an undivided third part of a mine, A. covenanted with B., C. and D., the other owners of the mine, to erect a smelting mill on a waste not demised, and not shewn to belong to B., or to B., C. and D.:—Held, that such covenant ran with the land, inasmuch as it affected the mode of enjoying the demised premises; and passed to the assignee of the reversion of B.'s share of the mine. Sampson v. Easterby, 4 M. & Ry. 422; 9 B. & C. 505; 5 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 291. Affirmed, S. C. nom. Easterby v. Sampson, 6 Bing. 644; 4 M. & P. 601; 1 C. & J. 105.

To continue Channel of River.]—Where a declaration in an action of covenant by the reversioner against A., the assignee of a lease for years (granting licence to B. to continue a channel open through the bank of a navigable river, upon certain conditions), imported that the grantors had absolute possession of the channel, and full power to grant the use of it to B.; and it appeared by the indenture that they were described merely as the persons "who had the greatest proportion or share in the profits of the river; and that they, by virtue of all or any powers and authorities vesting in or enabling them, granted the licence to B., his executors, administrators and assigns" :—Held, that the grantors had no authority to grant such an hereditament, within the meaning of the 32 Hen. 8, c. 34, as would bind the assignee of the grantee. Portmore (Earl) v. Bunn, 3 D. & R. 145; 1 B. & C. 694; 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 196.

Covenants as to Game.]—A lease contained a proviso for re-entry if the lessee, his executors, administrators or assigns, or any tenant, undertenant or occupier of the demised premises should be convicted of any offence against the game laws. The occupier under the lessee was convicted of shooting without a licence, not upon the demised premises, and the assignee of the reversion brought ejectment :—Held, that he could not recover the premises under the proviso for re-entry. Stevens v. Copp, 38 L. J., Ex. 31; L. R. 4 Ex. 20; 19 L. T. 454; 17 W. R. 166.

Held (per Martin, Channell and Cleasby, BB.), that the condition did not touch or concern the land demised so as to run with the reversion. Ib.

C. granted and demised the exclusive right and licence to take and kill game on land, with the use of a cottage, to the defendant for a term; and the defendant covenanted to leave the land at the end of the term as well stocked with game as at the time of the demise. C. assigned his reversion in the land and hereditaments to the plaintiffs; and they brought an action, at the end of the term, against the defendant for a breach of his covenant :—Held, that the demise was not a mere licence, but the grant of an incorporeal hereditament; that the covenant touched the hereditament demised, and by virtue of 32 Hen. 8, c. 34, the assignees of the reversion could sue upon it. Hooper v. Clark, 8 B. & S. 150; 36 L. J., Q. B. 79; L. R. 2 Q. B. 200; 16 L. T. 152; 15 W. R. 347.

See also cases under GAME.

In Restraint of Trade.]—A demise of premises for the purpose of being used as a beershop and public-house contained a covenant by the lessor, for himself and his assigns, not to build, erect or keep, or be interested or concerned in building, erecting or keeping, any house for the sale of spirits or beer within half a mile of the premises :—Held, that the covenant did not run with the land, and could not therefore be sued upon by an assignee of the lease. Thomas v. Hayward, 38 L. J., Ex. 175; L. R. 4 Ex. 311; 20 L. T. 814.

—— In Equity.]—The owner of a freehold house had entered into a covenant with the plaintiff, who was a previous owner, that the building should not be used as a beershop. The house was afterwards let to a tenant from year to year, without express notice of the covenant :—Held, that, although the covenant might not at law run with the land, he was bound by it in equity. Wilson v. Hart, 35 L. J., Ch. 569; L. R. 1 Ch. 463; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 460; 14 L. T. 499; 14 W. R. 748. S. P., Fielden v. Slater, 38 L. J., Ch. 379; L. R. 7 Eq. 523; 20 L. T. 112; 17 W. R. 485.

A covenant by a purchaser of land, not naming his assigns, that no building erected on the land shall be used as a beershop does not run with the land. Ib.

Mutual Covenants between Adjoining Landowners.]—Where there are mutual covenants by owners of land, their heirs and assigns, with the owners of adjoining land, their heirs and assigns, to comply with certain stipulations, the subsequent lessee of one of the owners is entitled to the benefit of the covenants as an assign, and can sue to restrain a breach. Taite v. Gosling, 48 L. J., Ch. 397; 11 Ch. D. 273; 40 L. T. 251; 27 W. R. 394.

Effect of Underletting whole Term.]—If the whole of a term is made over by the lessee, although in the deed he reserves the rent and a power of entry for nonpayment to himself, and not to the original lessor, and although he introduces new covenants, the person to whom it is made over may sue the original lessor or his assignees of the reversion, or be sued by them, as assignee of the term, on the respective covenants in the original lease. Palmer v. Edwards, 1 Dougl. 187, n.

Covenant relating to Land—On whom Binding.]—A covenant relating to but not running with land is binding on an assign with notice. Luker v. Dennis, 47 L. J., Ch. 174; 7 Ch. D. 227; 37 L. T. 827; 26 W. R. 167.

Action by one Tenant in Common—Severance of Reversion after Demise.]—One tenant in common of a reversion is entitled to maintain an action for injury to the reversion without joining his co-tenants as plaintiffs. An action may be maintained by one tenant in common of a reversion for breach of a covenant running with the land, without joinder of his co-tenants in common as plaintiffs, where the severance of the reversion takes place after the demise. Roberts v. Holland, 62 L. J., Q. B. 621; [1893] 1 Q. B. 665; 5 R. 370; 41 W. R. 494.

Evidence as to.]—In an action on a covenant which runs with the land, evidence that the defendant is in as heir will support a declaration charging him as assignee. Derisley v. Custance, 4 Term Rep. 75.

Scots Law—Covenant in Feu Charter against Trade of Publican.]—See Zetland (Earl) v. Hislop, post, col. 1225.

3. To Repair.

a. The Covenant.

i. Obligations under.

Generally.]—On a covenant in a lease of a farm and cottages, to keep and uphold and maintain the premises in good repair, the lessee or assignee is bound to keep up the cottages in situ, and to repair them if ruinous, or so as to replace them, as nearly as might be, in the position in which they were when demised, and is liable, having pulled them down, for their value as they stood, without reference to the result of their removal as regards the general improvement of the farm. Woolcock v. Dew, 1 F. & F. 337.

A. demised to B. for a term of years two messuages; the lease contained a covenant by B. that he would, during the term, keep the premises in repair, and leave them, at the end of the term, in good repair, and in the same state as they were in at the beginning. At the end of the term the messuages were out of repair, and had been converted into a single house. B. held on without a fresh lease, and C. afterwards purchased the reversion of A., and B. continued to hold on under C.:—Held, that B. was not liable, on an implied contract, to put the messuages in such repair and in the same state as they were in at the commencement of the term; that, supposing B. so liable, C. had no right of action for breaches of the contract committed before he purchased the reversion. Johnson v. St. Peter's, Hereford, Churchwardens, 4 A. & E. 520; 4 N. & M. 186; 1 H. & W. 720; 5 L. J., K. B. 116.

Liability of Tenant after Bankruptcy.]—A tenant in possession of premises under an agreement for a lease for twenty-one years, from Michaelmas, 1861 (the lease to contain a covenant to repair and leave in repair) liquidated by arrangement in 1872, and got his discharge in 1880. The trustee took no steps with regard to the premises, which the tenant continued to occupy till Michaelmas, 1882:—Held, that the tenant was bound to leave the premises in the state of repair required by the agreement. Ponsford v. Abbott, 1 Cab. & E. 225.

How far Usual.]—A., who was under an agreement to take the lease of a house, the lease to contain all "usual covenants," agreed to assign all his interest to B., and forwarded him a copy of the agreement for a lease. In answer to inquiries by B., A. stated that the lessee would not have to do substantial repairs:—Held, first, that A.'s statement was a misrepresentation of a matter of law, and not of fact, and that A. was not bound by it. Kendall v. Hill, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 968.

Held, secondly, that B. was bound to repair the house in the event of damage by fire. Ib.

Under a contract for a lease of a mill, to contain "all usual and necessary covenants and provisoes," and particularly a covenant on the part of the lessee to keep the mill in good tenantable repair:—Held, that the lessee was not entitled to have introduced into the covenant the words "damages by fire or tempest only excepted." Sharp v. Milligan, 23 Beav. 419. S. C. nom. Thorpe v. Milligan, 5 W. R. 336.

Running with the Land.]—See ante, col. 1095.

Parol Agreement.]—An action may be maintained by a tenant against his landlord upon a parol agreement by the landlord to put a house in tenantable repair, although a written agreement for a lease made shortly afterwards is silent as to the terms of such parol agreement. Mann v. Nunn, 43 L. J., C. P. 241; 30 L. T. 526.

Inside Painting.]—Under a covenant that the tenant "should and would substantially repair, uphold and maintain" a house, he is bound to keep up the inside painting. Mark v. Noyes, 1 Car. & P. 265.

Extent of Liability under.]—A tenant under a covenant to repair is liable for repairs only, and is not liable for the extra expense of laying a new floor on an improved plan, or the like. Soward v. Leggatt, 7 Car. & P. 613.

—— Of Assignee.]—See ante, cols. 1069 et seq.

Habitable Repair.]—The term "habitable repair" means a state of repair reasonably fit for occupation of an inhabitant. Belcher v. M'Intosh, 8 Car. & P. 720; 2 M. & Rob. 186.

Where a tenant takes premises which are out of repair, and agrees "to put the premises into habitable repair," this implies that he is to put them into a better state than that in which he found them; and, regard being had to the state of the premises at the time of the agreement, and of their situation, and to the class of persons likely to inhabit them, he is to put them into a condition fit for a tenant to inhabit. Ib.

A direction to keep buildings in good repair means, not the state of repair in which they were at the testator's death, but in habitable repair. "Farming buildings" include "farm-houses." Cooke v. Cholmondeley, 4 Drew. 326; 6 W. R. 802.

Tenantable Repair.]—Under an agreement to keep a house in "good tenantable repair," and so leave the same at the expiration of the term, the tenant's obligation is to put and keep the premises in such repair as, having regard to the age, character and locality of the house, would make it reasonably fit for the occupation of a tenant of the class who would be likely to take it. Proudfoot v. Hart, 59 L. J., Q. B. 389; 25 Q. B. D. 42; 63 L. T. 171; 38 W. R. 730; 55 J. P. 20—C. A.

Under an agreement for a lease for five years of a dwelling-house, the tenant was to leave the house in tenantable repair. In an action by the landlord at the end of the tenancy (which continued for seventeen years) for damages, upon the footing that the tenant was liable to paper and paint, and leave the house in the same condition as when he took it:—Held, that the landlord was not entitled to damages on that footing, but that he was entitled to compensation for waste, the tenant being liable to paint sufficiently to preserve the woodwork, but not to do papering or decorative painting. Crawford v. Newton, 36 W. R. 54—C. A.

An agreement to leave a farm as he found it is an agreement to leave it in tenantable repair, if he found it so. Winn v. White, 2 W. Bl. 840.

As to Time when Premises should be Repaired.]—A covenant by the lessee to repair the premises at all times (as often as need or occasion should require), and at farthest within three months after notice, is one entire covenant, the former part of which is qualified by the latter. Horsfall v. Testar, 1 Moore, 89; 7 Taunt. 385.

—— "Forthwith."]—A covenant "forthwith" to put premises into complete repair must receive a reasonable construction, and is not to be limited to any specific time; and therefore it will be for the jury to say, upon the evidence, whether the defendant has done what he reasonably ought in the performance of it. Doe d. Pittman v. Sutton, 9 Car. & P. 706.

For what Period.]—When a lessee covenants to pay the rent reserved and keep the demised premises in repair, he is bound, during the term, to perform both covenants as long as the subject-matter of the demise continues to exist, although it was originally of no value. Meath (Earl) v. Cuthbert, Ir. R. 10 C. L. 395.

Effect of, when subsequent Statute makes prior Use of Premises Unlawful.]—A. demised the basement of a warehouse (other parts of which he had leased to other persons for storing gunpowder) to B., with full and undisturbed right and liberty to store cartridges therein, and covenanted to keep the premises in proper repair and condition, so as to be available during the term for the storing of cartridges, and to keep a proper storekeeper who should receive the cartridges; and he also covenanted for quiet enjoyment. Soon afterwards the Explosives Act, 1875, passed, prohibiting the storing of cartridges in the same building with gunpowder. When the act came into operation, A. at once removed B.'s cartridges out of the premises, in spite of B.'s request that he would not do so. On being subsequently required by B. to store a quantity of cartridges, A. replied that the premises were at B.'s disposal, but that if B. stored cartridges there, he must, to protect himself, give notice to the authorities. In an action by B. to restrain A. from obstructing the storing of his cartridges, and to compel A. to do everything necessary to enable him to deposit his cartridges in the demised premises, and for damages:—Held, that the covenant to keep the premises in proper repair and condition for storing cartridges only referred to their physical condition, and did not impose upon A. an obligation to procure licences to make the storage legal; and that, the subsequent act of parliament having rendered it illegal to store cartridges in the building, B. must bear the loss, as there was nothing in the lease to throw it upon A. Newby v. Sharpe, 47 L. J., Ch. 617; 8 Ch. D. 39; 38 L. T. 583; 26 W. R. 685—C. A.

Held, also, that A.'s removal of B.'s cartridges was only a trespass, and not an eviction. Ib.

Landlord finding Materials—Damages resulting from Non-repair.]—The tenant agreed to keep the buildings in good repair. The landlord by a subsequent clause, agreed, on notice from the tenant, to find materials for repairs, the tenant doing the drawing and labour. A barn requiring repair, the tenant gave the landlord notice to find materials, which he failed to do for more than the allowed period. The barn remained out of repair, in consequence of which a storm damaged the roof, and the rain entered and damaged the tenant's corn:—Held, that the tenant was not entitled to damages for the injury done to his corn, for that his obligation to repair was not conditional on the landlord finding materials, and that the damage arose from his own failure to carry out his part of the contract, and that he ought to have repaired, and claimed the cost of the materials from the landlord. Tucker v. Linger, 51 L. J., Ch. 713; 21 Ch. D. 18; 46 L. T. 198; 30 W. R. 425. S. C., in H. L., 52 L. J., Ch. 941; 8 App. Cas. 508; 49 L. T. 373; 32 W. R. 40; 48 J. P. 4.

Implied Covenant by Landlord to enable Lessee to perform Covenant to Repair.]—There were two houses, Nos. 38 and 40, in B. street. The upper stories of these houses adjoined, but the ground floors were separated by an archway, which was wholly under No. 40, the north wall of No. 38 thus being in its upper part a party wall between No. 38 and the archway. The defendants were freeholders of both houses and the archway. They let No. 38 to A. on lease, taking a covenant to repair, which included party walls. Afterwards, and during the term of the lease to A., they let No. 40 to the plaintiff for eleven years, taking a similar covenant, the archway remaining in their own occupation. In 1874, during the currency of both these leases, that part of the wall which formed the party wall between No. 38 and the archway, and was in the joint occupation of A. and the defendants, bulged and gave way, and the plaintiff's house, which rested on it, became in consequence uninhabitable. The plaintiff then claimed compensation from the defendants on the ground that there was an implied covenant in the lease that the defendants would keep their premises in such condition as to enable him to perform his covenant to repair:—Held, that there was no such covenant, and that he was not entitled to recover. Colebeck or Colbeck v. Girdlers' Co., 45 L. J., Q. B. 225; 1 Q. B. D. 234; 34 L. T. 350; 24 W. R. 577.

In Agreement—Lease never Executed.]—By agreement, reciting a former agreement, for the grant of a lease of copyhold premises to A. for twenty-one years, from the 25th of March, 1820, and that A. had requested, and the plaintiff had agreed, that the defendant should be accepted as tenant, and a lease should be granted to him instead of to A. on the same terms; and that the plaintiff was desirous to let the premises to the defendant so soon as a good licence for that purpose should be granted to him by the lord of the manor, but not before; the plaintiff, in consideration of the covenants and agreements on the part of the defendant, covenanted that he would, so soon as a good licence for that purpose should have been procured to him from the lord, at the defendant's expense, lease the premises to the defendant for all the residue then unexpired of the term of twenty-one years from the 25th of March, 1820; and the defendant covenanted thenceforth yearly, during the remainder of the term, to pay the plaintiff the rent, and also that he would from time to time, during the term to be granted, keep the premises in repair. The defendant entered upon the premises, and occupied them until the expiration of twenty-one years from the 25th of March, 1820:—Held, that he was liable on the covenant for repair, although no lease had ever been made to him pursuant to the agreement, nor any licence obtained from the lord for that purpose. Pistor v. Cator, 9 M. & W. 315; 12 L. J., Ex. 129.

Floors of Warehouse Overloaded by Sub-tenant—Fall of Premises.]—The plaintiffs demised certain floors in a warehouse to the defendant at a rent. He covenanted to repair, maintain and keep the inside of the premises in good and tenantable repair and condition, and to deliver them up at the end of the term, damage by fire, storm or tempest, or other inevitable accident, and reasonable wear and tear only excepted. The plaintiffs covenanted to keep the walls, roof and main timbers of the premises in good and substantial repair and condition. The lease also contained a provision for the suspension of the rent in the event of the premises being burnt down, or damaged by fire, storm or tempest. Sub-lessees of the defendant overloaded a floor with flour, in consequence of which the whole building fell. The plaintiffs rebuilt it, and sued for rent during the time the building was unoccupied, and for damages. The defendant denied liability, and claimed damages from the plaintiffs:—Held (1), that, notwithstanding the fall, the defendant was liable to pay the rent; (2), that there was no implied warranty by the plaintiffs that the building was fit for the purpose for which it was to be used; (3) that, in the absence of notice to them of any damage or want of repair, the plaintiffs were not liable on their express covenant to keep the walls, roof, and main timbers of the building in repair; (4) that, on the authority of Saner v. Bilton (7 Ch. D. 815), the destruction of the building, if caused by using the property demised in what was apparently a reasonable and proper manner, having regard to its character, and to the purposes for which it was intended to be used, was not waste, and therefore the tenant would not be liable to pay damages for it; (5) that as the case was not within the exceptions in his express covenant to repair, he was liable under it to the cost of putting the inside of the floors demised, and the fixtures therein, in good and tenantable repair. Manchester Bonded Warehouse Co. v. Carr, 49 L. J., C. P. 809; 5 C. P. D. 507; 43 L. T. 476; 29 W. R. 354; 45 J. P. 7.

Liability of Landlord.]—A tenant hired of a landlord the ground-floor of a warehouse, the upper part of which was occupied by the landlord himself. The water from the roof was collected by gutters into a box, from which it was discharged by a pipe into the drains. A hole was made in the box by a rat, through which the water entered the warehouse and wetted the tenant's goods. The landlord had used reasonable care in examining and seeing to the security of the gutters and the box. In an action by the tenant against the landlord for the damage so caused:—Held, that he was not liable, either on the ground of an implied contract, or on the ground that he had brought the water to the place from which it entered the warehouse. Carstairs v. Taylor. 40 L. J., Ex. 129; L. R. 6 Ex. 217; 19 W. R. 723.

In a lease of a newly-constructed grain warehouse there was a covenant by the lessor that he would during the term "keep the main walls and main timbers of the warehouse in good repair and condition." The lessee entered under the lease and stored grain in it in a reasonable and proper way. After a short time a beam which supported one of the floors broke, and ultimately the external walls sank and bulged outwards, and the lessor spent a large sum in repairing the premises. In an action by the lessor to recover from the lessee what he had thus expended:—Held, that the lessee had not been guilty of waste. Saner v. Bilton, 47 L. J., Ch. 267; 7 Ch. D. 815; 38 L. T. 281; 26 W. R. 394.

Held, also, that the lessor was bound under his covenant to put the walls and main timbers in good repair, having regard to the class of buildings to which the warehouse belonged, and not merely to the condition of the particular building. Ib.

Held, also, that the covenant implied a licence by the tenant to the landlord to enter upon the premises for a reasonable time for the purpose of executing the necessary repairs. Ib.

Rights of Trustees of Leaseholds where Tenant for Life does not Repair.]—When leasehold houses are vested in trustees on behalf of a tenant for life and remaindermen, it is the duty of the trustees to keep the property free from the risk of forfeiture by a breach of the covenants of the lease, and they are entitled to have the rents applied in keeping the houses in a proper state of repair. The trustees are not bound to be content with the setting apart of a sum of money in the joint names of themselves and the tenant for life as an indemnity against the consequences of a breach of the covenants of the lease, but are entitled to require the covenants to be specifically performed. When a tenant for life of leasehold houses is allowed by the trustees to receive the rents, and the houses are not kept in a proper state of repair according to the covenants of the lease, the court will, at the instance of one of the trustees, appoint a receiver of the rents, for the purpose of enforcing the proper repair of the houses. Fowler, In re, Fowler v. Odell, 16 Ch. D. 723; 44 L. T. 99; 29 W. R. 891.

ii. What Premises.

Buildings Erected and Built, or to be Erected and Built.]—A lessor, in 1779, demised for a term of ninety-nine years, from the 29th of September, 1778, premises described as "all that piece or parcel of land situate on the north side of East Lane, in Walworth, abutting south on the said lane, north, &c., and which said piece or parcel of land hereby intended to be demised, contains in width, &c., together with the messuage or tenement, and all other erections and buildings erected and built, or which may at any time during the time hereby intended to be granted be erected and built, on the said piece or parcel of land or any part thereof." The description in the parcels then continued as follows: "And also all that one acre of land lying at the back of the garden belonging to the said messuage as the same is now fenced in and inclosed; which said messuage and garden is in the occupation of H. P., and the said acre of land in the occupation of the said lessee"; and the lessee covenanted that he, his heirs, administrators, and assigns, should and would "repair the said messuage or tenement and erections and buildings erected and built, or to be erected and built, upon the said ground demised." At the date of the lease, in 1779, the only building on any part of the demised land was the messuage or tenement mentioned in the first portion of the parcels. At the expiration of the term in 1877, not only the site of the original messuage and garden but also the one-acre field lying behind was covered with numerous small houses, all of which were out of repair:—Held, that the covenant to repair extended to the whole of the demised land and the buildings thereon erected, and that the defendants were liable for the whole claim. Hudson v. Williams, 39 L. T. 632.

A covenant in a building and repairing lease to leave the demised premises, with all new erections, well repaired, extends to the new erections only. Lant v. Norris, 1 Burr. 287.

Under a lease of a farm, the tenant was bound to keep in repair the buildings to be erected thereon during the term; the tenant, with the permission of the landlord, who was lord of the manor, built a house on the waste adjoining the farm, and he enjoyed it with the farm:—Held, that the tenant was also under an obligation to keep the house in repair. White v. Wakley, 26 Beav. 17; 28 L. J., Ch. 77; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 988; 6 W. R. 791.

A lessor demised "three tenements or dwelling-houses, and a field or plot of ground adjoining thereto," and the lessee covenanted "well and sufficiently to repair, sustain, and keep the tenements or dwelling-houses, field or plot of ground and premises, and every part thereof, as well in houses, buildings, walls, hedges, ditches, fences, gates, as in all other needful and necessary reparations whatsoever, when and as often as occasion shall require during the term, and at the end or sooner determination thereof the premises so well and sufficiently repaired into the hands and possession of the lessor peaceably to leave and yield up" :—Held, that the covenant did not extend to houses afterwards built in the field. Cornish v. Cleife, 3 H. & C. 446 ; 34 L. J., Ex. 19 ; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 181 ; 11 L. T. 606 ; 13 W. R. 389.

Where the lessee covenanted to build and to repair both the houses built and to be built, and for delivering up at the end of the term. For forty-six years of the lease the lessor received the rent and omitted to enforce the covenant to build, &c. Upon a sale of the terms :—Held (1). that the covenant for delivering up, &c., extended to the additional houses covenanted to be built, and not merely to those already built at the date of the lease. (2) That the title was bad, although the purchaser might hold on to the end of the term, and escape the covenant by assignment to a pauper; and (3) that the purchaser was not bound to accept either compensation or indemnity. Nouaille v. Flight, 7 Beav. 521 ; 13 L. J., Ch. 414 ; 8 Jur. 838.

Fittings in Coal-mine.]—Where a lessee of a coal-mine covenanted at the end of the term to yield up the works and mines, and all ways and roads in such good repair, order and condition, so that the works might be continued and carried on by the lessor :—Held, that such covenant did not include wooden sleepers, or iron tram-plates fastened to such wooden sleepers, used for the purpose of a railway. Beaufort (Duke) v. Bates, 3 De G. F. & J. 381 ; 31 L. J., Ch. 481 ; 6 L. T. 82 ; 10 W. R. 200.

Liability to repair Mill-wheel.]—An agreement for the letting of a farm and mill provided that the tenant "should keep and leave the messuages and buildings in good and substantial repair," &c. In an action by the landlord to recover damages for non-repair of the mill-wheel :—Held, that the tenant was liable. Openshaw v. Evans, 50 L. T. 156.

Rights of Tenant as to Repair of External Wall of Dwelling.]—A lessor of a house, situate in a borough, covenanted with the lessee to repair and keep in repair all the external parts of the demised premises, except the glass and lead of the windows. The corporation, acting under a local statute passed after the demise, pulled down an adjoining house, and thereby left the wall of the demised house, which had previously divided the two, exposed and without support ; the wall thereupon gave way, and the house became uninhabitable. The lessee immediately called upon the lessor to repair, which he, six weeks after the sinking of the wall, finally refused to do. On this the lessee, who had removed to other premises, pulled down and began to rebuild the wall, and, before the work was finished, sued the lessor upon his covenant :—Held, that the wall, even before the neighbouring house had been removed, was an external part of the demised premises ; the external parts of premises being those which form the inclosure of them, and beyond which no part of them extends. Green v. Eales, 2 Q. B. 225 ; 1 G. & D. 408 ; 11 L. J., Q. B. 63 ; 6 Jur. 436.

Held, also, that the lessee was liable on his covenant, though the injury to the wall was done in the first instance by the corporation, and the local statute had a special clause for the recovery of compensation from them in case of such injuries ; for the lessor ought to have set about the repair in time to prevent the mischief which ensued. Ib.

In such an action the lessee, after such refusal, having rebuilt an external wall, is entitled to recover the costs thereof, the jury having found that this was the proper mode of restoring it. Ib.

He may also recover the price of damage done to plate-glass and fixtures in consequence of the sinking of the wall ; but the lessee cannot recover the rent paid by him for the occupation of other premises during the progress of the repairs, though, during that time, the demised premises were not safely inhabitable. Ib.

iii. Conditional or Absolute Covenants.

Conditional.]—The plaintiff and defendants agreed, the plaintiff to let and the defendants to take a messuage, barn, stable, and outbuildings, and the defendants agreed to keep in repair the messuage, buildings, and premises, the same being first put into repair by the plaintiff. In an action for non-repair :—Held, first, that the repair by the plaintiff was a condition precedent to the obligation on the defendants to keep in repair. Neale v. Radcliffe, 15 Q. B. 916 ; 20 L. J., Q. B. 130 ; 15 Jur. 166.

Held, secondly, that on this contract the condition precedent could not be decided, and that the plaintiff could not recover for non-repair of any part of the premises without having first repaired the whole. Ib.

A declaration stated that the plaintiff demised premises to the defendant, subject to a covenant that he should expend 100*l.* in substantial improvements, additions, and repairs, under the direction and with the approbation of some competent surveyor, to be named by the plaintiff. Breach, that the defendant would not expend 100*l.* in substantial improvements, additions, and repairs, although the plaintiff was always ready and willing to appoint a competent surveyor :—Held, that the appointment of a surveyor was a condition precedent to the defendant's liability to expend 100*l.*, and that the declaration was bad on special demurrer. Coombe v. Greene, 2 D. (N.S.) 1023 ; 10 M. & W. 480 ; 12 L. J., Ex. 291.

Agreement for a lease for five years, from the 1st April, 1840, the landlord undertaking to erect, by that time, a new warehouse on part of the ground to be demised, and to put the old warehouse in repair, the amount of rent to be determined with reference to the amount of the landlord's expenditure on the buildings. The new building was not erected, nor the old warehouse repaired, on the 1st April ; but no objection was made by the intended lessee, who then occupied part of the premises under a former agreement, and shortly afterwards the whole premises were destroyed by fire :—Held, upon a bill filed in equity by the landlord for specific performance of the agreement, and for the defendant to rebuild the premises, and to accept a lease, that it was a condition precedent, that the premises should be put in repair before the lease was granted, and that, as the landlord had not performed his engagement within the time limited, the contract could not be enforced in equity. Counter v. Macpherson, 5 Moore, P. C. 83.

Absolute.]—In a lease for lives of a manor and demesnes, the lessee covenanted to repair and keep the premises in all needful and necessary reparations, having or taking in upon the demised premises sufficient housebote for the doing thereof, without committing waste:—Held, that the covenant was an absolute, and not a conditional, covenant to repair, with a licence to take timber for housebote. Bristol (Dean) v. Jones, 1 El. & El. 484; 28 L. J., Q. B. 201; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 956; 7 W. R. 307.

A lease was in the following forms: C. covenants with J. that C. will, during the continuance of the term, at his own costs and charges, in all things well and sufficiently repair and glaze the windows of the messuage, and also the hedges, ditches, mounds, and fences of and belonging to the premises, and all fixtures, additions thereto, during the term, in and by, and with all and all manner of needful and necessary reparations, cleansings, and amendments, when and as often as occasion shall require, the farmhouse and buildings being previously put and kept in repair by J.:—Held, that these latter words raised an absolute covenant on the part of J. to put farmhouse and buildings in repair. Connoch v. Jones, 3 Ex. 233; 18 L. J., Ex. 204.

iv. Notice.

To Tenant.]—A lease, containing a covenant by the lessee to repair the premises at all times (as often as need or occasion should require), "and at farthest within three months after notice," is one entire covenant, the former part of which is qualified by the latter. Horsfall v. Testar, 1 Moore, 89; 7 Taunt. 385.

In ejectment for a forfeiture of a lease, containing the usual clause of re-entry, and a covenant generally to repair, with a further covenant, within three months after notice, to repair the defects pointed out in a notice, the forfeiture is complete before the expiration of the three months. Roe d. Goatly v. Paine, 2 Camp. 520.

A general covenant to repair, and further to repair within three months after notice from the lessor, are separate and independent covenants, and a right of re-entry attaches for a breach of the former, though no notice is given under the latter. Baylis v. Le Gros, 4 C. B. (N.S.) 537; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 513.

Covenants to repair after notice considered as distinct covenants. Gregory v. Wilson, 9 Hare, 690; 16 Jur. 304.

Waiver—Acceptance of Rent.] — A notice, requiring a tenant to remedy a breach of covenant by repairing premises within three months expired on February 1st, 1884. No repairs were then done, and on February 2nd, the rent due at Christmas, 1883, was accepted:—Held, that the acceptance of the rent was no waiver of the breach of covenant. Cronin v. Rogers, 1 Cab. & E. 348.

Suspension of—Negotiation for Purchase of Lessee's Interest.]—When a notice to repair has been given, and the lessee makes an offer to sell his interest in the premises, and a negotiation takes place on that offer, the effect of that offer and the negotiation is to suspend the notice till the negotiation has been terminated, from which event alone the date of the notice can properly be calculated. Equity will relieve against an ejectment founded on the original notice. Hughes v. Metropolitan Ry., 46 L. J., C. P. 583; 2 App. Cas. 439; 36 L. T. 932; 25 W. R. 680—H. L. (E.)

How far a Waiver to Forfeiture.] — An indenture of lease, with a clause for re-entry, contained a general covenant on the part of the lessee to keep the premises demised in repair, and a further covenant that he would, within three months after notice being given to him by the landlord, repair all defects specified in the notice. The premises demised being out of repair the landlord gave the lessee notice to repair, in accordance with the covenants of the lease. Before the expiration of three months, ejectment was brought:—Held, that the notice was not a waiver of the forfeiture incurred by the breach of the general covenant to repair, and that the action was maintainable. Few v. Perkins, 36 L. J., Ex. 54; L. R. 2 Ex. 92; 16 L. T. 62; 15 W. R. 713.

To Landlord.]—Under a covenant by a lessor "to keep the main walls, main timbers, and roofs of the demised premises in good repair during the continuance of the demise," the lessor cannot be sued for any non-repair, unless he has had notice from the lessee of the want of repair. Makin v. Watkinson, 40 L. J., Ex. 33; L. R. 6 Ex. 25; 23 L. T. 592; 19 W. R. 286.

Necessity for.]—In an action by a tenant against a landlord for breach of an agreement to keep drains in repair, the jury found that neither party knew of the defective condition of the drains before the damage occurred, and that the plaintiff had not, and the defendant had, the means of knowing:—Held, that the defendant was not liable. Hugall v. McKean, 53 L. T. 94; 33 W. R. 588—C. A. Affirming 1 Cab. & E. 391.

v. Upon whom binding.

Demise to Two as Tenants in Common.]—Premises were demised to G. and A., "their executors, administrators, and assigns," habendum to "the said G. and A., their executors, administrators, and assigns, as tenants in common and not as joint tenants," at a single yearly rent; and G. and A. covenanted "for themselves, their executors, administrators, and assigns that they the said G. and A., or some or one of them, their executors, administrators, or assigns," would pay the said yearly rent and keep the premises in repair. G. having died during the term, the lessor sued A. and the executors of G. for breaches of covenant occurring after G.'s death:—Held, that the covenants were in form joint and not several, and that G.'s executors were not liable. Whyte v. Tyndall, 57 L. J., P. C. 114; 13 App. Cas. 263; 58 L. T. 741; 52 J. P. 675—H. L. (Ir.)

Lessee's Executors after Entry.]—Semble, that an executor of a lessee cannot, after entering, limit his liability under the testator's covenant to repair. Rendall v. Andreæ, 61 L. J., Q. B. 630.

Assignee of Lease.]—See ante, cols. 1072–1074.

Under-lessee—Breach by his Sub-lessee.]—A declaration by the assignee of part of the reversion, for non-repair of premises, stated that G. held the premises under a lease for ninety-nine years, which expired on the 25th December, 1849; that during the time he so held the premises he granted an under-lease to V. and S. for twenty-five years and a quarter from the 25th December, 1823, by which V. and S. jointly and severally covenanted with G. that they would during the term repair, and at the end of the term deliver them up in repair to G.; that during the under-lease to V. and S., G. granted his reversion to S. and the plaintiffs, whereupon the term in the under-lease was, as to one undivided sixth part, merged in the reversion, and S. and the plaintiffs became, as joint tenants, possessed of the reversion of three undivided sixth parts of the premises, and the plaintiffs became, as joint tenants, possessed of the reversion of two other undivided sixth parts; that V. afterwards assigned to S. his interest in the under-lease granted to him and S., whereupon the term as to one undivided sixth part, merged in the reversion in the three sixth parts, whereof S. and the plaintiffs were possessed, and that S. died before the determination of the under-lease, and alleged as a breach the non-performance by V. of the covenant to repair after S.'s death, and to leave in repair. Plea, that after G. demised to S. and V., and before the assignment to S. by V., V. and S. demised the premises to T. for twenty-three years from the 25th June, 1825, with covenants by T. to keep and leave in repair; the death of T., and that L. the original lessor sued the plaintiffs for non-repair, and that such action was settled by an agreement, without the privity or consent of V., whereby the representatives of T. agreed to pay 300*l.* and to give up possession to L., and the plaintiffs agreed to pay S. 200*l.*, and to deliver up the lease to a third person in trust for L.; but to be produced for the purpose of supporting any claims against V. relating to the premises, and that when such claims should have been satisfied, the plaintiffs would concur in surrendering their estate or interest in the lease, and that in pursuance of the agreement, possession was delivered to L., and that thereby V. had been prevented from performing his covenant:—Held, that the plea was bad, inasmuch as the agreement and the delivery of possession to L. did not operate as a surrender of all the plaintiff's interest, and was not so intended to operate; and the defendant not being a party to the agreement might, at the expiration of the underlease to T., have entered for the residue of the term granted to him and S., and performed his covenant to repair. Badeley v. Vigurs, 4 El. & Bl. 71; 2 C. L. R. 1627; 23 L. J., Q. B. 377; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 159.

—— Where Lessee Bound.]—Lessee, where there is a covenant by him to repair, makes an underlease to J. S., who is in possession. Under-lessee not liable to this covenant in law, nor bound by it in equity, unless the first lessee is insolvent. Goddard v. Keate, 1 Vern. 87.

Trustees or Beneficiaries.]—Trustees of a will held a lease upon trust for successive life tenants with remainders over, and the residuary personal estate upon trust out of the income to pay all the costs, charges and expenses of executing the trusts of the will:—Held, that they and not the life tenants were the persons liable to observe the covenants and to pay the rent and outgoings which on the true construction of the will, should be paid by them out of the income. Baring, In re, Jeune v. Baring, 62 L. J., Ch. 50; [1893] 1 Ch. 61; 3 R. 37; 67 L. T. 702; 41 W. R. 87.

Stranger—Possession for Twenty Years—Rent paid to Lessor.]—The effect of s. 34 of the Real Property Limitation Act (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27) is merely to extinguish the title of the prior rightful owner, and not to transfer that title to the person in possession. The plaintiff granted a lease of certain premises, the lease containing the usual covenant by the lessee and his assigns to repair. The defendant took possession during the term without any assignment from the lessee, and remained in possession for more than twenty years, paying the rent to the plaintiff. In an action at the expiration of the term for breach of the covenant to repair:—Held, that the defendant was not liable on the covenants in the lease. Tichborne v. Weir, 4 R. 26; 67 L. T. 735—C. A.

vi. Performance and Satisfaction of Covenant.

What Sufficient.] — A general covenant to repair is satisfied by the lessee keeping the premises in substantial repair: a literal performance of the contract is not to be required. Harris v. Jones, 1 M. & Rob. 173.

A lessee covenanted to preserve and keep, and at the end of the term leave the demised premises in good and tenantable repair:—Held, that this covenant would be satisfied by leaving the premises in such a state as, regard being had to the age of the building at the time of the demise, might be considered tenantable. Stanley v. Towgood, 3 Scott, 313; 3 Bing. (N.C.) 4; 2 Hodges, 132; 6 L. J., C. P. 129.

The lessee during the term erected a lean-to with a roof so ill constructed that it did not exclude the weather, and so left it at the end of the term:—Held, that it was a breach of his covenant to repair. Ib.

A lessee covenanted, within the two first years of the term, to put premises in good and sufficient repair, and at all times during the term to repair, pave, scour, cleanse, empty, and keep the messuages, ground, and other the premises, when, where, and as often as need should require; and within the first fifty years of the term to take down four messuages, as occasion might require, and in the place thereof erect upon the premises four other good and substantial brick messuages:—Held, that, if within the fifty years the houses should be so repaired as to make them completely and substantially as good as new houses, the covenant would be satisfied without taking down the old houses. Evelyn v. Raddish, 7 Taunt. 411.

Under a covenant by a farm tenant "well and substantially to repair, and keep in good substantial repair, and so well and substantially repaired" to yield up at the end of the term, the tenant is bound to give up the premises in as good a state of repair as when he took possession, and they must be inferred to have been then in a tenantable state. Brown v. Trumper, 26 Beav. 11.

When Premises old.]—Where a very old house is demised, with the usual covenants to repair, it is not meant that the house should be restored in an improved state, or that the consequences of the elements should be averted; but the tenant has the duty of keeping the house in the state in which it was at the time of the demise, by the timely expenditure of money and care. Gutteridge v. Munyard, 7 Car. & P. 129; 1 M. & Rob. 334.

A. on becoming tenant to B. of a farm and outbuildings, agreed to keep the same, and at the expiration of the tenancy to deliver up the same, in good repair, order and condition. Breach, that he did not deliver up the same in good repair, order and condition:—Held, that, on this contract to keep the premises in good repair, the tenant was bound to put them in that condition, and that the tenant was not justified in keeping them in bad repair because he found them in that condition; but the extent of that repair was to be measured by their age and class. Payne v. Haine, 16 M. & W. 541; 16 L. J., Ex. 130.

On a covenant, as often as necessary, well and sufficiently to repair, uphold, sustain, paint, glaze, cleanse, and scour, and keep and leave the premises in such repair, reasonable wear and tear excepted, the tenant, if he has repaired within a reasonable time before leaving, is only bound, in addition to the repair of actual dilapidations, to clean the old paint, &c., and not to repaint, &c. Scales v. Lawrence, 2 F. & F. 289.

In an action on a covenant to keep premises in repair during the tenancy, the jury may take into consideration the state of repairs at the commencement of the demise, in order to assess the damages for which the defendant is liable. Burdett v. Withers, 2 N. & P. 122; 7 A. & E. 136; W. W. & D. 444; 6 L. J., K. B. 219; 1 Jur. 514.

So it is competent to the defendant to shew the general state and condition of the premises at the time of the demise, but not to go into matters of detail. Young v. Mantz, 6 Scott, 277; 1 Arn. 198; 4 Bing. (N.C.) 451; 7 L. J., C. P. 204.

In determining whether there has been a breach of a covenant to repair, regard must be had to the age and character of the premises at the date of the demise; and if the premises through their own inherent defects fall in the course of the tenancy into a particular condition, the results of their being in that condition are not breaches of a covenant to repair, however wide that covenant may be. Lister v. Lane, 62 L. J., Q. B. 583; [1893] 2 Q. B. 212; 4 R. 474; 69 L. T. 176; 41 W. R. 626; 57 J. P. 725—C. A.

Where Tenant's Agent has "improperly" Repaired.]—A breach of covenant to repair is not excused, because the covenantor has bonâ fide employed persons to repair. If the covenantor's agent has, in fact, not repaired, the breach is not such as equity will relieve against. Nokes v. Gibbon, 3 Drew. 681; 26 L. J., Ch. 433; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 726; 5 W. R. 400.

A breach of a covenant to make a roadway in front of a particular house is not to be relieved against in equity, because if made before the roadway in front of adjacent houses was made, it would be continually cut up and useless. Ib.

vii. What constitutes a Breach.

Neglecting to cleanse Ornamental Water.]—By an agreement of demise of a house and grounds, the landlord undertook to keep the premises in repair, and to pay all rates, taxes and charges which might be payable in respect of the premises. In the grounds was a piece of ornamental water, in which during the tenancy an accumulation of mud caused at one spot a public nuisance, and at another spot a nuisance to the tenant, and elsewhere choked up the stream. The tenant, being summoned under the Nuisances Removal Act, 1855, in respect of the public nuisance, employed a contractor to clear out the whole stream to the satisfaction of the inspector of nuisances. Afterwards, at the hearing of the summons, an order was made on him to abate the public nuisance. The whole of the mud was cleared out under the contract, that part which constituted the public nuisance being removed partly before and partly after the date of the order:—Held, first, that the landlord was not, under his agreement to repair, bound to cleanse the ornamental water. Bird v. Elwes. 37 L. J., Ex. 91; L. R. 3 Ex. 255; 18 L. T. 727; 16 W. R. 1120.

Held, secondly, that no charge on the premises in respect of any part of the work done had been created by the proceedings under the Nuisances Removal Act, 1855. Ib.

Wall of Warehouse insufficient to support Goods stored.]—A., in November, 1865, agreed with B. as follows: "I agree to let to you, for the term of five years, the whole of the warehouse and cellars, now occupied by P. & Co., for the annual rent of 600*l.*, the building to be put by me into good tenantable repair." Repairs were thereupon done by A., who knew that the premises were to be used by B. in his business of a silk and linen merchant and warehouseman; and in January, 1866, B., who had previously inspected the premises, entered into possession, making no complaint of their condition or want of repair. The building had originally been a dwelling-house, and had been converted into a warehouse by the addition of two storeys, without strengthening the outer wall, which was only fourteen inches thick, and as a warehouse it had been occupied by P. & Co. By reason of the insufficient thickness of the outer wall, and the weight of the linen stored by B. on the premises, the outer wall began to give way some time between March and June, and in October, 1866, a portion of it fell, rendering it necessary to pull down and rebuild the whole wall, which was done by A., B. being for some time deprived of the use of the premises, and otherwise sustaining damage thereby. In an action by him to recover damages for an alleged breach of agreement to put the premises into good tenantable repair:—Held, that A.'s contract was clearly performed at the time B. took possession of the premises, and made no complaint of their state of repair; that there was no contract on his part to put them into good tenantable repair for any particular or specified purpose; and that if B. required any extra support for his goods he should have called A.'s attention thereto whilst the repairs were going on. McClure v. Little, 19 L. T. 287.

Opening Doors or Windows in Wall.]—If a doorway is broken through the wall of a demised house into an adjoining house, and kept open for a long space of time, it amounts to a breach of covenant to repair. Doe d. Vickery v. Jackson, 2 Stark. 293.

Enlargement of windows, opening external doors, and taking down partitions, are no breach of a covenant to repair and to keep in repair a dwelling-house, together with all such buildings, improvements or additions as should be erected, set up, or made by the lessee. Doe d. Dalton v.

Jones, 1 N. & M. 6; 4 B. & Ad. 126; 2 L. J., K. B. 11.

On a covenant to keep premises in repair, it is a breach to pull them down, either wholly or partially, even so far as to open doors in a wall; and it is a breach for which the lessor may sue for and recover substantial damages during the term. Nor is it any equitable defence that it was done with the consent and acquiescence of the lessor, unless it appears that it was with his previous consent. Gauge v. Lockwood, 2 F. & F. 115. See Bargnis v. Edwards, 2 F. & F. 111.

Pulling down Premises.]—A covenant by a lessee, that he will, during the term, repair, uphold, support, and sustain and maintain the brick walls to the demised premises belonging, is broken, if the lessee, during the term, pull down a brick wall which divides the courtyard at the front of the house from another yard at the side of the house. Doe d. Wetherell v. Bird, 6 Car. & P. 195.

Covenant to repair at the end of the term and surrender buildings in good condition does not preclude an injunction against pulling them down and carrying away the materials just before the end of the term. London Corporation v. Hedger, 18 Ves. 355.

An under-lessee of certain premises for an unexpired term of fifty years, under a covenant to repair and keep up the demised premises, was required by a local board to treat with them for the purchase of a strip of land on which the buildings stood. The under-lessee proposed to pull down the demised premises and re-erect them upon plans sanctioned by the local board:—Held, that there being no negative covenant in the lease, the lessee was entitled to pull down and re-erect the premises. McIntosh and Pontypridd Improvements Co., In re, 61 L. J., Q. B. 164. And see Doherty v. Allman, 3 App. Cas. 709; 39 L. T. 129; 26 W. R. 513—H. L. (Ir.), post, col. 1275.

A tenant was bound by his lease to keep and leave the houses in tenantable condition, subject to a provision that the timber in the sub-tenants' houses should be valued at the commencement and end of the lease; and that the out-going tenant should pay, or receive from the in-coming tenant the difference in value at those respective times. The lease further provided that if the tenant should build an additional steading during the lease, the value thereof at the expiration of the lease should be allowed to him. The tenant pulled down the old buildings and built a new steading:—Held, that he was not authorised to pull down the old buildings without rebuilding or substituting others in their place; that the knowledge of such unauthorised acts without interference by the landlord did not bind him by acquiescence; but that the tenant was entitled to the value of so much of the new steading as ought to be considered as an additional steading, and not a substitution for the old buildings, subject to the provision in the lease as to the timber in the sub-tenants' houses. Held, also that the tenant was entitled to an allowance for the new buildings, so far as consistent with the former finding, according to a valuation at the time of removal, and not according to actual expenditure. Sinclair v. Gordon, 3 Bligh, 21.

Removing Fixtures.]—In 1804 owners of the fee-simple of certain lands agreed, by indented articles, to demise them for lives renewable for ever, and the intended lessees agreed to pull down a mill on the premises, and to build a new one, and covenanted to keep the mill and works in constant working order, repair, and condition. In 1823 a lease was executed in pursuance of this agreement, and the lessee thereby covenanted to preserve and keep the premises, and all buildings and improvements, then or thereafter to be made thereon, in good order and repair; to keep the mills, works and machinery therein in working order, repair and condition; to yield up the premises, and all buildings and improvements in like good order, repair and condition, and to keep the mill and works thereto belonging, or in anywise appertaining, in constant working order and repair. The lease was renewed in 1829, the renewal containing similar covenants by the tenant. In 1834 an under-lease, at a profit rent, was made of the mill and premises for 999 years, which disclosed the existence of a head lease. In 1862 S. & Co., became assignees of the sub-lease, and having entered into possession, took out the old millstones, and erected a quantity of new machinery of an improved description in the mill. In 1865 a fee-farm grant was made by the plaintiff, as owner of the reversion, to the owner of the superior lease, with covenants by the grantee similar to the lessee's covenants in the original lease and renewal, and also to keep the mill and works in constant working order, repair and condition. In 1874 an agreement was executed between the head landlord and S. & Co., reciting the original lease, its renewal, the under-lease, and the derivative title to it, and giving S. & Co. liberty to erect an engine-house and shed, in pursuance of which the defendants erected a steam-engine and boiler, and buildings for the same. In 1886 S. & Co. sold and proceeded to remove the new machinery placed by them in the mill:—Held, that by the terms of the contract of tenancy, and having regard to the covenants in the several instruments constituting their title, and of which they had notice, the defendants were only precluded from removing such fixtures and other things as were essential to or were included in the subject-matter of demise, originally or by substitution; but that such contract and covenants did not bind trade or tenants' fixtures as such, and that there should be excluded from the injunction all trade fixtures which had been introduced as scientific improvements to fulfil functions previously performed by manual labour or movable utensils. Cosby v. Shaw, 23 L. R., Ir. 181—C. A.

The mere removal and sale by a tenant, during the term, of fixtures which he does not immediately replace, but which can be replaced before the end of the term, is not in itself a breach of his covenant to repair and uphold the demised premises, and to deliver up the same at the end of the term, together with all things affixed thereto. Doe d. Burrell v. Davis, 10 C. B. 821; 15 Jur. 155.

A lessee of a mill and steam-engine covenanted to repair, reasonable wear and tear excepted. During the lease he added both to the height and extent of the mill, and removed all the works of the engine, except the fly-wheel, fly-wheel shaft, and boiler, and attached to them a new engine of greater power. Injunction granted to restrain the assignees of the lessee, who had become bankrupt, from removing the parts of the new building, and the new parts of the engine, subject to an action to be brought, by the lessors, to try the rights. Sunderland v. Newton, 3 Sim. 450. See Kimpton v. Eve, 2 Ves. & B. 349; 13 R. R. 116.

viii. When Right of Action accrues.

Commission of Breach—Before Expiration of Term.]—Upon a covenant to repair and keep in repair during the continuance of a term, an action may be maintained for breaches committed before the time has expired. Luxmore v. Robson, 1 B. & Ald. 584; 19 R. R. 396.

—— Before Execution of Lease.]—In an action for a breach of a covenant for repair in a lease, a tenant is not liable for acts done before the time of the execution of the lease, although the habendum of the lease states the premises to be held from a day prior to its execution. Shaw v. Kay, 1 Ex. 412; 17 L. J., Ex. 17.

Notice Served by wrong Person.]—A covenant by an under-lessee to repair after notice is not broken by a non-compliance with a notice to repair served upon the premises by the superior landlord as such landlord. Williams v. Williams, 43 L. J., C. P. 382; L. R. 9 C. P. 659; 30 L. T. 638; 22 W. R. 706.

ix. Parties entitled to Sue.

Lessor.]—Where a lease of an undivided third part of mines contained a recital of an agreement by the lessee with the lessor and the owners of the other two-thirds, for pulling down an old smelting mill, and building another of larger dimensions upon a waste near the mines, and also a covenant to keep such new mill in repair, and so leave it at the expiration of the term, but did not contain a covenant to build it:—Held, that such a covenant was to be implied: and that the lessor of the one-third might sue upon it in respect of his interest. Sampson v. Easterby, 4 M. & Ry. 422; 9 B. & C. 505; 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 291. S. C., nom. Easterby v. Sampson, 6 Bing. 644; 4 M. & P. 601; 1 C. & J. 105.

—— After assigning Reversion.]—But where the demise is not under seal, the lessor may, notwithstanding he has assigned his reversion, sue the lessee on his contract to repair for a breach committed during the tenancy, but subsequently to such assignment. Bickford v. Parson, 5 C. B. 921; 17 L. J., C. P. 192; 12 Jur. 377.

Executor of Tenant for Life.]—The executor of a tenant for life may recover for the breach of a covenant to repair, committed by the lessee of the testator in his lifetime, without averring a damage to his personal estate. Ricketts v. Weaver, 12 M. & W. 718; 13 L. J., Ex. 195.

A tenant for life of an estate for 1,000 years demised from year to year, with six months' notice to quit, the lessee covenanting to repair. After the death of the tenant for life, the co-executor assigned the reversion of the estate for 1,000 years:—Held, that the executor for the tenant for life was properly joined as a plaintiff. Wyatt v. Cole, 36 L. T. 613.

Assignee of Reversion.]—The 32 Hen. 8, c. 34, applies to leases only: and where a lease is not under seal the assignee of the reversion cannot maintain an action against the lessee for breach of his contract with the assignor to repair. Standen v. Chrismas, 10 Q. B. 135; 16 L. J., Q. B. 265; 11 Jur. 694.

A declaration by the assignee of part of the reversion, for non-repair of leasehold premises, stated that G. held the premises under a lease for ninety-nine years, which expired on the 25th December, 1849; that during the time he so held the premises he granted an under-lease to V. and S. for twenty-five years and a quarter from the 25th December, 1823, by which under-lease V. and S. jointly and severally covenanted with G. that they would during the term repair, and at the end of the term deliver the premises up in repair to G.; that during the continuance of the under-lease to V. and S., G. granted his reversion in the premises to S. and the plaintiffs; whereupon the term in the under-lease was as to one undivided sixth part, merged in the reversion, and S. and the plaintiffs became, as joint tenants, possessed of the reversion of three undivided sixth parts of the premises, and the plaintiffs became, as joint tenants, possessed of the reversion of two other undivided sixth parts of the premises; that V. afterwards assigned to S. his interest in the under-lease granted to him and S.; whereupon the term as to one undivided sixth part merged in the reversion in the three sixth parts whereof S. and the plaintiffs were possessed, and the plaintiffs became, as joint tenants, possessed of the reversion of two of the last-mentioned three sixth parts; that S. died before the determination of the underlease; and alleged as a breach the non-performance by V. of the covenant to repair after S.'s death, and to leave in repair:—Held, that the declaration was good, inasmuch as the whole of the reversion which remained was vested in the plaintiffs alone, in respect of which they were entitled to sue on the covenant to repair, as assignees, under 32 Hen. 8, c. 34, notwithstanding the partial merger of the term. Badeley v. Vigurs, 4 El. & Bl. 71; 2 C. L. R. 1627; 23 L. J., Q. B. 377; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 159.

Held, also, that under the conveyance by G. to S., and the plaintiffs, one-third of the reversion was at once destroyed by coalescing with half the interest under the lease which was in S., and that consequently S. never took as reversioner; and there never was any suspension of the right of action by reason of S. being a party to sue and be sued. Ib.

Held, also, that even if S. took and remained interested in one-sixth of the reversion, and that one sixth was destroyed by the assignment to him by V., still the right of action for not leaving in repair, which arose only at the termination of the lease, never accrued to S., and therefore was never suspended. Ib.

Held, also, that the plaintiffs might recover on the privity of contract transferred by 32 Hen. 8, c. 34, although there were an apportionment of the covenant to repair; but that in this case there was no such apportionment, as the plaintiffs had the whole existing reversion, and were injured if the whole of the premises were not kept in repair. Ib.

Held, also, that the plaintiffs might recover on the privity of contract transferred by the 32 Hen. 8, c. 34, where the entire interest in the covenant had not passed to them. Ib.

A declaration stated that F. and G. being seised of an estate in fee demised by indenture to the defendant and his assigns leave to dig for clay therein, and make such adits, and erect sheds and buildings as he should think necessary for working the clay, and to hold the same for twenty-one years; that the defendant covenanted with F. and G., their heirs and assigns, to pay compensation to them, their heirs and assigns, for all such lands within the limits thereof as he might injure by such digging, the amount in case of difference to be settled by arbitration, and that the defendant would keep all houses and sheds in good repair; that the defendant entered and got the clay, when F. and G., by indenture, granted and conveyed the lands to the plaintiff, his heirs and assigns for ever, who thereby became seised in fee, and that the interest of the defendant was determined by a notice to quit. First breach, that the defendant, by digging for clay after the plaintiff so became seised, did injure and destroy part of the land for which the plaintiff was entitled to a compensation; and although he appointed an arbitrator to ascertain the amount, yet the defendant refused to appoint one. Second breach, that the defendant did not keep the works in repair:—Held, that the claim to damages, in respect of the injury to the land being merely a chose in action, did not pass to the plaintiff by the conveyance of the land to him, and that the agreement as to ascertaining the amount of injury was merely incidental, collateral, and annexed to the substantial matter, and was to be exercised by the person who was the owner of the land at the time the injury was done, and to whom the compensation ought to be made. Martyn v. Williams, 1 H. & N. 817; 26 L. J., Ex. 117; 5 W. R. 351.

Held, also, that the conveyance of the land to the plaintiff during the existence of the term in the incorporeal hereditaments was an assignment of the reversion within 32 Hen. 8, c. 34; that the covenant to repair, as it directly touched and concerned the thing demised, was assignable with the reversion, and that the action might be brought in the name of the plaintiff, who was entitled to the benefit of the covenants. Ib.

A lease was granted of a piece of land, with two messuages thereon, in course of erection, with a covenant by the lessee to complete the messuages within two months, and also to "keep the messuages or tenements or premises in repair during the term," with a proviso for forfeiture for breach of any of the covenants. The premises never were finished, and were much dilapidated:—Held, that a forfeiture was incurred by the breach of the covenant to repair, in respect of which forfeiture the assignee of the reversion might sue. Bennett v. Herring, 3 C. B. (N.S.) 370; 6 W. R. 37.

The assignee of the reversion of a lease may maintain ejectment for breach of a covenant to repair, without giving the tenant notice of the assignment. Scaltock v. Harston, 45 L. J., C. P 125; 1 C. P. D. 106; 34 L. T. 130; 24 W. R. 431.

Parties Suing jointly.]—B. having a term of sixty-one years in land, granted an annuity to W., and, for securing payment assigned the term, wanting one day, to R. R. then, at the request of W. and of B., demised, and B. demised and confirmed, the premises to S. for thirty-one years, paying rent to W. while the land remained subject to the annuity, and afterwards to B. S. covenanted with W. and R., and their respective executors, and also with B., to pay the rent while the land was subject to the annuity to R., and afterwards to B., and also to repair the premises. The premises came by assignment to G., who failed to repair, W. being dead:—Held, that an action for breach of the covenant to repair was properly brought against G. by R. and B. jointly. Wakefield v. Brown, 9 Q. B. 209; 15 L. J., Q. B. 373; 10 Jur. 853.

The benefit of a covenant to repair in a joint demise by tenants in common runs with the entire reversion only, and therefore the representatives of all the tenants in common on a lease so jointly made by them must join in suing for a breach of such covenant. Thompson v. Hakewell, 19 C. B. (N.S.) 713; 35 L. J., C. P. 18; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 732; 13 L. T. 989; 14 W. R. 11.

x. Relief against Breach.

Tenant of a lunatic's estate relieved against an ejectment founded on a forfeiture by breach of covenant to repair. Vaughan, Ex parte, Eldridge, In re, Turn. & R. 434.

Remedy by injunction to restrain an action on breach of covenant to repair, on the peculiar circumstances of the case, not amounting to neglect or surprise, and there having been no waiver or abandonment on the part of the defendant. Hannam v. South London Waterworks Co., 2 Mer. 65.

No relief against covenant to repair in a given time, though no request by landlord; and though tenant was suffered to continue in possession merely without rent, &c., and though specified time in lease was inserted by mistake, as alleged by plaintiff; the quantum of damage is no criterion. Bracebridge v. Buckley, 2 Price, 200.

As to relief against an ejectment by landlord for breach of covenant to repair, quære. Hill v. Barclay, 16 Ves. 402. And see 18 Ves. 56; 11 R. R. 147.

Relief against forfeiture where compensation can be made as against a clause of re-entry for breach of a covenant to lay out a specific sum in repairs in a given time, and not limited to cases of accident, &c., but granted even against negligence and voluntary acts. Sanders v. Pope, 12 Ves. 282.

Lessee of a long term of years covenants to lay out 200*l.* upon the premises within the first ten years; he fails to do it; and, after thirty years were expired, lessor brings action of covenant, and recovers 150*l.* damages. Equity will not relieve. Barker v. Holder, 1 Vern. 316.

One makes a lease, and the lessee covenants to pay the rent, and to repair; the lessee makes 100 under-leases; the rent is behind, and the premises out of repair; the original lease is avoided for nonpayment of rent; some of the under-lessees bring a bill to be relieved against the forfeiture; equity will not apportion the rent, but the plaintiffs must pay the whole rent in arrear, and repair all the houses, and may compel the other under-lessees to contribute. Webber v. Smith, 2 Vern. 103.

On payment of damages, equity will relieve against covenant to repair. Hack v. Leonard, 9 Mod. 91. But see 19 Ves. 141.

Neither in cases of accidental neglect to perform the covenants to repair, nor in case of wilful or obstinate breaches of such covenants, will the court relieve the tenant against the consequences of the breach. Gregory v. Wilson, 9 Hare, 683; 16 Jur. 304.

In a lease of house property for twenty-one years, the lessee covenanted to pay the rent, keep in repair, and insure, and the landlord covenanted that he would, at the expiration of the term (provided all arrears of rent should have been paid, and all the covenants should have been performed and kept), at the request in writing of the lessee, grant a new lease for the further term of twenty-one years, at the same rent and subject to the provisoes and agreements in the lease contained (including the covenant for renewal), and so from time to time upon the expiration of every subsequent term of twenty-one years, provided such request in writing should be given as aforesaid. The lessee expended large sums of money in building houses on the premises, and at the expiration of the first twenty-one years a new lease was granted in the same terms for twenty-one years. In both leases there were clauses for re-entry on breach of the covenants. Before the expiration of the second term, the lessee gave notice in writing that he would require a new lease. At that time one of the houses was much out of repair, and the lessee allowed it to remain out of repair, on the ground that from communications with the lessor it was doubtful whether a new lease would be granted, in consequence of an alleged forfeiture:—Held, that the court would not interfere by injunction to prevent the lessor recovering possession in ejectment, the lessee not having within reasonable time proceeded to repair. Job v. Banister, 26 L. J., Ch. 125; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 93; 5 W. R. 177—L.C.

Where Negotiation for Purchase of Tenant's Interest.]—A notice to repair, within six months, houses held on lease by the Metropolitan Railway Company was given on the 22nd of October, 1874, to expire on the 22nd of April, 1875. It was answered by a letter of the 28th of November, suggesting that the lessors might like to purchase the premises. The lessors' solicitors, by letter of the 1st of December, asked the price demanded, and were told, by letter on the 30th of December, that it was 3,000*l*. The lessors' solicitors on the 31st of December, 1874, wrote to say that, considering the condition of the premises, "the price is out of all reason. We must therefore request you to reconsider the question of price, having regard to the previous observations, and to the fact that the company has already been served with notice to put the premises in repair, and we shall be glad to receive in due course a modified proposal from you." No further communication on this subject took place till the 19th of April, 1875, when the agent for the company wrote to say that as "the negotiations had not resulted in a sale," the company would take in hand the repairs. On the 20th of April the solicitors for the lessors wrote, declaring that "the negotiations" had been broken off in December last, and that there had been ample time since then to complete the repairs. On the 22nd of April the notice expired, and on the 28th the ejectment was served:—Held, that the company was entitled in equity to be relieved against the forfeiture, for that the letters at the end of November and at the beginning of December had the effect of suspending the notice, and that the suspension did not come to an end till the 31st of December, till which time the operation of the notice was waived, so that no part of that time could be counted against the tenant in a six months' notice to repair. Hughes v. Metropolitan Ry., 46 L. J., C. P. 583; 2 App. Cas. 439; 36 L. T. 932; 25 W. R. 680—H. L. (E.)

Under Conveyancing Acts.]—See ante, J., 2 i. iii. (cols. 1029 et seq.).

Stay of Proceedings—Repairs done before Action commenced.]—In ejectment upon a clause of re-entry in a lease for breach of covenant to repair, the court has no power to stay proceedings on payment of costs, though it appears that the necessary repairs were done before the commencement of the action. Doe d. Mayhew v. Ashby, 2 P. & D. 302; 10 A. & E. 71; 8 L. J., Q. B. 207; 3 Jur. 458.

b. Yearly Tenancy.

Liability of Tenant.]—A tenant from year to year is only bound to fair and tenantable repairs, so far as to prevent waste or decay of the premises, and not to substantial and lasting repairs, such as new roofing. Ferguson v. ——, 2 Esp. 590; 5 R. R. 757.

And not being liable to general repairs, he is only bound to use the premises in a husbandlike manner, but no further. Horsefall v. Mather, Holt N. P. 7; 17 R. R. 589.

A tenant from year to year of a house is only bound to keep it wind and water tight. A tenant who covenants to repair is to sustain and uphold the premises; but that is not so with a tenant from year to year. Anworth v. Johnson, 5 Car. & P. 239.

A tenant from year to year is not bound to do substantial repairs. Leach v. Thomas, 7 Car. & P. 328.

A tenant from year to year is not liable for permissive waste, and is not liable to make good mere wear and tear of the premises. Torriano v. Young, 6 Car. & P. 8. See Martin v. Gilham, 2 N. & P. 568; 7 A. & E. 540; 7 L. J., Q. B. 11.

A. devised estates to B. for life; the devise contained a limited power of leasing. The devisee leased part of the demised premises for a term beyond the limit appointed. The lease contained the usual covenants to repair, and was afterwards assigned to the defendants, who, for several years, remained in possession, and paid the rent to the expiration of the term:—Held, that although the lease was void, the defendants held as tenants from year to year under the covenants of the lease, and were liable to repair up to the end of the term. Beale v. Sanders, 3 Bing. (N.C.) 850; 5 Scott, 58; 3 Hodges, 147; 6 L. J., C. P. 283; 1 Jur. 1083.

—— To Deliver up in Repair.]—By an agreement expressed to be made by a corporation by their agents on their behalf and the defendant, the corporation agreed to let to the defendant and the defendant to take certain premises for three years; and the defendant also agreed to put and maintain the premises in tenantable repair, and to deliver them up at the end of the term. The agreement was executed by agents of the corporation and by the defendant, but the corporation seal was not affixed. The defendant occupied for the term, and held over afterwards, paying the rent reserved:—Held, that although the agreement was not under seal, the occupation and payment of rent admitted a tenancy from year to year under the corporation, and that on such tenancy being determined by regular notice to quit, the defendant was liable on an implied promise to deliver up the premises in tenantable repair. Ecclesiastical Commissioners v. Merrall, 38 L. J., Ex. 93; L. R. 4 Ex. 162; 20 L. T. 573; 17 W. R. 676.

—— For Repairs which should have been done by Lessor.]—The jury having given damages (under 20*l*.) in an action by a landlord against his tenant for an injury to the former, arising from the tenant quitting premises occupied by him as tenant from year to year without having done repairs he was bound to do. The court refused to disturb the verdict, although it appeared that the larger portion of the repairs required ought to have been done by the landlord himself. Woods v. Pope, 1 Scott, 536 ; 1 Bing. (N.C.) 467 ; 6 Car. & P. 783.

Duty of Landlord.]—As between the landlord and tenant of premises let from year to year, there is no obligation upon the former to do substantial repairs in the absence of an express stipulation to that effect. Gott v. Gandy, 2 El. & Bl. 845 ; 2 C. L. R. 392 ; 23 L. J., Q. B. 1 ; 18 Jur. 310 ; 2 W. R. 38.

c. Premises Burnt.

Liability of—Lessee.]—If a lease contains a covenant to keep in repair, as well as a covenant to insure for a specific sum, and the premises are burnt down, the lessee is liable on the former covenant, and the amount is not limited to the sum mentioned in the latter. Digby v. Atkinson, 4 Camp. 275 ; 16 R. R. 792.

A testator directed his trustees to allow A. to occupy a mill, so long as he should think proper to do so, "he nevertheless keeping the premises in good and tenantable repair and repairing," at a rent of 100*l*. A. accepted the gift, but afterwards the premises were totally destroyed by accidental fire :—Held, that he was bound to reinstate them. Gregg v. Coates, 23 Beav. 33 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 964 ; 4 W. R. 735.

A lessee of a house, who covenants generally to repair, is bound to rebuild it if it is burned by an accidental fire. Bullock v. Dommitt, 6 Term Rep. 650 ; 2 Chit. 608 ; 3 R. R. 300. And see Phillipson v. Leigh, 1 Esp. 398.

—— Assignee.]—The assignee of a lease, whereby the lessee covenanted for himself and his assigns absolutely to repair premises without qualification, is bound to repair, notwithstanding they are destroyed by fire. Ib.

—— Yearly Tenant.]—Where after the expiration of a lease containing a covenant by the tenant to keep the premises in repair, he verbally agrees to hold over, paying an additional rent, he is bound to rebuild them if they are burned down by accidental fire. Digby v. Atkinson, 4 Camp. 275 ; 16 R. R. 792.

—— Lessor.]—If a lessor covenants with his lessee that he will, in case the premises demised shall be burnt down, "rebuild and replace" the same in the same state as they were in before the fire, he is only bound to restore the premises to the state in which they were when he let them, and is not bound to rebuild any additional parts which may have been erected by his tenant. Loader v. Kemp, 2 Car. & P. 375.

The lessee covenanted to repair, "casualties by fire and tempest excepted." Quære, if the landlord is bound to repair in either of the excepted cases. Weigall v. Waters, 6 Term Rep. 488.

d. Tenant's Right to Leave.

On Account of Bad Repair of Premises.]—Where a tenant of a house undertakes by his agreement to keep it in as good repair as when he took it, fair wear and tear excepted, he is not entitled to quit upon its becoming uninhabitable for want of other repairs during the term ; and the landlord is under no implied obligation to do any repairs in such a case. Arden v. Pullen, 10 M. & W. 321 ; 11 L. J., Ex. 359. S. P., Gott v. Gandy, 2 El. & Bl. 845 ; 2 C. L. R. 392 ; 23 L. J., Q. B. 1 ; 18 Jur. 310 ; 2 W. R. 38.

In an agreement for a tenancy of buildings for a term, the landlord to do the repairs, there is no implied condition that the tenant may quit if the repairs are not done. Surplice v. Farnsworth, 7 Man. & G. 576 ; 8 Scott (N.R.) 307 ; 13 L. J., C. P. 215 ; 8 Jur. 760. S. P., Sutton v. Temple, 12 M. & W. 52 ; 13 L. J., Ex. 17.

A tenant of a house who is bound by agreement to keep it in tenantable repair, may quit without notice in the course of his term, if the premises become unwholesome for want of sufficient drainage, if they cannot be kept dry without extravagant and unreasonable labour and expense on his part. Collins v. Barrow, 2 M. & M. 112.

Where B. took possession of a house, and paid 10*l*. to A., who neglected to execute a lease and to make repairs within the period of ten days, as agreed on, notwithstanding which B. still continued in possession :—Held, that, on account of B.'s intermediate possession of the premises under the agreement, he could not, by quitting the house, for the default of A., rescind the contract and recover back the 10*l*. in an action for money had and received, but could only declare for a breach of the special contract. Hunt v. Silk, 5 East, 449 ; 2 Smith, 15 ; 7 R. R. 739.

A. agreed to purchase B.'s equitable interest in lands for a term of years, at a specified rent. A., after paying the rent several years, and acknowledging that a further sum was due, cannot resist B.'s claim for such further rent in an action on the agreement, by shewing that he has not been able to use the lands ; but it seems that B. might have recovered in an action for use and occupation. Conolly v. Baxter, 2 Stark. 525.

e. Pleadings in Actions.

Claim—Sufficiency of.]—A landlord may maintain an action for not repairing, against a tenant who occupies premises under a special agreement (which was to be the basis of a future lease), containing a provision that he should keep the premises in tenantable repair, without setting out such special agreement in the declaration. Colley v. Streeton, 3 D. & R. 522 ; 2 B. & C. 273 ; 2 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 25 ; 26 R. R. 350.

A declaration stated that the defendant had become and was a tenant to the plaintiff of rooms, on the terms that the defendant should not allow any nails to be driven into the walls, and that if any damage should arise from so doing, he would pay the cost of repairing the same on vacating the apartments ; and that in consideration thereof, the defendant promised the plaintiff to use the rooms in a tenantlike manner, and not to allow any nails to be driven into the walls. The declaration averred that the defendant quitted possession, and that he did not use the rooms in a tenantlike manner, but, on the contrary thereof, pulled down bells, and broke chimneypieces and stoves, and drove nails into the walls, and although the costs of repairing the injuries of the walls amounted to 150*l*., he had not paid that sum to the plaintiff :—Held, on general demurrer, that this declaration shewed a sufficient consideration for the defendant's promise, by alleging that he had become tenant on the terms of the special agreement, and that it was not necessary to allege that he became tenant to the plaintiff at his request. Dietrichsen v. Giubilei, 14 M. & W. 845; 3 D. & L. 292; 15 L. J., Ex. 73.

—— Exception as to Fire.]—If the covenant to repair contains an exception of "fire and all other casualties," it is fatal on non est factum to state it as a general covenant to repair, omitting the exception. Tempany v. Burnand, 4 Camp. 20.

In an action for not repairing, if the covenant to repair contains an exception of "casualties by fire," it is fatal on non est factum to state it in the declaration as a general covenant to repair, omitting the exception. Brown v. Knill, 5 Moore, 164; 2 Br. & B. 395.

—— What included in.]—In an action on a covenant to keep premises in tenantable order and repair, and at the end of the term deliver them up in such tenantable repair, the breach assigned was, that the tenant did not nor would sufficiently repair and keep the premises in tenantable order and repair, nor deliver them up in such tenantable repair at the end of the term; but, on the contrary thereof, suffered and permitted the premises to be and continue, and the same were, ruinous and in decay, for want of needful and necessary reparations, and the tenant at the end of the term left them so out of repair:—Held, that, under this breach, the lessor could not recover for voluntary waste, as by removing windows, &c. Edge v. Pemberton, 12 M. & W. 187; 1 D. & L. 467; 13 L. J., Ex. 48.

—— What constitutes a Variance.] — A declaration stated that the plaintiff agreed to let and the defendant to take the farm of L. at a yearly rent, and the plaintiff undertook to put the premises in repair within twelve months, after which time the defendant undertook to keep them repaired, and that the plaintiff repaired within twelve months, and demised to the defendant on the terms aforesaid, and he became tenant and occupier, but he did not keep in repair. The agreement produced at the trial was to let and take as above, that the plaintiff should keep the buildings insured in 600*l.* (the defendant repaying the premiums), and rebuild in case of fire; and that the plaintiff should repair within twelve months, and the defendant afterwards keep in repair as above stated:—Held, that the variance between the contract declared upon and that proved was a ground of nonsuit. Beech v. White, 12 A. & E. 668; 4 P. & D. 399; 10 L. J., Q. B. 4.

In an action for not repairing premises demised, the declaration stated that the plaintiff "demised certain premises, with the appurtenances (except as therein is excepted), to hold, &c. except, &c., for the term of twelve years, except the last day thereof." The lease being produced in support of the declaration, was found to contain no exception "of any part of the premises," but only an exception of the "last day of the term":—Held, not to be a fatal variance, the allegation of the exception being either satisfied in the lease, or it might be rejected as surplusage. Williams v. Hayes, 9 Price, 642; 2 Br. & B. 395.

A plaintiff sued upon a deed by which the defendant covenanted and agreed with him to procure a licence from the lord of the manor, in which a messuage in the occupation of the plaintiff was situate, to lease the premises to the plaintiff, and to make him a good and sufficient demise of the same; the declaration alleged that it was thereby covenanted that the lease should contain a covenant, and pending the occupation by the plaintiff under the provisions of the deed, the defendant would, once in every three years, paint the outside of the messuage, and keep the same in good and tenantable repair; and that, until the licence should be obtained and the lease granted, the plaintiff should continue in possession of the premises as tenant from year to year, subject to the terms and conditions in the deed specified: breach, the non-repair of the outside of the premises during the continuance of the tenancy from year to year. The deed, on its production at the trial, contained the provisions that, until the licence could be obtained, and the lease should be granted, the plaintiff should be considered to be tenant of the premises at the rent and subject to the terms and conditions hereinbefore specified:—Held, that there was no variance between the allegation and the proof, but the declaration correctly stated the legal effect of the deed. Price v. Birch, 1 D. (N.S.) 720.

Defence—Denial of Lessor's Title.]—To an action by a lessor for a breach of covenant, on an indenture of lease in not repairing, the lessee cannot plead in bar that the lessor had only an equitable estate in the premises; for that is tantamount to a plea of nil habuit in tenementis. Blake v. Foster, 8 Term Rep. 487; 5 R. R. 419.

—— Non-delivery of Materials by Lessor.]—A declaration on a covenant in a lease to deliver timber growing on the demised premises, sufficient for the repairs thereof, averred that there was timber growing on the premises sufficient for the repairs, but that the defendant did not deliver it, and the defendant pleaded that there was not timber growing on the premises sufficient and proper for the repairs:— Held, that the plea was good, although it did not allege that there was not timber growing on the premises sufficient for the repairs or any part thereof. Snell v. Snell, 7 D. & R. 249; 4 B. & C. 741; 4 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 44.

—— Offer to Surrender by Executor of Lessee.]—Semble, an offer by an executor to a lessor, to surrender to him a lease granted to his testator, is an answer to an action of covenant against him as assignee, for breach of a covenant to repair, as to all breaches accruing after that offer. Read v. Tenterden (Lord), 4 Tyr. 111.

—— Sub-demise to Lessor—Covenant to Repair by Lessor.]—To an action by lessor against assignee of a lease for not repairing and yielding up the premises in repair, he pleaded, that while he was assignee he demised the premises to the plaintiff for a term short of thirty days of his own, the plaintiff covenanting to repair and yield up in repair, the defendant finding timber and ironwork, and alleging that the want of repair complained of was caused by the plaintiff's default, and was a breach of his covenant, that the defendant was ready to find the timber and ironwork, and was entitled to recover from the plaintiff the amount of damage he sought to recover:—Held, that the plea did not disclose either a defence on equitable grounds, or a defence at law, on the principle of avoiding circuity of action. Minshull v.

Oakes, 2 H. & N. 793; 27 L. J., Ex. 194; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 170.

—— Reasonable Time for Performance not elapsed.]—Assignees of G., a bankrupt, sued the executor of J. H. A count stated that R. H. demised premises to G., and covenanted to put all the premises forthwith in repair, and during the term maintain in repair the main walls and steam-engines, as far as fair and reasonable wear and usage rendered necessary; that the reversion became vested in J. H.; and that, though R. H. had not put into repair, J. H. had not done so, or maintained in repair according to the covenant. To the first breach, for not putting in repair, the defendant pleaded, first, that a reasonable time for performance elapsed in the time of R. H., and he broke the covenant; secondly, that not only was this so, but that G. brought an action against J. H. and R., as executors of R. H., for such breach, and recovered compensation:—Held, that there could be but one breach of the covenant as to putting in repair, and that as such breach occurred in the time of R. H., these pleas were good. Coward v. Gregory, 36 L. J., C. P. 1; L. R. 2 C. P. 153; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 1000; 15 L. T. 279; 15 W. R. 170.

—— Plaintiff received sufficient Compensation.]—To the second breach, for not maintaining in repair, the defendant pleaded, first, that G. brought an action against J. H., as an assignee of the reversion, for not maintaining in repair, and recovered compensation; and that the want of repair complained of was only a continuance of that for which the former action was brought: secondly, that there had been such recovery by action, as mentioned in the plea to the first breach and the preceding plea to the second breach, and that G. did not expend the sums recovered on the premises or put them in repair, and that if he had done so, no breach would have occurred:—Held, that the breach was continuing; that the former recovery went in mitigation of damages, and not in bar, even on equitable grounds; and that the pleas were therefore bad. Ib.

—— Other.]—The defendant also pleaded to the second breach, that the default arose from G. not keeping a covenant to maintain in repair all except what the landlord was to maintain; to which the plaintiff replied, that the landlord had never put in repair:—Held, that the putting in repair was a condition precedent to the tenant's covenant coming into force, and that therefore the replication was good. Ib.

The defendant also pleaded to the second breach, that the want of repair was not occasioned by fair and reasonable wear and usage:—Held, that these words only applied to the steam-engines, &c. and that, therefore, the plea was bad. Ib.

f. Evidence.

Production of Agreement—Necessity for.]—If the declaration in an action by B. against A. aver that C. did not leave the premises in good repair at the expiration of his tenancy, the agreement between A. and C. need not be produced to prove such averment. Goodson v. Gouldsmith, 2 Car. & P. 555.

Tenancy being Consideration for Covenant.]—A tenant occupied premises, under an agreement containing a proviso to keep the premises in tenantable repair, and the landlord declared generally, that "the defendant became tenant of the premises, and in consideration thereof undertook to repair," without setting out the agreement:—Held, that such agreement was admissible to prove the fact of tenancy as the consideration for the promise to repair. Colley v. Streeton, 3 D. & R. 522; 2 B. & C. 273; 2 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 25; 26 R. R. 350.

Promise.]—A stamped agreement for a lease of premises for seventeen years and a half, to which the plaintiff was no party, but made between the defendant and other persons from whom the plaintiff derived title to the premises, is inadmissible to prove the defendant's promise to keep the messuage in repair. Dyer v. Ashton, 2 D. & R. 19; 1 B. & C. 3; 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 8.

As to Extent of Repairs.]—In an action against a tenant for not leaving premises in repair, evidence as to a prior promise on the part of the lessor to put them in repair is not admissible, and it would be a misdirection to tell the jury to have regard to such promises; but they may measure the extent of the repairs to be done by the age and class of the premises. Haldane v. Newcombe, 9 L. T. 420; 12 W. R. 135.

In Action for Forfeiture.]—In ejectment for a forfeiture, under a covenant to keep in tenantable repair, it is not necessary to shew that the premises were in repair on the day of the demise; but if proved to be out of repair a short time previously, it is incumbent on the defendant to give evidence that they have been put into repair before the right to re-entry accrued. Doe d. Hemmings v. Durnford, 2 C. & J. 667; 1 L. J., Ex. 251.

As to Holding over on Terms of Lease.]—A tenant for life of an estate for 1,000 years demised from year to year, with six months' notice to quit, the lessee covenanting to repair. After the death of the tenant for life the co-executor assigned the reversion of the estate for 1,000 years. The lessee continued to pay rent to the assignees of the reversion, and gave six months' notice to quit:—Held, that this furnished evidence that the lessee held over upon the terms of the original agreement, and was bound by the covenant to repair. Wyatt v. Cole, 36 L. T. 613.

g. Damages.

What Recoverable—Costs of Action.]—A. leased premises to B., from the 25th March, 1823, for sixteen years wanting ten days; and B. covenanted with A. to keep the premises in repair, and to paint once in every five years of the term, and to leave the premises in repair. B. underleased the premises to C., from the 24th June, 1834, for four years and three-quarters wanting eleven days; and C. covenanted with B. to keep the premises in repair (the covenant so far being in the same terms as in the original lease), and to paint once during the term, and to leave the premises in repair. A. sued B. for breaches of this covenant, and B. let judgment go by default, and upon the writ of inquiry the damages were assessed at 64*l.* 10*s.*, being the amount of dilapidations proved by a surveyor, whose estimate had been laid before B. previously to the commencement of the action. B. afterwards sued C. for the amount of the dilapidations and the costs of the action brought against him. The jury found the amount of the dilapidations to be 57*l.* 10*s.*:—Held, that B. was not entitled to recover also the amount of the costs in the former action. Penley v. Watts, 7 M. & W. 601; 10 L. J., Ex. 229. See also Short v. Kalloway, and Smith v. Howell, infra.

A messuage and premises were demised to the plaintiff, by a lease dated the 10th May, 1828, for the term of twenty-one years from the 25th March then last; which lease contained covenants to paint the outside of the premises once in every three years, and the inside once in every seven years, and to repair and keep in repair the premises, and also to do any repairs which on a view of the premises by the lessor should be found wanting, of which notice should be given. By a lease dated the 15th June, 1830, the plaintiff demised the premises to the defendant for the residue of the term, wanting ten days, containing covenants, with the exception of the stipulation as to painting the outside woodwork, in precisely the same terms as those contained in the original lease. The original lessors having brought an action against the plaintiff for breaches of the covenant to repair, he applied to the defendant to perform the repairs, and for instructions as to the course he should pursue with respect to the defence of the action. The defendant denied that any notice to repair had been given, and insisted that the premises did not require it; the plaintiff thereupon offered to suffer judgment by default, which the defendant refused to assent to. The plaintiff then gave the defendant notice, that, as he had denied that any notice to repair had been served, and insisted that the premises were not out of repair, he should traverse the breaches of covenant assigned, and try the question, holding the defendant responsible for the costs. This he accordingly did, and the result was that the original lessors recovered 68*l.* damages, and 85*l.* 12*s.* for costs, and he himself incurred costs amounting to 53*l.* 14*s.* 4*d*:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover from the defendant the costs of defending the action, as they were not necessarily occasioned by the defendant's breach of the covenant to repair. Walker v. Hatton, 10 M. & W. 249; 2 D. (N.S.) 263; 11 L. J., Ex. 361. See Tindall v. Bell, 11 M. & W. 228; 12 L. J., Ex. 160.

Held, also, that although the covenants contained in the sub-lease were (with the exception of that relating to painting) the same in words as those contained in the original lease, they were, in effect substantially different, the periods at which the leases were granted being different. Ib.

Measure of.]—A declaration stated, that the plaintiffs and A., since deceased, being possessed of a house for the residue of a term of ninety-four years wanting twenty days, demised the same to the defendants for twenty-one years, at a certain rent, by a deed containing a covenant to repair, and alleged a breach of that covenant, by means whereof all the estate and interest of the plaintiffs and A. in the house became and were forfeited; and the same reverted to B. who thereupon availed himself of the forfeiture, and brought an ejectment, in which he recovered judgment, and obtained possession of the house; by means of which premises the plaintiffs, since the death of A., had lost the rents covenanted to be paid by the defendants. The plea traversed the alleged breach of the covenant to repair; on which issue was joined. At the trial the plaintiffs claimed damages for the loss of their term, and for the amount of dilapidations in the house demised to the defendants. It appeared, by the particulars delivered in the ejectment brought by B., that such ejectment was founded upon the breach of certain covenants contained in a superior lease granted by B. for ninety-nine years; and that the breaches of covenant relied on were the non-repair of various houses, including the house in question, which was shewn to be out of repair, and for the breach of a covenant which was not contained in the lease to the defendants:—Held, first, inasmuch as it did not appear that B. might not have recovered possession of the property for a breach of the covenant not contained in the lease to the defendants, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover the value of their term from the defendants. Clow v. Brogden, 2 Scott (N.R.) 302; 2 Man. & G. 39.

Held, secondly, that they were entitled to recover the amount of the dilapidations in the house in question, at the time that the ejectment was brought for the forfeiture. Ib.

A plaintiff declared in covenant, reciting that P. had leased a house to the defendant, and the defendant had by the lease covenanted to repair; that he had assigned to the plaintiff, with a covenant that defendant had repaired according to the terms of the lease: breach, non-repair, alleging, by way of aggravation, that plaintiff had assigned to C., with a covenant that the covenants in the lease had been performed; that C. had sued plaintiff for the nonperformance of the covenants in the lease, whereby the plaintiff had to pay C. 120*l.* to settle the action, besides the expenses of defending it. On motion by the defendant for a new trial, on the ground that the plaintiff was not liable to C., except for his own acts, and therefore could not charge the defendant with the 120*l.*, the court refused a rule, the verdict being general, and not shewing that the jury had allowed damages in respect of C.'s action, and it being the defendant's duty to point out at the trial the limitation contended for. The court also refused to increase the damages by 119*l.*, which was proved to have been expended in defending the action by C., since the damages recovered by C. exceeded the sum given in the present action, and must therefore in part have been attributable to the plaintiff's own acts; so that the costs of defence did not appear to be the necessary consequence of defendant's breach of covenant. Short v. Kalloway, 11 A. & E. 28.

In an action during the continuance of the term demised for damages occasioned by the non-repair of premises, pursuant to a covenant in the lease "to keep the premises in good and sufficient repair, and at the expiration or other sooner determination of the term, so to yield and give up the same," the judge is right in refusing to direct the jury to find only nominal damages for the plaintiff. Bell v. Hayden, 9 Ir. C. L. R. 301.

In an action by the lessee against the assignee of a lease, for breach of a covenant in the deed of assignment to keep the demised premises in repair:—Held, that the lessee, in the absence of actual loss by him sustained, could recover no more than nominal charges, although the lessor had commenced an action against him for breach of the covenant contained in the lease. Beattie v. Quirey, Ir. R. 10 C. L. 516.

B. and P., the owners of an unexpired term of seventy-two years in a house and premises, let them to G. for twenty-one years, under the usual covenants to pay the rent and to keep the premises in repair, and afterwards they assigned the reversion to B. G. had previously assigned the residue of his term of twenty-one years to the plaintiff, with the usual covenants. The plaintiff afterwards assigned the term to the defendant, with similar covenants to pay the rent and to keep the premises in repair, and with a covenant that the defendant would observe and fulfil all the covenants of the former lease, and that he would save harmless and indemnify the plaintiff from all costs, damages and expenses which might be incurred by reason of any delay, breach or default in payment or performance thereof. On the rent becoming due and unpaid, and the premises falling out of repair, B. brought an action against G., who suffered judgment by default. G. afterwards brought an action to recover the amount so paid by him and his costs. The plaintiff defended the action unsuccessfully, and he became liable to pay to G. the amount of the judgment by default, and also of the costs of that action. The plaintiff then sued the defendant, not having paid that amount to G., and judgment not having been signed in the action against him:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover from the defendant the amount of the rent and repairs, and the costs of the action in which G. had suffered judgment by default, but that he was not entitled to the costs of the action brought against him by G. Smith v. Howell, 6 Ex. 730; 20 L. J., Ex. 377.

In an action, brought during the term, for a breach of covenant to repair, if the evidence shews that the premises were out of repair before action the lessor is entitled to nominal damages, although the lessee expended money, after action, in repairing the demised premises. Morony v. Ferguson, Ir. R. 8 C. L. 551.

A lessor is not deprived of any part of the ordinary damage recoverable on a breach of covenant by the lessee to deliver up the demised premises in good repair, by reason of the lessor's effecting structural alterations in the premises after the determination of the lease. Inderwick v. Leech, 1 Cab. & E. 412. Affirmed in C. A.

If a tenant who is bound to repair leaves, and at the end of the tenancy the premises are out of repair, the jury may give the landlord, in an action against the tenant, not only the amount of the actual expense of the repairs, but also a compensation for the loss of the use of the premises while they were undergoing repair. Woods v. Pope, 1 Scott, 536; 1 Bing. (N.C.) 467; 6 Car. & P. 783.

In an action against the assignee of a lease of a house for breach of covenant to leave the premises in repair at the end of the term, it appeared that owing to changes in the surrounding property the house had so far altered in value since the commencement of the lease that it would be as valuable for letting purposes if some of the repairs required by the covenant, according to its strict meaning, were either omitted or executed at a cheaper rate than was usual under such a covenant:—Held, that the facts above mentioned were no ground for limiting the liability of the defendant under the covenant, and that the measure of damages for a breach of it was the amount required to put the premises into such repair as was originally contemplated by the covenant. Morgan v. Hardy, 35 W. R. 588—C. A. Affirming 17 Q. B. D. 770.

—— Injury to Reversion.]—On breach by a lessee of a covenant to repair, the measure of damages is the injury to the marketable value of the reversion. Mills v. East London Union, 42 L. J., C. P. 46; L. R. 8 C. P. 79; 27 L. T. 557; 21 W. R. 142.

The lessees of premises underlet them by a lease, in which there was the usual general covenant by the lessees to repair. The underlessee having neglected to repair according to his covenant, the lessees entered and did the repairs themselves in order to save a forfeiture of their own lease, with which they had been threatened by their landlord, and then and during the continuance of the lease to their under-tenant, the term of which had not expired, sued him for breach of such covenant to repair:—Held, that they could only recover nominal damages, since by having done the necessary repairs, they had at the time the action was brought sustained no injury to the reversion. Williams v. Williams, 43 L. J., C. P. 382; L. R. 9 C. P. 659; 30 L. T. 638; 22 W. R. 706.

In an action for breach of covenant to keep in repair brought by the lessor or his assignee during the pendency of the term, the damages may, but need not necessarily, be the present value of a sum, equal to the cost of repair, that sum being payable at the end of the term; or the damages may, but need not necessarily, be the injury caused by the want of repair to the saleable value of the reversion; and, save in very extreme cases, it is the province of the jury to decide which of these modes is, in the particular case, the appropriate one. Metge v. Kavanagh, Ir. R. 11 C. L. 431.

In estimating the damages recoverable by the covenantee during the currency of a lease in respect of the breach of a covenant to keep the demised premises in repair, all the circumstances must be taken into consideration, and the damages must be assessed at such a sum as reasonably represents the diminution of the value of the reversion by the breach of covenant; and where the covenantee is himself subject to covenants to a superior landlord, and the covenantor has notice of the original lease, the covenantee's liability to his landlord must be taken into account. Conquest v. Ebbetts, 65 L. J., Ch. 808; [1896] A. C. 490; 75 L. T. 36; 45 W. R. 50—H. L. (E.)

—— Where Reversion Extinguished.]—The measure of damages in an action for breach of covenant to repair is the sum necessary to put the premises in repair, notwithstanding before action the reversion of the plaintiff has been extinguished by an entry of the superior landlord. Davies v. Underwood, 2 H. & N. 570; 27 L. J., Ex. 113; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1223; 6 W. R. 105.

—— Where Substantial.]—A defendant held premises under a lease, with a covenant to keep and yield them up in repair. At the expiration of the lease, at Christmas, 1863, the premises were dilapidated to an amount fixed by the jury at 22*l*. The plaintiff (the reversioner) had before this time made a verbal agreement with a third person to grant him a lease for a long term, and he at once proceeded to pull down the premises:—Held, that the plaintiff was, notwithstanding, entitled to recover substantial damages. Rawlings v. Morgan, 18 C. B. (N.S.) 776; 34 L. J., C. P. 185; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 564; 12 L. T. 348; 13 W. R. 746.

In an action by a lessee against an assignee for damages sustained by the former, in consequence of the neglect of the latter, while he continued assignee, to repair the premises, pursuant to a covenant in the lease it appeared that in June, 1843, the plaintiff assigned the lease to the defendant; in October, 1851, the defendant assigned the lease to T.; and in June, 1852, T. assigned to H., who in August, 1852, surrendered it to the ground landlord. It was proved that in July, 1852, the premises were dilapidated, but there was no evidence of their state at any prior time:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover substantial damages, and not nominal damages only. Smith v. Peat, 2 C. L. R. 424; 9 Ex. 161; 23 L. J., Ex. 84: S. P., Mapleton v. Rawlings, 3 C. L. R. 237.

—— Premises Destroyed by Fire.]—The plaintiff being assignee of a lease which contained a covenant to repair, underlet the premises to the defendant, upon the terms that he should "maintain them in as good a state as they would be when repaired by him." Shortly after the defendant took possession, the premises, which were old and dilapidated, were destroyed by fire. The jury found that the cost of rebuilding them would be 1,635*l.*, but that they would be more valuable by 600*l.*:—Held, that the defendant was only bound to put the premises in the same state they would have been in if he had repaired them before the fire, and consequently he was liable to pay, as damages, 1,035*l.* only. Yates v. Dunster, 11 Ex. 15; 24 L. J., Ex. 226.

—— Action commenced before Expiration of Term.]—Where a tenant for years agrees to keep the premises in repair during the tenancy, and before the expiration of the term an action is brought against him for breach of this agreement, the plaintiff is entitled to recover nominal damages only. Marriott v. Cotton, 2 Car. & K. 553.

Two years before the determination of a lease a landlord brought an action against his tenant for breach of covenant to repair. The tenant paid a sum into court, which the landlord accepted in satisfaction. After the determination of the lease the landlord brought another action for breach of the covenants to keep the premises in repair and to deliver up in repair. No repairs were done between the first action and the end of the lease; the particulars in the second action included all matters which had been claimed for in the first action as well as some additional items:—Held, that the true measure of damages was the amount required to put the premises into repair less the sum paid into court in the first action. Henderson v. Thorne, 62 L. J., Q. B. 586; [1893] 2 Q. B. 164; 5 R. 404; 69 L. T. 430; 41 W. R. 509; 57 J. P. 679.

—— Premises Relet before Termination of Lease.]—Where a lessee has covenanted to leave the premises in repair at the end of the term, the rule as to the measure of damages, on breach of the covenant, is that the damages are such a sum as it will cost to put the premises into the state of repair in which the lessee was bound to leave them; and that rule is not affected by the fact that, before the expiration of the term, the lessor has relet the premises on the expiration of the term to a third person, who has covenanted to alter and rebuild the premises. Joyner v. Weeks, 60 L. J., Q. B. 510; [1891] 2 Q. B. 31; 65 L. T. 16; 39 W. R. 583; 55 J. P. 725—C. A.

—— Rights of Lessee against Under-lessee in Absence of Covenant.]—Premises were demised to the plaintiff and others for a term of years, commencing from March, 1829, and with covenants by him to repair and to insure in the Protector Fire Insurance Office, or in such other respectable fire insurance office in London or Westminster, as he and the other lessees should think fit. The demise then contained a proviso for re-entry in case of breach of covenants. By a lease of the 30th April, 1835, the plaintiff underleased the premises to the defendant for a term short of the original term, and with covenants to repair and insure precisely the same as those in the original lease, except that the covenant to insure was in the Protector Fire Insurance Office, or in such other respectable fire insurance office, in London or Westminster, as the defendant should think fit. The defendant had notice of the lease to the plaintiff and of its contents. The covenants to repair and insure having been broken, the plaintiff was ejected by the superior landlord:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover against the defendant, as damages for breach of covenant, the value of the reversionary interest in the term which he had so lost, there being no covenant by the defendant to indemnify. Logan v. Hall, 4 C. B. 598; 16 L. J., C. P. 252; 11 Jur. 804.

—— Covenant not to Commit Waste.]—A covenant by a tenant not to commit waste on the demised property is not, with regard to the measure of damages for the breach of it, the same thing as a covenant to deliver up the property at the end of the term in the same state as that in which the tenant received it. Therefore, in an action by the reversioner against the tenant for waste, the measure of damages is not necessarily the sum which it would cost to restore the property to its condition before the waste: the true measure of damages is the diminution in the value of the reversion, less a discount for immediate payment. Whitham v. Kershaw, 16 Q. B. D. 613; 54 L. T. 124; 34 W. R. 340—C. A.

Death of Lessor.]—Lessee's damages in waste moderated by death of lessor. Anon., Cary, 2.

Evidence.]—In an action for dilapidations, the plaintiff must prove his particulars of demand, in the same manner as in an action for goods sold and delivered. Smith v. Douglas, 16 C. B. 31; 3 C. L. R. 752.

Penalty or Liquidated Damages.]—Lessees, who had been granted the privilege of placing slag from blast furnaces on land let to them, covenanted (inter alia) to pay the lessor 100*l.* per imperial acre for all land not restored at a particular date:—Held, that the sum, although described in one part of the agreement as "the penalty therein stipulated," was not a penalty; but estimated or stipulated damages. Elphinstone v. Monkland Iron and Coal Co., 11 App. Cas. 332; 35 W. R. 17—H. L. (Sc.)

Where one lump sum is made payable by way of compensation on the occurrence of one or more or all of several events, some of which may occasion serious, and others but trifling damage, the presumption is that the parties intended the sum to be penal, subject to modification; but where the payments stipulated are made proportionate to the extent of which the contractors may fail to fulfil their obligations, and they are to bear interest from the date of the failure, payments so adjusted, with reference to the actual damage, are liquidated damages. Ib.

h. Other Matters.

Obligation to use Premises in Tenantlike Manner.]—There is no implied contract to use demised premises in a tenantlike manner where the tenant has expressly contracted to repair. Standen v. Christmas, 10 Q. B. 135; 16 L. J., Q. B. 265; 11 Jur. 694.

A. agreed to let, and B. to take, a house at a yearly rent payable quarterly, and at the end of the agreement was the following stipulation: "A. agrees to take the fixtures at the expiration of B.'s tenancy, and to allow the price at which they may be valued, provided they are in as good condition then as they are now, and B. agrees to leave the premises in the same state as they now are." Though not stated in the agreement, the house was at the time of the agreement in the occupation of C. as tenant to A., who afterwards quitted:—Held, that, notwithstanding the existence of express terms of agreement, an implied contract arose on the part of B. to use the premises in a tenantlike manner, and that the agreement was properly described as an agreement to leave the premises, at the expiration of the tenancy, in the same state as they were in at the commencement of the tenancy, and not at the date of the agreement. White v. Nicholson, 4 Scott (N.R.) 707; 4 Man. & G. 95; 11 L. J., C. P. 264.

Right of Landlord to Enter to Repair.]—A landlord has no right to enter his tenant's premises to repair them, without there was some stipulation at the time of the letting to that effect. Barker v. Barker, 3 Car. & P. 557.

A covenant for a landlord to be allowed to come into a house to see the state of its repair at "convenient times," is not broken by his not being allowed to go into some of the rooms, if he has given no notice of his coming. Doe d. Wetherell v. Bird, 6 Car. & P. 195.

A lessor who, in the absence of express power in the lease, enters upon the demised premises to repair them on breach of the lessee's covenant to repair, even though under a superior lease the lessor is liable to forfeiture for non-repair, and, though he enters by leave of weekly sub-tenants, commits a trespass which will be restrained by injunction. Stocker v. Planet Building Society, 27 W. R. 877—C. A.

In a lease of a newly-constructed grain warehouse, there was a covenant by the lessor that he would during the term "keep the main walls and main timbers of the warehouse in good repair and condition":—Held, that the covenant implied a licence by the tenant to the landlord to enter upon the premises for a reasonable time for the purpose of executing the necessary repairs. Saner v. Bilton, 47 L. J., Ch. 267; 7 Ch. D. 815; 38 L. T. 281; 26 W. R. 394.

Estate Liable for Repairs.]—By an agreement under seal, E. covenanted with B., his executors and administrators, that he would at any time thereafter, at the request of B., his executors, administrators or assigns, execute a demise of certain freeholds for the term of twenty-one years, at the yearly rent of 180*l.*, which lease should contain a covenant to keep the premises in good and substantial repair, and all other usual covenants; and B. for himself, his executors or administrators, covenanted with E., whenever thereto requested by E., to accept such lease, and execute a counterpart. Under this agreement B. entered and paid rent until his death (which took place before the 1st of January, 1870), and after his death his widow and legal personal representative entered and paid rent. No lease was ever executed, and no such request as above mentioned was ever made by either party. Since his death rent had accrued due, and a sum was required for repairs:—Held, that the liability under the deed was from the first, and still was, a specialty; hence that a claim by E. for the sums due for arrears of rent and dilapidations under the covenants agreed to be entered into by B. were debts by specialty against his estate. Kidd v. Boone, 40 L. J., Ch. 531; L. R. 12 Eq. 89; 24 L. T. 356.

Landlord not Liable for Damage for Neglecting to Repair.]—A landlord let premises to a tenant under a lease by which the latter covenanted to keep them in repair. Attached to the house was a coal cellar under the footway, with an aperture covered by an iron plate which was at the time of the demise out of repair and dangerous. A passer-by in consequence fell into the aperture and was injured:—Held, that, the obligation to repair being by the lease cast upon the tenant, the landlord was not liable for this accident. Pretty v. Bickmore, L. R. 8 C. P. 401; 28 L. T. 704; 21 W. R. 733.

Held, also, that the provision in the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), s. 102, makes no difference in this respect. Ib.

Assets of Devisee Liable.]—In 1832 an equitable tenant for life made a lease containing a covenant to keep the demised premises in repair, and, upon the determination of the lease by the death of the lessor, the lessee and his devisee continued in possession, and paid rent to the remainderman, without any fresh express agreement. In 1855, the remainderman assigned the reversion to a purchaser, who, in the following year, demised the premises to the remainderman for a term still unexpired. The premises were burnt in 1859, and no change of tenancy had taken place up to the death of the devisee in 1871:—Held, first, that the assets of the devisee were liable, under the covenant, to the expense of rebuilding the premises. Morrogh v. Alleyne, Ir. R. 7 Eq. 487.

Held, secondly, that the title of the remainderman being merely equitable, could not be relied on as a bar to his claim. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that the Statute of Limitations did not apply. Ib.

Tenant in Common—Contribution.] — One tenant in common of a house who expends money on ordinary repairs, not being such as are necessary to prevent the house from going to ruin, has no right of action against his co-tenant for contribution. Leigh v. Dickeson, 54 L. J., Q. B. 18; 15 Q. B. D. 60; 52 L. T. 790; 33 W. R. 538—C. A.

4. For Quiet Enjoyment and Title.

a. The Covenant.

To what extending.]—A covenant for quiet enjoyment generally only extends to a disturbance under a lawful title. Anon., Lofft, 460.

A. demised by lease to B., who assigned his interest to C., and C. to D.; B. covenanted for quiet enjoyment with C. and his assigns :—Held, that D. might maintain an action against B., on being ejected by A. for a forfeiture made by B. before the assignment to C. Campbell v. Lewis, 3 B. & Ald. 392 ; 21 R. R. 520.

An action on the covenant for quiet enjoyment may be maintained for the disturbance of a way of necessity. Morris v. Edgington, 3 Taunt. 24 ; 12 R. R. 579.

A lessee covenanted that the plaintiff, paying rent, should have quiet enjoyment of a term upon an underlease to commence in 1836 : the lessee having afterwards forfeited his own term by nonpayment of rent to the superior landlord, the plaintiff could not come into possession of the term to commence in 1836 :—Held, that the plaintiff could not sue on the covenant for quiet enjoyment ; at all events not before 1836. Ireland v. Bircham, 2 Bing. (N.C.) 90 ; 2 Scott, 207 ; 4 L. J., C. P. 305.

Covenants for title and quiet enjoyment do not extend to protect a purchaser against defects of title, which the recitals in his own purchase deed are sufficient to disclose. Hunt v. White, 37 L. J., Ch. 326 ; 16 W. R. 478.

By deed the defendant demised to the plaintiff a coal-mine for a term of years, with liberty to dig and sink pits for obtaining the coal : and the defendant covenanted with the plaintiffs that they might peaceably and quietly have, hold, occupy, possess, and enjoy the mine during the term, without any molestation, interruption, or disturbance whatever of, from, or by the defendant. After the making of the deed, the defendant excavated a quarry of ironstone, lying under some of the closes under which the demised mine was situate, but above that mine ; and made holes from the strata of ironstone into the demised mine, and thereby caused quantities of water to percolate into the demised mine ; and the defendant also, by excavating the quarry, caused parts of the roof of the demised mine to fall in, and by reason of the premises the demised mine became flooded, and the working of the coal was rendered impracticable :—Held, that though the defendant had a right to excavate the quarry, yet as the excavation had caused an interruption of the plaintiff's occupation of the demised mine, the defendant was liable for a breach of his contract for quiet enjoyment. Shaw v. Stenton, 2 H. & N. 858 ; 27 L. J., Ex. 253 ; 6 W. R. 327.

Where Implied.]—There is an implied covenant for quiet enjoyment under the words "granted and demised." Iggulden v. May, 9 Ves. 330 ; 7 East, 237 ; 3 Smith, 269 ; 2 Bos. & P. (N.R.) 449 ; 8 R. R. 623 ; 9 R. R. 104, n.

Semble, that no covenant for title or quiet enjoyment is implied from the mere relationship of landlord and tenant, or from the words "agree to let" in a lease, but only from the word "demise." Baynes v. Lloyd, 64 L. J., Q. B. 787 ; [1895] 2 Q. B. 610 ; 14 R. 678 ; 73 L. T. 250 ; 44 W. R. 328 ; 59 J. P. 710—C. A.

Under a parol demise the law will imply an agreement for quiet enjoyment, but not for good title. Bandy v. Cartwright, 8 Ex. 913 ; 22 L. J., Ex. 285 ; 1 W. R. 415.

In a conveyance in fee of land to the defendant, he covenanted with the grantor not to permit any part of the premises to be used for selling beer. The defendant afterwards granted a lease of part of the land, with covenants by the lessee not to carry on certain trades, but not mentioning that of a seller of beer, and with a covenant by the lessor for quiet enjoyment. The term was assigned to the plaintiff, who having no notice of the defendant's restrictive covenant used the premises as a beershop, and being restrained by injunction in chancery, at the suit of the vendor of the fee, sued the defendant for breach of the express covenant, for quiet enjoyment, and also for breach of a covenant for title alleged to be implied from the terms of the lease :—Held, that the covenant for quiet enjoyment excluded any implication of such an implied covenant, and that there had been no breach of the former covenant, as it did not guarantee to the tenant that he might lawfully use the land for any purpose not included in the restrictions in the lease. Dennett v. Atherton, 41 L. J., Q. B. 165 ; L. R. 7 Q. B. 316 ; 20 W. R. 442—Ex. Ch.

In a contract for a demise of land, a promise of quiet enjoyment during the term is implied by law. Hall v. City of London Brewery Co., 2 B. & S. 737 ; 31 L. J., Q. B. 257 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 18.

In 1841, B. agreed to let to A. for eight years and a quarter premises, "subject to the same conditions as were mentioned in the memorandum under which B. held of C." ; and that "if C. was willing to accept A. as tenant instead of B., A. was willing to take the remainder of the lease or memorandum from C., and become his tenant." C. was tenant to D., and C.'s term expiring at Christmas, 1844, D. brought ejectment and turned A. out on the 7th of February, 1845. In an action by A. against B. for this eviction, the declaration, after setting out the agreement, alleged that B. promised A. that he should and might "quietly use, occupy, and enjoy the premises for the term for which B. had so agreed to let them" :—Held, that no such promise could be implied from the contract set out, the contract being subject to conditions, the nature of which were not disclosed. Messent v. Reynolds, 3 C. B. 194 ; 15 L. J., C. P. 226 ; 10 Jur. 550.

—— Eviction by Title Paramount—Tenancy from Year to Year.]—In a tenancy from year to year there is no implied covenant for quiet enjoyment against eviction by title paramount on the determination of the landlord's interest ; and if, on such determination, the tenant is evicted by the superior landlord, he has, in the absence of an express agreement, no claim against his landlord for damages for such eviction by the superior landlord. Schwartz v. Locket, 61 L. T. 719 ; 38 W. R. 142. S. P., Penfold v. Abbott, 32 L. J., Q. B. 67 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 517 ; 7 L. T. 384 ; 11 W. R. 169.

See further as to Eviction by Title Paramount, post, cols. 1151, 1152.

Qualifying Implied Covenant.]—The whole covenant implied in the word "demised" is qualified and restrained by an express covenant for quiet enjoyment. Line v. Stephenson, 6 Scott, 447 ; 4 Bing. (N.C.) 678. S.C., 5 Bing. (N.C.) 183 ; 7 Scott, 69 ; 1 Arn. 385 ; 7 L. J., C. P. 263—Ex. Ch.

No absolute covenant for title can be implied from words of grant, where there is an express qualified title on the face of the deed. Stannard v. Forbes, 6 A. & E. 572 ; 1 N. & P. 633 ; W. W. & D. 321 ; 6 L. J., K. B. 185.

Qualified.]—Releasors covenanted that for and notwithstanding any act, &c. by them, or any or either of them done to the contrary, they had good title to convey lands in fee; and also that they or some or one of them, for and notwithstanding any such matter or thing as aforesaid, had good right and full power to grant; and likewise that the releasee should peaceably and quietly enter, hold and enjoy the premises granted, without the lawful let or disturbance of the releasors or their heirs or assigns, or for or by any other person or persons whomsoever; and that the releasee should be kept harmless and indemnified by the releasors and their heirs, against all other titles, charges, &c. save and except the chief rent issuing and payable out of the premises to the lord of the fee:—Held, that, the generality of the covenant for quiet enjoyment against the releasors and their heirs, and any other person or persons whomsoever, was not restrained by the qualified covenants for good title and right to convey for and notwithstanding any act done by the releasors to the contrary. Howell v. Richards, 11 East, 633: 11 R. R. 287.

So, where the assignor covenanted that for and notwithstanding any act or thing by him done, the lease was valid; and that it should be lawful for the assignee at all times, during the term, quietly to enjoy, without the lawful let or interruption of the assignor, his executors, administrators or assigns, or any of them, or any other person or persons whomsoever, claiming any estate or right in the premises, and that the premises were discharged by the assignor, his heirs, executors or administrators, from all former incumbrances, made or suffered by his, or by their or either of their acts or privity; and then followed a covenant for further assurance by the assignor, his executors and administrators and all persons whomsoever claiming under him:—Held, that the general words in the covenant for quiet enjoyment were restrained by the restrictive words in the covenant for title and further assurance, which preceded and followed it, and therefore that such covenant was confined to the acts of the covenantor, and those claiming under him. Nind v. Marshall, 3 Moore, 703; 1 Br. & B. 319; 21 R. R. 610.

The assignor in a deed of assignment of a lease, after reciting the original lease granted to another for the term of ten years, which by mesne assignments had vested in him, and that the plaintiff had contracted for the absolute purchase of the premises, bargained, sold, assigned, transferred and set over the same to the plaintiff, for and during all the rest of the term of ten years, in as ample manner as the assignor might have held the same; subject to the payment of rent and performance of covenants; and then covenanted that it was a good and subsisting lease, valid in law, in and for the premises thereby assigned, and not forfeited or otherwise determined, or become void or voidable:—Held, that the generality of this covenant for title, which was supported by the recital of the bargain for an absolute term of ten years, was not restrained by other covenants which went only to provide for or against the acts of the assignor himself, or of those who claimed under him. Barton v. Fitzgerald, 15 East, 530; 13 R. R. 519.

Where a deed after reciting that under a deed A. was seised and possessed of premises, and that he had agreed with D. for the sale of all A.'s estate and interest under the same deed to D., witnessed that A. did grant and assign unto D. the premises, to hold the same to him, his heirs and assigns, for ever; and also contained a covenant that A. had in himself good right, full power and lawful authority to make that conveyance of his estate and interest under the deed to D., his heirs and assigns, for ever:—Held, that this was not an absolute covenant that A. had power to convey a freehold estate, but only that he had power to convey such an estate as he took under the deed. Delmer v. M'Cabe, 14 Ir. C. L. R. 377.

L., who was possessed of a term for years, provided C. should so long live, assigned the term and covenanted that, notwithstanding any act, deed, matter or thing done by him at any time theretofore, the lease was valid, and that the same was in full force and effect, and in no wise forfeited, surrendered, assigned, determined, or otherwise become void or voidable, or prejudicially affected in any manner howsoever, otherwise than by effluxion of time; and also, that, for and notwithstanding any such act, he (L.) had full power to assign. Before the assignment C. died, and L. knew the fact:—Held, that the covenant of the lease being valid and not determined, was qualified by the preceding covenant, and restrained to any acts done by L., and that therefore he was not liable upon this covenant for an eviction by the party entitled on C.'s death. Stannard v. Forbes, 1 N. & P. 633; 6 A. & E. 572; W. W. & D. 321; 6 L. J., K. B. 185.

By deed, after reciting a grant to A. in fee, and that the defendant's wife was the heiress of deceased, who died intestate, and reciting an appointment in fee by the defendant and his wife, in favour of the plaintiff, the defendant covenanted that, notwithstanding any act by him or his wife or A. committed, he and his wife were lawfully seised, and that, notwithstanding any act as aforesaid, he and his wife had a good right to convey; and that it should be lawful for the plaintiff to quietly occupy, without interruption by the defendant and his wife, or any person lawfully claiming under them or A.; and that the defendant and his wife, and all persons claiming under them or A. would execute to the plaintiff all further assurances. In an action for breach of this covenant for quiet enjoyment, the declaration averred, that P. claimed, as heir-at-law of A., deceased, lawful right and title to the premises; and then set out a recovery in ejectment by P., by which the plaintiff was evicted. The defendant set out the deed, and pleaded that A. died intestate, leaving the defendant's wife her only child and heiress-at-law; and that the plaintiff instigated P. to claim a right and title to the premises; and that P. in consequence made the claim, and prosecuted the ejectment. At the trial, the jury found that the defendant's wife was not the heiress-at-law of A.:—Held, first, that the jury was not estopped, by the recital in the deed of the heirship of the defendant's wife, from finding that she was not, in fact, such heiress. Young v. Raincock, 7 C. B. 310; 18 L. J., C. P. 193; 13 Jur. 539.

Held, secondly, that the generality of the terms of the covenant for quiet enjoyment was not restricted by the introductory words of the covenant for title and power to convey, to any act done by the defendant and his wife, or A. Ib.

Conditional.]—A covenant by lessor that the lessee paying the rent and performing covenants shall quietly enjoy is not a conditional covenant; and a plea stating the nonpayment of the rent, or the non-performance of a covenant by the lessee (to insure), is no bar to an action by the lessee on the covenant for quiet enjoyment. Dawson v. Dyer, 2 N. & M. 559; 5 B. & Ad. 584.

Affected by Provisions of Act of Parliament.]—When after the granting of a lease an act of parliament has been passed which renders it illegal to use the premises for the purpose for which they were let, the refusal to permit them to be used for that purpose is no breach of a covenant for quiet enjoyment or of a covenant to keep the premises in proper condition. Newby v. Sharpe, 47 L. J., Ch. 617; 8 Ch. D. 39; 38 L. T. 583; 26 W. R. 685—C. A.

The defendant let the basement of a store to the plaintiff "with full and undisturbed right and liberty to store cartridges therein," and covenanted to keep the premises in proper repair and condition, so as to be available for storing cartridges, and covenanted for quiet enjoyment. Other parts of the store were at that time let to others persons for storing gunpowder. Soon afterwards the Explosives Act, 1875, passed, making it illegal to store cartridges and gunpowder in the same building. The defendant, upon the act coming into operation, removed the plaintiff's cartridges out of the building. A correspondence ensued, and the defendant stated to the plaintiff that the basement was at his disposal, but that if he stored cartridges there the defendant must, to protect himself from liability, give notice to the authorities. The plaintiff thereupon commenced an action to restrain the defendant from obstructing the storing of his cartridges, and to compel the defendant to do everything necessary to enable the plaintiff to store them there, and for damages:—Held, first, that there had been no eviction, the removal of the plaintiff's cartridges being only a trespass. Ib.

Held, secondly, there had been no breach of covenant by the defendant, for that the covenant to keep the premises in proper condition for storing cartridges only referred to their physical condition; and that the grant of liberty to store cartridges there did not import a warranty of the legality of so storing them, nor did anything in the lease bind the defendant to procure licences to make the storage legal. Ib.

Action on—Interesse Termini.]—An interesse termini will not support an action on a covenant for quiet enjoyment, nor an action for trespass or for damages. Lock v. Furze (L. R. 1 C. P. 441) and Gillard v. Cheshire Lines Committee (32 W. R. 943) distinguished. Wallis v. Hands, 62 L. J., Ch. 586; [1893] 2 Ch. 75; 3 R. 351; 68 L. T. 428; 41 W. R. 471.

In void Lease.]—A., being tenant for life of lands with a leasing power, granted a lease to B., which lease was afterwards held void, upon the ground that it was not made in accordance with the power. The lease contained a clause, that "A., for himself, his heirs and assigns, the premises, with the appurtenances, unto B., his executors, administrators, and assigns, under the rent, covenants, conditions, exceptions and agreements before expressed, against all persons whomsoever lawfully doing the same, will during the term warrant and defend." Upon the death of A. the remainderman brought ejectment against B., and recovered judgment and possession of the premises. In an action by B. against the executors of A. for a breach of the covenant:—Held, that the words "warrant and defend" operated not as a covenant in law only, but as an express covenant for quiet enjoyment, extending to the term purported to be granted by the lease, and therefore, that the executors of A. were liable for a breach thereof. Williams v. Burrell, 1 C. B. 402; 14 L. J., C. P. 98; 9 Jur. 282.

A lease having been granted by deed in terms from which the law implies a covenant for title, and the lessor proving to have no title to part of the demised premises:—Held, that the lessee might refuse to take possession of such part of the demised premises and elect to keep the remainder, and might in an action for rent due under the lease claim damages for breach of the implied covenant by way of counterclaim. Mostyn v. West Mostyn Coal Co., 45 L. J., C. P. 401; 1 C. P. D. 145; 34 L. T. 325; 24 W. R. 401.

Trustees of a charity grant an improper lease of the charity lands, in which they covenant with the lessee, for his actual enjoyment of the demised premises during the term. The court in setting aside the lease, will order the indenture of the demise to be cancelled in toto, and will not leave the personal covenants of the trustees in force for the benefit of the lessee. Att.-Gen. v. Morgan, 2 Russ. 306; 26 R. R. 81.

T., by indenture dated in 1663, demised to W. lands, &c., in Ireland, together with the mines, timber, &c., to make sale, &c., thereof, without impeachment of waste, the lessee, his executors, &c., planting, from time to time, 500 trees of oak and ash, in the room, &c., during the lease to hold, &c., for a term of ninety-eight years, at a rent of 15*l.* sterling for the first three years, and 30*l.* sterling for the remainder of the term; and T. covenanted that W., &c., upon request, would, "from time to time, renew the said lease, and perfect such other further assurances as W., &c., should require," &c. The lease also contained a covenant of warranty of title, &c., and that in case of eviction, or that the premises should be wasted in war or rebellion, &c., that the rent should cease for the time. By an indenture dated in 1739, reciting the original lease, and the covenant for renewal, a further lease for ninety-eight years, recited to be in pursuance of the covenant, &c., was granted, containing a similar covenant. Upon a bill filed in 1827, claiming a further renewal:—Held, that the covenant was to be construed as a covenant for further assurance, and not for perpetual renewal. Browne v. Tighe, 8 Bli. (N.S.) 272; 2 Cl. & F. 396. Affirming Hayes, 158.

Of Easement not acquired by Lessor.]—In a conveyance in fee from A. to B. of a house and premises in the occupation of A., "together with all lights, liberties, privileges, easements and appurtenances to the premises belonging or in anywise appertaining or usually held and enjoyed therewith, or deemed or taken as part, parcel or member thereof," A. covenanted that notwithstanding any act, deed, matter or thing whatsoever made, done or permitted by him, or any person claiming through him, he, A., has now good title to convey the messuage and premises with the appurtenances. Some years before this conveyance, A. being then owner in fee and occupier of the house, &c., which was in the same condition, entered into a contract in writing with the owners of the adjoining premises that the cornice and spouts and three windows of A.'s house overlooking the adjoining premises were encroachments, and agreed to pay an annual sum of money so long as he was permitted to use the cornice, spouts and windows. A. had never acquired any easement in respect of the cornice, spouts or windows by twenty years' user :—Held, that there was no breach of covenant for title by A., for that he only conveyed the premises so far as he was possessed or could convey them, and that his qualified covenant for title limited his covenant to that which he actually had, or but for any act of his would have had, and that he had not and never would have acquired any easement in the windows, cornice or spout, inasmuch as the adjoining owners would have interfered to prevent him but for his acknowledgment. Thackeray v. Wood, 5 B. & S. 325 ; 33 L. J., Q. B. 275 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 877 ; 10 L. T. 645. Affirmed, 6 B. & S. 766 ; 34 L. J., Q. B. 226 ; 13 W. R. 996—Ex. Ch.

Of Sporting Rights.]—The defendant demised to the plaintiff, for twenty-one years, a mansion-house and land, with the sole licence of shooting and sporting over all other lands, plantations, and coverts of the defendant, subject to the liberty for each tenant on his farm to kill rabbits with ferrets only. The defendant covenanted for quiet enjoyment, and that, if at any time during the term any of the tenants of the defendant of any such lands, plantations, or coverts, should obstruct the plaintiff in the enjoyment of the licence, or should destroy the game, rabbits, &c., then the defendant would, upon the requisition of the plaintiff, give notice to quit to such tenants, and enforce the notice by such legal measures as should be necessary. Breach, that, after the demise to the plaintiff, the defendant demised to R., for twelve years, one hundred acres of the plantations on which the exclusive right of killing rabbits had been granted to the plaintiff, without any clause in the demise to prevent R. from obstructing the plaintiff in the enjoyment of the licence, or from destroying rabbits, and without reserving to the defendant the power of giving R. notice to quit, or of enforcing such notice by such legal measures as should be necessary, the plantations not being at the time of the demise to the plaintiff parcel of any farm ; and that R. did afterwards kill and destroy rabbits. The defendant, in his plea, set out the lease which contained the demise of lands and pools, "for the better description whereof a plan is indorsed on the second skin of these presents." The plan was not set out. The defendant then pleaded, that the rabbits killed by R. were killed by him on his own farm with ferrets only :—Held, that the exception as to killing rabbits extended not only to farms existing at the time of the demise to the plaintiff, but also to farms subsequently created. Newton v. Wilmot, 8 M. & W. 711 ; 10 L. J., Ex. 476.

Held, also, that the declaration was bad, as not containing any breach, the demise to R. not constituting any breach of the defendant's covenant. Ib.

Water Supply—House Let out in Flats—Damage by Water.]—The defendant demised the ground-floor of his house to the plaintiff under a lease containing a covenant that the lessee might "peaceably hold and enjoy the said demised premises during the said term without any interruption by the lessor, or any person lawfully claiming through or in trust for him." The remainder of the house was let out in floors to different tenants. Before and during the demise to the plaintiff the water supply was effected by means of a main service pipe connected with a cistern placed at the top of the house, branch pipes being inserted into the main pipe for the supply of water to each floor. The tenants paid a proportion of the water-rate for the supply to their respective premises. The branch pipe on the first floor suddenly burst, and the water therefrom poured down into the plaintiff's premises and injured his goods. In an action for damages the jury found that the branch pipe when fixed (which was before the demise) was a reasonably fit and proper one for the purpose for which it was fixed and intended, and that there was no negligence or want of skill in the fixing and maintaining the pipe where and as it was :—Held, that the plaintiff had no cause of action founded upon the covenant for quiet enjoyment, because the covenant was prospective, and there had been no act of omission or commission during the demise to the plaintiff causing an interruption of his enjoyment. Anderson v. Oppenheimer, 49 L. J., Q. B. 708 ; 5 Q. B. D. 602—C. A.

Held, also, that the apparatus for the water supply being for the common benefit of the plaintiff and the other tenants, the plaintiff had no cause of action founded upon the principle laid down in Rylands v. Fletcher (L. R. 3 H. L. 330). Ib.

b. Breach of.

Demand of Rent by Mortgagee.]—In 1842 the defendant and two trustees, under a power given to the trustees in the defendant's father's will, created a term in certain estates, which, by a deed of 1843, the trustees assigned by way of mortgage for the purpose of raising money to pay the defendant's debts. By the deed of assignment, the defendant had power to lease, with the concurrence of the mortgagees. In 1846 the defendant made a lease, without the concurrence of the mortgagees, to the plaintiff, and covenanted for the plaintiff's quiet enjoyment without let, suit, trouble, denial, eviction, molestation, or disturbance by the defendant, or any person claiming under him. In 1851 the plaintiff, who had not heard of the mortgage deed before, received notice from the surviving mortgagee to pay over the rent to him, and on discovering that his lease was defective, he consented to, and did give up possession to the surviving mortgagee, who entered. The surviving mortgagee gave the plaintiff 75*l.* as compensation for money he had laid out, which he accepted, without prejudice to his right of action against the defendant :—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover damages on the covenant for quiet enjoyment, and that there was an eviction, or at least a molestation, or disturbance coming within its terms ; also, that the disturbance was by a person claiming under the defendant, and that the receipt of the 75*l.* did not affect the plaintiff's right to recover. Carpenter v. Parker, 3 C. B. (N.S.) 206 ; 27 L. J., C. P. 78 ; 6 W. R. 98.

Ejectment by Mortgagee—Liability of Mortgagor—Estoppel.]—Where a mortgagor demised incumbered land, and covenanted for quiet enjoyment, and the lessee was ejected by the mortgagees :—Held, that although the legal estate was outstanding in the mortgagees, yet as there was a reversion in the landlord by estoppel, he was liable upon his covenant. Harteup v. Bell, 1 Cab. & E. 19—Affirmed in C. A.

Notice by Superior Landlord to pay Rent to him—Damages.]—The defendants granted the lease of certain premises to the plaintiff, with a covenant by the lessors for quiet enjoyment thereof by the lessee, and a covenant by the lessee to pay rent to the lessors. At a time when the plaintiff was in arrear with his rent, the defendants sent a notice to his tenants requiring them to pay their rent to the defendants' agent instead of to the plaintiff. One of the plaintiff's tenants accordingly paid his rent to the defendants' agent. The plaintiff having brought an action against the defendants for breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment:—Held, that this notice was a breach by the lessors of the covenant for quiet enjoyment; that non-payment of the rent by the lessee did not disentitle him to the protection of that covenant; and that he was entitled to more than nominal damages for the breach of it. Edge v. Boileau, 55 L. J., Q. B. 90; 16 Q. B. D. 117; 53 L. T. 907; 34 W. R. 103.

Ejectment by Superior Landlord.]—The lessee of two houses under a lease, which contained a covenant to keep the houses in repair, sublet one of them, and covenanted for the quiet enjoyment by the sub-lessee without any interruption from or by him the first lessee, "or any person or persons whomsoever lawfully claiming by, from, through, or under him." The house let to the sub-lessee was kept in good repair, but in consequence of the other house being allowed to go out of repair, the superior landlord issued a writ, and recovered possession under a power of re-entry in the superior lease:—Held, in an action to recover damages for breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment, that there had been no breach, for the superior landlord was not a person claiming "by, through, or under" the first lessee. Stanley v. Hayes (3 Q. B. 105) approved and followed. Kelly v. Rogers, 61 L. J., Q. B. 604; [1892] 1 Q. B. 910; 66 L. T. 582; 40 W. R. 516; 56 J. P. 789—C. A.

Interference by Subsequent Lessee.]—A. was sub-lessee of stalls and boxes in a theatre, with free admission at all performances except balls and masquerades, and with a covenant for quiet enjoyment. The lessor was lessee under the Crown of the whole of the theatre for a long term of years, and was under a covenant with the freeholder not to convert the theatre to any but theatrical purposes. The lessor, however, agreed to let the whole of the building to persons other than A. for the purposes of holding religious meetings, and these persons took possession of the theatre, and boarded over the site of A.'s stalls, and took down the partition between the boxes which had been constructed on the sites of those originally leased to A. Upon motion to restrain A.'s lessor and the persons in possession of the theatre from interfering with A.'s right:—Held, that there was an interference with A.'s right by his lessor, and the persons in possession of the theatre; but the theatre not being ready to be used as a theatre, and the persons in possession undertaking not to renew their engagement with A.'s lessor (which was a short one), no injunction was granted, but A. was awarded nominal damages and the costs of the suit. Leader v. Moody, L. R. 20 Eq. 145; 32 L. T. 422.

—— Nuisance.]—A. granted a lease to B. of two rooms with a covenant for quiet enjoyment. Then A. let a room above the two to C. for dancing and other entertainments. B. brought this action against A. for an injunction to restrain such use of the upper room, alleging that the dancing over his head, and the behaviour of visitors on the stairs, was a breach of the covenant:—Held, that the annoyance was no breach of the covenant. Shaw v. Stenton (2 H. & N. 858) and Sanderson v. Berwick-upon-Tweed Corporation (13 Q. B. D. 547) explained. Jenkins v. Jackson, 58 L. J., Ch. 124; 40 Ch. D. 71; 60 L. T. 105; 37 W. R. 253.

Covenant by Tenant to carry on Timber Business—Access of Air to Drying Sheds—Interference by Landlord.]—Where premises were demised for the purpose of the business of a timber merchant, and the lease contained a covenant by the lessee to carry on such business, and also a covenant by the lessor for quiet enjoyment, the lessor is under an obligation to abstain from doing anything on his adjoining property which would substantially interfere with the carrying on of the business in the ordinary course, and cannot consequently erect buildings on his land, which will interfere with the access of air to the lessee's drying sheds. Aldin v. Latimer Clark, Muirhead & Co., 63 L. J., Ch. 601; [1894] 2 Ch. 427; 8 R. 352; 71 L. T. 119; 42 W. R. 453.

User of Premises for Trade Purposes—Trade of Delicate Nature.]—The covenant for quiet enjoyment has been recently extended, and is broken in the case of interference by the lessor, or those lawfully claiming under him, not only with the title to or possession of land, but also with the lawful enjoyment of the premises for the purposes for which they were let. Robinson v. Kilvert, 58 L. J., Ch. 392; 41 Ch. D. 88; 61 L. T. 60; 37 W. R. 545—C. A.

Therefore, where a lessor has let premises to be used for a particular business—e.g. storing paper—he would be guilty of a breach of such a covenant if he or persons lawfully claiming under him were afterwards to do anything which would render these premises unfit for storing paper generally; but would not, in the absence of express stipulation, be guilty if the act done, being harmless in itself, were nevertheless detrimental to the storing of some particular class of paper. Ib.

Lease of Residential Flat—Conversion of Part of Building into Club.]—Where a landlord enters into an agreement to let a residential flat to a tenant, under conditions and regulations which shew on the face of them that the building in which the flat is situated is intended to be used for residential flats only, and the building has in fact been so used, the landlord will be restrained at the suit of the tenant from converting a large part of the building into a club during the tenancy. Hudson v. Cripps, 65 L. J., Ch. 328; [1896] 1 Ch. 265; 73 L. T. 741; 44 W. R. 200; 60 J. P. 393.

Flooding of Mine.]—The defendant leased to the Parkside Mining Company a mine for the purpose of being worked as an iron mine; subsequently he leased to the plaintiffs an adjoining mine for the same purpose, the lease to the plaintiffs containing a covenant for quiet enjoyment of the mine, "without any interruption or eviction by the lessor, his heirs or assigns, or any other person or persons claiming or to claim by, from, or under him." The Parkside Company, while properly working their mine under the terms of their lease from the defendant, struck a "feeder," with the result that a large body of underground water, the existence of which was unsuspected, and the nature of which was uncertain, flooded their mine, and rising in the levels found its way through a natural fissure in the limestone rock into the plaintiffs' mine, which was on a higher level, and caused considerable damage. The plaintiffs having brought an action to recover damages for breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment:—Held, that the interruption to the working of the plaintiffs' mine by the irruption of water not having been caused by any direct act of interruption, or by any act the consequences of which either were foreseen or ought to have been foreseen by the defendant at the time when the covenant was entered into, was not an interruption within the meaning of the covenant, and that the defendant was not liable. Harrison v. Muncaster, 61 L. J., Q. B. 102; [1891] 2 Q. B. 680; 65 L. T. 481; 40 W. R. 102; 56 J. P. 69—C. A.

Title and Possession not affected—Drainage—Causing Floods.]—In order to constitute a breach of covenant for quiet enjoyment in a lease of land, it is sufficient that the lessee's ordinary and lawful enjoyment of the demised land be substantially interfered with by the acts of the lessor or those lawfully claiming under him, although neither the title to the land nor the possession of the land be otherwise affected. By a general system of drainage made by the defendants in a particular district various farms in that district were drained by several underground drains, by which the water was carried through all such farms. The defendants let one of these farms to the plaintiff, with the usual covenant for quiet enjoyment against the acts of the lessors or any person lawfully claiming through or under them. The defendants had previously let another of such farms adjoining, but lying above the plaintiff's farm, to one C., with a right to use the drains through the plaintiff's land, so far as they were adequate to carry the water from C.'s farm. C., during the plaintiff's tenancy, first, by an excessive user of the drainage system, which was properly constructed for the purpose of drainage, caused the water passing down the drains in his farm to escape and overflow into the plaintiff's farm and damage his crops. Secondly, by a proper user by C. of the drains passing through the plaintiff's farm, damage was also done to a field in the plaintiff's farm by the escape of water, but this arose from one of the drains there having been imperfectly and improperly constructed:—Held, that the defendants were liable to the plaintiff for a breach of their covenant for quiet enjoyment in respect of this last damage, as there had been within the meaning of such covenant a substantial interruption by a person who lawfully claimed through the defendants; but that the defendants were not liable for the damage done by the excessive user by C. of the drainage system, which was properly constructed, either under their covenant for quiet enjoyment or under the law of trespass or nuisance. Sanderson v. Berwick-upon-Tweed Corporation, 53 L. J., Q. B. 559; 13 Q. B. D. 547; 51 L. T. 495; 33 W. R. 67; 49 J. P. 6—C. A.

Action to stay Waste.]—Suit in chancery to stay waste is not a breach of covenant for quiet possession, though bill be dismissed with costs. Morgan v. Hunt, 2 Vent. 213.

Tenant's Right to Indemnity for Distress.]—The plaintiff took of the defendant a house at a yearly rent, under an agreement, by the terms of which the latter undertook that, up to the date of the agreement, he had paid, or would pay, "all arrears of rent, rates, taxes, or assessments"; and the former agreed, that "from and after that day, the same should be kept paid by him for the time he might occupy the premises." At the expiration of the first quarter, the superior landlord distrained for rent:—Held, that there was no implied duty in the defendant to indemnify the plaintiff against this claim, although the agreement between them stipulated for a yearly rent; the defendant having, by the subsequent clause, expressly undertaken to keep the reserved rent paid. Upton v. Fergusson, 3 M. & Scott, 88.

A defendant held premises under a lease from H. at a certain rent, and entered into an agreement with one N. for the sale of all the household furniture, &c., on the premises for a certain sum, to be paid by instalments, covenanting, on payment of the whole of the purchase-money, to demise the premises to N. for twenty-five years; the lease to contain the like covenants on the part of N. as were contained in the lease under which the defendant held. The agreement also contained a covenant that N. should, in the meantime, and until such lease should be granted, pay the rent and perform all the covenants which would be to be performed by him in case the lease was actually granted, with a power of distress for nonpayment of the rent. N. was let into immediate possession under this agreement, and paid the rent. The defendant neglecting to satisfy the rent due to the superior landlord, the latter distrained and sold the goods of N.:—Held, that there was an implied duty on the defendant to indemnify N. from the consequences of the non-performance of his covenants with the superior landlord, and that case was the proper form of action for the breach of such implied duty. Hancock v. Caffyn, 1 M. & Scott, 521; 8 Bing. 358; 1 L. J., C. P. 104.

Land Tax.]—A distress upon demised premises for land-tax due from the lessor before the demise is not a breach of his covenant that the lessee shall enjoy "without any disturbance of or by him, the defendant, or any other person or persons lawfully claiming or to claim by, from, or under him or them," because the claim for land-tax is a claim, not through him, but against him. Stanley v. Hayes, 2 G. & D. 411; 3 Q. B. 105; 11 L. J., Q. B. 176.

For Title and Against Incumbrances.]—The defendant in 1844 let, by agreement, coal under his land for twenty-five years, with full powers to work the coal. The lessees entered and worked it, and in 1845, after their working had ceased, the defendant sold part of his land to J. J. had seen the workings, but was not proved to be aware of the agreement. The defendant covenanted with J., his appointees, heirs, and assigns, for title, quiet enjoyment, and against incumbrances. In 1846 J. appointed part of the land to the plaintiff, who built on it, and who was not aware of the coal workings. In 1865 the lands and houses subsided, owing to workings carried on before J. bought. In 1848 some fire-clay was taken by the lessees; the value was small, and the taking illegal; but this did not contribute to the damages. In 1867 the plaintiff, as J.'s appointee, sued the defendant on the covenants, alleging the entry and working of the lessees as breaches:—Held, that the benefit of the covenants passed to the plaintiff as appointee, that a variance between the time of working as laid in the declaration, and as proved, was fatal. Spoor v. Green, 43 L. J., Ex. 57; L. R. 9 Ex. 99; 30 L. T. 393; 22 W. R. 547.

Held, that there was no breach of the covenant for title, that the plaintiff had bought the land without the coal, that the covenant for quiet enjoyment was not broken by what was done in 1848, that the making of the agreement if a breach at all, was not a continuing breach, that the action was barred by the Statute of Limitations. Ib.

A tenant for life under a marriage settlement, with power to grant leases for years, determinable on three lives, granted a lease of part of the estate to A. during the life of the latter and his two sons, and the survivors and survivor, covenanting for quiet enjoyment for and during the term, without interruption of lessor, his heirs, and assigns, or any other person claiming any estate, &c., under him, or any of his ancestors. The lessor died, and his eldest son, who was tenant in tail under the settlement, evicted the eldest son of the lessee, the third life being still in being:—Held, first that the eviction by the tenant in tail was a breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment: and secondly, that the term demised by the lease meant a term to endure during three lives, and not merely during the life of the lessor. Evans v. Vaughan, 6 D. & R. 349; 4 B. & C. 261; 3 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 217; 28 R. R. 250.

A lessor of a mine or vein of coal lying under certain closes covenanted that the lessee should and might, peaceably and quietly, have, hold, occupy, possess and enjoy the mine, without any let, suit, trouble, molestation, interruption or disturbance whatsoever. The lessor, in working ironstone lying between the surface of the soil and the demised coal, caused part of the roof of the coal-mine to crash and fall in, and to be flooded. The working of the ironstone was done in a workmanlike manner:—Held, that these acts constituted a breach of the covenant, for which the lessee might maintain an action thereon, and being continued at the time of action brought, also entitled him to an injunction restraining the lessor from working the ironstone within such a distance of the surface as interfered with the lessee getting the coal with full advantage and profit. Shaw v. Stenton, 2 H. & N. 858; 27 L. J., Ex. 253; 6 W. R. 327.

A. covenanted with his lessee for quiet enjoyment, as against any person "claiming by, from or under" him. An eviction by a prior appointee of A. and B. is a breach of the covenant. Calvert v. Sebright, 15 Beav. 156.

Held, also, that the case was not altered by the grant to the lessee being "as far as in his power lay, or he lawfully might or could." Ib.

Farm and Shooting Let to Separate Tenants—Destruction of Rabbits by Tenant.]—In 1857 A. demised to B. a farm called Upton Farm, containing 264 acres, about forty of which consisted of timber and underwood, with furze covers in various other parts of the farm. This lease reserved to the lessor "all timber and other trees, mines, minerals and quarries on the said farm, and also the exclusive right of shooting, fishing and sporting on the said farm," with liberty to the lessor, his servants, and others by his authority, at all seasonable times to enter for any of the purposes contained in the reservations therein contained. In 1860 A. demised Upton Castle, and about sixty acres of land adjoining it, to C., and also "the exclusive right of shooting, sporting over, and taking the game, rabbits and wild-fowl upon the premises, and also upon the entire manor of Upton," including the 264 acres under the lease to B., reserving to the lessor all trees, underwood, thorns and bushes growing on the land, as well as all mines, minerals and quarries, &c., with a covenant for quiet enjoyment, without interruption by the lessor or any person or persons lawfully claiming by, from or under him. B. finding the rabbits too numerous, by means of ferrets and guns destroyed a large number of them; he also cut all the underwood on his farm, and grubbed up and destroyed the furze covers, and thereby materially interrupted and injured C.'s right of sporting:—Held, that inasmuch as these acts on the part of B. were not warranted by the terms of the demise to him, they did not constitute a breach of A.'s covenant for quiet enjoyment in the lease of 1860. Jeffryes v. Evans, 19 C. B. (N.S.) 246; 34 L. J., C. P. 261; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 584; 13 L. T. 72; 13 W. R. 864. And see Newton v. Wilmot, ante, col. 1143.

Omitting to insert Covenant in Underlease.]—The governors of the Foundling Hospital granted a lease for years of a dwelling to L., who covenanted that the premises, or any part thereof, should not be converted into a shop or other place for carrying on any trade or public show of business during the term, without the consent in writing of the lessors. L. assigned the premises to M., who, by an underlease, demised the premises to F. with a covenant for quiet enjoyment, "to hold the same without any lawful let, suit, trouble, molestation, eviction, interruption, claim, or demand whatsoever, by or for her, her heirs, executors, administrators or assigns, or any person or persons whomsoever claiming or to claim by, from, under, or in trust for her, them, or any of them, or by or through her or their acts, means, right, title, forfeiture, privity or procurement." In this lease the covenant against converting the premises into a shop was omitted. F. assigned the lease to S., who underlet it to W., and he converted part of the premises into a shop, without the consent of the original lessors, who brought an ejectment, and evicted him for a forfeiture. M. having died, S. declared against her executor for a breach of the covenant of quiet enjoyment, averring that by her act, and through her means and procurement in making the underlease to F., without any covenant similar to that in the original lease to L., he was hindered from quietly enjoying:—Held, that the action would not lie. Spencer v. Marriot, 2 D. & R. 665; 1 B. & C. 457; 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 134; 25 R. R. 453.

In Lease of Water.]—Demise of a mill and the stream of water flowing in the leat belonging to the lessor, except so much of the water as should be sufficient for the supply of persons with whom the lessor should have already contracted, or should thereafter contract to supply, provided that such a quantity should be left as should be sufficient to supply the mill for twelve hours a day. Covenant that the lessee should enjoy without interruption of the lessor, or of persons claiming by his act, means, consent, default, privity, or procurement:—Held, no demise of water for twelve hours a day, and that diversions occasioned by contracts previously to the demise were no breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment. Blatchford v. Plymouth Corporation, 3 Bing. (N.C.) 691; 4 Scott, 429; 3 Hodges, 86; 6 L. J., C. P. 217.

Eviction by Title Paramount.]—S. being entitled to premises under a lease for ninety-nine years, made to him in 1790 by a tenant for life and his eldest son, the remainderman in tail granted an underlease of the premises, in 1795, for sixty years, to A. and H., their executors, administrators and assigns, with a covenant for quiet enjoyment by the lessees, their executors, administrators and assigns, for and during the term thereby granted, "without any lawful let, suit, trouble, eviction, ejection, molestation or interruption of or by S., his heirs, executors, administrators and assigns, or of or by any other person or persons whomsoever, lawfully claiming or to claim by, from, or under him, or any of them, or by his, their or any of their acts, means, consent, neglect, default, privity or procurement." The tenant for life and his son, the lessors in the original lease (with the nature of whose title S. was made acquainted, and who at the time of making the lease gave him a bond conditioned for the due observance of their covenant for quiet enjoyment), having died, the ultimate remainderman, who was no party to the lease of 1790, entered by his title paramount, and evicted the plaintiff, who was in possession as assignee under the lease of 1795:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to maintain an action against S. in respect of such eviction, upon his covenant for quiet enjoyment, although it was contended that S. might and ought, when he took the lease of 1790, to have required the lessors to join in a common recovery to cut off the entails, the court observing, that the not procuring of such common recovery to be suffered was not a neglect or a default within the meaning of the covenant, it not appearing that S. had the power to compel the parties to suffer a recovery. Woodhouse v. Jenkins, 2 M. & Scott, 599; 9 Bing. 431; 2 L. J., C. P. 38.

If a lease contains a covenant for quiet enjoyment against the lessor, and those who claim under him, the lessee cannot, upon an eviction by a paramount title, recover under the implied covenant for general title implied in the word "demise." Merrill v. Frame, 4 Taunt. 329; 13 R. R. 612.

A tenant for life, with remainder over by indenture demised to the lessee, his executors, &c., for the term of fifteen years, without any express covenant for quiet enjoyment. The lessee was evicted by the remainderman, after the death of the tenant for life, but before the expiration of the fifteen years:—Held, that the lessee could not maintain an action of covenant against the executor of the tenant for life in respect of such eviction. Adams v. Gibney, 4 M. & P. 491; 6 Bing. 656; 8 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 242; 31 R. R. 514.

A tenant from year to year, who had been evicted by the reversioner after the determination of the landlord's interest, cannot maintain an action upon an implied covenant for quiet enjoyment against his landlord. Penfold v. Abbott, 32 L. J., Q. B. 67; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 517; 7 L. T. 384; 11 W. R. 169.

If a lessor's estate expires during the term, and the lessee is thereupon evicted by title paramount, no action can be maintained against the lessor for the breach of any implied covenant for title or for quiet enjoyment, any such implied covenant terminating with the expiration of the lessor's estate. Baynes v. Lloyd, supra.

Measure of Damages.]—A. entered into possession of premises under a lease expiring in 1864, and in 1860 obtained from the lessor another lease of the premises, to commence from the termination of the former lease. Before the expiration of the first lease, the second lease was repudiated by one claiming under a good title. In an action for a breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment under the reversionary lease, A. is entitled to recover from the lessor the value of the term of which he has been deprived, and not merely the damages ordinarily given on the breach of a contract for the sale of land. Lock v. Furze, 19 C. B. (N.S.) 96; 34 L. J., C. P. 201; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 726; 12 L. T. 731; 13 W. R. 971. Affirmed, 1 H. & R. 397; 35 L. J., C. P. 141; L. R. 1 C. P. 441; 15 L. T. 161; 14 W. R. 403—Ex. Ch.

The plaintiff, a lessee of land, brought an action against the lessor and against other lessees who claimed a right of way over the plaintiff's land under a grant from the same lessor, denying the right and claiming an injunction against the lessees; or, if the court should hold that they had a right of way, then damages from the lessor under his covenant for quiet enjoyment. At the trial the other lessees established their right of way, and judgment was given against the lessor for damages for the loss sustained by the plaintiff by reason of the exercise of the right of way:—Held, that the measure of damages payable by the lessor was not the permanent injury to the land, but only the damage sustained at the commencement of the action. But that the lessor, being the cause of the whole litigation, must pay the costs of the plaintiff and the other lessees. Child v. Stenning, 48 L. J., Ch. 392; 11 Ch. D. 82; 40 L. T. 302; 27 W. R. 462—C. A.

The defendant demised to the plaintiff, a floral and market gardener, garden ground for a term of years, with a covenant for quiet enjoyment, "without any interruption whatever from or by the defendant or his executors or administrators or any other person or persons lawfully claiming by, from or under him or them"; and the plaintiff, having entered into possession and built a conservatory on the ground, an action was brought against him by C., who claimed title to the ground under a prior lease from the defendant. Of this action the plaintiff duly informed the defendant by letter, and requested to know what he was to do, to which letter the defendant returned no answer. Thereupon the plaintiff, relying on the defendant's demise to him, defended the action, in which a verdict was found for C., with 40*s.* damages against the present plaintiff:—Held, that the plaintiff, in an action against the defendant to recover damages for the latter's breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment by reason of C.'s action, might recover damages as the necessary and immediate consequences of such breach, under the following heads:—1. The damages and costs recovered against the plaintiff in C.'s action. 2. The plaintiff's own costs, as between attorney and client, of defending that action. 3. Compensation for the loss of the ground, estimated not merely at its bare yearly value, but also by what the plaintiff might have made of it during the term by his occupancy of it in his trade as a florist. 4. Compensation for loss in erecting and removing the conservatory. Rolph v. Crouch, 37 L. J., Ex. 8; L. Q. 3 Ex. 44; 17 L. T. 249; 16 W. R. 252.

c. Pleadings and Evidence.

Claim.]—In an action on a covenant for quiet enjoyment, the plaintiff may state generally that A., lawfully claiming title under the defendant, entered by virtue of such title on the premises, without setting forth the particulars of A.'s title. Hodgson v. East India Co., 8 Term Rep. 278; Lloyd v. Tomkies, 1 Term Rep. 671. S. P., Foster v. Pierson, 4 Term Rep. 617.

A declaration for breach of a covenant or contract for quiet enjoyment must allege an eviction by a person claiming title paramount. Hall v. City of London Brewery Co., 2 B. & S. 737; 31 L. J., Q. B. 257; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 18.

In an action on a covenant for quiet enjoyment an assignee, who has converted lands assigned to him into pleasure grounds, and has erected buildings on them, cannot recover the value of the improvements unless the special damage is stated in his declaration specifically. Quære, if so stated he could recover. Lewis v. Campbell, 8 Taunt. 715; 21 R. R. 516.

A declaration having set out an indenture from A. to B., in which it was recited that S. demised the premises to A. by indenture, and it was afterwards stated that S. entered and ejected C. from the premises for a forfeiture:—Held, that the court might, after verdict, presume that S. had a title to the premises, although there was no express allegation of that fact; and although part of the special damage laid in the declaration did not fall strictly within the covenant alleged to be broken; as it must be presumed, after verdict, that the jury was directed at the trial not to take that part into their consideration. S. C., nom. Campbell v. Lewis, 3 B. & Ald. 392; 21 R. R. 520—Ex. Ch.

A declaration alleged that the defendant demised to W. premises for a term of years: that the defendant covenanted that he had full power and authority to demise; and that W., paying rent, and observing covenants in the lease, should peaceably enjoy; that W. entered and assigned to the plaintiff, who entered; that W. observed the covenants, but that the defendant broke his covenant in this, to wit, that he had not power to demise to W. for the term, but, on the contrary, was only interested for the life of S. C.; that S. C. died, and that E. C., lawfully claiming in that behalf, evicted the plaintiff:—Held, that the declaration was bad for not alleging the eviction to have been the act of the defendant, or of any one claiming by a title prior to the plaintiff. Brookes v. Humphries, 5 Bing. (N.C.) 55; 6 Scott, 756; 1 Arn. 385; 7 D. P. C. 118; 8 L. J., C. P. 34; 2 Jur. 945.

A declaration stated, that "before and at the time of making the agreement after mentioned, the defendant held the house and premises after mentioned for the residue of a term of years, and thereupon afterwards agreed to let to the plaintiff, who agreed to take of the defendant, the house and premises at a certain rent; and in consideration of the premises, the defendant promised the plaintiff that he should quietly hold and enjoy the house and premises during the term, without any eviction from the parties entitled to the reversion; nevertheless, he, the plaintiff, was evicted by the party entitled to the reversion":—Held, that the declaration was bad, inasmuch as, the plaintiff having declared on the simple relation of landlord and tenant, no such duty as that laid as the defendant's promise arose from that relation. Granger v. Collins, 6 M. & W. 458; 9 L. J., Ex. 172.

A covenant to permit and suffer the covenantee peaceably and quietly to enjoy an annuity secured on premises demised by the defendant for a term of years to trustees, for the purpose of such security, and for raising thereout, by mortgage or sale, a sum of money to be paid to the annuitant; and that the covenantor would not hinder, molest, or disturb him in the peaceable enjoyment of the annuity, and would do all such further and other lawful and reasonable acts and things, conveyances, and assurances in the law, for the further and better granting and securing the annuity, as should be required: and the breaches assigned were, that (an arrear of annuity having accrued) the defendant did not suffer the covenantee peaceably to enjoy; but on the contrary, hindered, molested, and disturbed him in this, to wit, that although requested to do a reasonable act for the further securing the annuity, that is to say, that the defendant should direct the trustees to raise, levy, and pay to the plaintiff the arrears; yet he would not; and that although requested to direct the trustees to take up money on mortgage of the premises, for the purpose of paying the arrears, and to join therein and deliver up the deeds, yet he would not:—Held, to be ill-assigned, the refusal to direct not being an act of molestation; for the covenant not being personal in that respect, and it not being shewn that the act required to be done by the defendant was such a necessary act as that the annuity could not be enjoyed without its being done on his part, and that he was consequently under an obligation to give such direction, it was not broken by such refusal. Warn v. Bickford, 9 Price, 43.

Action for a breach of covenant for quiet enjoyment. The plaintiff's assignee of the lease was evicted and himself put to costs; in an action against him by the assignee for the eviction, he must shew by whom the assignee was evicted; hence, stating generally that a third person was seised in fee of the premises and that the assignee was evicted, is sufficient. Semble, under the word "demise" the lessee may maintain an action of covenant against the lessor, for not having sufficient power to demise for the whole term, whereby plaintiff was put to expense in procuring a better title for the whole term. Fraser v. Skey, 2 Chit. 646.

Defence.]—In an action for quiet enjoyment, the declaration stated, that, before the demise to the plaintiff, the defendant made a devise to A., which was then subsisting; that, in order to get into possession, the plaintiff brought an ejectment, but was nonsuited on account of that prior demise; and that he had never been in possession; plea, that for the first half-year of the plaintiff's lease the plaintiff might have enjoyed, but that, for nonpayment of the rent for twenty-one days after that half-year, the defendant had a right to re-enter, according to a proviso in the lease, and that he did re-enter:—Held, no answer to the plaintiff's demand. Ludwell v. Newman, 6 Term Rep. 458; 3 R. R. 231.

A declaration, against executors for a breach of covenant for quiet enjoyment of an estate for life, against all having lawful title from the testator, alleged that they, having lawful title, entered. The plea traversed, that the covenant of the testator was broken during the continuance of the term:—Held, that although the plea was demurrable for making such general traverse, yet, as the declaration was also bad, for not alleging that the executors entered, having lawful title from the testator, it must be taken that the plaintiff had alleged a sufficient breach in his declaration, and that the averment of lawful title meant mesne title derived from the testator, and that this being so, the plea put the title in issue. Fox v. Waters, 4 P. & D. 1; 12 A. & E. 43; 9 L. J., Q. B. 329; 4 Jur. 555.

Evidence.]—To shew the lawful title of the executors, the plaintiff proved that they had taken possession of the estate, and also proved admissions by one of them, that they held it under a deed of gift from the testator prior to the covenant declared upon:—Held, that, as the allegation, that the executors having lawful title entered, was not divisible, the plaintiff was bound to prove a joint title in the defendants; and that the admission by one, as to their holding under the deed of gift, was not evidence against the other. Ib.

Held, also, that although the admission was made by one of two co-executors, it was not made by him quâ executor, and, therefore, did not admit a breach of covenant by the testator. Ib.

Declaration on a covenant in a lease by the defendant, that the plaintiff shall have and enjoy the demised premises from a day named, during a certain term. Breach, that the plaintiff on the day entered upon and became possessed of the premises for the term, but was not able to enjoy the premises in this, viz. that the plaintiff being so possessed, the defendant entered into the premises, and upon the plaintiff's possession, and expelled and kept him out. Plea, that defendant did not enter and expel him; such breach is not proved by evidence that the plaintiff came to take possession; but was refused entrance by the defendant, who continued occupying the premises, and never admitted him. Hawkes v. Orton, 5 A. & E. 367; 6 N. & M. 842.

Generally.]—By a deed after reciting a grant to A. in fee, and that the defendant's wife was the heiress of A., who died intestate, and reciting an appointment in fee by the defendant and his wife, in favour of the plaintiff, the defendant covenanted that, notwithstanding any act by him or his wife, or A., committed, he and his wife were lawfully seised, and "that, notwithstanding any act as aforesaid," he and his wife had a good right to convey; and that it should be lawful for the plaintiff to quietly occupy, without interruption by the defendant and his wife, or any person lawfully claiming under them or A.; and that the defendant and his wife, and all persons claiming under them, or A., would execute to the plaintiff all further assurances. In an action for breach of this covenant, the declaration averred, that P. claimed, as heir-at-law of A., deceased, lawful right and title to the premises; and then set out a recovery in ejectment by P., by which the plaintiff was evicted. The defendant pleaded that A. died intestate, leaving the defendant's wife her only child and heiress-at-law; and that the plaintiff instigated P. to claim a right and title to the premises; and that P. in consequence made the claim, and prosecuted the ejectment. At the trial, the jury found that the defendant's wife was not the heiress-at-law of A.:—Held, first, that the jury was not estopped, by the recital in the deed of the heirship of the defendant's wife, from finding that she was not, in fact, such heiress. Young v. Raincock, 7 C. B. 310; 18 L. J., C. P. 193; 13 Jur. 539.

Held, secondly, that the plea, without such allegation of the heirship of the defendant's wife, was no answer to the action. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that the allegation in the declaration, that P. "claimed, as heir-at-law of A., lawful title," sufficiently shewed, after being pleaded over to, that he had a lawful title. Ib.

Held, fourthly, that the generality of the terms of the covenant for quiet enjoyment was not restricted by the introductory words of the covenant for title and power to convey, to any act done by the defendant and his wife, or A. Ib.

5. Not to Assign or Underlet.

a. The Covenant.

Generally.]—The power of assignment is incident to the estate of a lessee, without the word "assigns" unless expressly restrained. Church v. Brown, 15 Ves. 264; 10 R. R. 74. And see Greenaway v. Adams, 12 Ves. 395.

A proviso against assignment without licence in a lease to the lessee, his executors, administrators, and assigns, is not repugnant; for the construction is that it extends to such assigns only as he may lawfully have, viz. by licence or by law, as assignees in bankruptcy. Weatherall v. Geering, 12 Ves. 504; 8 R. R. 369.

A proviso in a lease for re-entry upon assignment by the lessee, his executors, administrators, or assigns, without licence, ceases by assignment with licence, though to a particular individual. Brummell v. Macpherson, 14 Ves. 173.

Covenant not to assign without licence, once dispensed with, the condition is gone both in law and equity: but the principle is questionable, and not to be extended; for instance, to a mere act where the licence is to be in writing. Macher v. Foundling Hospital, 1 Ves. & B. 191.

Where there is a right of entry given for assigning or underletting, if a person is found in the premises, appearing as the tenant, it is primâ facie evidence of an underletting sufficient to call upon the defendant to shew in what character such person was in possession, as tenant or as servant to the lessee. Doe d. Hindly v. Rickarby, 5 Esp. 4.

But it is not sufficient to prove the defendant, a stranger, in possession of the demised premises, and his declaration that they were demised to him by another stranger. Doe v. Payne, 1 Stark. 86; 18 R. R. 747.

And such evidence would not be sufficient, even if the tenant had covenanted not to part with the possession. Ib.

Covenant in a lease not to let, set, or demise the premises, or any part, for all or any part of the term, without consent, restrains assignment. Greenaway v. Adams, 12 Ves. 393.

Whether a usual Covenant.]—See ante, cols. 1087–1089.

Refusal of Consent.]—A lessee covenanted with the lessor not to assign the demised premises without the consent in writing of the lessor, "such consent not being arbitrarily withheld;" and it was provided by the lease that if the lessee should assign the premises without the consent in writing of the lessor, "but such consent is not to be arbitrarily withheld," the lessor might re-enter:—Held, that there was no covenant by the lessor, either express or implied, not to refuse his consent arbitrarily, but that an arbitrary refusal would leave the lessee at liberty to assign without the lessor's consent. Treloar v. Bigge, 43 L. J., Ex. 95; L. R. 9 Ex. 151; 22 W. R. 843.

An arbitrary refusal is equivalent to an "unfair and unreasonable" refusal; and a refusal "upon advice," though the grounds of refusal be not specified, is not "arbitrary." Ib.

A lessee, in a lease of a house and premises to him for twenty-one years, covenanted with the lessor, his executors, &c., that he would not carry or suffer to be carried on any other business upon the premises than that of a grocer and tea-dealer without the previous consent in writing of the lessor, his executor, &c., and that he, his executors, and permitted assigns, should not assign or underlease the premises without the like previous consent in writing, "but such consent not to be unreasonably withheld," and on the granting of such consent the lessee should pay a certain fee for the preparation of it, and give notice of any assignment to the lessor. The premises were afterwards conveyed by the lessor subject to the lease. The lessee applied for the necessary consent to enable him to mortgage the premises by way of underlease, and it was refused. On demurrer to an action for an injunction and for specific performance of the covenant, or for damages:—Held, that the words "but such consent not to be unreasonably withheld" did not amount to a contract on the part of the lessor, but were a qualification of the covenant by the lessee. Treloar v. Bigge (L. R. 9 Ex. 151) followed. Sear v. House Property and Investment Society, 50 L. J., Ch. 77; 16 Ch. D. 387; 43 L. T. 531; 29 W. R. 192; 45 J. P. 204.

In a lease when there is a covenant not to sublet without consent, but such consent must not be withheld except on reasonable objection, and a heavy rent is reserved by the lease, very strong ground for refusing the consent must be shewn, as the refusal throws a heavy burden of rent on the lessees. Sheppard v. Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, 20 W. R. 459.

A lease contained a covenant by the lessee not to assign without licence; and the lessor covenanted not to refuse his licence unreasonably or vexatiously. The lessee contracted to assign his lease to the plaintiff "subject to the landlord's approval." The lessor on being applied to for his licence refused to give it, not from any personal objection to the proposed assignee, but because he wished himself to buy up the lease in order to rebuild the premises. The lessee having failed to obtain the lessor's licence surrendered the lease to the lessor for the same price for which he had agreed with the plaintiff. In a bill by him against the lessor and lessee for specific performance of the contract to assign the lease to him:—Held, that the reference to the landlord's approval in the contract did not throw upon the lessee the duty of taking legal proceedings to oblige the lessor to give his licence; and that having used all reasonable efforts to induce the lessor to consent, he was at liberty to consider the contract at an end and make his own terms with the lessor. Lehmann v. McArthur, 37 L. J., Ch. 625; L. R. 3 Ch. 496; 18 L. T. 806; 16 W. R. 877.

—— Respectable and Responsible Person.]—Under a stipulation in a lease of coal and ironstone that the lessees shall not underlet or assign without the consent of the lessor, except to responsible persons, the lessor has no right to prohibit the letting to responsible persons. Whitehead v. Bennett, 9 W. R. 626.

By a lease of January, 1886, certain pieces of land, with an iron furnace and mill, and water rights over the river D. were demised for a term of fourteen years. The lease contained a covenant by the lessees not to assign or underlet without the consent of the lessors, but such consent was not to be "unreasonably refused, or refused to a person of responsibility and respectability." There was no covenant by the lessees to work the furnace. In June, 1889, the lessees made an agreement with the corporation of Barrow-in-Furness to assign to them the residue of the term in the lease. By this agreement the lessees bound themselves to withdraw their opposition to a Water Bill promoted by the corporation in order to obtain certain water rights in the river D., and also to procure all necessary licences for assignment: and the corporation bound themselves not to use the water rights contained in the lease in connection with the manufacture of iron. The lessors refused their licence to this proposed assignment on the ground that the corporation were not taking the lease for the purposes for which it was granted, and might have objects prejudicial to the lessors:—Held, that the corporation was not "a person of responsibility and respectability" within the meaning of the covenant in the lease; and also that in the circumstances, the consent of the lessors to the assignment had not been unreasonably withheld. Harrison v. Barrow-in-Furness Corporation, 63 L. T. 834; 39 W. R. 250.

A lessee covenanted with her lessor not to assign the demised premises, or any part thereof, for the whole or any part of the term, without having first obtained a written licence signed by the lessor, such licence not to be unreasonably withheld in the case of any respectable and responsible person who might be the proposed assignee. The lease also contained a proviso for re-entry for breach of covenant. The plaintiff, the assignee of the lessor, being desirous of obtaining possession of the premises, commenced negotiations with the lessee for the surrender of the lease. The lessee made an offer to the plaintiff's agent to sell her interest to the plaintiff for 400*l.*, but five days later, without further communication with the plaintiff, contracted to assign her interest for the same sum to the defendant, a respectable and responsible person. The lessee had no reason for preferring the defendant to the plaintiff. The plaintiff refused to give his licence for the assignment, and brought an action against the defendant, to whom the lessee had assigned the lease, for recovery of possession of the premises on the ground of forfeiture by breach of covenant:—

Held, that the plaintiff had unreasonably withheld his licence within the meaning of the covenant. Bates v. Donaldson, 65 L. J., Q. B. 578; [1896] 2 Q. B. 241; 74 L. T. 751; 44 W. R. 659; 60 J. P. 596—C. A.

Consent of Lessor or Lessee.]—A lease of mines contained a covenant that the lessee should not, without the consent of the lessor, let or assign the mines. The lessor granted to the lessee a licence to sublet a part, but the licence provided that this should not authorise any further letting or assigning of the part of the mines, the subject of the licence, without such consent as was required by the lease. The lessee then agreed to sublet to an under-lessee the part of the mines the subject of the licence, the underlease to contain provisions in all respects like those in the original lease:—Held, that, according to the agreement, the underlease ought to contain a covenant by the under-lessee against letting or assigning without the consent of the lessee, and not a covenant against letting or assigning without the consent of the lessor. Williamson v. Williamson, 43 L. J., Ch. 738; L. R. 9 Ch. 729; 31 L. T. 291. Reversing 22 W. R. 682.

Agreement that Underlease shall contain the same Covenants as Original Lease.]—The plaintiff, who was lessee of part of the property of a hospital, agreed with the defendant to grant him an underlease, "to contain all usual covenants (including a covenant not to assign or underlet without the consent of the plaintiff, such consent not to be withheld if the proposed assignee or tenant be respectable and responsible), together with such other covenants, clauses, and provisoes as are contained in the lease under which the premises are held." The original lease contained (1) a covenant that if any dispute relating to the demised premises should arise between the lessee and any other tenant of the hospital, it should be referred to the arbitration of the hospital; (2) that the lessee, his executors, administrators, or assigns, would not assign or sublet without the licence of the hospital: (3) that all demises and assignments of the demised premises should be prepared by the solicitors of the hospital:—Held, that the covenants in the original lease were not to be taken as models and inserted in the underlease with the names of the under-lessor and under-lessee substituted for the names of the original lessors and lessee respectively, but that the plaintiff was entitled to have them inserted without modification, so as to bind the under-lessee to refer disputes with tenants of the hospital to the arbitration of the hospital, not to assign or underlet without the consent of the hospital, and to have his demises and assignments prepared by the solicitors of the hospital. Williamson v. Williamson (43 L. Assignment without Consent.]—When a lease provides that the lessee shall not assign or underlet without the consent in writing of the lessor, which, however, is not to be withheld from any assignment or underlease to a respectable and responsible person, it is unnecessary to the validity of an assignment or underlease to a person of that character that the consent of the lessor should be first obtained. Hyde v. Warden, 47 L. J., Ex. 121; 3 Ex. D. 72; 37 L. T. 567; 26 W. R. 201. S. P., Tobin v. Cleary, Ir. R. 7 Ch. 17—C. A.

A lease of a farm contained a clause of forfeiture if (inter alia) the lessee should underlet or part with the possession of the demised premises, or any part thereof, without the consent in writing of the lessor first had and obtained, provided always that such consent should not be withheld if the proposed assignee or lessee were a respectable and responsible person:—Held, that the consent of the lessor was not necessary if the lessee underlet or parted with possession of the premises to a respectable and responsible person. Burford v. Unwin, 1 Cab. & E. 494.

Indorsement of Consent.]—A lease, made in 1866, contained a clause that the lessee should not assign the premises without the consent in writing of the lessor, to be endorsed on the lease. The lessee assigned with the contemporaneous consent in writing of the lessor, which was indorsed on the lease, but not on the assignment:—Held, that the assignment was valid. Ulster Permanent Building Society, In re, 13 L. R., Ir. 67.

Lessor's Consent whether Implied.]—When a lease is not assignable without the landlord's assent, the fact that the landlord did not object to the assignees taking possession cannot, irrespective of all other circumstances, be held sufficient to imply his recognition of the assignees. Elphinstone v. Monkland Iron and Coal Co., 11 App. Cas. 332—H. L. (Sc.)

Parol Licence—Sufficiency.]—Proviso in lease that lessee should not demise premises without licence in writing. Parol licence to underlet is insufficient; but if such licence is given as a snare, and under circumstances of fraud, court will relieve. Richardson v. Evans, 3 Madd. 218.

Fine in respect of Licence—"Fine, or sum of money in the nature of a fine."]—Sect. 3 of the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1892, provides that a condition in a lease against assigning or under-letting without licence shall, unless the lease contains an expressed provision to the contrary, be deemed to be subject to a proviso to the effect that "no fine, or sum of money in the nature of a fine," shall be payable for such licence:—Held, that money paid as a fine is money which the payer hands over with the intention of passing the property in it to some one else; and a sum of money required by a lessor as a condition of granting a licence to be deposited by the lessee as security for the performance of the remaining part of the contract under which the lease was granted, and which, if such contract were duly carried out by the lessee, would be repayable to him, was not a fine, or sum of money in the nature of a fine, within the meaning of the section. Cosh's Contract, In re, 66 L. J., Ch. 28; [1897] 1 Ch. 9; 75 L. T. 365; 45 W. R. 117—C. A.

Proceedings to obtain Consent — Necessary Parties.]—Premises held under a demise, containing a proviso that lessees shall not assign without the licence of the landlord in writing, are sold under a decree to a purchaser, who pays his purchase-money into court, and is let into possession; the landlord having refused to concur in the assignment, the representatives of the lessee filed a bill against him, alleging that his conduct with respect to the sale had been such as to deprive him in equity of any right to act on the legal construction of the covenant and proviso against assignment, and praying that he might be decreed to give his licence in writing for the transfer of the interest: the purchasers are necessary parties to such a bill. Maule v. Beaufort (Duke), 1 Russ. 349.

b. Upon whom Binding.

Assignees.]—Semble, that a covenant by a lessee, that he, his executors and administrators, shall not assign without licence, is not binding upon the assignee of the lessee. Paul v. Nurse, 2 M. & Ry. 525; 8 B. & C. 486; 7 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 12.

A covenant that the lessee, his executors or administrators, will not assign, does not bind his assignees. Doe d. Cheere v. Smith, 5 Taunt. 795; 1 Marsh. 359; 2 Rose, 280; 15 R. R. 660.

Personal Representatives.]—If a lease contains a proviso that the lessee and his administrators shall not set, let, or assign over the whole or part of the premises without leave in writing, on pain of forfeiting the lease, the administratrix of the lessee cannot underlet without incurring a forfeiture. Roe d. Gregson v. Harrison, 2 Term Rep. 425; 1 R. R. 513.

A parol licence to let part of the premises does not discharge the lessee from the restriction of such a proviso. Ib.

Assignees in Bankruptcy.]—An option given to a tenant to call for an extended lease, will pass to his assignees in bankruptcy, and may by them be assigned to a purchaser. Buckland v. Papillon, L. R. 1 Eq. 477; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 155. Affirmed, 36 L. J., Ch. 81; L. R. 2 Ch. 67; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 992; 15 L. T. 378; 15 W. R. 92.

But such would not have been the case, if the tenant had been restrained from alienation. Ib.

To Railway Company.]—A railway company arranged by private contract the price of the interest of a tenant in land they required, there being a covenant in his lease not to assign without the consent of his landlord:—Held, that the covenant was abrogated so as to enable the tenant to assign to the railway company without the consent of his lessor. Slipper v. Tottenham and Hampstead Junction Ry., 36 L. J., Ch. 841; L. R. 4 Eq. 112; 16 L. T. 446; 15 W. R. 861.

c. Breach of.

Sale—No Assignment Executed.]—The lease of a farm contained a covenant by the lessees, "that they would not assign or otherwise part with possession of the premises without the written consent of the lessor," with a proviso that "in case the lessees should fail in the observance or performance of any or either of the covenants and agreements on his or their part," it should be lawful for the lessor to re-enter. The lessees sold their interest in the lease to W., and the lessor in a letter consented that W. should take the farm "on the same conditions and in accordance with the lease." W. entered and took possession of the farm, but no assignment of the term was executed to him:—Held, that there was no such breach of the covenant not to assign without the written consent of the lessor, as to enable him to maintain ejectment, first, because W. appeared to have entered into possession at the instance of the lessor rather than of the lessees; and, secondly, because the consent to the assignment did not prohibit the lessees from parting with possession of the premises till a lease had been executed. West v. Dobb, 10 B. & S. 987; 39 L. J., Q. B. 190; L. R. 5 Q. B. 460; 23 L. T. 76; 18 W. R. 1167—Ex. Ch.

Underlease.]—A covenant not to assign or otherwise part with the premises, or any part thereof, for the whole or any part of the term, is broken by an underlease. Doe d. Holland v. Worsley, 1 Camp. 20.

Although underleases are not within the general words of provisoes concerning assignments. Kinnersley v. Orpe, 1 Dougl. 55. S. P., Church v. Brown, 15 Ves. 264; 10 R. R. 74.

A covenant not to assign, transfer, set over, or otherwise do or put away the lease or premises, does not extend to an underlease for part of the term. Crusoe d. Blencowe v. Bugby, 2 W. Bl. 766; 3 Wils. 234.

Letting from Year to Year.]—Letting the premises from year to year by the tenant is a breach of a covenant not to "underlease." Timms v. Baker, 49 L. T. 106.

Covenant in Restraint of Trade—Assignment to Schoolmaster.]—Where a lessee of a house and a garden for term of years covenanted with the lessor "not to use or exercise, or permit or suffered to be used or exercised, upon the demised premises or any part thereof, any trade or business whatsoever, without the licence of the lessor," and afterwards, without the licence of the lessor, assigned the lease to a schoolmaster, who carried on his business in the house and premises:—Held, that the assignment was a breach of this covenant, and the lessor entitled to re-enter under a proviso for re-entry for non-performance of covenants. Doe d. Bish v. Keeling, 1 M. & S. 95; 14 R. R. 405. And see Jones v. Thorne, 3 D. & R. 152; 1 B. & C. 715; 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 200; 25 R. R. 546.

Assignment to Partner of Part of Premises.]—Where a lease contained a proviso for re-entry, in case the tenant should demise, lease, grant, or let the demised premises, or any part or parcel thereof, or convey to any person whomsoever for all or any part of the term, without the licence of the lessor in writing, and the tenant without such licence, agreed with a person to enter into partnership with him, and that he should have the use of a back chamber and some other parts of the premises exclusively, and of the rest jointly with the tenant, and accordingly let him into possession:—Held, that the lessor was entitled to re-enter. Roe d. Dingley v. Sales, 1 M. & S. 297.

Ejectment—Clause of Re-entry Unnecessary.]—In an agreement enuring as a lease, "it was stipulated and conditioned that the lessee shall not underlet":—Held, that these words created a condition, upon a breach of which the lessor might maintain ejectment, without an express clause of re-entry. Doe d. Henniker v. Watt, 1 M. & Ry. 694; 8 B. & C. 308; 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 185.

Devise.]—Lease for years, with clause of re-entry, if lessee, during his life, should alien term without consent. Semble, that devise without consent is a forfeiture. Parry v. Harbert, Dyer, 45, pl. 3.

Aliter if devisee were executor. Windsor (Lord) v. Burry, cited id. n.

Covenant not to Assign for more than a Year.]—A lease of the opera-house contained covenants on the part of the lessee; secondly, not to grant away, assign, dispose of, &c., the stalls or boxes "for any longer period than one year or season." On the 21st December, 1851, the lessee leased certain boxes for one year, to commence from March, 1852. On the 1st of August, 1852, he made another lease of the same boxes to a different person, with this habendum, "from the 1st of February now next ensuing, or from such subsequent day during the year, upon which the theatre shall be opened, and thenceforth for the full term of one year, to be computed from that day":—Held, that this was not a breach of the covenant. Croft v. Lumley, 6 H. L. Cas. 672; 27 L. J., Q. B. 321; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 903; 6 W. R. 523.

Thirdly, "not to charge nor incumber the theatre, or the income thereof, or the terms hereby granted, by mortgaging the same, or granting any rent-charges, or any other incumbrance whatever." The lessee was greatly in debt. In respect of his debts, he granted warrants of attorney (one of which was to secure payment of bills not then due, and another provided that it was a concurrent security, with an indenture therein recited, that judgment was to be entered up when the grantee thought fit, and be registered), and judgments were signed against him on those warrants of attorney, and upon judge's orders, and registered:—Held, that no breach of this covenant had been committed. Ib.

Covenant not to Let for more than Seven Years.]—Clause in a lease for three lives, to prevent the lessee, or his executors, &c., from letting for above seven years, without licence of lessor; the third life being in possession under his father's will, and being his executor, leased for fourteen years:—Held, no forfeiture, for he had no notice of the condition; and as the lease could not extend beyond the life of the lessor, it could not pass an interest for fourteen years certain. Northcote v. Duke, Ambl. 511; 2 Eden, 314.

Limitation of lease defeated by alienation by lessee. Anon., Cary, 9.

Letting Lodgings.]—Letting lodgings is not a breach of a covenant not to underlet. Doe d. Pitt v. Laming, 4 Camp. 77; 15 R. R. 728.

Deposit of Lease.]—A covenant in a lease of a chop-house not to let, set, assign, transfer, set over, "or otherwise part with the premises demised, or that present indenture of lease," is not broken by proof of a deposit of the lease with the brewers of the lessee, as a security for money advanced and beer supplied to the house, as it could not be deemed to be a parting with the premises within the meaning of the covenant. Doe d. Pitt v. Hogg, 4 D. & R. 226; 1 Car. & P. 160; 2 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 121. S. C., nom. Doe d. Pitt v. Laming, R. & M. 36; 27 R. R. 512.

Semble, that a proviso to make void a lease, on assignment by the lessee, does not apply to a mere deposit of it, by way of equitable mortgage. Cocks, Ex parte, Hand, In re, 2 Deac. 14.

A lease deposited by way of equitable mortgage contained a covenant on the part of the lessee, not to assign without licence:—Held, that this was no objection to the usual order. Drake, Ex parte, 1 Mont. D. & D. 539.

A covenant by a lessee not to "mortgage, sell, assign or otherwise part with this present indenture of lease, or the premises hereby demised, or any part or parcel thereof," is not broken by a deposit of the lease, accompanied by a letter of agreement that the depositee shall have a lien thereon "by way of equitable mortgage," more especially if, by reason of the lease also containing a covenant against sub-letting, it may be inferred that the primary intention of the parties to it was to protect the landlord from having a new tenant imposed upon him. M'Kay v. M'Nally, 4 L. R., Ir. 438.

Equitable Charge.]—Semble, equitable agreements charging the property comprised in a lease, but not accompanied with a change of possession, or other alteration of the property, do not work a forfeiture of the lease in equity, notwithstanding there is a clause in the lease against assignments. Bowser v. Colby, 1 Hare, 109; 11 L. J., Ch. 132; 5 Jur. 1106.

Advertisement.]—Under a right of re-entry upon underletting, an advertisement does not work a forfeiture; but was made the ground for imposing terms. Gourlay v. Somerset (Duke), 1 Ves. & B. 68; 13 R. R. 234.

Letting under the Court.]—Where the respondent in a petition matter under the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 55, held under a lease containing a non-alienation clause; the court directed the receiver to manage the lands himself. Semble, a letting under the court would not be a forfeiture of the lease. Rogers v. Bateman, Fl. & K. 432.

Execution.]—A lessee who covenanted "not to let, set, or assign, transfer, make over, barter, exchange, or otherwise part with the indenture," &c., with a proviso that the landlord might in such case re-enter, gave a warrant of attorney to confess judgment, on which the lease was taken in execution and sold:—Held, to be no forfeiture of the lease. Doe d. Mitchinson v. Carter, 8 Term Rep. 57; 4 R. R. 586.

But it being found by verdict that the tenant gave such warrant of attorney to a creditor for the express purpose of enabling such creditor to take the lease in execution under the judgment; this is in fraud of the covenant, and the landlord, under a clause of re-entry in the lease for breach of the condition, may recover the premises in ejectment from a purchaser under the sheriff's sale. S. C., 8 Term Rep. 300.

Deed of Assignment.]—Proviso in a lease for re-entry, and that the lease should be void, if the lessee assigned without licence. The lessee by deed assigned all his property real and personal to trustees for the benefit of his creditors, and was afterwards declared a bankrupt:—Held, that the deed of assignment being an act of bankruptcy, did not operate as a valid conveyance of the lessee's interest under the lease, and that therefore it did not work a forfeiture. Doe d. Lloyd v. Powell, 8 D. & R. 35; 5 B. & C. 308; 4 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 159; 29 R. R. 253. Affirmed, 2 Y. & J. 372.

Bankruptcy.]—Though bankruptcy supersedes an agreement not to assign without licence, it has that effect only in favour of general creditors; and where there is no actual lease, but it rests in agreement to grant a lease, an individual cannot have a specific performance in opposition to such provision, and it is very disputable whether the general assignees could obtain it, even if there were no such provision. Weatherall v. Geering, 12 Ves. 504; 8 R. R. 369.

—— Assignment by Assignee.]—Demise for years to S., and S. covenanted that he, his executors, administrators, or assigns, would not assign the indenture, or his or their interests therein, or assign the premises to any person whatsoever, without the consent in writing of the lessor; proviso, that in case S., his executors, administrators, or assigns, should part with his or their interest, contrary to his covenant, that the lessor might re-enter. S. deposited the lease as a security for money borrowed, and became bankrupt, and the lease was sold by direction of the chancellor to pay that debt:—Held, that the assignees under the commission might assign the lease to the vendee, without the consent of the lessor. Doe d. Goodbehere v. Bevan, 3 M. & S. 353; 2 Rose, 456; 16 R. R. 293.

When lessee for years, who had covenanted for himself, his executors, and administrators, but not assigns, that he would not, without the lessor's consent, assign over the lease, becomes bankrupt, and the assignee under the commission enters on the farm, sells off the crop and stock, pays the Michaelmas rent, and the day before the next rent day assigns the lease to R.; it appearing in proof that R. never ploughed or sowed the land, never resided on the farm, but occupied it rather as agent:—Held, to be a fraudulent transaction between the assignee under the commission and R., and the former decreed to answer the rent due to the time, and the assignment to be set aside. Philpot v. Hoare, 2 Atk. 219.

Lessee for years under a restriction of alienation, and power of re-entry in such case, died; his executors entered and enjoyed, and then became bankrupt, the assignees sold this lease to plaintiff for 50*l.*; the lessor, insisting on the forfeiture, ejected him. Per curiam, the commissioners' assignment being by authority of a statute, will supersede the private agreement, and the assignment by the assignees to the plaintiff is no breach of the condition, but good. Goring v. Warner, 7 Vin. Abr. pl. 9; Goring v. Nash. Ib.

Effect of.]—By a deed dated March 1st, 1832, the defendant leased a farm for fourteen years, the lease contained a proviso for re-entry by the lessor if the lessees should assign without his licence and a covenant by the lessees not to assign; also a covenant by the lessor at the expiration of the demise to pay for certain things at a valuation. After the expiration of the term the lessees continued to occupy the farm as tenants from year to year on the terms of the lease. In 1864, they by deed assigned their interest in the farm, with their farming stock and valuations, to the plaintiff, in order to raise a sum of money to be paid to their creditors under a composition deed executed at the same time. The plaintiff entered into occupation of the farm but never paid rent. On the 18th March the defendant, having no knowledge of the assignment, gave the lessees notice to quit, and the plaintiff, as assignee, gave him a similar notice:—Held, that the plaintiff could not maintain an action against the defendant on the covenant for a valuation. Per Mellor and Lush, JJ., on the ground that there was no new contract between the plaintiff and defendant, and that the right of action did not pass from the lessees to the plaintiff by the assignment of the tenancy created by parol between the lessor and lessees. Per Shee, J., on the ground that the lessees having no right to assign without the licence of the lessor, could not transfer any interest to the plaintiff. Elliott v. Johnson, 8 B. & S. 38; 36 L. J., Q. B. 44; L. R. 2 Q. B. 120; 15 W. R. 253.

Lands were demised in 1861 by lease, with a covenant against alienation or subletting without the consent of the landlord. A deed, purporting to assign the tenancy to A., was executed by the personal representatives of the lessee, but the consent of the landlord to such assignment was not obtained. A. afterwards sublet the premises to the defendant, as tenant from year to year, who came into and continued in possession of the lands. The rent, under this subletting, being in arrear, an ejectment was brought by A. and others claiming under him, for non-payment of rent, in which the defendant, the sub-tenant, took defence, denying that there was any subsisting tenancy in respect of the lands between himself and the plaintiff or any other person:—Held, first, that as the assignment to A. was void and no estate passed to A. thereunder, his sub-tenant (the defendant) was estopped from disputing A.'s title, and that it was no defence, to show that the term of the lease so ineffectually assigned had expired after the subletting and before the commencement of the action. Secondly, that as at the time of the subletting, A. was in possession without title, and not as tenant under the lease containing the prohibitory covenant, the subletting was not avoided by the 18th section of the 23 & 24 Vict. c. 154. Wogan v. Doyle, 12 L. R., Ir. 69.

Assignment to Partner on Dissolution.]—A lease was granted to two partners, B. and H., as joint tenants. The lessees covenanted that they, their executors, administrators, or assigns, or any or either of them, would not, during the term, assign, underlet, or part with the possession of the demised property to any person or persons without the written consent of the lessor; and there was a proviso for re-entry on the breach of any of the covenants. The partners dissolved partnership, and agreed that the partnership property should be made over to B., and that the leasehold property should be assigned to him with the consent of the lessor, if such consent could be obtained, and recited, as the fact was, that H. had given up sole possession of the leaseholds to B. Consent was not obtained, and no assignment of the leasehold was executed, but B., from the time of the dissolution, remained in sole possession:—Held, that there had been no breach of the covenant, and that the proviso for re-entry had not come into operation. Bristol Corporation v. Westcott, 12 Ch. D. 461; 41 L. T. 117; 27 W. R. 841—C. A.

A. and B., partners in trade, were assignees of a lease which contained a covenant by the lessee, for himself and his assigns, that he would not, neither should his executors, administrators, nor assigns, assign the demised premises without the consent in writing of the lessor. On the dissolution of the partnership, A. assigned all his interest in the premises to B. :—Held, a breach of the covenant. Varley v. Coppard, L. R. 7 C. P. 505; 26 L. T. 882; 20 W. R. 972. See preceding case.

Waiver of Breach.]—The acceptance of rent with knowledge of a written underletting for a time certain is a waiver pro tanto of the breach of covenant not to underlet. Walrond v. Hawkins, 44 L. J., C. P. 116; L. R. 10 C. P. 342; 32 L. T. 119; 23 W. R. 390.

A lessor lets houses and lands upon a lease for twenty-one years, containing a covenant that the lessee would not assign, underlet, or permit any person to occupy any part of the premises without the consent of the lessor. The lessee underlet part of the premises by written agreement to T. for a year, and the lessor having accepted, and also distrained for rent accrued due after the making of the agreement, and with notice thereof, brought ejectment as for a forfeiture upon breach of the covenant not to underlet or permit to occupy :—Held, that the breach was not a continuing breach. Ib.

—— On Application for Discovery.]—Demurrer lies to a bill for discovery of an assignment of a lease, without licence, if it does not expressly waive the forfeiture. Uxbridge v. Staveland, 1 Ves. 56.

Bankruptcy of Sub-tenant — Title of his Trustee to Payment for Hay and Straw on Premises.]—A tenant held under a lease containing a covenant against subletting, and a clause giving the landlord a right to re-enter in case of breach of covenant, bankruptcy, or liquidation on the part of the tenant. The tenant sublet without leave. Afterwards the under-tenant filed a liquidation petition, and the landlord then first heard of the subletting. The landlord then agreed with two of the under-tenant's creditors to accept a new tenant on the old terms if one could be found in thirty-one days, and, if no tenant was found, to give a reasonable time for the removal of the corn and other effects belonging to the estate of the under-tenant. No new tenant was found, and the landlord took possession. The lease contained covenants by the tenant to do certain things during the last year of the term, and on delivering up the premises to leave thereon the hay and straw grown thereon during the last year on being paid for the same. In an action by the under-tenant's trustee in bankruptcy against the landlord to recover the value of the hay and straw :—Held, that the under-tenant was bound by the terms of the lease; that the lease having been determined by forfeiture in consequence of the under-tenant filing a liquidation petition, the clause giving a right to payment for the hay and straw did not apply; that the defendant's rights were not affected by the subsequent agreement and he was entitled to judgment. Silcock v. Farmer, 46 L. T. 404—C. A.

Evidence as to.]—If a person is found on the premises, appearing as the tenant, it is primâ facie evidence of an underletting sufficient to maintain an action for a breach of covenant not to assign or underlet. Doe d. Hindly v. Rickarby, 5 Esp. 4.

Measure of Damages.]—The measure of damages for a breach of a covenant for assigning or underletting premises without a licence, is such a sum as will, as far as money can, put the lessor in the same position as if he had still the lessee's liability, instead of the liability of another of inferior pecuniary ability, for breaches both past and future. Williams v. Earle, 9 B. & S. 740; 37 L. J., Q. B. 231; L. R. 3 Q. B. 739; 19 L. T. 238; 16 W. R. 1041.

Land and buildings were demised for a term of years, the lease containing a clause providing that the lessee should not be at liberty to sublet without the consent in writing of the lessor, his executors, administrators, or assigns, but that such consent should not be unreasonably withheld. The lessee, without obtaining such consent, sublet the premises to a person who intended (to the lessee's knowledge) to use them, and who did in fact use them for the purposes of a dangerous business. The buildings were damaged by a fire which arose from the use of the premises for the business for which they were taken. The lessor brought an action claiming damages for the breach of the covenant not to sublet :—Held, that the damage caused by the fire was not too remote, as it was the natural and probable result of the breach of covenant. Lepla v. Rogers, [1893] 1 Q. B. 31; 5 R. 57; 68 L. T. 584; 57 J. P. 55.

Relief against.]—If a lessee for years covenants not to alien without licence of the lessor, under penalty of forfeiting the lease, and he afterwards aliens without licence, equity will not relieve him. Wafer v. Mocato, 9 Mod. 112.

No relief against forfeiture by breach of covenant not to assign without licence. Hill v. Barclay, 18 Ves. 63; 11 R. R. 147.

A. made a lease of lands, with a condition against assigning or subletting without the consent of A., under his hand and seal, on breach of which the lease was to be void. The lessee made an agreement for a lease of a part of the lands, with the consent of A., by letter, not under seal. B. afterwards purchased A.'s reversion, subject to the agreement. C. the lessee's administratrix, applied to B. for permission to make a lease, in pursuance of the agreement to E., to whom the interest under it had been assigned. B. advised and encouraged C. to make the lease, stood by while a large sum was expended by E. on the lands, and witnessed the execution of the lease knowing it to be a lease of the lands from C. to E. B. knew of the clause of subletting, but did not know that the consent of A. was not valid in law, not being under seal, and swore that he had no intention, at the time, of taking advantage of a forfeiture. B. afterwards brought an ejectment for the forfeiture :—Held, that the court had power to relieve the tenant, notwithstanding the condition in the lease against assigning or subletting. Burke v. Prior, 15 Ir. Ch. R. 106.

Under Conveyancing Acts.]—See supra, J. 2, i. iii.

Remedy of Under-tenant.]—Lessee underlets parcel of land, in fraud, commits breach of covenant and forfeits lease, and after obtains fresh lease: under-lessee hath remedy in equity. Anon., Cary, 13.

6. As to Rates and Taxes.

a. Construction Generally.

Where a party took a part of premises the whole of which were rated at a certain annual value, and the lessor covenanted to pay all taxes then chargeable thereon, and the lessee covenanted to pay all fresh taxes which might thereafter be charged on the premises, or any part thereof:—Held, that the true construction of these covenants was, that the lessor should pay such taxes as were charged on the premises at the time of making the lease, at the then annual value, and that the lessee should pay all fresh taxes, and all such additions to those formerly chargeable as were occasioned by the improved value of the premises. Watson v. Atkins, 3 B. & Ald. 647.

Under a covenant by a tenant for the payment of 80*l.* yearly rent, all taxes thereon being to him allowed, but that he would pay all further or additional rates on the premises, or on any additional buildings or improvements made by him; and a covenant by the landlords to pay all rates, on the premises, or on the tenant, in respect of the yearly rent of 80*l.*, except such further or additional taxes as might be assessed on the premises; the tenant is bound to defray all increase of the old as well as the new rates, beyond the proportion at which the premises were rated at the time of the deed, which was 20*l.* in respect of the 80*l.* rate. Graham v. Wade, 16 East, 29.

A lease contained a covenant by the lessee to pay all rates and taxes, and a proviso for re-entry on breach:—Held, first, that the nonpayment within a reasonable time of a poor rate, which had been duly assessed, allowed and published, was a breach justifying a re-entry by the landlord, and that it was not necessary to shew that the rate had been demanded of the tenant, or that express notice of it had been given to him. Davis v. Burrell, 10 C. B. 821; 15 Jur. 658.

Held, secondly, that if the covenant meant to pay on demand, a personal demand was not necessary, but that a demand on the premises of the tenant's son was sufficient. Ib.

A declaration, after setting forth an agreement, by which the defendant took of the plaintiff's rooms, part of a house, and agreed to pay, without saying to whom, the proportion of the rates and taxes "which might be assessed on the premises so taken" by him, averred, that afterwards, rates amounting, to wit, to 150*l.* were assessed on the house, being the rates whereof the proportion was agreed to be paid as aforesaid; that such rates were afterwards assessed, became due, and were paid by the plaintiff; that the proper proportion payable by the defendant was a proportion, to wit, one-third, amounting to, to wit, to 50*l.*, of all which the defendant had notice, and was requested by the plaintiff to pay that sum. Pleas, first, as to 12*l.* 10*s.*, tender and payment into court; secondly, as to the residue, traverse of the request to pay: and fourthly, as to the residue, that the proper proportion payable by the defendant was a proportion amounting to 12*l.* 10*s.*, without this, that the proper proportion, to wit, one-third, amounting, to wit, to 50*l.*:—Held, first, that the defendant was bound to pay his proportion of the rates to the plaintiff. Hooper v. Woolmer, 1 L. M. & P. 634; 10 C. B. 370; 20 L. J., C. P. 63.

Held, secondly, that his liability to do so was a primary and not a collateral liability; and, therefore, that no request to pay was necessary. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that under the agreement to pay a proportion of the rates assessed on the premises so taken by him, he was bound to pay a proportion of the rates assessed on the house of which such premises were a part. Ib.

Held, fourthly, that the fourth plea was bad, as traversing only the precise amount of the proportion stated in the declaration, which was immaterial. Ib.

A lessee covenanted that he would pay all taxes, charges, rates, tithes or rent-charge in lieu of tithe dues, and duties whatsoever, as then were or should at any time thereafter during the demise be taxed, charged, assessed or imposed upon the demised premises:—Held, that the covenant was not confined to rates payable by the landlord, but meant all rates then imposed on the lessee in respect of his occupation, and all future rates which might be imposed on the land itself. Hurst v. Hurst, 4 Ex. 571; 19 L. J., Ex. 410.

—— Improved Value of Premises.]—A tenant of a piece of ground, at a fixed annual rent, covenanted not to build without the licence of the lessor, and the lessor covenanted to pay all taxes charged or to be charged during the term. At the time of executing the lease the lessor gave the lessee a licence to build, which he did, and thereby much increased the annual value of the premises:—Held, that the lessor was liable to pay taxes in proportion to the rent received, and not according to the improved value. Watson v. Home, 7 B. & C. 285; 1 M. & Ry. 191; 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 73; 31 R. R. 200.

The tenant compounded his taxes under the provisions of a local act, whereby his premises were assessed at a less annual sum than the improved annual value:—Held, that the tenant paid taxes in respect of the whole improved annual value, and that the landlord was to pay that proportion of the taxes paid which the rent bore to such improved annual value. Ib.

b. Land Tax.

If a party agrees to take a lease at a net rent, he cannot object that the lease contains a covenant for him to pay the land tax and sewers rate. Bennett v. Womack, 3 Car. & P. 96; 7 B. & C. 627; 1 M. & Ry. 644; 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 175; 31 R. R. 270.

A tenant verbally agreeing "to pay all taxes," is bound to pay the land tax, although not specifically mentioned. Amfield v. White, R. & M. 246; 27 R. R. 745.

Upon the construction of an agreement to demise a farm for fourteen years, "at the yearly rent of 40*l.* payable quarterly, free of all outgoings"; and by which the parties agreed "to grant and accept a lease on the above and other usual terms":—Held, that the landlord was entitled to a net rent payable free of land tax, and tithe commutation rent-charge. Parish v. Sleeman, 1 De G. F. & J. 326; 29 L. J., Ch. 96; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 385; 8 W. R. 166.

A. demised land to B. upon a building lease, at the yearly rent of 60*l.*, clear of all rates and assessments, the sewers rate and land tax excepted, with the usual covenant for payment of rent. B. having by building on the land increased its ratable value to 300*l.* per annum:—Held, that he was only entitled to deduct the sewers rate and land tax upon the original rent, and not in respect of the improved value. Smith v. Humble, 15 C. B. 321; 3 C. L. R. 225.

The Property Tax Act, 46 Geo. 3, c. 65, ss. 112, 115, in declaring covenants to pay the same void, has a retrospective operation; therefore, covenant entered into before the act passed is void. Buxton v. Monkhouse, G. Coop. 41.

c. Tithe Rent-Charge.

The lessor of lands was at the date of the lease, also the owner of the tithe rent-charge upon such lands. The lease contained a covenant by the lessee to pay "all taxes and assessments whatsoever for or in respect of the demised premises, save and except the level tax, property tax, and land tax," which were to be paid by the lessor:—Held, in an action upon the covenant by the assignees of the reversion and of the tithe rent-charge, against the lessee for nonpayment of tithe rents, that the words "taxes and assessments" in the covenant did not include the tithe rent-charge, and that the action was therefore not maintainable. Jeffery v. Neale, 40 L. J., C. P. 191; L. R. 6 C. P. 240; 24 L. T. 362; 19 W. R. 700.

By a lease, the tenant agreed to pay the rent, "without any deduction in respect of any taxes, rates, assessments, or charges whatsoever, the landlord's property tax only excepted":—Held, that he was bound to pay the tithe rent-charge imposed upon the demised hereditaments. Lockwood v. Wilson, 43 L. J., C. P. 179; 30 L. T. 761; 22 W. R. 919.

By articles of agreement for a lease, the reddendum was expressed thus: "At the yearly rent of 109*l.* 14*s.* 4*d.*, over and above all taxes, charges, and impositions whatsoever, except quit and crown rents":—Held, that the tenant was not liable to the tithe rent-charge. Davies v. Fitton, 2 Dr. & War. 225; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 612.

Although a direct covenant by the tenant to pay the tithe would be void, by 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 119, s. 13, yet there is nothing to prevent a landlord from reserving, and a tenant from agreeing to pay, a larger rent in consideration of the tithe. Ib.

And see Dawes v. Thomas, post, col. 1180.

d. Paying Expenses.

The defendant became tenant of a house under a lease by which he covenanted to pay "all rates, taxes, charges and assessments whatsoever which now are or may be charged or assessed upon the said premises, or any part thereof, or upon any person or persons in respect thereof," land tax and property tax excepted. The local board of health gave notice to the plaintiff, as owner (he having acquired the lessor's interest in the premises) to sewer, level, pave, &c., the street in which the house was situate; and, upon his failure to comply with the notice, the board did the work, and made an apportionment upon him in respect thereof, under the Public Health Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 68), and the acts amending that act, and he was compelled to pay the amount and interest:—Held, that this was a "charge upon the premises," or "upon a person in respect thereof," from which by his covenant the defendant undertook to relieve the plaintiff, and therefore the plaintiff was entitled to maintain an action against the defendant in respect of the money and interest so paid by him. Hartley v. Hudson, 48 L. J., C. P. 751; 4 C. P. D. 367.

The lessee of a house in a new street within the metropolitan district for seven, fourteen, or twenty-one years, covenanted with his lessor to pay all rates and assessments taxed, rated, charged, assessed, or imposed upon the demised premises, or upon or payable by the occupier or tenant in respect thereof:—Held, that the proportion of the expense of paving the new street assessed upon the demised house under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 96, was not a rate payable by the tenant under this covenant. Allum v. Dickinson, 52 L. J., Q. B. 190; 9 Q. B. D. 632; 47 L. T. 493; 30 W. R. 930; 47 J. P. 102—C. A.

A local act gave a corporation power to call on the owner (i.e. the person receiving the rack rent) of any houses to pave the street opposite to his houses, and in default to do it themselves, and recover the expenses from such owner by action, and also, as an additional remedy, by obliging all his tenants to pay to the extent of their unpaid rent, whether the expenses were incurred before their own particular houses or not. A. let a house to B., who covenanted to pay and discharge "all taxes, rates, assessments and impositions payable in respect of the demised premises." The corporation, on default by the landlord, paved the street before the tenant's house; the landlord paid the money expended by them in his default, and sought to recover it from the tenant on his covenant:—Held, that he was not liable. Tidswell v. Whitworth, 36 L. J., C. P. 103; L. R. 2 C. P. 326; 15 L. T. 574; 15 W. R. 427.

By an agreement of lease the tenant agreed to pay "all rates, taxes, and assessments payable in respect of the premises during the term":—Held, that a sum assessed upon the owners as their proportion of the expense of paving the street upon which the premises abutted, was not a rate, tax, or assessment within the meaning of the covenant, but a charge imposed upon the owner for the permanent improvement of his property. Wilkinson v. Collyer, 53 L. J., Q. B. 278; 13 Q. B. D. 1; 51 L. T. 299; 32 W. R. 614; 48 J. P. 791.

To pay Outgoings.]—The plaintiff, the owner of certain premises, demised them to the defendants for a term of years at a yearly rent "clear of all present and future rates, taxes, and deductions," and a covenant was contained in the lease that the defendants, "their successors or assigns, should and would during the term well and truly pay, or cause to be paid, the yearly rent thereinbefore reserved, and also should and would bear and pay all the rates, taxes and outgoings then payable or thereafter to become payable, whether by landlord or tenant, in respect of the said premises." The corporation, within whose limits the premises were situated, incurred under the special act certain expenses in paving the street adjoining the premises, which expenses they were empowered to charge upon the owners of buildings and lands in the street. The plaintiff on demand paid the expenses incurred by the corporation, and brought the present action to recover them from the defendants under the covenants in the lease:—Held, that the omission of the word "outgoings" in the reddendum clause did not qualify the covenant so as to take it out of the decision in Crosse v. Raw, (post, col. 1175); and that the plaintiff was therefore entitled to recover. Gardner v. Furness Ry., 47 J. P. 232.

The lessee of a house in a new street within the metropolitan district covenanted with his lessor to pay during the term "all existing and future taxes, rates, assessments, land tax, tithe or tithe rent-charge, and outgoings of every description for the time being payable either by the landlord or tenant in respect of the said premises" :—Held, that the owner's proportion of the cost of paving the street under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 96, was an "outgoing" payable by the lessee under this covenant. Aldridge v. Ferne, 17 Q. B. D. 212 ; 55 L. J., Q. B. 587 ; 34 W. R. 578.

By an agreement for a lease of a house for three years at a rent of 75*l.* per annum the tenant agreed "to pay all sewers rate, tithe rent-charge, land tax (if any), and all existing and future taxes, rates, assessments and outgoings of every description, payable by landlord or tenant in respect of the premises during the tenancy (except the landlord's property tax)." The local board made a claim upon the landlord and tenant for 68*l.* 15*s.* 11*d.*, the share of the expenses of paving the road abutting on the house, which had been apportioned to it :—Held, that the words of the agreement were large enough to cover this payment ; and that their meaning could not be regarded as altered because the agreement was only for a term of three years :—that the tenant, therefore, must pay the amount claimed by the board. Batchelor v. Bigger, 60 L. T. 416.

A lessee covenanted that he would, during the continuance of the term, pay and discharge "all taxes, rates, duties and assessments whatsoever which during the continuance of the demise should be taxed, assessed or imposed on the tenant or landlord of the premises demised in respect thereof." The vestry of the parish, having, under the provisions of the metropolis management acts, paved the street upon which the demised premises abutted, assessed the sum payable by the owner as his proportion of the estimated expenses at 49*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.*, gave the occupier a notice under s. 96 of the act of 1862, requiring him to pay it, and upon his failure to do so, took proceedings against the owner before a magistrate, and compelled him to pay :—Held, that this was a duty or an assessment, assessed or imposed upon the owner in respect of the premises, within the covenant. Thompson v. Lapworth, 37 L. J., C. P. 74 ; L. R. 3 C. P. 149 ; 17 L. T. 507 ; 16 W. R. 312.

e. Water Rate.

In a lease of a shop and basement and of three rooms on the third floor of the same house, the lessor covenanted to pay "all rates and taxes chargeable in respect of the demised premises." Water was separately supplied by a water company to the shop and basement, and paid for by the tenant. In an action to recover from the lessor the amount so paid :—Held, that such charge was a "rate" within the meaning of the covenant. Direct Spanish Telegraph Co. v. Shepherd, 53 L. J., Q. B. 420 ; 13 Q. B. D. 202 ; 51 L. T. 124 ; 32 W. R. 717 ; 48 J. P. 550.

By a covenant contained in a lease of a warehouse in the city of London the lessor covenanted with the lessees to pay all rates, taxes, and impositions whatsoever, whether parliamentary, parochial, or imposed by the corporation of the city of London or otherwise, howsoever, which then were or thereafter might be rated, charged, or assessed on the said premises, or any part thereof, or on the said yearly rent, or on the landlord, owner, or tenants of the said premises in respect thereof. Water having been supplied to the demised premises for domestic purposes by the New River Company under the provisions of the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847, the lessees paid the water-rates due in respect of such supply, and sought to recover the same from the lessor :—Held, that such water-rates were not rates or impositions imposed on or in respect of the premises within the meaning of the covenant, and therefore the lessees were not entitled to recover the same from the lessor. Direct Spanish Telegraph Co. v. Shepherd (13 Q. B. D. 202) discussed. Badcock v. Hunt, 58 L. J., Q. B. 134 ; 22 Q. B. D. 145 ; 60 L. T. 314 ; 37 W. R. 205 ; 53 J. P. 340—C. A.

In a lease of premises within the district supplied with water by the New River Company the lessor covenanted to pay "all rates, taxes, assessments, water-rate, and other outgoings, except the gas and electric light, now or hereafter to be imposed or assessed upon the said premises, or on the lessor or lessees in respect thereof" :—Held, that the water-rate payable under the covenant was the rate payable for the supply of water to the premises for domestic purposes under s. 35 of the company's private act of 1852, which was calculated at a percentage upon the annual value of the house ; and not the rate payable by agreement between the tenant and the company for water supplied for trade purposes under s. 40 of the act. Floyd v. Lyons, 66 L. J., Ch. 350 ; [1897] 1 Ch. 633 ; 76 L. T. 251 ; 45 W. R. 435—C. A.

f. Drainage Expenses.

The defendant was tenant to the plaintiffs of certain hereditaments under a lease, by which he was bound to "bear, pay, and discharge . . . all other taxes, rates, duties, and assessments whatsoever, whether parliamentary, parochial, or otherwise." The drainage having become defective, the sanitary authority of the borough within which the hereditaments were situated caused a notice to be served upon the plaintiffs requiring them, as owners, to abate the nuisance, and the notice not having been complied with, obtained an order from a justice to the like effect. The plaintiffs having executed the works necessary to enable them to obey the order, sought to recover the cost of them from the defendant under the foregoing covenant :—Held, that the action was maintainable. Budd v. Marshall, 50 L. J., Q. B. 24 ; 5 C. P. D. 481 ; 42 L. T. 793 ; 29 W. R. 148 ; 44 J. P. 584—C. A.

Under a demise of premises for twenty-one years, the lessee covenanted to pay the rent reserved "without any deduction or abatement except land tax and landlord's property tax," and further "to pay and discharge all manner of taxes, rates, charges, assessments and impositions whatever (except as aforesaid) then or at any time or times during the term to be charged, assessed, or imposed on the premises demised, or in respect thereof, or of the rent as aforesaid, by authority of parliament or otherwise howsoever." During the term the lessor received from the sanitary authority a notice, pursuant to the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 94, to abate a nuisance injurious to health, arising from the bad condition of the drains upon the premises, and in order to prevent proceedings against him, executed the required works :—Held, that, the payment having been made by the lessor, not for a "rate, charge, assessment, or imposition assessed or imposed on the demised premises or in respect thereof," but in performance of a duty imposed upon him by the act of parliament, he was not entitled to call upon the lessee under his covenant to repay the amount. Rawlins v. Biggs, 47 L. J., C. P. 487; 3 C. P. D. 368; 27 W. R. 138.

In a lease of a house and premises, the lessee covenanted with the lessor to "bear, pay and discharge the sewers rate, tithes, rent-charge in lieu of tithes, and all other taxes, rates, assessments and outgoings whatsoever which at any time or times during the demise should be taxed, rated, charged assessed, or imposed upon the demised premises, or any part thereof, or upon the landlord or tenant in respect thereof, or on the rent thereby reserved (except the landlord's property tax)":—Held, that the lessee could not recover from the lessor the expenses of making a drain, which, under 29 & 30 Vict. c. 90, s. 10, the lessor, as owner, might have been required by the sewer authority to make, but which the lessee had made under an arrangement with the lessor, by which the expense was to be borne by the party liable. Crosse v. Raw, 43 L. J., Ex. 144; L. R. 9 Ex. 209; 23 W. R. 6.

The drainage board for a district incurred expenses in making surveys and plans for certain proposed works. The estimates for the proposed works amounted to more than 1,000*l*. The proprietors of one half of the land dissented from the execution of these works, which were never carried out. The board made a general rate on the occupiers of land in the district, in order to pay for the expenses of the surveys and plans:—Held, that the occupiers, and not the owners, were chargeable, under the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 133, ss. 31, 38, with these expenses; and that the rate was properly made on the present value of the land. Griffiths v. Longdon and Eldersfield Drainage Board, 41 L. J., Q. B. 25; L. R. 6 Q. B. 738; 25 L. T. 126; 19 W. R. 1162.

A., who was tenant of premises under a lease, in which he covenanted to pay "all such parliamentary, parochial, and county district and occasional levies, rates, assessments, taxes, charges, impositions, contributions, burthens, duties and services whatsoever as during the term should be taxed, assessed, or imposed upon or in respect of the premises," underlet the premises to B., who covenanted in the underlease to perform the covenants on the lessee's part in the lease to A. A district board of works, acting under the Metropolis Management Act, 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, compelled B., as occupier of the premises, to pay the expense of executing drainage works from the premises, which the board was authorised by the act to obtain the payment of from the occupier, the act allowing such occupier to deduct the same out of the rent due from him to the owner, provided it did not affect any contract between landlord and tenant:—Held, that this was an expense included in the terms of the covenant in the original lease, and against which the occupier, B., undertook to bear A. harmless, and that therefore B. was not entitled to deduct the same from his rent. Sweet v. Seager, 2 C. B. (N.S.) 119; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 588; 5 W. R. 560.

A lessee covenanted to pay the tithe or rent-charges in lieu of tithes and tax (if any), sewers rates, main drainage rates, and all other taxes, rates and assessments, and impositions and outgoings whatsoever then or thereafter to be charged or imposed on or in respect of the said premises or any part thereof:—Held, that the lessee was not liable to pay the amount charged by the urban authority for sewering, levelling, and paving the road on which the demised premises abutted, under s. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875. Hill v. Edward, 1 Cab. & E. 481.

If a party agrees to take a lease at a net rent, he cannot object that the lease contains a covenant for him to pay the sewers rate. Bennett v. Womack, 3 Car. & P. 96; 7 B. & C. 627; 1 M. & Ry. 644; 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 175; 31 R. R. 270.

g. Other Impositions.

Expenses of Works under Metropolis Management Act.]—The owner of a theatre, in pursuance of a notice given by the metropolitan board of works, under the provisions of s. 11 of the Metropolis Management and Building Acts Amendment Act of 1878, incurred certain expenses in executing works required by the notice to be done by him. In an action against his lessee to recover the expenses under a covenant contained in the lease, by which the lessee covenanted to pay, bear and discharge every other rate, tax, charge, assessment, burden, duty and imposition whatsoever, parliamentary, parochial or otherwise, to which the lessor then was, or should, or might thereafter be liable:—Held, that the lessor was entitled to recover. Robertson and Thorne, In re, 47 J. P. 566.

Abatement of Nuisance.]—A tenant who covenants to pay, bear, and discharge all assessments, charges, or impositions whatever, parliamentary, parochial, or otherwise, which at any time during the continuance of the demise may be charged, assessed, or imposed on the lessor, for or in respect of the premises, is liable to recoup his landlord any expenses incurred by him in complying with an order made under the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, to abate a nuisance on the demised premises, inasmuch as such expenses are a charge on the lessor in respect of the premises. Smith v. Robinson, 62 L. J., Q. B. 509; [1893] 2 Q. B. 53; 5 R. 469; 69 L. T. 434; 41 W. R. 588; 58 J. P. 73.

A lessee who covenants with the lessor to pay "taxes, rates, duties, assessments, and impositions . . . which now are or shall be . . . assessed or imposed on or in respect of the . . . premises, or of the rent hereby reserved," is liable as between himself and the landlord to pay the costs incurred by the latter in abating a nuisance arising from drains in compliance with a notice served upon him by the sanitary authority under the Public Health (London) Act, 1891. Payne v. Burridge (13 L. J., Ex. 119; 12 M. & W. 727) followed. Brett v. Rogers, 66 L. J., Q. B. 287; [1897] 1 Q. B. 525; 76 L. T. 26; 45 W. R. 334.

"Parliamentary Tax"—What is.]—An assessment levied under an act, enabling the owners of land to raise money for repairing a bridge, to the repair of which they were liable ratione tenuræ, is not a parliamentary tax charged upon the demised premises within the meaning of a covenant in the lease to pay rent, "free and clear of and from any land tax, and all other taxes and deductions whatsoever, either parliamentary or parochial, then already taxed, charged, or imposed, or thereafter to be taxed, charged, or imposed upon the premises or any part thereof, or upon G., his heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns, in respect thereof, the landlord's property tax or duty only excepted." Baker v. Greenhill, 2 G. & D. 435; 2 Q. B. 148; 11 L. J., Q. B. 161; 6 Jur. 710.

A sewers rate, not being imposed directly by act of parliament, is not "a parliamentary tax." Palmer v. Earith, 14 M. & W. 428; 14 L. J., Ex. 256.

Liability of Assignor of Lease—Ambassador, Immunities of.]—A lease of a dwelling-house contained a covenant by the lessee to pay the sewers rate, and all other rates, taxes, and assessments, and impositions of what nature or kind soever, and whether parliamentary, parochial, or otherwise, which then were, or at any time thereafter during the time should be assessed, charged, or imposed upon the demised premises, or on the landlord in respect thereof. By a local act relating to parochial rates in the parish in which the demised premises were situated, it was provided that every rate or assessment made, laid, or assessed by virtue of the act in respect of any land, ground, house, &c., which any ambassador, envoy, resident, agent, or other public minister of any foreign prince or state, or the servant of any such ambassador, envoy, resident, agent, or public minister, or any other person not liable by law to pay such rate or assessment then did or thereafter should inhabit, should be paid by and be recoverable from the landlord, owner, lessor, or proprietor of such land, ground, house, &c. The lessee of the demised premises assigned the same to an attaché of a foreign embassy, who occupied them as his residence. The assignee having claimed exemption from liability to pay a parochial rate made in respect of the premises under the local act, the parish authorities enforced payment of the same against the lessor. In an action brought against the lessee by the lessor to recover the amount so paid by him:—Held, that payment of the rate was not enforceable against an attaché of a foreign embassy; that the rate was therefore under the local act recoverable from the lessor; and that the lessee was under the covenant bound to repay to the lessor the amount of the rate so paid by him. Parkinson v. Potter, 55 L. J., Q. B. 153; 16 Q. B. D. 152; 53 L. T. 818; 34 W. R. 215; 50 J. P. 470.

Lease of Mines.]—A lease of an iron mine made before the passing of the Rating Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 54), contained a covenant by the lessee to "pay or cause to be paid all manner of taxes, rates, assessments, charges and impositions whatsoever, parliamentary or parochial, which now are or which shall at any time or times hereafter during the continuance of this demise be taxed, rated, charged, assessed, or imposed upon the said demised mines and premises, the landlord's property tax only excepted":—Held, that the lessee had not "specifically contracted" to pay the whole of the poor rate on the mine, in the event of the abolition of its exemption from the poor rate, within 37 & 38 Vict. c. 54, s. 8. Chaloner v. Bolckow, 47 L. J., Q. B. 562; 3 App. Cas. 933; 39 L. T. 134; 26 W. R. 541.

The exception in s. 8 of 37 & 38 Vict. c. 54, to the right of a tenant of a mine to deduct one half of the rate newly imposed by that act, and paid by him, from the rent payable to his lessor, namely, "unless he has specifically contracted to pay such rate in the event of the abolition of the exemption," does not take effect in favour of the lessor unless the lease has in terms anticipated the imposition of this new liability, and thrown it upon the tenant; and a covenant to pay the rent, "free of and from all rates, taxes, tithe rent-charges, expenses and deductions whatsoever, parliamentary, parochial, or of any other nature," will not deprive the tenant of his right to make the deduction given by the above section. Devonshire (Duke) v. Barrow Hæmatite Steel Co., 46 L. J., Q. B. 435; 2 Q. B. D. 286; 36 L. T. 355; 25 W. R. 469—C. A.

h. Deducting from Rent.

An agreement that, if the tenant will continue to pay his rent in full without any deduction in respect of landlord's property tax paid by him, the landlord will repay to the tenant all sums which he has paid or shall pay for the landlord's property tax, is not invalid as being contrary to the provisions of 5 & 6 Vict. c. 35. Lamb v. Brewster, 48 L. J., Q. B. 277, 421; 4 Q. B. D. 220, 607; 40 L. T. 537; 27 W. R. 478—C. A.

L., being possessed, in 1811, of premises for terms expiring at Midsummer, 1854, granted an annuity to T. and another to E. for three lives, and to secure such annuities demised the premises to T. and E., separately, for forty-three years, if the lives should last so long. In 1827 the residue of the terms granted to L. became vested in the plaintiff, subject to the annuities and underleases to T. and E. In 1825, L. having died, his executors let T. and E. into possession, and they covenanted by deed to pay off certain arrears of ground-rent and other charges, and made the same chargeable on the premises. The plaintiff, in 1830, became tenant to T. and E. of the premises at a rent payable to them in moieties. T. was the survivor of the cestuis que vie: he died in 1851, and the defendants were his executors. From his death till Midsummer, 1854, W. E., as agent for E. and the defendants, demanded and received the rents and paid over one moiety to E., and the other to the defendants, deducting payments in respect of ground-rent, rates, taxes, insurance, repairs, and commission. The plaintiff did not know of T.'s death:—Held, that he was entitled to recover back the amount of rent after T.'s death: that the plaintiff must be taken to have had notice of the deed of 1825, and to be bound by it: that the sums mentioned in it must be taken to have been paid; but that the plaintiff must be taken to have sanctioned the continued payment of the ground-rent, rates, and taxes, and that a set-off to that amount must be allowed. Barber v. Brown, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 121; 26 L. J., C. P. 41; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 18; 5 W. R. 79.

By a local act for draining lands in the county of Lincoln, it was declared, that "the taxes to be charged and assessed by virtue of the same should be paid by the tenants of the land, &c., charged with the same respectively, who might deduct and retain the same out of the rents payable to their respective landlords." Where, therefore, a tenant had quitted lands liable to a drainage tax under that act, and, after he had quitted, the collector levied the tax in arrear upon property which he had left in possession of the succeeding tenant:—Held, that the tenants to be charged with the tax were those in whose time the tax accrued due, and not the tenants for the time being, and, consequently, that the succeeding tenant might maintain an action against the landlord for money paid to his use. Dawson v. Linton, 1 D. & R. 117; 5 B. & Ald. 521.

If a tenant pays taxes which he alleges ought to have been paid by his landlord, and afterwards pays rent for two years subsequently, without making any deduction, he cannot recover the amount against the landlord. Saunderson v. Hanson, 3 Car. & P. 314.

A broker, who, when receiving rent under a distress, deducts a sum purporting to be for land tax, is not to be considered as allowing the land tax, so as to affect the landlord's right, but as merely, from not knowing how to act, consenting to receive the money without the sum deducted. Ib.

Where a tenant has voluntarily paid his full rent, without deducting a landlord's tax, for upwards of a year, he can neither recover it back, nor plead it as a payment in replevin. Andrew v. Hancock, 1 Br. & B. 37; 3 Moore, 278; 21 R. R. 569. And see Fuller v. Abbott, 4 Taunt. 105.

By an agreement marsh lands were demised subject to a condition that the tenant should pay all outgoings, rates, taxes, scots, &c., whether parochial or parliamentary, which were and might be chargeable on the lands. An assessment was made by the commissioners of sewers for the permanent benefit of the lands, in certain proportions, upon the owners and occupiers. For four years the tenant paid, in the first instance, both his own share and that of his landlords, and upon each half-year's settlement of accounts, for rent due, with the landlords' agent, who was ignorant of the agreement; the sum so paid was allowed towards the rent, and the receipts were given for the balance:—Held, in an action brought upon the agreement to recover the sums so allowed as arrears of rent, that the facts supported a plea of payment of the rent. Waller v. Andrews, 3 M. & W. 312; 7 L. J., Ex. 67.

A plea in bar to a cognizance for a distress for rent, stated that divers sums had been from time to time duly assessed on the premises for land tax, and paid by the plaintiff, wherefore he deducted the amount of the tax, which the defendant, as landlord, was liable to bear in respect of rent:—Held, that this plea was bad; first, in not stating the specific periods for which the respective sums were assessed or paid; and, secondly, in not stating that the payment was made after the rent distrained for had accrued, or was then accruing due. Stubbs v. Parsons, 3 B. & Ald. 516.

By the Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862, s. 96, the owner shall allow the occupier to deduct out of the rent from time to time becoming due in respect of the premises the sums of money which the occupier pays to the vestry or district board for works done by them under the act:—Held, that to entitle the occupier to avail himself of that provision, the money must have been actually paid; and, consequently, that a distress for rent, which became due after service of a notice from the vestry, made before payment to the vestry clerk, was not illegal. Ryan v. Thompson, 37 L. J., C. P. 134; L. R. 3 C. P. 144; 17 L. T. 506; 16 W. R. 314.

A landlord's receiver allowed the tenant to make a deduction in respect of a payment for land tax every year for seventeen years, greater than the landlord was liable to pay, the landlord having the means of knowing all the facts:—Held, that he could not distrain for the amount erroneously allowed, though the receipt given every year shewed the amount paid and the amount deducted. Branston v. Robins, 4 Bing. 11; 5 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 13; 29 R. R. 493.

Rent, including all Rates.]—Under a written agreement for the letting of premises at the yearly rent of 90*l.*, "including all rates and taxes":—Held, that the tenant was entitled to deduct from his rent the whole of the poor rates paid by him. Barcroft v. Welland, 12 L. R., Ir. 35.

To pay Rent without Deduction—Expenses of Remedying Unsanitary Condition of House.]—The plaintiffs were tenants of a house in Lambeth under a lease from the defendant, by which a rent of 40*l.* was reserved "to be paid without deduction, except landlord's property tax, by equal quarterly payments, free and clear from all deductions for main drainage and sewer rates, metropolitan and local improvement rates, taxes, land tax, tithes, tithe rent-charge, and commutation in lieu of tithes," and the lessees covenanted to pay "the said yearly rent of 40*l.* at the times and in manner aforesaid, free and clear of all deduction except as aforesaid," and to pay and discharge during the said tenancy all main drainage and sewers rates, &c. (following the words of the reservation). In May, 1890, the Lambeth Vestry required the defendant as owner of the premises to construct a drain into the common sewer under the Metropolis Local Management Act (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), s. 73, and the defendant not complying, did the work themselves, and recovered the costs 17*l.* 17*s.*, from the plaintiffs under s. 96 of the amending act (25 & 26 Vict. c. 102). The plaintiffs deducted this amount from their next half-year's rent, and upon the defendant threatening to distrain, brought this action for an injunction to restrain him:—Held, that the payment in question was not within the express covenant in the lease, and the covenant to pay the rent without deduction could not be construed as a contract between landlord and tenant to exclude the tenant's right to deduct this payment from his rent under s. 96 of the act 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102. Home and Colonial Stores v. Todd, 63 L. T. 829.

Where in a college lease rent is subject to deduction for taxes, and tenant neglects to deduct, no account will be decreed. Att.-Gen. v. Balliol College, 9 Mod. 410.

Tithe Rent-charge.]—A tenant of lands who has paid the tithe rent-charge is only entitled, under s. 80 of the Tithe Commutation Act, 1836, to deduct the amount thereof from the next rent payable to his landlord; and therefore, if a tenant does not deduct it from the next rent payable, he cannot deduct it from any subsequent rent. Dawes v. Thomas, 61 L. J., Q. B. 482; [1892] 1 Q. B. 414; 66 L. T. 451; 40 W. R. 305; 56 J. P. 326—C. A.

7. Relating to Husbandry.

a. The Covenant.

i. Express.

To Manure.]—A covenant in a farming lease provided that the tenant should, during the demise, consume and convert into manure, and spread on the premises, all the turnips and green crops of all kinds grown thereon, but that in case he should take or sell off any part thereof, which he was at liberty to do, then that he should, for every ton of vetches, or of any green crop which should be taken or sold off from the premises, bring back and spread thereon one ton of good stable manure, within three months after the selling or taking off such green crops, &c. In an action upon this covenant, the plaintiff set out the first part only, and assigned for breach, that the defendant carried away fourteen acres of turnips, without converting the same into manure and spreading the same on the premises :—Held, that the covenant was an alternative one, and that the plaintiff should have negatived the bringing back within the time limited an equivalent in manure. Richards v. Bluck, 6 C. B. 437 ; 6 D. & L. 325 ; 12 Jur. 963.

Where, at the sale of the stock of the defendant the tenant of a farm, W., the tenant of an adjoining farm, bought two cows, and, by the defendant's permission, left them on the defendant's farm for some weeks, bringing provender from his own farm to feed them :—Held, that the manure made by these cows was manure made on the farm, and that the removal of it by W. was a breach of a condition of a bond whereby the defendant stipulated with his landlord that he would "put and spread all the manure and compost then collected in the middenstead, or on any other part of the farm or the meadow land, and would not sell, cart, or convey away dung, compost, or manure from the farm." Hindle v. Pollett, 6 M. & W. 529 ; 9 L. J., Ex. 288.

—— When satisfied.]—A covenant by the lessee that he would sufficiently muck and manure the land demised with two sufficient sets of muck within the last six years of the term, the last set to be laid on the premises within three years of the expiration of the term, is satisfied by the tenant's laying on two sets of muck within the three last years of the term, if he should think proper so to do. Pownall v. Moores, 5 B. & Ald. 416.

—— Rights between Outgoing and Incoming Tenants.]—A tenant was bound either to consume the hay on the demised premises, or for every load of hay removed to bring two loads of manure. On quitting possession of the premises he sold part of a rick of hay then left standing to a purchaser, without mentioning his liability to bring manure. The incoming tenant refused to allow the purchaser to take away the hay until the manure was brought. After an interval of a month, during which time the hay had been considerably damaged, the latter consented that it should be removed ; the purchaser, however, then refused to accept or pay for the same :—Held, that although the bringing on the manure was not a condition precedent to the carrying off the hay, as between the landlord and tenant ; still, that, after the tenant had quitted the possession of the premises, the succeeding tenant had a right to refuse to permit the hay to be removed till after the manure was brought on ; and that as the vendor had not enabled the purchaser to remove the hay in the first instance, he was not entitled to recover the price. Smith v. Chance, 2 B. & Ald. 753 ; 21 R. R. 485. See also cases, ante, cols. 1093, 1094.

—— Custom excluded.]—A tenant held under the terms of an expired lease, by which it was stipulated that the tenant on quitting the farm should not sell or take away any of the manure in the fold, but should leave it to be expended on the land by the landlord or his succeeding tenant ; the lease contained no stipulation as to the tenant being entitled to payment for such manure. By the custom of the country the tenant would have been bound not to sell or take away the manure in the fold, but to leave it to be expended on the land by the landlord or his succeeding tenant, and would have been entitled to be paid for the same :—Held, that as an express stipulation had been made on the subject, the custom was excluded, and that the tenant was not entitled to be paid for the manure. Roberts v. Barker, 1 C. & M. 808 ; 3 Tyr. 945 ; 2 L. J., Ex. 268.

—— Increased Rent.]—On a covenant in a farming lease that the lessee would not sell or carry away from the demised premises any hay, straw, or manure which should be grown or produced thereon, without the consent of the lessor first had and obtained, under the increased rent of 10*l.* for every ton so sold or carried away, and so in proportion for any greater or less quantity, but that the lessee would eat and consume the hay and straw by his cattle ; the breach alleged was, that the lessee, without the consent of the lessor, did sell a large quantity of hay and straw grown and produced on the demised premises :—Held, that the covenant was one covenant which gave the lessee the right to sell the hay and straw, on payment of the increased rent, and that therefore the breach was not well assigned. Leigh v. Lillie, 6 H. & N. 165 ; 30 L. J., Ex. 25 ; 9 W. R. 55. See also cases, ante, col. 1003.

To Drain.]—An agricultural lease contained a covenant on the part of the lessor, that he would "drain with proper drain-tiles, one rod apart, ten acres of the lands not in rye-grass, at his cost, except the carriage of the drain-pipes, which is to be borne and paid by the lessee, and will drain the remainder of the lands demised, in manner aforesaid, upon being paid a further yearly rent of 5*l.* for every 100*l.* so expended" :—Held, that the words "in manner aforesaid" referred only to the mode of performing the work, viz. placing the drain-tiles one rod apart, and consequently that the tenant was not chargeable with the expense of carriage of the drain-pipes beyond the first ten acres. Beer v. Santer, 10 C. B. (N.S.) 435.

To restore Pasture Land — Clover.]—Where clover is sown with corn, the land is not thereby restored to a state of permanent pasture, but is still in tillage. Birch v. Stephenson, 3 Taunt. 469 ; 12 R. R. 679.

As to Sowing Grain Crops.]—A covenant in a farming lease not to sow with more than two grain crops during four years, applies to any four years of the term however taken, and not to each successive four years from the commencement. Fleming v. Snook, 5 Beav. 250.

In an action for entering a farm, a plea, after setting out a lease from A. to the plaintiff, which contained covenants by the plaintiff that he would not, at any time during the term, sow, reap, or take from the arable lands, or any part thereof, more than two crops of any sort of corn or grain successively, but would, every third year, summer-fallow or lay the arable lands down with rye-grass and clover-seeds, or would plant with potatoes, or sow with peas or beans, which should be twice well hoed ; stated that, during the term, the plaintiff sowed and took off from fifty acres of the arable lands more than two crops of corn successively ; and that he did not, nor would, every third year, summer-fallow or lay the arable lands, or any part thereof, down with rye-grass, &c., nor did nor would plant with potatoes, nor sow with peas, which were twice well, or in any manner, hoed, &c. :—Held, that this covenant was twofold; that the tenant would not take more than two crops of grain in succession, and that he would do certain other things; that the plea correctly averred a breach of the first branch of the covenant, but did not shew a breach of the second, inasmuch as it did not negative the sowing with beans. Hammond v. Colls, 1 C. B. 916; 3 D. & L. 164; 14 L. J., C. P. 288.

Four-course System.]—Import of a covenant to farm on the four-course system. Rankin v. Lay, 2 De G. F. & J. 15; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 685; 1 L. T. 680; 8 W. R. 591.

To Cultivate.]—By a lease empowering the lessee to build, he covenanted to cultivate the part of the demised land, on which no buildings should be erected, in a husbandlike manner, and there was a clause of forfeiture for breach of covenant. The lessee built a vitriol factory on the land, with the knowledge of the lessor, but being obliged to discontinue the manufacture by an indictment, he pulled down the manufactory, and paid part of the proceeds of the building materials to the lessor, in pursuance of an agreement between them :—Held, that the lessor had not in equity precluded himself from entering for the non-cultivation of the land after the manufactory was pulled down, and an injunction to restrain an ejectment was dissolved. Hills v. Rowland, 4 De G. M. & G. 430; 22 L. J., Ch. 964; 1 W. R. 422.

A lease of a plot of moorland was granted to a lessee, who covenanted to bring it into cultivation within five years from the date of the lease, according to the most approved method of husbandry pursued in the neighbourhood of the premises, and to keep it in good farming and husbandlike condition. The former covenant was not performed by the lessee, and thirty years afterwards his assignee converted the land into a place of amusement, and constructed a running path thereon, and charged for admission thereto. The lessor filed a bill to have the covenants of the lease performed, and for an injunction to restrain the present holder of the lease from using the land as a place of public amusement :—Held, that the land not having been brought into cultivation under the first covenant there could have been no breach of the second to keep it in cultivation. Musgrave v. Horner, 31 L. T. 632; 23 W. R. 125.

The defendant held a farm under a twenty-one years' lease from the plaintiff, which contained a covenant by the lessee to cultivate the farm in a good, proper, and husbandlike manner, according to the best rules of husbandry practised in the neighbourhood. The defendant claimed the right to erect glass-houses on arable land, part of the demised premises, and to cultivate tomatoes, mushrooms, grapes, and the like for the London market, a mode of cultivation which was being practised on other farms in the neighbourhood. The plaintiff sought to restrain him from so doing :—Held, that this mode of cultivation was not prohibited by the express provisions of the lease. Held, also, that whether it did or did not amount technically to waste, it was "meliorating" waste, in respect of which an injunction ought not to be granted, and the action was dismissed with costs. Meux v. Cobley, 61 L. J., Ch. 449; [1892] 2 Ch. 253; 66 L. T. 86.

A., holding meadow and pasture lands, under a lease for lives renewable for ever, demised a part of the premises to B. for a similar term, with a covenant to keep and deliver up the premises in tenantable order, &c., and with a power of surrender at the end of every three years. The assignees of B.'s interest, being about to convert the premises into a public cemetery, the representatives of A. obtained an injunction to prevent them. Hunt v. Browne, Sau. & Sc. 179.

Covenant to cultivate on the four-course system, according to the custom of the country :—Held, to mean only so far as was universally obligatory by the custom of the country. Newson v. Smythies, 1 F. & F. 477.

Injunction refused against a verdict in ejectment upon a breach of covenant by lessee for years, as to the mode of cultivation, if admitting relief; the defendant having been prevented from proving other breaches, against which no relief could be had, as by assigning without licence. Lovat v. Ranelagh (Lord), 3 Ves. & B. 24.

Distinction as to injunction between landlord and tenant upon an actual lease and a mere agreement. In the latter case, no relief, if the covenant would have been violated: in the former some ground necessary, either by the conduct of the lessor or under the statute 4 Geo. 2, c. 28. Ib.

A renewable lease, not inconsistent with a covenant to let and manage to the best advantage; with reference to the subject, a trust for creditors. Kirkham v. Chadwick, 13 Ves. 547.

To Manage like former Tenants.] — Tenant, under an agreement to manage and quit the premises, agreeably to the manner in which the same had been managed and quitted by the former tenants, not bound by the terms upon which they held, without notice. No inquiry as to the custom of the country, where there is a written agreement. Liebenrood v. Vines, 1 Mer. 15.

To keep Farm properly Stocked—Injunction.]—An injunction will not be granted to restrain a threatened breach by a tenant of a stipulation in a farming agreement requiring him to keep on the farm a proper and sufficient stock of sheep, horses, and cattle. Phipps v. Jackson, 56 L. J., Ch. 550; 35 W. R. 378.

Specific performance refused of covenants in dean and chapter leases of long standing, to leave the same live and dead stock on the premises as when the lease was granted Ely (Dean) v. Stewart, 2 Atk. 44; Barn. 170.

Not to plough Pasture.]—Injunction against ploughing up pasture upon covenant to manage in a husbandrylike manner. Drury v. Molins, 6 Ves. 328.

Injunction granted on affidavit to restrain tenant from ploughing up meadow to build on, contrary to express covenant. De Wilton (Lord) v. Saxon, 6 Ves. 106.

An injunction to restrain a lessee from ploughing pasture lands, which had remained unploughed during the continuance of the lease for thirty years, but were ploughed within six years, prior to its commencement, refused. Goring v. Goring, 3 Swan. 661.

Injunction to restrain a tenant from breaking up land contrary to his covenant refused, where the parties had ascertained the damages. Forbes v. Carney, Wall. Lyn. 38.

Where the plaintiffs filed a bill for an injunction to restrain the defendant, their tenant, from breaking up ancient meadow and pasture land (waiving penalties), praying compensation for the waste already done, and it appeared that when the defendant proposed to take the lands, he apprised the plaintiffs that he wanted them for a tillage farm; and it also appeared that when the draft-lease prepared by the plaintiffs' attorney was read in the presence of plaintiffs and defendant, it contained a clause restraining tillage within certain limits, and the defendant having refused to agree thereto, the plaintiffs consented that it should be struck out, and the lease accordingly did not contain any clause respecting tillage; the court refused injunction, but plaintiffs to proceed at law as they might be advised. Shew v. Weir, 1 Ir. Eq. R. 213.

—— Penalty or Liquidated Damages.]—Where a lease contained a covenant against turning up the ground, "under a penalty of 5*l.* per acre":—Held, that strictly this was a penalty, and not in the nature of liquidated damages: and the court might interfere by injunction to stay waste. Carden v. Butler, Hay. & J. 112.

In a lease for years of land, lessee covenants not to plough pasture land, and, if he does, then to pay after the rate of 20*s.* per annum for every acre ploughed. The court will not grant an injunction against the tenant's ploughing, for the parties themselves have agreed as to the damage, and set a price for ploughing: nor will court relieve the lessee against the penalty, if he ploughs. Woodward v. Gyles, 2 Vern. 119.

The whole nomine pœnæ in a lease to a tenant to prevent his ploughing up old pasture ground shall be paid, and not at the rate of 5*l.* per cent. for the rent reserved. Aylet v. Dodd, 2 Atk. 239.

Where a lease contained a covenant against ploughing or digging up any part of the demised premises, and in case the lessee should do so that he should pay the sum of 5*l.* for every cast of clay or sand which he should so dig up, and also 5*l.* in addition to the rent for every acre, so long as any part thereof should continue to be broken or ploughed up:—Held, that the sum mentioned in the covenant being in the nature of a penalty, and not of liquidated damages, the court would interfere to restrain by injunction the lessee from violating the covenant. Burne v. Madden, Ll. & G. t. Plunk. 493.

But where it appeared that the lessee had been appointed by the grand jury of the county of Dublin, as overseer of certain roads in the county, under the 26 Geo. 3, c. 14, and had made tenders for the repair of certain of those roads with gravel and stones to be taken from the demised premises, and which tenders the grand jury had accepted, and passed presentments accordingly, the court would not interfere to restrain the lessee, so far as he acted under the authority of the act. Ib.

—— Waste.]—As to when breaking up land amounts to waste, see post, N. 5, b. i. (col. 1273).

Not to Mow Meadow Land.]—In a lease of a farm a covenant not to mow meadow land more than once a year is not an unusual covenant, so as to excuse an intended assignee from accepting the title. Hyde v. Warden, 47 L. J., Ex. 121; 3 Ex. D. 72; 37 L. T. 567; 26 W. R. 201—C. A.

Not to remove Hay, Straw, or other Dry Fodder.]—A tenant of a farm was under a written agreement to pay an additional rent of 10*l.* for every ton, or any less quantity, of "hay, straw, or other dry fodder," of the growth of the premises, which shall be sold off or taken away, or removed therefrom. At the trial of an action against him to recover damages for a breach of this covenant, it was proved that he had sold and removed a quantity, something less than a ton, of hay, which he alleged was very bad, and utterly unfit to be eaten by cattle. The jury found that the hay so sold was "not fit food for cattle," and thereupon the verdict was entered for the landlord with leave to move:—Held, that the verdict was rightly entered. What the tenant removed was hay, and came within the meaning of the covenant, although it was hay of very inferior quality, and unfit for food. Fielden v. Tattersall, 7 L. T. 718.

A farming agreement contained the following clause:—"No hay or straw to be sold off the land without consent of the landlord or his agent, except the value of the straw so sold off be returned in manure on the land":—Held, per Pollock, C.B., and Parke, B., that if the tenant sold the hay or straw, he was only bound to spend upon the land as much manure as the straw would have produced; per Alderson, B., and Platt, B., that the tenant was bound to return in manure the price or market value of the straw. Lowndes v. Fountaine, 11 Ex. 487; 25 L. J., Ex. 49; 4 W. R. 152.

A farm lease contained a covenant by the lessee that "he should not nor would, during the last year of the term thereby granted, sell or remove from the said farm and lands any of the hay, straw and fodder which should arise and grow on the said farm and lands:—Held, that the prohibition was not restricted to hay, straw and fodder which arose and grew on the farm in the last year of the term, but extended to that which had arisen and grown at any time during the term. Gale v. Bates, 3 H. & C. 84; 33 L. J., Ex. 235; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 734; 10 L. T. 304; 12 W. R. 715.

The provision that the tenant shall at no time sell or give away the hay or straw is incompatible with a right in the tenant to eloign those articles during the last year. Roxburghe v. Robertson, 2 Bligh, 156; 21 R. R. 60.

See also Leigh v. Lillie, ante, col. 1182.

—— 56 Geo. 3, c. 50, s. 11.]—The 56 Geo. 3, c. 50 s. 11, is not confined to sales of farming stock and crops on land, let to farm by the sheriff under an execution, but applies to an ordinary sale by the tenant himself, and a purchaser from the tenant is bound by the term of the lease under which the tenant holds. Willmot v. Rose, 3 El. & Bl. 563; 2 C. L. R. 677; 23 L. J., Q. B. 281; 18 Jur. 518. And see next case.

—— Sale by Trustee in Bankruptcy.]—A lease of a farm containing a covenant by the lessee not to sell, without permission in writing of the landlord, the hay, straw, &c., grown upon the farm. A resolution was passed under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, by the creditors of the lessee for the liquidation of his affairs by arrangement, and a trustee was appointed. The trustee disclaimed the lease, but claimed to be entitled to the hay, straw, &c., grown on the farm:—Held, that the statute 56 Geo. 3, c. 50, s. 11, which provided that the assignee of a bankrupt should not take any hay, &c., on any farm which the bankrupt could not take, applies to a trustee in liquidation or in bankruptcy under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, and that, notwithstanding the disclaimer of the lease by the trustee, he was not entitled to sell the hay, &c., grown on the farm. Lybbe v. Hart, 54 L. J., Ch. 860 ; 29 Ch. D. 8 ; 52 L. T. 634—C. A.

A tenant of a farm, restrained by agreement from selling the hay and straw grown on the farm, became bankrupt. The trustee in bankruptcy removed and sold a quantity of the hay, in breach of the agreement and then disclaimed the lease. The landlord sued the trustee for the removal of the hay :—Held, that the trustee was personally liable for his wrongful act in selling the hay ; that he was not protected by s. 55, sub-s. 2, of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883. Schofield v. Hincks, 58 L. J., Q. B. 147 ; 60 L. T. 573 ; 37 W. R. 157.

—— Injunction.]—Distinction between express covenant and implied agreement as to being enforced by injunction ; granted in the former instance, not in the latter, against tenant, removing articles contrary to the custom of the country. Kimpton v. Eve, 2 Ves. & B. 349 ; 13 R. R. 116.

Not to cut Turf.]—A lessee covenanted not to sublet without consent "in writing, or that he should forfeit and pay the additional rent of 50*l.* per annum," and also not to cut more turf than should be sufficient for the consumption of himself, his executors, administrators, and assigns, on the demised premises, without the consent in writing, "or that he, &c., should forfeit and pay the additional rent of 10*l.* for every acre which should be cut or made into turf." The representative of the lessee sublet without consent, and the additional rent of 50*l.* was regularly paid and received ever since. The representatives of the lessor having lately filed a bill against the representative of the lessee and the several under-tenants for an account, and for an injunction in the nature of a writ of estrepement, now moved that the defendants might be restrained from selling turf off the demised premises, and from burning turf for manure, and from cutting the reclaimed meadow land into turf, and from cutting more turf than allowed by the original lease, being only a sufficiency for the use of one family. The court granted an injunction until the hearing to restrain the selling of turf and burning for manure, and also cutting the reclaimed meadow land ; but on the motion refused to restrain the under-tenants from cutting turf sufficient for their own consumption on the premises, the court observing that there would be a serious question on the hearing of the cause. Maxwell v. Mitchell, 1 Ir. Eq. R. 359.

As to Waste by Cutting Turf, see post, N. 5. b. i. (cols. 1272, 1273).

Removing Dung.]—Court will not interfere to prevent tenant carrying off dung from farm, contrary to covenants of lease. Johnson v. Goldswaine, 3 Anstr, 749. But see Geast v. Belfast (Lord), id. n. and Onslow v. ——, 16 Ves. 173.

A tenant may assign manure, though he may thereby subject himself to an action. Burbage v. King, 2 Chit. 246. And see Rayner v. Stone, infra.

To perform Work for Landlord.]—An agreement for an agricultural lease contained a stipulation that the tenant should perform each year for the landlord, at the rate of one day's team work with two horses and one proper person for every 50*l.* of rent when required (except at hay and corn harvest), without being paid for the same. In ejectment for a forfeiture :—Held, that the work thus to be performed meant any work for which teams are generally used, and therefore included drawing coals to the palace of the landlord. Marlborough (Duke) v. Osborn, 5 B. & S. 67 ; 33 L. J., Q. B. 148 ; 10 L. T. 28 ; 12 W. R. 418.

Held, also, that the tenant was not bound to supply a cart or other vehicle for that purpose of the work. Ib.

Selling Flints—Reservation of Mines and Minerals—Custom of Country.]—By an agreement for a lease, the tenant agreed to cultivate the land according to the most approved system of husbandry and to use it for agricultural purposes only, and to commit no waste. The lessor reserved "all mines and minerals, sand, quarries of stone, brick-earth and gravel pits." The farm was in a district where large numbers of flints came to the surface in the ordinary course of ploughing, and it was necessary to remove them in order to cultivate the land effectually. The tenant removed the flints which came to the surface in the ordinary course of agricultural operations and sold them, and there was evidence that it was the custom of the country for tenants to do so, when not prohibited by their leases :—Held, that such a custom was reasonable and good. Tucker v. Linger, 52 L. J., Ch. 941 ; 8 App. Cas. 508 ; 49 L. T. 373 ; 32 W. R. 40 ; 48 J. P. 4—H. L. (E.)

—— Custom, Proof of.]—In ascertaining the nature of an agricultural custom, regard is to be had not so much to what the witnesses state to be their opinion as to the extent of the custom, as to what they prove to have been publicly done throughout the district. Ib.

Sale of Stock by Landlord under Distress.]—The 56 Geo. 3. c. 50, s. 11, which makes a purchaser of farmer's stock bound by the tenant's covenant to consume such stock on the premises, does not enable a landlord to sell his tenant's hay which he has distrained for rent, otherwise than for the best price, as required by 2 Will. & M. sess. 2, c. 5. ; and therefore he cannot sell the same under a condition that it shall be consumed on the premises if by reason thereof he fails to obtain the best price, although the tenant is under a covenant to so use it on the premises. Hawkins v. Walrond, 45 L. J., C. P. 772 ; 1 C. P. D. 280 ; 35 L. T. 210 ; 24 W. R. 824.

Jurisdiction of Equity.]—Demurrer to a bill by a landlord, for a specific performance of covenants contained in a lease which had expired, to repair hedges and mansion-house, and also for an account of loppings and dung, cut or removed by the tenant, allowed, common covenants in husbandry not being the subject of equitable jurisdiction. Rayner v. Stone, 2 Eden, 128.

ii. Implied.

To Farm in Husbandlike Manner.]—The mere relation of landlord and tenant is a sufficient consideration to raise an implied promise on the part of the tenant to manage a farm in a husbandlike manner. Powley v. Walker, 5 Term Rep. 373; 2 R. R. 619.

But a declaration which stated that, in consideration that the defendant had become tenant to the plaintiff of a farm, the defendant undertook to make a certain quantity of fallow, and to spend 60*l.* worth of manure every year thereon, and to keep the buildings in repair, was held bad on general demurrer, because those obligations do not arise out of the bare relation of landlord and tenant. Brown v. Crump, 1 Marsh. 567; 6 Taunt. 300.

The court will not investigate the proper mode of cultivation of a farm; and the implied term of an agricultural contract, namely, to cultivate in a proper manner according to the custom of the country, is not more specific than a general covenant to keep in repair. Dunn v. Bryan, Ir. R. 7 Eq. 143.

To preserve Agricultural Holding as such—Waste.]—The tenant from year to year of a small parcel of land, let to and treated and cultivated by him as an ordinary agricultural holding, and on which, at the time of the letting, there was only a cottage, erected or permitted to be erected certain dwelling-houses, the outer walls of which were of timber, and the foundations and partitions of brick, in which he permitted to reside the families of certain other tenants on the same estate, who had been evicted from their own holdings for nonpayment of rent. The court was of opinion, on the evidence, that these tenants were members of an illegal conspiracy, having for its object the carrying out of what was known as the "Plan of Campaign," and that these houses were erected in furtherance of the objects of that conspiracy, and that they were kept up mainly for the purpose of deterring persons from taking the evicted farms; that thereby the landlord's adjoining property was materially damaged, and that he was prevented from letting the evicted farms; that the holding in question was not suited for the erection of buildings, and that such erection made a material change in the nature of the demised premises, and converted them to a substantial extent, into a collection of dwelling-houses:—Held, that from such a letting it was to be implied that the tenant agreed with the landlord that he would preserve the premises as an agricultural holding during the demise, that the acts of the tenant were both a breach of such agreement and also waste; and the court being of opinion that the injury to the landlord was not of a trivial or temporary nature, held that such acts should be restrained by injunction. Brooke v. Mernagh, 23 L. R., Ir. 86. S. P., Brooke v. Kavanagh, 23 L. R., Ir. 97—C. A.

To repair Fences.]—A plea to a declaration against a tenant, for not using premises in a husbandlike manner, in repairing fences, &c., on his implied promise so to do; that the fences became out of repair by natural decay, and that there was not proper wood (without specifying it), which the defendant had a right to cut for repairing the fences; and that the plaintiff ought to have set out proper wood for the purpose of repairs, which he neglected to do, without averring any request to the plaintiff so to do, or a custom of the country in this respect, is bad. Whitfield v. Weedon, 2 Chit. 685.

To carry away Straw.]—A tenant may, by the general rules of husbandry, carry away straw or hay from the premises. Gough v. Howard, Peake Ad. C. 197.

To remove Soil.]—But if a tenant of a farm, during his tenancy, removes a dung-heap, and, at the time of his so doing, digs into and remove virgin soil that is beneath it, the landlord may maintain either trespass de bonis asportatis or trover for the removal of the virgin soil. Higgon v. Mortimer, 6 Car. & P. 616.

Not to remove Crops.]—Injunction granted to restrain a tenant from year to year under notice to quit, as in the case of a lessee for a longer term, from doing damages, and from removing the crops, manure, &c., except according to the custom of the country. Onslow v. ——, 16 Ves. 173.

To Farm according to Custom of the Country.]—In an action against a tenant, upon promises that he would occupy a farm in a good and husbandlike manner, according to the custom of the country; an allegation, that he had treated the estate contrary to good husbandry and the custom of the country, is proved by shewing that he had treated it contrary to the prevalent course of good husbandry in that neighbourhood; as by tilling half his farm at once, when no other farmer tilled more than a third, though many tilled only a fourth; and it is not sufficient to shew any precise definitive custom or usage in respect to the quantity tilled. Legh v. Hewitt, 4 East, 154; 7 R. R. 445.

The custom of the country applies to a tenancy created by lease in writing, though the witnesses who prove the existence of the custom cannot undertake to say whether it applies where the lease is in writing. Wilkins v. Wood, 17 L. J., Q. B. 319; 12 Jur. 583.

The defendant's testator being in possession of an estate, of part of which he was the owner, and another part of which consisted of Crown lands leased to him for a term expiring on the 10th of October, 1849, contracted with the plaintiff for the sale to him of the former part, and, by agreement, demised to him the Crown lands for one year from the 29th of September, 1848; and the plaintiff agreed that he would abide by, perform and keep all and singular the covenants and agreements contained in the Crown lease; and the testator agreed that, in case he should be able to obtain a further lease from the Crown for fourteen years, he would grant to the plaintiff a lease for thirteen years, subject to the same covenants. By a memorandum subsequently signed by the plaintiff, he agreed to take the Crown lands, "subject to the same rents, covenants and obligations in all respects," as were contained and provided for in the leases by which the testator held or should hold the same. The plaintiff, on taking possession, paid to the outgoing tenants, according to the custom of the country, the amount of the valuation, for fallows, &c., as well of the other lands as of the Crown lands. By the terms of the Crown lease, the custom of the country in that respect was excluded. At the desire of the plaintiff, the Crown lease was not renewed:—Held, first, that the custom of the country was not excluded by the agreement between the parties. Fuvell v. Gaskoin, 7 Ex. 273; 21 L. J., Ex. 85.

Held, secondly, that where such a custom exists, there is an implied contract on the part of the landlord, that if there is no incoming tenant, he will pay the outgoing tenant according to the custom. Ib.

—— Custom—When reasonable.]—A tenant agreed to cultivate land according to the rules of good husbandry and the custom of the country. He drained (by brick and tile draining) some parts of the land without the knowledge of his landlord. Upon an action in a county court for a proportion of the money thus expended, it was proved for the plaintiff to be the usage, that where a tenant had laid out money in tile draining the landlord was to repay him five-sevenths of the expense, whether it had been by the consent of the landlord or not: while, on the part of the defendant, witnesses said that such usage was applicable only to cases where the landlord had consented to the outlay. The judge thereupon directed the jury, that what was the custom was a question for them to determine on the evidence:—Held, that such custom was not unreasonable, and that the direction of the judge was right. Mousely v. Ludlam, 21 L. J., Q. B. 64; 15 Jur. 1107.

—— When excluded.]—In an action by a landlord against his tenant, the declaration stated that the plaintiff was possessed of a farm, whereon he had laid manure, and thereupon, in consideration that the plaintiff would give up possession of the farm to the defendant, and would permit the defendant to have the benefit of the manure, the defendant promised the plaintiff to pay him so much money as he deserved to have according to the custom of the country. Breach, nonpayment of the value of the manure. At the trial the plaintiff gave in evidence a written agreement, which stated that the land had been manured with eight loads of manure per acre, and that the tenant agreed that the land, when given up by him, should be left in the same state, or allow a valuation to be made:—Held, that the written agreement excluded the custom of the country, as being inconsistent with it, and that there was therefore a variance between the declaration and the proof. Clarke v. Roystone, 13 M. & W. 752; 14 L. J., Ex. 143.

No inquiry as to the custom of the country, where there is a written agreement. Liebenrood v. Vines, 1 Mer. 15.

Of New Landlord.]—Where a demise is determined by the expiration of the landlord's estate, and the tenant continues to hold under the remainderman, paying the same rent, the question whether a term contained in the former tenancy is adopted into a new contract of demise is a question of fact. If such a tenant continues to hold under the remainderman, and nothing passes between them except the payment and receipt of rent, the new landlord is not bound by a stipulation contained in the former tenancy, which is not known to him in fact, nor is according to the custom of the country. Oakley v. Monck, 4 H. & C. 251; 35 L. J., Ex. 87; L. R. 1 Ex. 159; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 213; 14 L. T. 20; 14 W. R. 406—Ex. Ch.

Outgoing and Incoming Tenant.] — S. was tenant of a farm, with a right to the use of a part of the premises without payment until the 25th of March next after the expiration of the term, "for threshing and spending the last year's crop"; and by the custom of the country he was entitled, at the expiration of the term, to be paid by the landlord or the incoming tenant for tillages. He gave up the farm to G., as incoming tenant, at Michaelmas, 1870, and before so doing valuers were mutually appointed to value the tillages as between them, with the consent of the landlord, and the valuers duly made and signed their valuation. After G. had entered into possession, but before the 25th of March, 1871, the landlord gave him notice that rent was due from S., and required him to pay the amount of the valuation, which was less than the rent due, to him the landlord, and not to S.; and this G. did on receiving an indemnity from the landlord, but without S.'s consent. S. having sued G. for the value of the tillages, was nonsuited:—Held, that the nonsuit was right, for that the contract to be implied between the incoming and outgoing tenant was subject to the right of the landlord to be paid the arrears of rent out of the valuation. Stafford v. Gardner, L. R. 7 C. P. 242; 25 L. T. 876; 20 W. R. 299.

S., on quitting the farm at Michaelmas, 1870, gave up to G., and he exercised it, the right which S. had under the lease of converting the straw on the farm (between Michaelmas, 1870, and the 25th of March, 1871) into manure with his cattle. In so converting it the cattle ate a portion of the straw, calculated to be one-third of the bulk, and which the valuers in this case valued as browse at 33*l.*:—Held, that S. was entitled to recover this sum from G. Ib. See also Favell v. Gaskoin, col. 1190, and cases infra, c.

—— Valuation of Tenant's Crops, &c.]—An owner in fee demised a farm for seven years, and agreed at the expiration of the term to pay for the tenant's property in and upon the farm at a valuation. He devised the land to trustees for a term of 1000 years upon trust to raise money in aid of his personal estate for payment of debts, funeral and testamentary expenses, and legacies, and subject thereto to the plaintiff for life, with divers remainders over. On the testator's death the plaintiff took possession. On the expiration of the term a new tenant could not be found. The plaintiff paid the outgoing tenant for his property in the farm, and claimed to be repaid the amount out of the testator's estate:—Held, that the liability to pay the outgoing tenant was a liability attaching to the land, and that the landlord for the time being was the person primarily liable; that the plaintiff, being in receipt of the rents and profits, was the landlord, and not the trustees of the term; that he therefore was the person primarily liable, and had no claim to be repaid, wholly or in part, either out of the testator's estate or by the persons entitled in remainder. Mansel v. Norton, 52 L. J., Ch. 357; 22 Ch. D. 769; 48 L. T. 654; 31 W. R. 325—C. A.

Primâ facie the landlord is the person liable to the outgoing tenant, at the expiration of his tenancy, for the seeds, tillages, &c., properly bestowed by him upon a farm. Although, therefore, the ordinary practice (to avoid circuity) is, for the incoming tenant to pay the outgoing tenant for the seeds, tillages, &c., upon a valuation made between them, yet a custom or usage that the outgoing tenant shall look to the incoming tenant for payment to the exclusion of the landlord's liability cannot be supported in law as being unreasonable, uncertain, and prejudicial to the interests both of landlords and tenants. Bradburn v. Foley, 47 L. J., C. P. 331; 3 C. P. D. 129; 38 L. T. 421; 26 W. R. 423.

Implied from Payment of Rent.] — Special covenants, as to cultivation, not implied from the mere act of holding over, as they may be from payment of rent at the same period, as evidence of agreement to hold not only on same terms, but subject to same covenants. Kimpton v. Eve, 2 Ves. & B. 349; 13 R. R. 116.

b. When Extinguished.

A stipulation in a lease that the tenant shall keep a proportion of the land demised for grass, and pay so much per acre for any deficiency below such proportion, is extinguished by severance of the reversion. Womersley v. Dally, 26 L. J., Ex., 219.

c. Tillages.

Generally.]—Primâ facie the landlord is bound to pay the outgoing tenant for tillages, and the mere fact of the incoming tenant entering upon the land does not render him liable to do so; but it is a question of fact whether the contract between the outgoing tenant and the landlord subsists, or a new contract has been entered into with the incoming tenant. Codd v. Brown, 15 L. T. 536.

The outgoing tenant's remedy for tenant right is against the landlord, and not against the incoming tenant, unless by virtue of an agreement between the parties to that effect. The outgoing tenant is entitled to recover the amount of the tenant right from the landlord upon a quantum meruit; and the ascertainment of the amount by a valuation is not a condition precedent to his right to sue when it is not made such by the terms of the lease. Sucksmith v. Wilson, 4 F. & F. 1083.

An outgoing tenant, administratrix of a late tenant, having (after having had the farm for above a year) assigned to an incoming tenant, in consideration of a debt due to him, all her goods and effects, and all stock, corn, grain on the farm, and all her estate and interest thereon and therein:—Held, that this comprised tenant right, or tillages, on the farm. Cary v. Cary, 10 W. R. 669.

Where an outgoing tenant does the necessary ploughing and sows the land in the ordinary and proper course of husbandry, and leaves manure for the benefit of the landlord, which is accepted and taken by him, the law, without an allegation or proof of a custom of the country, will imply an assumpsit on the part of the landlord to pay the tenant the value, and the tenant is not deprived of that right by having held over after the expiry of the term. Martin v. Coulman, 4 L. J., K. B. 37.

In an action by an outgoing tenant against his landlord for not paying for ploughing, crops and manure, according to valuation, pursuant to a deed entered into between them, it being made conditions precedent that the tenant should deliver up possession of the farm-house and stable on a certain day, and of the farm on a later day, and should cultivate on the four-course system, according to the custom of the country:—Held, first, that the first covenant meant only the stable of the farmhouse. Newson v. Smythies, 1 F. & F. 477.

Held, secondly, that the covenant to cultivate meant only so far as was universally obligatory by the custom of the country. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that the landlord concurring in the valuation after the tenant had given up possession of the farm, was evidence whence the jury might infer an admission of a substantial performance of the conditions precedent. Ib.

Custom as to.]—A. held a farm as tenant from year to year, upon a written agreement, by which it was stipulated, that he should cultivate the farm "in the same way or manner, or as near thereto as circumstances would admit of, as Parsons (the outgoing tenant) had used and cultivated the same during his occupation thereof, and in all events, according to the rules of good husbandry used and accustomed in the neighbourhood." In an action against A. alleging for breach the cutting and carrying away of ash poles, such user not being as near to the way and manner in which Parsons used and cultivated the farm as circumstances admitted, and being contrary to the rules of good husbandry used and accustomed in the neighbourhood, it appeared that the poles in question consisted of shoots growing from old stools, which were seasonable and fit for cutting about every seventeen or eighteen years; that, by invariable custom, they belonged to the landlord, in the absence of a special agreement to the contrary; that, whilst Parsons held the farm, these poles had never been in a fit state for cutting; that two tenants who had preceded Parsons in the occupation of the farm had cut and sold them as crops; and that A. had, whilst he occupied, paid the rates for the whole farm, including the wood or spinney in which the poles grew. The judge having omitted to leave to the jury upon what terms Parsons had held the farm, the court granted a new trial. Hood (Viscount) v. Kendall, 17 C. B. 260; 4 W. R. 123.

A custom for the tenant of a farm in a particular district to provide work and labour, tillage, sowing, and all materials for the same, in his away-going year, and for the landlord to make him a reasonable compensation for the same, is valid in law, notwithstanding the farm is held under a written agreement, provided such agreement does not, in express terms, exclude the custom. Senior v. Armytage, Holt, N. P. 197; 17 R. R. 627.

A usage for the off-going tenant of a farm in a particular district to bestow his work, labour, and expense in manuring, tilling, fallowing and sowing, according to the course of husbandry, and for the landlord to pay him a reasonable compensation in respect thereof, is a valid and reasonable usage. Dalby v. Hirst, 3 Moore, 536; 1 Br. & B. 224; 21 R. R. 527.

Primâ facie the landlord is the person liable to the outgoing tenant, at the expiration of his tenancy, for the seeds, tillages, &c., properly bestowed by him upon a farm. Although, therefore, the ordinary practice (to avoid circuity) is, for the incoming tenant to pay the outgoing tenant for the seeds, tillages, &c., upon a valuation made between them; yet a custom or usage that the outgoing tenant shall look to the incoming tenant for payment to the exclusion of the landlord's liability, cannot be supported in law as being unreasonable, uncertain, and prejudicial to the interests both of landlords and tenants. Bradburn v. Foley, 47 L. J., C. P. 331; 3 C. P. D. 129; 38 L. T. 421; 26 W. R. 423.

A landlord and tenant entered into an agreement for renting a farm. The landlord covenanted that he or the incoming tenant should pay for the work and seeds of the off-growing crop. By the custom of the country the incoming tenant was bound to pay for such labour and seeds. The landlord did not pay for them. The off-going tenant sued the incoming tenant on the custom for compensation:—Held, that the incoming tenant was liable. Louth v. Enderby, 3 L. J. (O. S.) K. B. 23; 26 R. R. 642.

The custom of tenant-right estate in the county of Westmoreland, during the joint lives of lord and tenants, established on appeal to House of Lords. Lowther v. Raw, Fortesc. 44.

——When excluded.]—A custom of a country, by which the tenant of a farm, cultivating it according to the course of good husbandry, is entitled, on quitting, to receive from the landlord or incoming tenant a reasonable allowance for seeds and labour bestowed on the arable land in the last year of the tenancy, and is bound to leave the manure for the landlord, if he will purchase it—is not excluded by a stipulation in the lease under which he holds that he will consume three-fourths of the hay and straw on the farm, and spread the manure arising therefrom, and leave such of it as shall not be so spread on the land for the use of the landlord, on receiving a reasonable price for it. Hutton v. Warren, 1 M. & W. 466; 2 Gale, 71; 1 Tyr. & G. 646; 5 L. J., Ex. 234.

Outgoing Tenant—Unconsumed Straw.]—A tenant held under a lease, which contained a covenant that he should cultivate the farm according to the custom of the country, and should with the last wheat crop lay down the same with 20 lbs. weight of good clover seed per acre, and continue the same so laid down for feeding, not to exceed three grounds belonging to the farm; and should during all the term consume with stock in the farm all the hay, straw and clover grown thereon; which manure should be used on the farm; and that the lessor and his assignees would allow the lessee to occupy half the rooms in the house, and the barn, yards and granary until Midsummer-day after the expiration of the term, if necessary, to finish the cropping of the lessee grown on the premises thereby demised. Under the custom of the country, the tenant would have been entitled to be paid for the straw and manure on leaving:—Held, the covenant containing no provisions as to straw unconsumed on quitting was not inconsistent with the custom of the country, and therefore the tenant was entitled to be paid for his straw. Muncey v. Dennis, 1 H. & N. 216; 26 L. J., Ex. 66.

Tenant Abandoning Lease.]—A tenant of a farm from year to year, who was entitled to certain tenant-rights, took a lease of the farm for seven years, under which he became entitled to larger tenant-rights and allowances. In the middle of the term, being unable to pay the rent and continue the tenancy, he left the farm, and, in effect, abandoned the position of tenant, and did not bring an ejectment against his landlord who was in possession under a distress for rent, and who remained, at the tenant's request, in possession after the distress was satisfied. No new agreement was made as to the tenant-rights and allowances:—Held that, in the absence of any new agreement, the tenant's rights arose only at the expiration of the lease and on a substantial performance by the tenant of the covenants thereof, and that, as the tenant had in effect abandoned the tenancy, he was not entitled to any tenant-rights under the lease; and, further, that any tenant-right he might have had previously while tenant from year to year was extinguished by his accepting the tenant-rights under the lease. England v. Shearburn, 52 L. T. 22; 49 J. P. 86.

Where a farm was taken for fourteen years, and the tenant was to pay a given sum for tillages and improvements done before he entered, and to receive the value of the tillages and improvements which he should leave on the farm, according to a valuation to be made at his quitting; and the tenant, in the first year of the tenancy, said that he would leave and his landlord said he might; but no new bargain was made as to his tillages and improvements:—Held, that he was not entitled to the value of the tillages and improvements which he left on quitting. Whittaker v. Barker, 1 C. & M. 113; 3 Tyr. 135.

Covenant by Landlord to Pay for—What a Condition Precedent.]—A tenant covenanted with his landlord to deliver up possession of a farm and land on a day named, and that in the meantime he would cultivate the land according to the custom of the country, and that upon the delivery up of the land he would surrender and yield up a certain agreement to be cancelled, and all his unexpired term and interest in the farm, and would afterwards, on request, execute any further deed for effectually surrendering the term; and the landlord covenanted that if the tenant did on the day named deliver up possession, and did and should in the meantime cultivate the land according to the custom of the country, and also did and should well and truly observe, perform, and keep all and singular other the covenants and agreements thereinbefore contained, and on his part to be performed, he, the landlord, would upon the delivery up of possession of the land on the day specified, so cultivated as aforesaid, and on such performance of such other covenants as aforesaid, pay the tenant for the manure, tillages, hay, clover and all other things then upon the land as were usually paid for between an outgoing and incoming tenant:—Held, that the delivery up of the agreement was not a condition precedent to payment for the manure, &c. Newson v. Smythies, 4 H. & N. 840; 28 L. J., Ex. 97.

d. Away-going Crops.

To whom belonging—Custom of the Country.]—When the tenancy of a farm expires, the tenant must give up the possession of the whole of it to the landlord—crops and everything else, unless there is a custom of the country for the tenant to hold over any part, or to take any of the crops; and the proof of the custom lies on the tenant. Caldecott v. Smythies, 7 Car. & P. 808.

If the custom of the country is for an outgoing tenant, for what is called his odd mark, to crop one-third of the arable in wheat, and to reap that wheat after the tenancy has expired, and the tenant so crops more than the proper one-third, the landlord will be entitled to have all that which was last sown, and which is above one-third, unless it is shewn that the tenant has a lien upon it for the sowing and the seed. Ib.

Where by the custom of the country as between outgoing and incoming farm tenants, the former was entitled to an away-going share of the crop of wheat sown by him in the last year of his tenancy; and he cut the whole of such crop, and kept the fences of the field in repair until the whole crop was cut and carried away:—Held, that the outgoing tenant had the possession in law of the field until the crop was carried away; and therefore that his vendee of his share of the crop had a good defence to an action by the new tenant for breaking and entering the close in which the crop grew for the purpose of carrying away his share. Griffiths v. Puleston, 13 M. & W. 358; 14 L. J., Ex. 33.

If a lease contains no stipulations as to the mode of quitting, the off-going tenant is entitled to his away-going crop, according to the custom of the country, even though the terms of holding may be inconsistent with such a custom. Holding v. Pigott, 7 Bing. 465; 5 M. & P. 427; 9 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 125.

A tenant held a farm under a lease, containing a condition that the wheat land should be summer-fallowed and well manured for the crop. By the custom of the country, a tenant who had sown his land with wheat after a crop of turnips at the wheat-seedness next before the expiration of his tenancy was entitled to cut and carry away one-half of the wheat so sown:—Held, that, as the condition in the lease was confined to the period of holding the farm, and not to the time of quitting, the tenant was entitled to the benefit of the custom, giving him a right to a proportion of the wheat sown by him, after turnips, leaving the landlord to his remedy for breach of covenant. Ib.

A tenant, whose tenancy is determined after Lady-day, by an agreement which is silent as to away-going crops, is not entitled to such crops under a custom which gives to the tenant such crops upon a regular expiration of a Lady-day tenancy. Thorpe v. Eyre, 3 N. & M. 214; 1 A. & E. 926.

—— Assignee in Bankruptcy of Lessee.]—Covenant in lease, that lessee should have the off-going crop from two-thirds of arable land, &c., on efflux of lease, or sooner determination of term. On lessee's bankruptcy, assignees on petition under 49 Geo. 3 (see 6 Geo. 4. c. 16, s. 75), refusing to accept lease:—Held, entitled to off-going crop, paying rent up to time when possession of premises and lease should be delivered to landlord. Maundrell, Ex parte, 2 Madd. 315; Buck, 83.

What constitutes giving up Possession of.]—The plaintiff, who was the grandson of the deceased tenant of a farm, remained in possession after his grandfather's death. A bargain was made between the plaintiff and M., an incoming tenant, who had agreed to take the farm from the landlord, by which bargain M. was to give the plaintiff 30*l.* for the crops, manure, &c., to be secured by the promissory note of M. and a surety, which note was to be held by D., and was to be by D. attested and handed over to the plaintiff, if the plaintiff delivered up the possession of the lands on the following morning, but he was to remain in possession of the house for a few weeks at a rent of 1*s.* a week, to be paid to M. The note was accordingly drawn with a clause of attestation, and was signed by M. and his surety, and handed to D. The next morning upon M. and D. requesting the plaintiff to give up the possession, he refused to give up the place; but there was evidence that, on that day, M.'s cattle were on the lands, and that the plaintiff's were not. The plaintiff kept possession of the house for three weeks, when he was turned out by a constable. The note was never attested, and it was not proved how the plaintiff got it into his possession:—Held, in an action by the plaintiffs against the makers of the note, that a jury was warranted in saying that the bargain had been complied with on the part of the plaintiff. Evans v. Morgan, 2 C. & J. 453; 2 Tyr. 396.

Meaning of the Words "Turnip or Fallow Breaks."]—In a lease of a farm of 600 acres a tenant bound himself by a covenant never to have more than one-half of the arable land in white crop during the same season, nor to take two white crops off the same field without a green or black crop intervening, and to take only one black crop, i.e. beans, peas, potatoes, &c., between grass and grass; and at the end of the lease, to leave the turnip or fallow breaks once ploughed for the incoming tenant:—Held, that the words "turnip or fallow breaks" meant the land which would, in the natural course of good husbandry, be ploughed and left fallow for the purpose of being planted with turnips, and that the tenant was entitled over and above the way-going cereal crop on the moiety of the lands, to have an away-going black crop in respect of 100 acres more. Hunter v. Miller, 4 Macq. H. L. 560; 9 L. T. 159—H. L. (Sc.)

e. Valuations.

See also cases ante, col. 1093.

When one of the Parties refuses to name a Valuer.]—A declaration stated, that in consideration that the plaintiff had become tenant to the defendant of a farm upon the terms that if the plaintiff should receive from the defendant notice to quit, and should have made expensive improvements upon the farm, for which the subsequent crops should not have compensated the plaintiff, the farm should on the determination of the tenancy, be looked over by two persons, one to be appointed by each party, and that the persons appointed should determine to what compensation the plaintiff should be entitled; and that the defendant promised the plaintiff that if the tenancy should be determined, and the plaintiff should have made improvements for which he should not have been compensated, the defendant would, at the plaintiff's request, appoint a person for such purposes. Averment that the tenancy was determined by the defendant; that the plaintiff had made improvements for which he had not been compensated; that the plaintiff, after the determination of the tenancy, appointed D. to determine the compensation, and D. was ready to act, of which the defendant had notice, and was then requested by the plaintiff to appoint some person on his behalf:—Held, that the declaration was bad, as stating a promise which did not legally arise from an executed consideration, and also on the ground that there was no allegation that the plaintiff had requested the defendant to appoint a valuer before the commencement of the suit. Lattimore v. Garrard, 1 Ex. 809.

Non-agreement of Valuers — Position of Tenant.]—A person entered upon the occupation of a farm under a written agreement, by which he agreed "to pay 5*l.* for every load of fodder, straw, haulm, dung, or turnips, which should be sold or carried off the premises, and the same sum for every load of hay or wheat straw sold or carried off the premises, for which there should not be two loads of good dung or other manure (at the option of the landlord) to be spent on the premises"; and also "to purchase all the hay, sainfoin, and tares now in the yard; also all the dung and manure now on the premises; also all the straw from the crops now stacked or about to be stacked in the yard, paying a fair price for the same, to be ascertained by valuers on both sides." And the landlord engaged, on the tenant's quitting the farm, to purchase all hay, sainfoin, and tares in the yard, the produce of the farm; also all straw from the crops of the previous harvest that might be on the premises, paying a fair price for the same, to be ascertained by valuers on both sides:—Held, that the tenant, not being by the terms of the agreement entitled to be paid for the manure at the expiration of his tenancy, was only entitled to be paid for the straw at a fodder price, viz. one-half the market price. Clarke v. Westrope, 18 C. B. 765; 25 L. J., C. P. 287.

Held, also, that the incoming tenant having consumed the straw, and the valuers named by the parties not having agreed upon the valuation, or appointed an umpire, the tenant was entitled to maintain an action for it, as upon a quantum meruit. Ib.

Misconduct of Arbitrators.]—A usage for arbitrators appointed to determine as between outgoing and incoming tenants of a farm, the value of the away-going crop and the deductions for want of repairs of the farm buildings and fences, to make their award, on inspection of the crops and premises, without notice to the parties and without evidence, may be good; but no usage can justify arbitrators in hearing one party and his witnesses only in the absence of and without notice to the other party. Oswald v. Grey (Earl), 24 L. J., Q. B. 69.

How far the Court will interfere with.]—Upon a contract for the sale of a farm, it was, by a letter signed by both parties, referred to a valuer to ascertain and certify the amount of the following particulars: first, the seed, wheat and vetches sown on the several fields of A.'s late farm at Bampton previous to the 25th of December, 1847 (the day possession was given to the purchaser); secondly, the labour of ploughing and sowing the same: thirdly, the quantity and cost price at the kiln of the lime carried on the farm since Michaelmas, 1847, but not the cost of carriage: and fourthly, the value of the hay left on the farm at Christmas, 1847. "All the above are to be paid for by B. We mutually agree to abide by your valuation":—The valuer having allowed a sum for three ploughings of a portion of the land, another sum for lime, and another sum for working out and burning stroyle, the court declined to interfere. Branscombe v. Rowcliffe, 6 C. B. 523.

A. held a farm of B., subject to the following covenants, contained in a draft lease under which the former tenant had held:—First, to house the produce on the farm, and thresh, feed and fodder the same thereon, and not to sell or dispose of any part thereof, except as after mentioned. Secondly, that A. should be at liberty to sell hay and wheat straw, except that of the last year's produce, bringing back for every load of hay or straw two loads of manure; and, thirdly, that A. should on the determination of the tenancy, leave all the hay, straw, and manure arising during the last year of the tenancy, for the use of B., or the incoming tenant, being paid for the hay and wheat straw at a fair valuation, these latter words "fair valuation" being substituted in the draft lease for "consuming price." In an action by A. against B. to recover the value of hay and wheat straw left by the former tenant at the expiration of his tenancy, it appeared that a valuation had been made by an umpire, who was the only witness called at the trial, and who stated that he had valued not at a "consuming price" nor a "market price," but at a "fair valuation," and the jury returned a verdict in accordance with his valuation:—Held, that there was nothing from which the court could see that the valuation had been made upon an erroneous principle, and what was a "fair valuation" being a question, there was no ground for interfering with the verdict. Cumberland v. Bowes or Glamis, 15 C. B. 348; 3 C. L. R. 149; 24 L. J., C. P. 46; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 236; 3 W. R. 138.

Held, also, that the valuation of the umpire was not invalidated by the circumstance of his having altered it after he had delivered it by striking out an item which ought not to have been included therein. Ib.

Mistake made in—Right to recover Money Paid under.]—By an agreement made between the plaintiff and defendant, the defendant sold to plaintiff all his interest in a farm, together with the growing crops and those already harvested, the covenants and general valuation of the farm and all the stock, both live and dead; and it was agreed between them that all the aforesaid matters and things should become a subject of valuation by two indifferent persons, one to be chosen by each party, and in the event of their not agreeing, then by their referee or umpire, whose decision should be final and binding on both parties. The valuers appointed under the agreement made a valuation at a gross sum, not specifying the value of undivided items, and the plaintiff gave a promissory note for the amount, and took possession of the farm and stock. In a month or so afterwards the plaintiff re-sold the farm, and before giving up possession to the purchaser, discovered that a number of items had been included in the valuation that, according to the custom of the country, did not form a subject of valuation between an incoming and an outgoing tenant. He did not, however, claim to have the matter re-opened, but duly paid the amount of the promissory note to the defendant when it afterwards became due. He subsequently brought an action against him to recover the whole of the money paid by him as money received to his use, without previously giving any notice of the circumstances to the defendant, or claiming repayment from him:—Held, that he could not recover the whole or any part of the money which he had paid. Freeman v. Jeffries, 38 L. J., Ex. 116; L. R. 4 Ex. 189; 20 L. T. 533.

f. When Recoverable on.

Effect of Covenant to sell Manure to Incoming Tenant.]—Where the outgone tenant has covenanted with his landlord to leave the manure made by him on the farm, and sell it to the incoming tenant at a valuation to be made by certain persons; the effect of such covenant is to give the outgone tenant a right of on-stand for his manure upon the farm; and the possession of and property in it remain in him in the meantime; and therefore, if the incoming tenant removes and uses it before such valuation, he is answerable to the outgone tenant in trespass. Beaty v. Gibbons, 16 East, 116; 14 R. R. 320.

As Goods Sold and Delivered.]—Where an agreement between an outgoing and an incoming tenant was that the latter should buy the hay, &c., of the former upon the farm, and that the former should allow to the latter the expense of repairing the gates and fences of the farm, and that the value of the hay, &c., and of repairs should be settled by third persons:—Held, that the balance settled to be due to the outgoing tenant for his hay, &c., after deducting the value of the repairs, might be recovered by him in a count for goods sold and delivered, after having failed upon his count on the special agreement, for want of including in it that part of the agreement which related to the valuation of the repairs. Leeds v. Burrows, 12 East, 1.

By whom Payable.]—Primâ facie the landlord is bound to pay the outgoing tenant for tillages, and the mere fact of the incoming tenant entering upon the land does not render him liable to do so; but it is a question of fact whether the contract between the outgoing tenant and the landlord subsists, or a new contract has been entered into with the incoming tenant. Codd v. Brown, 15 L. T. 536.

The outgoing tenant's remedy for tenant-right is against the landlord, and not against the incoming tenant, unless by virtue of an agreement between the parties to that effect. The outgoing tenant is entitled to recover the amount of the tenant-right from the landlord upon a quantum meruit; and the ascertainment of the amount by a valuation is not a condition precedent to his right to sue when it is not made such by the terms of the lease. Sucksmith v. Wilson, 4 F. & F. 1083.

Assignees of the reversion may be sued by an outgoing tenant on a contract or custom of the country, by which he is entitled to receive, on the termination of his tenancy by notice from the landlord, reasonable allowance for the value of labour bestowed on the land, and the benefit of which he loses by such termination of his tenancy, although he has paid all the rent to the original landlord and received notice from him, the assignees having renewed the notice after the conveyance to them, and possession having been given to them. Womersley v. Dally, 26 L. J., Ex. 219.

Action for, when Maintainable.]—The defendant demised a farm for a term of fourteen years; the lease contained a covenant by the lessees not to assign without licence, with a proviso for re-entry, and a covenant by the lessor at the expiration of the tenancy to pay for certain things at a valuation. At the expiration of the term, the lessees continued tenants from year to year on the terms of the original lease. They afterwards, by deed, assigned their interest in the premises, with their right to be paid for the things at a valuation, to the plaintiff. He entered into the occupation of the premises, but never paid rent; nor did the defendant ever recognise him as his tenant. The defendant gave the lessees the proper six months' notice to quit, and the plaintiff gave the defendant a similar notice:—Held, that the plaintiff could not maintain an action against the defendant for the amount of the things at a valuation, on the ground (per Mellor and Lush, JJ.) that no new tenancy had been created between them, and that the bare assignment of the parol tenancy did not pass to the assignee a right of action upon the special stipulation; and per Shee, J., on the ground that as the lessees had no power to assign without licence, they could not transfer any interest in the premises to the plaintiff. Elliot v. Johnson, 8 B. & S. 38; 36 L. J., Q. B. 44; L. R. 2 Q. B. 120; 15 W. R. 253.

The plaintiff at Lady-day, 1821, gave up possession of a farm to the defendant, having previously sown forty acres of it with wheat. At a meeting in the previous month, the plaintiff asked the defendant if he would take the wheat at 200*l.*, saying that if he would not he should not have the farm. The defendant said he would take the wheat, and being asked to whom the dead stock should be valued, replied "To me." The defendant afterwards undertook to pay for the wheat and dead stock on a specified day, and did pay 75*l.* on account generally, and eventually had possession of the farm, the wheat and the dead stock:—Held, that the contract for the dead stock, being distinct from the contract for the sale of the wheat, or the giving up of the farm, the plaintiff might recover for that amount. Mayfield v. Wadsley, 5 D. & R. 224; 3 B. & C. 357; 3 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 31.

Liability of Incoming Tenant paying to wrong Person.]—A person who has taken a farm under a person in possession, and claiming as devisee under a will, and has paid for the manure, under a valuation, according to the custom, is liable for the value to the person who afterwards takes out letters of administration, the will having turned out to be invalid. Searson v. Robinson, 2 F. & F. 351.

Penalties for Breach of—Increase of Rent.]—See ante, cols. 950 et seq.

g. Pleadings and Evidence.

Claim—For Non-cultivation of Farm according to Custom.]—A breach of a covenant to cultivate land according to the custom of the country is sufficiently averred by stating that the tenant did not so cultivate without specifying instances. Martyn v. Clue, 18 Q. B. 661; 22 L. J., Q. B. 147.

In an action against a tenant upon promises to cultivate a farm according to the course of good husbandry and the custom of the country, if the declaration sets out the custom, and the defendant traverses it, the plaintiff must prove it as alleged. Angerstein v. Handson, 1 C. M. & R. 789; 5 Tyr. 583; 1 Gale, 8; 4 L. J., Ex. 118.

—— Not Managing in Husbandlike Manner.]—Quære, whether it is sufficient to assign a breach of an agreement to manage a farm in a husbandlike manner, and according to the custom of the country, in the words of the agreement. Falmouth (Earl) v. Thomas, 1 C. & M. 89; 3 Tyr. 26; 2 L. J., Ex. 57.

—— Variance in.]—A count averring that the defendant was tenant to three plaintiffs, and had agreed to farm the lands in a husbandlike manner, and it appearing that the demise was only by two, and that the agreement was also to keep the land constantly in grass:—Held, variances. Saunderson v. Griffiths, 8 D. & R. 643; 5 B. & C. 909; 4 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 318.

Defence—In Action for Wrongfully Removing Manure.]—A declaration stated that the defendant covenanted with the plaintiff not to sell or carry away from the premises any manure made on the premises without his consent, under the increased rent of 10*l.* for every ton so given, sold or carried away; and also covenanted that he would pay all the increased rent. Breach, that he sold a large quantity of manure made on the premises, to wit, 160 tons, and did allow the same to be carried away from the premises: and the plaintiff claims 2,000*l.* Plea, that the defendant brought upon the premises a quantity of manure, larger and better in quality than that carried away:—Held, first, that the plea was bad. Leigh v. Lillie, 6 H. & N. 165; 30 L. J., Ex. 25; 9 W. R. 55.

—— Traverse of Custom.]—To a declaration, charging the defendant, as tenant to the plaintiff, with carrying away, in an untenantable manner and contrary to the custom of the country, several loads of hay off the farm, without bringing back and spending on the premises an equal number of loads of dung, a plea that there was not any such custom of the country is good. Hartley v. Burkitt, 4 Bing. (N.C.) 687; 6 Scott, 497; 1 Arn. 258; 2 Jur. 642.

—— Traverse of Tenancy.]—A declaration stated that the defendants were tenants to the plaintiff of a farm, and by reason thereof it was their duty, as such tenants, to manage and cultivate the farm in a husbandlike manner, according to the custom of the country; and assigned breaches in over-cropping, &c.: Plea, that the defendants were not nor was either of them, tenants to the plaintiff of the messuage, &c., as alleged:—Held, this plea only put in issue the fact of the tenancy, and not the holding subject to a duty to cultivate according to the custom of the country, and that the defendants could not therefore object, on this record, that a lease, under which the land had been originally taken, was not produced by the plaintiff, in order to shew that it did not exclude the custom. Hallifax v. Chambers, 4 M. & W. 662; 7 D. P. C. 342; 1 H. & H. 417; 8 L. J., Ex. 117.

Replication—Right of Tenant to remain in Possession of Crops after Entry by Landlord.]—To an action for an assault, the defendant pleaded a justification in defence of the possession of a dwelling-house. The plaintiff new assigned that the assault was committed, not in a dwelling-house, but on a bridge, and in certain yards and fields, parcel of a farm. The plea to the new assignment stated that W. was possessed of the dwelling-house, and also of the bridge, yards and fields which belonged and were adjacent to the dwelling-house, and justified the trespass in defence of the possession of the house, bridge, yards and fields, and averred that the defendant removed the plaintiff from the bridge, yards and fields, and took him by the nearest way to a public highway, near to the dwelling-house, bridge, yards and fields. The replication alleged the seisin of W. in the farm, a demise of it by him to J. as tenant from year to year, the entry of J., an assignment by J. to B. to secure a debt of the present and future growing crops on the farm, with a power to B. in default of payment to take possession. It then alleged a default by J., that W. at the time of the default was in possession of the farm on which there then were growing crops, which belonged to J. after the date of the assignment, that the plaintiff as servant of B. took possession, and continued in possession of the growing crops for a reasonable time, and that before a reasonable time elapsed the defendant removed him, and dragged him from the dwelling-house across the bridge, yards and fields to the highway:—Held, that as the replication stood upon the right of a person, claiming under a tenant from year to year, to remain on the premises, and retain possession of the crops, after the landlord had resumed possession, it should have stated how the tenancy came to an end; that there was no presumption as to a determination by the landlord rather than by the tenant; nor, supposing that B. was entitled to them after his interest as tenant in the premises had determined, that they were ripe or fit for harvesting, or that they needed any cultivation, for which the plaintiff's continuing in possession was necessary. Hayling v. Okey, 8 Ex. 531; 22 L. J., Ex. 139; 17 Jur. 325; 1 W. R. 182—Ex. Ch.

Evidence.]—If the breach of a covenant is assigned thus, "that the defendant has not used a farm in a husbandlike manner, but on the contrary has committed waste," the plaintiff cannot give evidence of the defendant's using the farm in an unhusbandlike manner, if it does not amount to waste. Harris v. Mantle, 3 Term Rep. 307.

On a contract between outgoing and incoming tenant referring to the lease, the lease must be put in. Tanner v. Washburne, 1 F. & F. 330.

—— As to Custom.]—The rule of law, as to importing into the terms of a tenancy "the custom of the country," does not admit of evidence of the usage of a particular estate, or the property of a particular person, however extensive it may be, it not being shewn that the tenant was aware of it. Womersley v. Dally, 26 L. J., Ex. 219.

Where to a declaration on an agreement for not cultivating according to the custom of the country defendant only pleaded "not guilty," proof that the tenancy was from year to year, is sufficient evidence of the agreement. Where three actions were referred to an arbitrator, the defendant being the same in each, and the plaintiffs, being successive reversioners, under the same title:—Held, that the arbitrator was right in awarding damages to each reversioner. Webb v. Clarke, 4 W. R. 125.

Promise to Pay Penalties—How Supported.]—A count stated that the defendant had become tenant to the plaintiff on the terms and stipulations that the rent should be payable half-yearly, that the defendant "should not sell any straw or manure grown or produced upon the farm, without the written licence of the plaintiff, under certain penalties, and that the penalties should be considered as additional rent, and should be recoverable by distress or otherwise as rent." Averments, that in consideration thereof, the defendant promised the plaintiff to pay all such penalties as he might be liable to to pay the plaintiff according to the stipulations; and that the defendant, without licence, sold straw on the premises during his tenancy. Breach, nonpayment of penalties in respect thereof:—Held, by Lord Campbell, C.J., and Patteson, J., that the promise to observe the terms, one of which was payment of penalties, was supported by the bygone consideration of having become tenant on these terms, and that the stipulation must be construed to be not at any time to sell straw grown during the tenancy: Erle, J., dissentiente, holding that the stipulation should be construed to be, not during the tenancy to sell straw, &c., grown during the tenancy. Massey v. Goodall, 17 Q. B. 310; 20 L. J., Q. B. 526; 15 Jur. 991.

h. Emblements.

Who entitled to—Tenant.]—The plaintiff occupied, as yearly tenant of A., who was tenant for life, a small labourer's cottage, with an acre of land, which was partly cultivated as a garden and partly sown with corn or planted with potatoes. The defendant became owner of the cottage and land on the death of A., and distrained for the proportion of rent due from the plaintiff in respect of such cottage and land between A.'s death and the expiration of the then current year of the plaintiff's tenancy, up to which time the plaintiff remained in occupation:—Held, that the plaintiff was tenant of lands in respect of which emblements might be claimed within 14 & 15 Vict. c. 25, s. 1, and that the defendant was therefore entitled to recover such proportion of rent by distress. Haines v. Welch, 38 L. J., C. P. 118; L. R. 4 C. P. 91; 19 L. T. 422; 17 W. R. 163.

When the herd of an evicted tenant held, as part of his wages, and had sown with oats and potatoes, three roods of the evicted farm, which contained fifty-eight acres, the evicted tenant was entitled to avail himself of these crops as emblements. Kenna v. Nugent, Ir. R. 7 C. L. 464—Ex. Ch.

If the landlord meant to contend that the claim to emblements was merely colourable, or that the herd held as tenant and not as servant, he ought at the trial to have required those questions to be submitted to the jury. Ib.

A tenant for a term determinable upon a life, sowed the land in spring, first with barley and soon after with clover. The life expired in the following summer. In the autumn the tenant mowed the barley, together with a little of the clover plant which had sprung up. The clover so taken made the barley-straw more valuable, by being mixed with it; but the increase of the value did not compensate for the expense of cultivating the clover, and a farmer would not be repaid such expense in the autumn of the year in which it was sown. The reversioner came into possession in the winter, and took two crops of the same clover after more than a year had elapsed from the sowing:—Held, that the tenant was not entitled to emblements of either of these two crops; first, because emblements can be claimed only in a crop of a species which ordinarily repays the labour by which it is produced within the year in which that labour is bestowed; and, secondly, because even if the tenant was entitled to one crop of the vegetable growing at the time of the cesser of his interest, this had been already taken by him at the time of cutting the barley. Graves v. Weld, 5 B. & Ad. 105; 2 N. & M. 725; 2 L. J., K. B. 176.

A tenant in April, 1857, sowed artificial grass on the lands which he grazed, from October, 1857, until May, 1858, when he began to preserve the grass for meadow. His tenancy expired in May, 1858:—Held, that he was not entitled to emblements of the artificial grass. Flanagan v. Seaver, 9 Ir. Ch. R. 230.

—— Lessor.]—A lease of lands contained a condition "that if the lessee should commit an act of bankruptcy, whereon a commission should issue, and he should be declared a bankrupt, or if he should become insolvent, or incur any debt upon which any judgment should be signed, entered up, or given against him, and on which any writ of fieri facias, or any other writ of execution should issue, it should be lawful for the lessor to re-enter into the premises, and the same again to have, re-possess and enjoy, as in his former estate." The tenant gave a warrant of attorney, upon which judgment was entered up and his goods taken in execution and sold, and a commission of bankruptcy afterwards issued against him. The lessor entered for the forfeiture:—Held, that he was entitled to the emblements. Daris v. Eyton, 4 M. & P. 820; 7 Bing. 154; 9 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 44.

—— Devisee.]—A devisee of real estate is entitled to emblements growing at the time of the death of the devisor, unless the language of the devise clearly shews the intention of the devisor that they should go to some other person. Cooper v. Woolfitt, 2 H. & N. 122; 26 L. J., Ex. 310; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 870; 5 W. R. 790.

8. To Give up Possession.

Generally.]—Lease of land for term of years, with a covenant by the lessee that if the lessor should be desirous during the term to take all or any part of the land for building thereon, it should be lawful for her to come into and enter upon all or any part, to make such buildings as she should think proper, and to do all necessary acts without interruption by the lessee, provided the lessor gave six months' notice of such intention, with a proviso also that the lease should be void for nonperformance of covenants:—Held, that the lessor having agreed with a third person as to the terms of a building contract, might give six months' notice of her intention to take the whole of the land for building, and at the expiration of that time, and after refusal by the tenant to deliver up possession, might bring ejectment. Doe d. Wilson v. Abel, 2 M. & S. 541; 15 R. R. 343.

A clause in an agreement to let land, that the lessor might take any part for building, on making a proportionate abatement in the rent and making good the fences, operates as a covenant, and not a defeasance of the estate, if there are no words giving him a right of re-entry. Doe d. Willson v. Phillips, 2 Bing. 13; 9 Moore, 46; 2 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 103; 27 R. R. 539.

Where a plaintiff had entered into possession of premises under an agreement, one clause of which was that if the rent should be in arrear for ten days it should be lawful for A. and her agents immediately to enter upon and take possession of the premises and expel the plaintiff, as effectually as a sheriff might do under a writ of habere facias possessionem; and in case of such entry, and of any action being brought for the same by any person whomsoever, the defendants might plead leave and licence in bar, and the agreement be used as conclusive evidence of the leave and licence of the plaintiff for the entry, trespasses or other matters to be complained of in such action; and arrears of rent having become due, the defendants, as agents of A., entered and expelled the plaintiff from the premises:—Held, that this agreement was a conclusive answer under a plea of leave and licence to an action for such entry and expulsion. Kavanagh v. Gudge, 7 Man. & G. 316; 7 Scott (N.R.) 1025; 1 D. & L. 928; 13 L. J., C. P. 99; 8 Jur. 362.

A lease of land by deed contained this clause. "Covenants to repair, payment, &c. Provided, nevertheless, that in case M." (the lessor) "shall at any time be desirous of having any part of the piece of land delivered up to him, and of such his desire shall give three calendar months' notice to C." (the lessee): "then, at the expiration of the notice, C. covenants peaceably to surrender up, and that M. shall and may take peaceable possession of such part or parts of the land as shall be mentioned in the notice, M. paying to C. a reasonable compensation in respect of the moneys which may have been laid out by C. in improving the condition of so much of the land as shall be so given up, and then and from thenceforth the rent reserved shall be reduced," &c. (in proportion to the land given up). "and the remainder of the land shall be held by C. at such reduced rent, and M. shall have the same powers and remedies in all respects as if this lease had originally been granted at such reduced rent, and all the covenants, clauses, &c., shall be as valid for so much of the demised land as shall not be included in such notice, as if the reduced rent had been the original rent, and the land originally demised had been the land not included in such notice":—Held, that under this proviso, the lessor, giving notice, might resume all the demised land. Doe d. Gardner v. Kennard, 12 Q. B. 244; 12 Jur. 821.

On Payment of Compensation.]—The lessor served a notice requiring the lessee to give possession of the whole land at the end of three months, and adding, "I hereby offer and agree to allow you a reasonable compensation for any repairs which may have been done by you":—Held, a sufficient offer of compensation under the proviso. Ib.

The defendants, co-tenants, were let into possession of land under an agreement to give up possession at any time on payment of a fair equivalent for the crop:—Held, that a tender to one co-tenant only, of compensation for the crop, was a sufficient tender to the others, so as to entitle landlord to maintain ejectment. Loddiges v. Lister, 1 L. T. 548.

What is a Condition precedent to.]—A. became tenant to B. of a colliery, and also of some farm land, at distinct rents. The lease contained numerous covenants as to the payment of the rents, and as to the management of each property. The term created was forty-two years, but the tenant was to have liberty to put an end to the term on giving eighteen months' notice before the expiration of the first eight years, or any subsequent three years. The proviso which gave the tenant this liberty, after describing the giving of the notice, contained these words: "Then and in such case (all arrears of rent being paid, and all and singular the covenants and agreements on the part of the lessees having been duly observed and performed), this lease and every clause and thing therein contained shall, at the expiration of the first eighth year, and thereafter at the expiration of any such third year, cease, determine and be utterly void. . . . But nevertheless, without prejudice to any claim or remedy which any of the parties may then be entitled to for breach of any of the covenants or agreements:"—Held, that the proviso did make the performance of the covenants a condition precedent to the tenant's power to put an end to the lease. Gray v. Friar, 4 H. L. Cas. 565; 18 Jur. 1036. Affirming 5 Ex. 584; 15 Jur. 814—Ex. Ch.

Implied.]—A tenant, under a parol agreement, without any stipulation that he shall deliver up possession of the premises at the end of the term, is nevertheless bound at law to deliver up complete possession. Where, therefore, a tenant under such an agreement has underlet a part of the premises, and at the determination of both tenancies the under-tenant holds over against the will of the tenant, the landlord can recover against the tenant as damages the value of the whole premises for the time he is kept out of possession, and the costs of ejecting the under-tenant. Henderson v. Squire, 10 B. & S. 183; 38 L. J., Q. B. 73; L. R. 4 Q. B. 170; 19 L. T. 601; 17 W. R. 519.

Rebate on.]—A lease contained a proviso empowering the lessor "upon giving three months' notice of his intention to resume any portion of the premises . . . to enter into such possession." The lessor subsequently conveyed by deed his reversion to the use of himself and another as tenants in common. Shortly afterwards the tenants in common served upon the lessees a notice of resumption of the whole of the lands:—Held, that the fact that a sum per acre, which was by the lease covenanted to be allowed as rebate upon resumption, would in the case of resumption of the whole of the lands exceed the rent per acre originally reserved, would not constitute evidence of an intention to resume part only of the entirety of demised premises. Liddy v. Kennedy, L. R. 5 H. L. 134; 20 W. R. 150.

Relief against Forfeiture by.]—Relief against forfeiture for nonpayment of rent is not confined to the case impliedly referred to in the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852—namely, recovery by process of law—but extends also to peaceable resumption of premises without such process. Howard v. Fanshawe, 64 L. J., Ch. 666; [1895] 2 Ch. 581; 13 R. 663; 73 L. T. 77; 43 W. R. 645.

Where Premises wanted for Building.]—Under a proviso contained in a lease, to deliver possession if the premises should be wanted for building, a demand on the ground of having entered into a treaty, is not sufficient; otherwise, if an agreement was alleged. Russell v. Coggins, 8 Ves. 34.

Construction of covenant in a lease, that if lessor shall be minded to set out any part of the premises for a street, or to sell any part to build upon, he may resume upon certain terms:—Held, first, that if he resumed having a bonâ fide intent to build, though that cannot be acted upon, there is no equity for tenant; secondly, the generality of the latter words are not restrained by the former to buildings of any particular species; therefore a contract with a canal company for lands resumed was enforced; warehouses being within the meaning of lease, and wharves, at least as appurtenant, and wanted for enjoyment of warehouses. Gough v. Worcester and Birmingham Canal Co., 6 Ves. 354.

9. To Insure.

a. Construction and Operation of.

Must be Certain.]—A covenant in the lease of a house "to insure and keep insured a given sum of money upon the premises during the term, in some sufficient insurance office," is not void for uncertainty. Doe d. Pitt v. Shewin, 3 Camp. 134.

To Keep Insured.]—A lessee covenanted that his executors or assigns would insure the demised premises, and keep them insured during the term, and deposit the policy with the lessor:—Held, that the construction of this covenant was, not that the lessee should effect one policy, and keep that policy on foot, but that he, his executors, administrators, or assigns should always keep the premises insured by some policy or another; and that it was a breach if the premises were uninsured at any one time, and a continuing breach for any portion of the time they were uninsured. Doe d. Flower v. Peck, 1 B. & Ad. 428; 9 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 60.

Amount.]—A. granted to B., by an instrument, a lease of O. for five years and a half, and of P. for sixteen years, the rent of both to be 120*l.* during the first five years and a half, and 100*l.* during the residue. B. covenanted during the terms to insure the premises in 2,000*l.* There was no provision for any reduction in the amount of the insurance after the expiration of the five and a half years' term in O.:—Held, that B. was bound to insure for 2,000*l.* during the continuance of the longer term in P., and that the covenant did not cease with the expiration of B.'s interest in O. Heckman v. Isaac, 6 L. T. 383.

Runs with the Land.]—A covenant to insure against fire premises which are within the 14 Geo. 3, c. 78, s. 83, runs with the land. Vernon v. Smith, 5 B. & Ald. 1; 24 R. R. 257.

Separate Policies by Landlord and Tenant—Fire—Exercise of Option of Purchase by Tenant—Application of Policy-moneys as Purchase Money.]—Under the terms of a lease the tenant was bound to insure against fire, and had an option of purchasing the property. He insured in a sufficient sum. The premises were damaged by fire, and it then appeared that the landlord had a policy on the premises in another office, of which the tenant had no notice. The two offices apportioned the amount of loss between the two policies, and the landlord received what was thus payable under the policy effected by him. The tenant shortly after the fire gave notice to exercise his option of purchase, and proposed that the insurance moneys under both policies should go in part payment of the purchase money. The landlord claimed to retain for his own benefit the money received under the policy effected by him, and insisted on the money under the other policy being applied in reinstating the premises, and on the tenant declining to do this brought ejectment against him:—Held, that the landlord was not entitled to retain for his own benefit the moneys received under the policy effected by him, nor to insist on the moneys being applied in reinstating the property after the tenant had exercised his option of purchase. Reynard v. Arnold, L. R. 10 Ch. 386; 23 W. R. 804.

b. Breach.

What Amounts to.]—Where a lessee covenanted to insure, and effected an annual policy in the usual form, allowing fifteen days' grace, which policy expired on the 25th March, but did not pay the premium for a renewal till the 25th April:—Held, that the covenant was broken by reason of the non-payment of the premium on or before the 9th April, and that the lease was forfeited upon a clause of re-entry. Doe d. Pitt v. Shewin, 3 Camp. 134.

But where a lessee covenanted to insure a specified sum upon the premises, and effected an insurance, the policy containing a memorandum, that, in case of the death of the assured, the policy might be continued to his personal representative, provided an indorsement to that effect was made upon it within three months after his death, and he died, and an indorsement continuing the policy to his personal representative was made after the expiration of three months:—Held, that there was no breach of the covenant to keep the premises insured. Doe d. Pitt v. Laming, 4 Camp. 73; 15 R. R. 728.

Under a lease with a proviso of forfeiture, if the covenants are broken, forfeiture is incurred if the lessee covenants to insure the buildings from time to time, and at all times, and leaves a part uninsured for two months after execution of the lease. And it is not any answer that the greater part of the premises was already insured at the requisite amount by a policy expiring at the end of two months, and that, on its expiration, a new policy was effected, covering all the premises which were then insured at the stipulated amount. Penniall v. Harborne, 11 Q. B. 368; 17 L. J., Q. B. 94; 12 Jur. 159.

So, if the covenant is to insure against fire in the names of the lessors A., B. and C., and the lessee adds his own. Ib.

If a lessee having incurred these forfeitures (though the lessor has taken no step to enforce them), contracts to sell his term, the purchaser, on becoming acquainted with them, may refuse to complete his contract, and may reclaim his deposit. Ib.

A covenant by the lessee to insure premises in the names of himself and the lessor, although not performed literally by an insurance in the name of the lessor only, is yet so far substantially performed for the benefit of the lessor, and he could not recover for a breach of covenant, the stipulation for the insurance in the name of the lessee being for the exclusive benefit of the latter, and which he is at liberty to dispense with. Havens v. Middleton, 10 Hare, 641; 22 L. J., Ch. 746; 17 Jur. 271; 1 W. R. 256.

Waiver.]—When a tenant under a lease containing a covenant to insure, had, in consequence of his agent's embezzlement, failed to pay a premium, and so the premises were left for a time uninsured, but the landlord had, on discovering this, afterwards paid the premium, and allowed the tenant to repay him:—Held, that this was such a waiver of a forfeiture under the covenant as to bring the tenant within the exception in 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 6, and preclude him from obtaining relief under 23 & 24 Vict. c. 126, s. 2. Mills v. Griffiths, 45 L. J., Q. B. 771.

The 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 6, is satisfied by an actual waiver, and it is not necessary to have any formal document expressly waiving the forfeiture. Ib.

The mortgagee of a tenant who had incurred a forfeiture cannot be heard on an application for relief under 23 & 24 Vict. c. 126, s. 2, and cannot be made a party to the action of ejectment under Ord. XVI. r. 13, of the Judicature Act, 1875. Ib.

A lessee covenanted to insure, and the premises were uninsured for a week:—Held, in an ejectment for a forfeiture for a breach of this covenant, that the lessor could not recover, if he, by his conduct, had led the lessee to believe that the premises were properly insured by himself. Doe d. Pitman v. Sutton, 9 Car. & P. 706. See Doe d. Knight v. Rowe, 2 Car. & P. 246; R. & M. 343.

The receipt of rent is not a waiver of a forfeiture, unless it is of rent due on a day after the forfeiture was incurred; and therefore the acceptance of rent due from the under-tenants had not the effect of a distress, so as to operate as a recognition of the existence of the tenancy on the 23rd of December, when the money was received. Price v. Worwood, 4 H. & N. 512; 28 L. J., Ex. 329; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 472; 7 W. R. 506.

Continuing.]—A lessee of buildings covenanted in a lease to insure and continue insured such buildings, in the joint names of himself and the lessor, his executors, administrators or assigns, and there was a proviso for re-entry on breach of the covenant. The lessee insured in his own name singly, but shewed the policy to the lessor, who approved of it, and accepted rent during the next three years, ending at Christmas, 1842. The premiums of insurance were duly paid up to that time, the premium at Christmas, 1842, covering 1843, and the policy continuing unaltered. In January, 1843, the lessor assigned, and the assignee in the same year brought ejectment for a forfeiture incurred by not insuring in the joint names. No notice had been given to the lessee to alter the policy:—Held, that the covenant to insure in the joint names was a continuing covenant, and was not waived by the conduct of the lessor, except as to past breaches, and that the ejectment lay. Doe d. Huston v. Gladwin, 6 Q. B. 953; 14 L. J., Q. B. 189; 9 Jur. 508.

In ejectment against a tenant for forfeiture by non-insurance, brought on the 24th of December, 1858, it was proved that on two occasions, the first a year and a half before action and the second in August, 1858, the defendant had admitted that he was uninsured. On the latter occasion he stated that he wanted the money for other purposes. Notice was given to the defendant to produce the policy at the trial, which he failed to do. On the 23rd December, 1858, the plaintiff received some rent from the under-tenants of the premises "on account of rent due at Michaelmas":—Held, that there was evidence from which a jury might presume a continuing breach of the covenant to insure, on the 24th of December, at the time of action brought. Price v. Worwood, 4 H. & N. 512; 28 L. J., Ex. 329; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 472; 7 W. R. 506.

Relief against—in Equity.]—A court of equity would not interfere to modify a strict contract to insure against fire by a lessee, where, by breach of it, the lessor might enter, it being for the interest of all parties that a sacred regard should be had to the strict obligations of the contract. Meek v. Carter, 4 Jur. (N.S.) 992; 6 W. R. 852.

The court has jurisdiction to relieve against a breach of covenant to insure, committed after the passing of the 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, arising on a lease dated before the passing of the act. Page v. Bennett, 2 Giff. 117; 29 L. J., Ch. 398; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 419; 8 W. R. 339.

The court will not relieve a tenant against the breach of a covenant to insure. Green v. Bridges, 4 Sim. 96.

No relief by injunction against a forfeiture for breach of covenant to keep insured. White v. Warner, 2 Mer. 459.

Injunction against an ejectment for breach of covenant to insure against fire refused. Reynolds v. Pitt, 19 Ves. 134; 2 Price, 212, n.

No relief given against covenant to insure. Rolfe v. Harris, 2 Price, 206, n.

In January, 1857, the defendant agreed with D., that as soon as he had erected thirty-seven houses, in eight blocks, on certain land, he would grant him eight leases of the land and houses. The leases were to contain covenants to insure against fire in the Law Fire Insurance Office, in the joint names of the defendant and D. or his assigns; and if D. failed to erect the houses within the time specified, the defendant was to have the power of re-entry. In April, 1858, the number of the houses was, by agreement between the parties, altered; and as to seventeen, D. was to roof them in by the 24th June, and complete them by the 29th September; and the defendant agreed to grant to D., or his nominee, a lease for four carcases of houses standing on block No. 1; and also, as soon as D., or his assigns, should have erected and roofed in any of the carcases of the houses in any of the blocks, to grant a lease of the block to D., or his nominee, in the same manner as if the houses were finished. At that time there were, in addition to the four carcases on block No. 1, three standing on block No. 4, and D. gave the name of the plaintiff as his nominee. The defendant agreed, as soon as D. would be entitled to require the same, to grant leases of the seven houses to the plaintiff, and D. assigned to the plaintiff the two plots of land, Nos. 1 and 4, and all the benefit of the agreements of January, 1857, and April, 1858, in relation thereto. The seven houses on the two blocks were completed within the time specified, but none of the remaining houses were erected. On the 23rd September, 1858, the plaintiff insured the premises in the Phœnix Office, and in his own name only. The defendant discovered the latter circumstance, as the plaintiff alleged, two days afterwards, but as the defendant himself alleged, not till the 1st December. The defendant's solicitor, in January, 1859, wrote to the plaintiff's solicitor, claiming a forfeiture; and on the 2nd February the seven houses were insured in the Law Fire Office, in the names of the plaintiff and the defendant. On the 10th March the defendant commenced an ejectment for the forfeiture, and he asserted his right to re-enter upon any part of the property for breach of the covenant to build the thirty-seven houses, and of the covenant to insure. The plaintiff thereupon filed a bill for an injunction, and for specific performance of the agreement to grant a lease:—Held, that, as between the plaintiff and the defendant, the agreement related only to the seven houses, and that the plaintiff was bound by the stipulations of D. only so far as they related to the seven houses; and a decree was made in the terms of the prayer. Rogers v. Tudor, 6 Jur. (N.S) 692; 2 L. T. 303.

—— Under Conveyancing Acts.]—See ante, J. 2, i. iii., cols. 1029 et seq.

Proof.]—In ejectment for not insuring it is sufficient, in order to shew that the lessee's premises are not insured, to call a clerk of the insurance office who enters the policies and premiums and has searched the books; but it being necessary to shew that neither the lessee nor his assignee had insured:—Held, not sufficient that the clerk had searched under the name of the lessee alone; and although the defendant's attorney could be asked if there was a policy, and if it was in court, he could not be called upon to produce it, nor on his refusal be asked to prove a copy. Chaplin v. Reid, 1 F. & F. 315.

A lease for years, to commence at Michaelmas, 1845, was by a decree for a specific performance at the instance of the lessee, executed on 12th January, 1847, bearing date as of 29th September, 1845. The lease contained a covenant to insure the premises, and keep them insured during the term, and a power of entry on breach. The landlord brought ejectment, and proved that the premises were not insured until the 18th of February, 1847. The lessee gave no evidence to account for the delay:—Held, that assuming that the covenant might be construed as a covenant to insure within a reasonable time only after the execution of the lease, the onus of shewing that the delay from 12th January to 18th February was reasonable, lay on the defendant, and that no evidence being given to explain the delay, it was right that the judge should direct a verdict for the plaintiff. Doe d. Darlington v. Ulph, 13 Q. B. 204; 18 L. J., Q. B. 106; 13 Jur. 276.

In ejectment for not insuring according to covenant, it lies upon the plaintiff to prove that no insurance has been effected; and the circumstance that the defendant refused to shew the policy when the plaintiff required him, and the non-production of it at the trial, after notice, are not primâ facie evidence against him. Doe d. Bridger v. Whitehead, 3 N. & P. 557; 8 A. & E. 571; 1 W. W. & H. 521; 7 L. J., Q. B. 250; 2 Jur. 493.

In ejectment, the execution by the defendants of the indenture of underlease and payment of rent thereunder to C. is sufficient evidence for the jury that C. was solely entitled to the reversion expectant upon the determination of the underlease. Logan v. Hall, 4 C. B. 598.

Presumption as to.]—Where the original lessee covenants to keep the premises insured, and afterwards a sub-lease is granted by his executor, without any covenant to insure; undisturbed possession under this sub-lease for twenty years will entitle a court to presume that no breach of covenant took place during the life of the original lessee. Montresor v. Williams, 1 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 151.

c. Liability of Executors.

A lessee was bound to insure. The insurance expired on the 25th of March, and he died on the 27th, without having paid the premium. The premium was not paid by his executors, and the house was burnt down on the 26th of May:—Held, that the executors were not personally liable for not having kept up the insurance. Fry v. Fry, 27 Beav. 146; 28 L. J., Ch. 593; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1047.

d. Damages for Breach.

A lessee under covenant to insure against fire in his own name and that of the lessor jointly, assigned to the defendant, who covenanted to keep the covenants in the lease. The defendant having neglected to keep up a fire policy which had been effected, the lessee effected a fresh one, but in his own name only. No fire happened. The lessee brought an action against the defendant for neglecting to insure. He pleaded payment of a farthing into court:—Held, though the lessee had no claim to be indemnified specifically for the sum expended by him in effecting the fresh policy, the jury was at liberty to award more than nominal damages for the risk to which he had been exposed by the defendant's default. Hey v. Wyche, 2 G. & D. 569; 12 L. J., Q. B. 83; 6 Jur. 559.

A., being lessee of a messuage under the corporation of London, demised it, in 1829, to B., C. and D., for twenty-one years, the lessees covenanting to repair and insure in 2,500*l.* at the least, in the Protector Fire Insurance Office, or in such other respectable insurance office in London or Westminster as B., C. and D. (the lessees), their executors, administrators or assigns should think fit, with a proviso for re-entry for breach of any of the covenants. In 1835 C. granted an underlease to E. and F. for the residue of the term, wanting one day, the underlease containing the like covenants to repair and to insure in 2,500*l.* at the least, in the Protector Fire Insurance, or in such other respectable fire insurance office in London or Westminster, as E. and F., their executors, administrators or assigns should think fit, and also a proviso for re-entry for breach of any of the covenants. The messuage being out of repair and uninsured, the executors of A., in 1843, brought ejectment and recovered possession:—Held, that C. was not entitled to recover against E. and F. the value of his reversionary interest, the loss thereof not being the result of their breaches of covenant, but of the breaches of covenants by C., to which covenants they were no parties. Logan v. Hall, 4 C. B. 598.

10. IN RESTRAINT OF TRADE.

See CONTRACT and VENDOR AND PURCHASER.

a. Against Trading in General.

Licence.]—A lease contained a covenant on the part of the lessee that he would not, without the consent of the lessor, use, exercise or carry on in the demised premises any trade or business whatsoever, nor convert the dwelling-houses into a shop, nor suffer the same to be used for any other purpose than dwelling-houses. One of the dwelling-houses was converted into a public-house and a grocery shop, and the lessor, with full knowledge of it, for more than twenty years received the rent. The plaintiff having purchased the reversion of the lessor, brought an action of ejectment for the breach of the covenant:—Held, that the user of the premises in their altered state for more than twenty years, with the knowledge of the lessor, was evidence from which a jury might presume a licence. Gibson v. Doey, 2 H. & N. 615; 27 L. J., Ex. 37; 6 W. R. 107.

Covenant against using premises as a shop or warehouse for any trade, without licence in writing, or permitting anything which may grow to the annoyance or damage of the lessors or any of their other tenants. Breach, though not a nuisance in law, public or private, being an annoyance, not protected by injunction, there being no licence; and permission of one trade not to be construed a general licence for any trade. Nor will the court enter into a comparison which is more or less offensive. Macher v. Foundling Hospital, 1 Ves. & B. 188.

Representations—Collateral Agreements.]—S. purchased from commissioners by several conveyances the fee simple of several houses forming one block of buildings upon a site laid out in accordance with a building scheme, each conveyance containing a covenant by S. not to carry on or permit to be carried on upon the premises conveyed any trade or business but to keep the house as a private dwelling-house only, and not to do or suffer to be done upon the premises conveyed anything which might grow to the annoyance of any person who might be or become the owner, tenant, or occupier of any part of the premises then or late belonging to the commissioners. S. afterwards granted to the respondent a lease of one of the houses containing a restrictive covenant of the same nature and a block plan of the houses. During the negotiations for the lease statements were made by S.'s solicitors to the respondent whereby he became aware that similar restrictive covenants were contained in all the leases granted by S. of houses in that block, and also became aware of the terms of the conveyances of the respondent's house from the commissioners to S.:—Held, that although the statement made to the respondent did not amount to a collateral contract with him as to the future management of the estate, the respondent was from the nature of the transaction entitled to an injunction restraining S. from authorising any of the other houses in the block to be used for the purpose of trade. The principles defined by Hall, V.-C., in Renals v. Cowlishaw (9 Ch. D. 129) approved. Spicer v. Martin, 58 L. J., Ch. 309; 14 App. Cas. 12; 60 L. T. 546; 37 W. R. 689; 53 J. P. 516—H. L. (E.)

What amounts to Breach—School.]—Where a lessee of a house and garden for a term of years covenanted with the lessor not to use or exercise, or permit or suffer to be used or exercised, upon the demised premises, any trade or business whatsoever, without the licence of the lessor; and afterwards, without the licence of the lessor, assigned the lease to a schoolmaster, who carried on his business in the house and premises:—Held, that the assignment was a breach of this covenant, and the lessor was entitled to re-enter, under a proviso for re-entry, for non-performance of covenants. Doe d. Bish v. Keeling, 1 M. & S. 95; 14 R. R. 405.

An owner of an estate covered it with houses, and sold some of them subject to a covenant not to carry on any trade, business or calling therein, or to otherwise use or suffer the same to be used, to the annoyance, nuisance or injury of any of the houses on the estate:—Held, that the carrying on of a girls' school in one of the houses was a breach of the covenant. Kemp v. Sober, 1 Sim. (N.S.) 517; 20 L. J., Ch. 602; 15 Jur. 458.

A covenant contained in a lease was not to convert the demised premises into a shop or public-house, or permit any person to carry on within or upon the dwelling-house or premises any public trade or business whatsoever; and that the dwelling-house and premises should be occupied and used as a private dwelling-house only. The house was used as a young ladies' day-school, where dancing and music were taught; it was also advertised as an academy for dancing in connection with a literary institution:—Held, that this was a breach of the covenant. Wickenden v. Webster, 5 El. & Bl. 387; 25 L. J., Q. B. 264; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 590; 4 W. R. 562. See also Johnstone v. Hall, 2 K. & J. 414; 25 L. J., Ch. 462; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 780, post, col. 1220; and Van v. Corpe, 3 Myl. & K. 269; 6 L. J., Ch. 208; 1 Jur. 101, 149, ante, col. 1090.

—— Teacher of Music—Constructive Notice—Parties.]—In 1857 A. granted a lease of a house for a term of ninety-three years, with a restrictive covenant against the user of the house for any art, trade, or business. The term granted by the lease became vested in B., and in October, 1883, B. granted a lease of the house to C. for twenty-one years, with an express permission that he might use the house in his profession of teaching music and singing, and with the usual covenant for quiet enjoyment. There was constructive notice of the original lease in the underlease, but C. had no personal knowledge or notice of the restrictive covenant. A breach of the covenant having been committed by C., the devisees in trust of A. brought an action against B. and C., claiming an injunction and damages:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to an injunction against C., and damages against B., who was a proper party to the action. Tritton v. Bankart, 56 L. T. 306; 35 W. R. 474.

—— Receiving Pupils as Lodgers.]—Receiving as lodgers the governesses and pupils of a neighbouring school:—Held, a breach of a covenant to use a house for no other purpose than a "private residence." Hobson v. Tulloch, 67 L. J., Ch. 502.

—— Hospital.]—A hospital, the patients of which make small payments according to their means, is a "business" within the meaning of a covenant by lessee with lessor not to carry on upon the demised premises "any trade, business, or dealing whatsoever, or anything of the nature thereof." Bramwell v. Lacy, 48 L. J., Ch. 339; 10 Ch. D. 691; 40 L. T. 361; 27 W. R. 463.

A covenant not to use a house for the "exercise or carrying on of any art, trade or business, occupation or calling," is broken by using the house for the purpose of a hospital association, established without a view to profit, to provide accommodation for patients able and willing to pay for it. Portman v. Home Hospitals Association, 27 Ch. D. 81, n.; 50 L. T. 599, n.

—— Sale by Auction.]—A covenant to use a house as a private house only is not broken by an auction sale on the premises of the furniture belonging to the house. Reeves v. Cattell, 24 W. R. 485.

In a retail shop sales by auction are allowable unless prohibited by the agreement between landlord and tenant. Keith v. Reid, L. R. 2 H. L. Sc. 39.

—— Charitable Institution where no Payment received.]—The lease of a house contained a covenant that the lessee should not use, exercise, or carry on upon the premises any trade or business of any description whatsoever:—Held, that a charitable institution called a "Home for Working Girls," where the inmates were provided with board and lodging, whether any payment was taken or not, was a business, and came within the restrictions of the covenant. Rolls v. Miller, 53 L. J., Ch. 682; 27 Ch. D. 71; 50 L. T. 597; 32 W. R. 806—C. A. Affirming 48 J. P. 357, 518.

It is not essential that there should be payment in order to constitute a business: nor does payment necessarily make that a business which without payment would not be a business. Ib.

—— Putting Notice in Window.]—A sub-lessee who was bound by a covenant in a lease to use a particular house as a dwelling-house only, put up a notice in the window of it as follows: "Alpheus Andrews, Coal-office; and at the Coal Exchange." Orders were taken by him for coal at the house, but no coal was actually supplied there to customers, and the house was, in other respects, used as a dwelling-house. Upon a motion by the reversioner for an injunction to restrain the lessee and sub-lessee from putting up the notice, or using the house otherwise than as a dwelling-house only:—Held, that the injunction must be granted. Wilkinson v. Rogers, 10 Jur. (N.S.) 5; 9 L. T. 434; 12 W. R. 119.

By Lessee with Owner—Corresponding Covenants subsequently entered into by Owner with Purchasers—Right of late Owner to enforce against Assignee with Notice.]—S., an owner in fee simple of land, demised it for ninety-nine years to a lessee, who assigned it with the lessor's consent, the assignee covenanting with the lessor, "his heirs and assigns, as owner for the time being of land forming part of" the E. estate that the assignee, his executors, administrators, and assigns, would not "for the space of ten years from the date thereof use or allow to be used the said premises for any trade or business other than that of a poulterer and cheesemonger." The assignee's executrix and universal legatee agreed to let the premises for three years to a tenant who agreed to use them as a cheesemonger's and poulterer's shop only. The tenant assigned his interest to B., who signed a memorandum indorsed on the agreement, agreeing to perform the covenants contained therein. He subsequently used the premises as a grocer's shop, and for the sale of wines and spirits under an off-licence. The shop in question formed one of a row of shops which had belonged to S., and each of which was limited by covenant to a particular trade, and S. on selling some of the other shops had covenanted with the purchasers that the shop now occupied by B. should not be used for the purpose for which B. was now using it. S. had subsequently disposed of all his interest in the E. estate. He now brought an action against B. for an injunction to restrain him from using the shop except as a cheesemonger's and poulterer's. The defendant contended that S. having parted with all his interest in the estate could not enforce the covenant:—Held, that, though the plaintiff had parted with his interest in the estate, he had still an interest in enforcing the covenant previously entered into with him as owner, inasmuch as he had, by his subsequent covenants to the same effect, made himself liable to be sued by the purchasers of the other shops in case the covenant should be infringed, and the defendant having taken the premises with notice of the title of which the restrictive covenant formed part, the plaintiff was accordingly entitled to the injunction he asked for. Spencer v. Bailey, 69 L. T. 179.

"Unless adjoining House should be turned into Shop."]—A lease of a house contained a covenant by the lessee to use the house as a private dwelling-house only, provided that if any of the adjoining houses of the lessor should be converted into a shop, the lessee might convert the demised premises to a similar use. One of the adjoining houses of the lessor was afterwards let to a photographer, who exhibited photographs outside, and used the ground-floor room for the exhibition of photographs and the sale of album-cases and frames, the door being kept open by day, but no alteration was made in the building. Semble, that a conversion into a shop might be effected by user, without any structural alterations of the house, and that there had been such a user of the house for the sale of goods as to be a conversion into a shop within the meaning of the proviso. Wilkinson v. Rogers, 2 De G. J. & S. 62; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 162; 9 L. T. 696; 12 W. R. 284.

Not to use Premises except as Post-office—When broken.]—By a lease in 1852, premises were demised to the postmaster-general for 1,000 years, at the rent of one shilling, and the postmaster-general covenanted that he and his successors would at all times during the term use the premises as a post-office for the district, and would not use the premises for any other purpose. Ejectment having been brought on a proviso for re-entry for the breach of the covenant, on the ground that the excise duties and licences for dogs, men-servants, horses, &c., had been received and granted on the premises by the post-office clerks:—Held, that there had been no breach of the covenant. Wadham v. Postmaster-General, 40 L. J., Q. B. 310; L. R. 6 Q. B. 644; 24 L. T. 545; 19 W. R. 1082.

Use of Premises otherwise than as Hotel.]—By agreement dated 1889, the plaintiffs agreed to let to the defendant the dwelling-house and premises known as the P. Hotel, the lease to contain a covenant not to assign without leave and a covenant not to carry on certain specified trades. The premises during the previous eighty years had sometimes been used as an hotel, sometimes as separate tenements, and once as an asylum. The defendant entered into an agreement with the War Office to provide accommodation for several non-commissioned officers and their wives and families, and for this purpose made certain structural alterations by erecting wooden partitions and cooking-stoves:—Held, that the defendant was not bound by the agreement to use the premises solely as an hotel, and that the acts of waste complained of were either meliorative or trivial. Grand Canal Co. v. McNamee, 29 L. R., Ir. 131—C. A.

Not to Affix any outward Mark or Shew of Business.]—The plaintiff, who was lessee of a house known as 15, C. Street, and 1, E. Street, under a lease which was about to expire, but which he expected would be renewed, entered into an agreement with D. to grant him a lease of certain rooms on the ground floor of the house. The agreement provided that the lease to be granted should contain certain specified covenants, "and all such other covenants and conditions as shall be contained in the lease about to be granted" to the plaintiff, "with such additions as may be necessary and proper in an underlease." It was also provided that on nonpayment of rent or nonperformance of any of the agreements therein contained on the part of the tenant, it should be lawful for the plaintiff to re-enter and eject all tenants and occupiers, and that a similar provision should be inserted in the lease about to be granted to D. The renewed lease was granted to the plaintiff, and contained a covenant by the lessee that he would not carry on upon the premises certain specified trades "or any other open, noisy or offensive trade or business whatsoever, or convert the same into a shop, or affix or permit any outward mark or shew of business to be affixed thereon." It contained a proviso for re-entry by the lessors on nonpayment of rent, or if the lessee should not "observe, perform or keep all and every the covenants and agreements" therein contained. Soon after D. granted a lease of two of the rooms comprised in the agreement, with use of the door in C. Street, to B., a tailor. B. then put up in a window looking into A. Street a wire blind on which was, "H. Browne & Co., late Storey, Browne & Co., Entrance, 15, Clifford Street"; and on a roller-blind, "H. Browne & Co., 15, Clifford Street." On the railings outside the entrance in C. Street, B. put a brass plate, on both sides of which was, "H. Browne & Co., late Storey, Browne & Co., tailors, from 157, New Bond Street":—Held, that the agreement must be construed as containing the covenant in the lease not to affix or permit to be affixed "any outward mark or shew of business," and also the proviso for re-entry on nonperformance or non-observance of the covenants, and that the blinds and brass plate constituted a breach of the covenant. Evans v. Davis, 48 L. J., Ch. 223; 10 Ch. D. 647; 39 L. T. 391; 27 W. R. 285.

By the writ and statement of claim the plaintiff claimed an injunction, damages, and to recover possession of the premises comprised in the agreement. In the statement of claim he alleged that he had "always been and is ready and willing to grant" the lease to D. The plaintiff had not, up to the trial of the action, granted a lease to D.:—Held, that he had claimed inconsistent relief, and had submitted to act on the agreement, and was therefore entitled to an injunction only against both D. and B. and without costs. Ib.

—— Enforcing — Affirmative and Negative Covenants.]—In adjudicating upon covenants in the nature of restrictive covenants, where an affirmative covenant has a negative element in it, or where a covenant is partly affirmative and partly negative, the court will in a proper case enforce the negative portion of the covenant. Clegg v. Hands, 59 L. J., Ch. 477; 44 Ch. D. 503; 62 L. T. 502; 38 W. R. 433; 55 J. P. 180—C. A.

Suit by Reversioner of Freehold.]—A court of equity will not, at the instance of a person having a mere reversionary interest in the freehold, interfere to restrain the breach of a covenant entered into by the tenant with the lessor against carrying on any business upon the demised premises, unless special damage is shewn. Johnstone v. Hall, 2 Kay & J. 414; 25 L. J., Ch. 462; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 780; 4 W. R. 417.

In a case resting simply upon covenant, if the party seeking specific performance be entitled in possession, he has a right to the enjoyment of the property, modo et formâ, according to his covenant; but if he be entitled in remainder only, he must shew, that he has sustained some material damage by reason of the breach to entitle him to relief of this nature. Ib.

Demise of land for 999 years, at a yearly rent of 33*l.* odd, and covenant by lessee not to carry on, or suffer to be carried on, in any building to be erected on the premises, any of several noxious or objectionable trades and employments, "or any other trade, business or employment whatsoever," but to use the premises solely for private dwelling-houses. The lessor died, having devised the premises to one for life, and to the plaintiffs in remainder. The defendant, as sub-lessee, carried on upon the premises a school for girls. A bill for an injunction, living the tenant for life (who was not a plaintiff), dismissed with costs, upon the ground that, having regard to the circumstances that the plaintiffs were merely entitled in remainder, the relief prayed was too minute, there being no case of waste, but only a possibility of the respectability of the neighbourhood being in some measure affected; and the argument from acquiescence could not apply, the plaintiffs having no right of re-entry. Ib.

Semble, if there had been any injury to the material of the house and premises, or if a grossly noxious trade had been carried on, the plaintiff might be entitled to relief, although claiming in remainder only, and not in possession. Ib.

Whether Usual.]—See ante, col. 1089.

b. Against Particular Trades.

How far Binding on Lessee's Executors.]—On a covenant that (in consideration of a weekly payment to A. and his executors for a term certain) A. shall not exercise a particular trade, the executors of A. are not bound to abstain from exercising it. Cook v. Caleraft, 2 W. Bl. 856; 3 Wils. 380.

How far Binding on Sub-lessee.]—A sub-lessee of a house, whose immediate lessor is bound by covenant not to carry on a particular trade, will be restrained from carrying on such trade, although he took his lease without notice of the covenant, at least unless it appears that he made careful inquiries at the time of taking his lease, and learnt nothing which should have set him on further investigation. Parker v. Whyte, 1 H. & M. 167; 32 L. J., Ch. 520; 8 L. T. 446; 11 W. R. 683.

Where a lessee covenants not to exercise a particular trade on the premises, and then makes an underlease without express notice of the covenant, the underlessee being precluded by the agreement from the full investigation of the title, the underlessee is bound by the covenant, although it does not run with the land. Clements v. Welles, 11 Jur. (N.S.) 991; 14 W. R. 187.

In 1808, the dwelling-house No. 1, Merrion Square East, in the city of Dublin, "and also the coach-house and stable belonging thereto," were demised for a term of years, the lessee covenanting to keep the premises in good repair, and so deliver them up at the end of the term. The coach-house and stable lay at the rear of the house, but were separated from it by other buildings. There were no restrictive covenants in the lease, although the lessor was himself lessee of the premises as well as of the ground covered by the intervening buildings, under a lease of 1806, which contained covenants against using the front of any of the houses as a shop, and against that of a butcher, involving, at the option of the head landlord, forfeiture or an additional rent while the trade should be carried on. The lease of 1808 contained a reservation of all royalties to the head landlord, but made no direct reference to that of 1806. In 1875 the owner of the lessee's interest in the lease of 1808 made a sub-lease of the coach-house and stable, authorising their conversion into a butcher's shop. On their having been so converted, and their structure altered, the owner of the reversion upon the lease of 1808 filed a bill for an injunction, when the Master of the Rolls made a decree perpetually restraining the use of the altered premises as a butcher's shop, although some of the intervening buildings which fronted the street had been used as shops, but not as butchers' shops, for a number of years. The sub-lessee of 1875 having appealed: —Held, that the decision should be affirmed, with the addition to the decree of a clause prohibiting any of the trades specified in the lease of 1806 from being carried on upon the premises sub-demised to the owner. Maunsell v. Hort, 1 L. R. Ir. 88.

Not to use House as Public-house or Beer-shop.]—A lease contained a covenant that a house, to be built immediately adjoining the house in which the lessor lived, should be built fit for a private family, under a penalty of 10*l.* yearly additional rent, unless the lessor should convert his house to any public use:—Held, that this was a continuing covenant, and bound the lessee as well to keep as to build the house as a private dwelling-house, and was broken by his converting it into a public-house. Bray v. Fogarty, Ir. R. 4 Eq. 544; 18 W. R. 1151.

Held, also, that the 10*l.* a year additional rent was a penalty, and not liquidated damages, and that the lessor was not restricted to suing for the additional rent, but was entitled to an injunction to restrain the tenant's converting the house into a public-house. Ib.

—— Acquiescence.]—The lessee built another house, not adjoining the house of the lessor, on the plot of ground demised by the lease. The second house was converted into a public-house, with the assent of the lessor:—Held, that this was not such acquiescence in the breach of the covenant as to debar the lessor from relief in respect of the other house. Ib.

—— What amounts to a Breach of.]—A person who had entered into a covenant not to use a house as a public-house, tavern or beer-house, opened a grocer's shop there, at which he carried on the sale of beer to be drunk off the premises as an ancillary business to his grocer's business:—Held, that this was no infringement of the covenant. Holt v. Collyer, 50 L. J., Ch. 311; 16 Ch. D. 718; 44 L. T. 214; 29 W. R. 502; 45 J. P. 456.

An owner in fee of a house subject to a covenant not to use it for certain offensive trades, or any trade which might be deemed a public nuisance, or as a public-house for the sale of beer, without the consent of the original vendors, taking out an excise licence for the sale of beer not to be drunk on the premises, is not a breach of the covenant. Pease v. Coates, 12 Jur. (N.S.) 684; 14 L. T. 886; 14 W. R. 1021.

A lease contained a covenant by the lessee not to allow any house on the land demised to be used as a beer-shop. The lessee carried on the trade of a grocer in a house on the demised premises in partnership with his brother. The brother took out an excise licence to sell beer in the house by retail to be consumed off the premises; and did so sell beer there:—Held, a breach of the covenant. St. Albans (Bishop) v. Battersby, 47 L. J., Q. B. 571; 3 Q. B. D. 359; 38 L. T. 685; 26 W. R. 678.

—— Whether Running with the Land.]—The owner of a freehold house had entered into a covenant with the plaintiff, who was a previous owner, that the building should not be used as a beershop. The house was afterwards let to a tenant from year to year without express notice of the covenant:—Held, that although the covenant might not at law run with the land, he was bound by it in equity. Wilson v. Hart, 35 L. J., Ch. 569; L. R. 1 Ch. 463; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 460; 14 L. T. 499; 14 W. R. 748.

A covenant by a purchaser of land not naming his assigns, that no building erected on the land shall be used as a beershop, does not run with the land. Ib.

See also Fielden v. Slater, infra, and Jay v. Richardson, infra.

"Retailer of Wine, Spirits or Beer."]—The lessee of a theatre bought an adjoining piece of ground, which was subject to a covenant, of which he had notice, that "the trade of an innkeeper, victualler, or retailer of wine, spirits or beer," should not be carried on there. He erected on this piece of ground a building the object of which was to furnish convenient egress from the theatre; but on each floor he set up a counter for selling wine, spirits and beer, which could not be approached directly from the outside, but at which any person who paid for admittance to the theatre when open for theatrical performances could purchase refreshments:—Held, that the lessee was carrying on the trade of a retailer of wine, spirits and beer, and must be restrained from doing so. Jones v. Bone (L. R. 9 Eq. 674) distinguished. Buckle v. Fredericks, 44 Ch. D. 244; 62 L. T. 884; 38 W. R. 742; 55 J. P. 165—C. A. See also Zetland (Earl) v. Hislop, infra.

Wine Business.]—Injunction granted to restrain a breach of covenant against carrying on a wine business secured by forfeiture of the lease and a penalty. Barrett v. Blagrave, 5 Ves. 555.

Prohibition of Sale of Malt and Spirituous Liquors — Working Men's Club — Supply of Liquors to Members.]—A club of working men were the lessees of premises the lease of which contained a covenant that they should not be used for the sale of wines, malt or spirituous liquors. The rules provided for the purchase of liquor and its distribution at fixed prices among the members by whom it was consumed upon the premises, the profits being applied to the general purposes of the club:—Held, that this was not a sale within the meaning of the covenant. Ranken v. Hunt, 10 R. 249.

Not to use Premises as a Coffee-house—Breach—Injunction.]—A lessee covenanted not to use the demised premises as a coffee-house:—Held, that carrying on a business consisting mainly of the sale of tea and coffee in packets as groceries, but consisting also, as incidental and ancillary thereto, of the sale of cups of tea and coffee, and of such eatables as slices of bread with butter or cheese, rolls, eggs, sandwiches and pork-pies, to be consumed on the premises, was a breach of the covenant. Buckle v. Fredericks (44 Ch. D. 244) followed; Stuart v. Diplock (43 Ch. D. 343) distinguished. Fitz v. Iles, 62 L. J., Ch. 258; [1893] 1 Ch. 77; 2 R. 132; 68 L. T. 108—C. A.

Not to allow Houses in Street to be used as Eating-house.]—B. demised an eating-house for a term of twenty-one years, and covenanted that he would not during the term let any house in the same street for the purpose of carrying on the business of an eating-house, provided always that the covenant should be binding only on B., and not on his heirs, administrators or assigns. Subsequently B. let the adjoining house for twenty-one years to another person, who covenanted with him not to carry on there any trade or business without B.'s licence. The first lease was subsequently assigned to K., and the second to G. K. brought an action against B. and G. to restrain G. from carrying on an eating-house on the premises comprised in the second lease, and B. from permitting him to do so:—Held, that the covenant could not be treated as a covenant that none of the houses should during the term be used as an eating-house, and that as B. had not let the second house for the purpose of an eating-house, the covenant was not broken by G.'s carrying on there the business of an eating-house, nor by B.'s not interfering with his doing so. Kemp v. Bird, 46 L. J., Ch. 828; 5 Ch. D. 974; 37 L. T. 53; 25 W. R. 838—C. A.

Not to carry on Business of Confectioner.]—It is no breach of covenant not to carry on the business of a wholesale or retail confectioner for a grocer and tea-dealer to sell a particular kind of sweetmeat in which a confectioner may happen to deal. Lumley v. Metropolitan Ry., 34 L. T. 774—C. A.

A grant to A. and his heirs to the use, intent and purpose that the trade or business of a baker or confectioner should not at any time be carried on upon the premises granted, amounts to a covenant by the grantee not to carry on such a trade upon the premises. Hodgson v. Coppard, 29 Beav. 4; 30 L. J., Ch. 20; 9 W. R. 9.

The grantee had let the property to a tenant who had committed and was committing the breaches complained of, but who was not made a party to the suit:—Held, that an injunction might be granted to restrain the grantee, his agents or servants, from carrying on such a trade, but that the injunction could not be extended to his tenants. Ib.

Not to carry on Trade of a Butcher.]—A covenant in a lease that the lessee shall not exercise the trade of a butcher upon the premises, is broken by his selling raw meat by retail, although no beasts were there slaughtered. Doe d. Gaskell v. Spry, 1 B. & Ald. 617; 19 R. R. 404.

Against Sale by Auction.]—The circumstance that a lessor has a right of re-entry for breach of a covenant not to use the premises for the purpose of a sale by auction, does not preclude him from coming to a court of equity to restrain the commission of the breach. Parker v. Whyte, 32 L. J., Ch. 520; 2 N. R. 157; 8 L. T. 446; 11 W. R. 683.

Covenant by lessee not to permit sale by public auction on the demised premises not broken by a sale by auction of goods and chattels on the premises by trustees under an assignment of the goods and chattels, there being no evidence that the lessee knew of or permitted the sale. Toleman v. Portbury, 39 L. J., Q. B. 136; L. R. 5 Q. B. 288; 22 L. T. 33; 18 W. R. 579—Ex. Ch.

Ladies' Outfitter—Overlapping Business.]—The sale by a hosier in the ordinary course of his business of certain articles sold by a ladies' outfitter, is not a breach of a covenant not to carry on the business of a ladies' outfitter, even if the articles sold form a substantial part of the business of a ladies' outfitter. Fielden v. Slater (L. R. 7 Eq. 523) distinguished. Stuart v. Diplock, 59 L. J., Ch. 142; 43 Ch. D. 343; 62 L. T. 333; 38 W. R. 223—C. A.

Covenant in Conveyance of Fee—Breach by Lessee of Purchaser.]—The plaintiff conveyed an estate in fee simple to the defendant and his heirs, to the use that certain trades should not be carried on upon the premises. The defendant underlet the premises to a tenant who carried on one of the restricted trades. Upon a bill for an injunction:—Held, to amount to a covenant on the part of the defendant not to carry on the restricted trades, but that the defendant alone could be restrained, the tenant not being a party to the bill. Hodson v. Coppard, 7 Jur. (N.S.) 11; 9 W. R. 9.

A lessee is bound to inquire into, and is fixed with notice of all covenants into which his lessor has entered in respect of the land. In 1854 a dwelling-house and a shop were conveyed by the plaintiff to A. in fee, in consideration of the payment by A. to the plaintiff of a perpetual yearly rent-charge; and the conveyance contained a covenant by A., his heirs, executors and administrators, with the plaintiff, his heirs and assigns, that he and they would not use or occupy, or permit to be used or occupied, the building "as an inn, public-house or tap-room, or for the sale of spirituous liquors or ale or beer." In 1857 B. became tenant from year to year of the house, using and occupying it for the business of a grocer. In 1862 A. demised the house and shop to B. for twenty-one years at a yearly rent; the only restrictive covenant being a covenant by B. that "no offensive business or occupation or nuisance shall be carried on or committed on the said premises, and that the same shall be used as a dwelling-house and shop only." In 1866 B., as the agent of a firm of London wine merchants, began, in the course of his business of a grocer, to sell on the premises wine and spirits, but in bottle only. On a bill for an injunction against A. and B., it was found, as the result of the evidence, that B. had no knowledge of the covenant in the original deed:—Held, notwithstanding, that he was put upon inquiry, and was fixed with constructive notice of the covenant. Fielden v. Slater, 38 L. J., Ch. 379; L. R. 7 Eq. 523; 20 L. T. 112; 17 W. R. 485.

Held, also, that the words, "for the sale of spirituous liquors," did not prevent the sale of wine, but extended to the sale of spirituous liquors in bottle; and injunction granted accordingly. Ib.

Held, also, that the original grantor having filed a bill to restrain the lessee from breach of a restrictive covenant contained in the original grant, the original grantee was not a necessary party to the suit. Ib.

Covenant by Lessor not to allow Hotel within a certain Distance—Breach by Purchaser of part of the Estate.]—A purchaser in fee of a piece of land cannot, by the purchase of a lease granted of the same land, avoid covenants which his vendor had taken from his tenants over a wide area, in aid of covenants which he had entered into with third parties. Jay v. Richardson, 30 Beav. 563; 31 L. J., Ch. 398; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 689; 6 L. T. 177; 10 W. R. 412.

A. demised a plot of land for a term of forty years for the erection of an hotel, with a covenant that he, his heirs, or assigns, would not, during the term, let any house, building, or land for the erection of an hotel or inn, or for the sale of ale or beer or spirits, within a quarter of a mile of the plot of land so leased. A. demised another plot of land to S., who covenanted that he would not allow any building to be erected thereon to be used for the sale of beer, without the written authority of A., his heirs, or assigns. R., with notice of the covenants, purchased the reversion in S.'s lot, and afterwards bought up his lease. He afterwards commenced building an hotel thereon. Upon a bill by the owner of the hotel, a perpetual injunction was granted, during the continuance of his lease, to restrain R. from using the building as an hotel, or for the sale of beer. Ib.

Not to be engaged in a Trade within a given District—Lending Money to Person trading within District.]—A covenant not to be engaged in a specific trade "or in any matter or thing whatsoever in anywise relating thereto," within a given district, does not prevent the covenantor from lending money to a person engaged in such trade within the limits, upon mortgage of his trade premises, although he may know that the mortgagor has no means of paying the debt except out of the profits of the business. Bird v. Lake, 1 H. & M. 338.

A mortgagor expressly charging the debt upon such profits would be a breach of covenant. Ib.

Semble, that there is nothing in such a covenant to prevent the covenantor from buying any number of houses within the district, fitting them up and selling them for the purpose of the trade in question, provided he has no direct interest in the businesses carried on in them after such sales respectively. Ib.

Scots Law—Covenant in Feu Charter against Trade of Publican—Right of Superior to enforce.]—A restriction in a feu charter, purporting to bind not only the original contracting feuar and his heirs, but also his assignee or any tenant or possessor of the houses to be erected on the feu, and power to enforce or dispense with it, is given not to the disponer or his heirs, but to the superior for the time being; the restriction, unless repugnant to the nature of the estate taken by the feuar or to public policy, is a condition of the feu, and runs with the land against singular successors. In all cases of restrictive conditions in a feu charter, the superior must have power to enforce them, or to dispense with them according to his own will or not, whether the charter is so expressed or not, unless the benefit of them and the right to enforce them are communicated to other feuars. Tailors of Aberdeen v. Coutts (1 Rob. App. Cas. 296), followed. Zetland (Earl) v. Hislop, 7 App. Cas. 427—H. L. (Sc.)

A restraint against carrying on the trade of a publican is as good in law, and as capable of running with the land, as a restraint against carrying on any other business; and the fact that restrictions are placed by statute upon the freedom of that particular trade constitutes no reason why a private contract to prevent it from being carried on, without the consent of the superior, should be held invalid or contrary to law. Ib.

Feu rights of land in Grangemouth, a town of 5,000 inhabitants, contained restrictions against retailing malt or spirituous liquors, or allowing the same to be sold or retailed within the buildings erected on the feus without the superior's permission. The superior sought an interdict to prohibit the defenders, the feuars, from continuing to sell any kind of malt or spirituous liquors, &c., alleging that the whole of the town was built on ground held of him as superior; that he was proprietor of certain houses in the heart of the town at a rental of 750*l.*; that he had still a large extent of ground in and adjacent to the town available for feuing, and that his mansion-house was within half a mile of the town; and that these properties were damaged by the existence of so many public-houses. The defenders pleaded no interest to sue the action, acquiescence, and prescriptive use. On the question of relevancy:—Held, first, that the restrictions sought to be imposed were not personal, or inconsistent with public policy, nor repugnant to the pursuer's estate, they relating to the use and employment of buildings erected on the land; secondly, that the interest to sue the action was connected with patrimonial rights, and that the superior's case, as shewn on the record, was sufficient to entitle him to the relief which he prayed. Ib.

Held, also, that it was the plain intention of the contracting parties that the superior should determine, whether there are to be public-houses upon any of the feus, and if so, their number and position, and accordingly the superior in granting his licence to certain feuars to sell liquor was in no sense departing from or waiving the prohibition. But it was a different question in all or some of the cases, whether the pursuer might not be seeking to enforce the restrictions under circumstances, or in a manner which ought to deprive him of the assistance of the court, there being facts averred, from which, if proved or admitted, it might be legally inferred, that successive superiors had so acquiesced in the feuar's use of their premises for the sale of liquor that the prohibition must be held to have been unconditionally discharged. But the record leaving it open to the superior to adduce evidence which might give a different colour to these facts, the parties must proceed to proof before the questions of acquiescence and waiver and prescriptive use, could be decided. Ib.

c. Against Offensive Trades.

What a Breach of—Depositing Dangerous Substances.]—Using premises for depositing large quantities of lucifer-matches, whereby the premises are rendered so dangerous as to be uninsurable against fire, is not a breach of a covenant not to carry on any noisome or offensive trade, the word "dangerous" not being in the covenant. Hickman v. Isaacs, 4 L. T. 285.

—— Public House.]—In a lease for years of a messuage and premises in a public street, the lessee covenanted that he, his executors, administrators or assigns, should not permit or suffer any person or persons to inhabit the same, who should carry on therein certain enumerated trades or businesses, "or any other trade or business that might be, or grow or lead to be, offensive, or any annoyance or disturbance, to any of the other tenants of the lessor." The lessee granted an underlease of the premises (subject to the like covenant) to A., who opened them as a public-house, in the business of a licensed victualler, which was not one of the businesses enumerated in the covenant:—Held, that such an act did not amount to a breach of the covenant. Jones v. Thorne, 3 D. & R. 152; 1 B. & C. 715; 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 200; 25 R. R. 546.

—— Lunatic Asylum.]—The converting of a demised house into a lunatic asylum is not a breach of a covenant not to "use or exercise any trade or business of butcher, baker, slaughterman, melter of tallow, tallow-chandler, tobacco-pipe maker, soap-boiler, or any other offensive trade. Doe d. Wetherell v. Bird, 4 N. & M. 285; 2 A. & E. 161; 4 L. J., K. B. 52.

In such a covenant the words "trade" and "business" must be taken to be used in different senses, and the former must be confined to a business conducted by buying and selling. Ib.

—— Hospital.] — The establishment of a hospital for the treatment of outdoor patients suffering from diseases of the throat, nose, ear, skin, and eye, fistula, and other diseases, is a breach of a covenant in a building lease against carrying on certain specified trades, or doing any act "which shall or may be or grow to the annoyance, nuisance, grievance, or damage of the lessor, his heirs or assigns, or the inhabitants of the neighbouring or adjoining houses," and will be restrained by injunction. The covenant is not confined to the lessor and his own sub-tenants, but would be broken by annoyance to the inhabitants of neighbouring or adjoining houses. Tod-Heatley v. Benham, 58 L. J., Ch. 83; 40 Ch. D. 80; 60 L. T. 241; 37 W. R. 38—C. A.

In order to enforce such a covenant it is not necessary to show that actual damage or pecuniary loss has been sustained. It is sufficient without proving actual risk of infection that sensible people feel a reasonable apprehension of risk, and interference with the pleasurable enjoyment of their houses for ordinary purposes, as distinguished from a mere fanciful feeling of distaste entertained by sensitive persons. Ib.

—— Mock Auction.]—A. being in possession of a house on the understanding that a lease would be granted, underlet to B., and B. underlet to C. In the lease subsequently granted was a covenant that neither T. nor her executors, administrators, nor permitted assigns should permit any offensive trade to be carried on, nor underlet without licence. D., who had become tenant without the knowledge of T., subsequently to the date of the lease carried on a mock auction, which being complained of by other tenants, the lessors filed a bill and moved for an injunction to restrain D. from carrying on the trade, and P. from permitting it to be carried on, or underletting without licence. Motion as to T. refused with costs, and no order made as to D., who did not appear. Moses v. Taylor, 11 W. R. 81.

How far Binding on Sub-lessee.—A lease contained a covenant by the lessee and his assigns "not to use, exercise, or carry on upon the demised premises, or permit or suffer any part thereof to be occupied by any person who shall use, occupy, or carry on therein any noisome or offensive trade." E. purchased an underlease of the premises with notice of the covenant in the original lease, and made a further sub-demise, containing a similar covenant, to M. M., after being in occupation some months, began to carry on an offensive business on the premises. In an action by the original lessor, claiming an injunction against both E. and M.:—Held, that no injunction ought to be granted against E., there being no evidence to show that E. had authorised or sanctioned M. to occupy the premises to carry on therein an offensive business; and that E. was not to be compelled by means of an injunction to bring an action of ejectment against M. The doctrine of Tulk v. Moxhay (2 Ph. 774), explained. Haywood v. Brunswick Building Society (8 Q. B. D. 403), and Austerberry v. Oldham Corporation (29 Ch. D. 750), followed. Hall v. Ewin, 57 L. J., Ch. 95; 37 Ch. D. 74; 57 L. T. 831; 36 W. R. 84—C. A.

Semble, that the words "shall not suffer or permit," in a covenant of this kind ought not to be construed as equivalent to "shall hinder and prevent," but rather as "shall not authorise or sanction." Ib.

Construction of.] — The defendants were assignees of the lease of certain premises which had been demised by the plaintiffs for a term of years, the reddendum being as follows: "yielding and paying a yearly rent of 30*l.* by equal quarterly payments" on the usual quarter-days, "and a like yearly rent of 25*l.* by like equal payments in case any of the trades, occupations, or things hereinafter covenanted not to be carried on or done upon the said premises shall be carried on or done." The lessees, among other usual covenants, covenanted not to carry on upon the premises certain specified trades or businesses, nor any offensive, noisome, or noisy trade or business whatsoever, nor do nor suffer to be done anything which might be or grow to the damage or annoyance of the lessors. The lease contained a condition of re-entry if the said yearly rent of 30*l.* or the said further rent of 25*l.*, in case the same should become payable, were in arrear, or if and whenever there should be a breach of any of the covenants thereinbefore contained on the part of the lessees. The defendants having carried on upon the demised premises a business within the terms of the above-mentioned covenant, the plaintiffs sued to recover the premises upon a forfeiture of the lease:—Held, that the lease could not be construed as meaning that the defendants were entitled to carry on the business in question upon payment of the additional rent mentioned in the reddendum, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to re-enter under the condition for re-entry should they choose to exercise that option, instead of requiring the payment of the additional rent. Weston v. Metropolitan Asylum District Mana- gers, 51 L. J., Q. B. 399; 9 Q. B. D. 404; 46 L. T. 580; 30 W. R. 623; 46 J. P. 564—C. A.

In construing a covenant not to carry on any offensive trade or business on premises demised, much will depend on the situation of the premises; and in construing such a covenant it is particularly worthy of consideration, whether such trade as that complained of was carried on there at the time of the demise. Gutteridge v. Munyard, 7 Car. & P. 129; 1 M. & Rob. 334.

"Nuisance."]—Harrison v. Good (L. R. 11 Eq. 388), in limiting the term "nuisance" in a restrictive covenant to that which is a legal nuisance questioned. Tod-Heatley v. Benham, 58 L. J., Ch. 83; 40 Ch. D. 80; 60 L. T. 241; 37 W. R. 38—C. A.

Enforcing by Injunction.]—Per Lindley, L.J.:—Without deciding that the existence of an hospital is per se an annoyance, the apprehension of risk of infection entertained by reasonable men amounts to a breach of the extra protection intended to be given to the covenantee by the introduction into the covenant of the words "annoyance" and "grievance" in addition to "nuisance or damage." Ib.

d. Other Restrictions.

To Buy all Beer, Wine or Spirits from Landlord—How Satisfied.]—A covenant by the tenant of a public-house to purchase of his landlord all beer to be sold or consumed in or upon the premises is not broken by the tenant buying through an agent, without the knowledge of the landlord, beer made by the landlord. Edwick v. Hawkes, or Edridge v. Hawker, 50 L. J., Ch. 577; 18 Ch. D. 199; 45 L. T. 168; 29 W. R. 914.

—— Implied Covenant on Part of Landlord.]—Semble, that where such a covenant is entered into by a tenant there is, in the absence of express stipulation, an implied obligation on the part of the landlord to supply the tenant with such kinds of beer as he requires, and if this obligation is not fulfilled, the tenant is at liberty to buy the beer which he requires elsewhere. Ib.

A covenant to take all beer consumed on premises is conditional on a proper supply of a marketable article. Luker v. Dennis, 47 L. J., Ch. 174; 7 Ch. D. 227; 37 L. T. 827; 26 W. R. 167.

A contemporaneous counter-covenant to supply imports a condition precedent that it will be performed in lieu of the condition otherwise implied. Ib.

A continual breach of such condition amounts to a release of the covenant to take. Ib.

—— Binding on Assignee.]—A. and B. on a demise to them of the Sutton Arms covenanted to take from the landlord or his assigns all beer consumed in the Sutton Arms and also the Milton Arms (a public-house held by A. alone, of different landlords):—Held, that an assign from A. of the Milton Arms, who had notice, was bound by the covenant. Ib.

And see also White v. Southend Hotel Co., infra.

—— Enforcement by Assignee.]—In a lease of a public-house by brewers, therein described as the lessors, including in such term "assigns," the lessee covenanted not to buy or sell on the premises any ale or stout other than such as should be bonâ fide purchased of the said lessors, or from them or either of them, either alone or jointly with any other person or persons who might thereafter become a partner or partners with them or either of them, provided they or he should at such time deal in or vend such liquors, and should be willing to supply the same of good quality and at a fair market price. The lessors sold the goodwill of their business and the reversion of the public-house to a brewer carrying on business at a neighbouring brewery, and expressly assigned to him the benefit of this covenant. In an action by the lessors and their assignee to restrain a breach of the covenant:—Held, that the covenant was assignable, and was not confined to persons carrying on business at the lessors' brewery, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to an injunction. Doe d. Calvert v. Reid (10 B. & C. 849), distinguished, Semble, the covenant ran with the land, and could be sued upon by an assignee of the reversion. Clegg v. Hands, 59 L. J., Ch. 477; 44 Ch. D. 503; 62 L. T. 502; 38 W. R. 433; 55 J. P. 180—C. A.

A covenant by the lessee of an hotel with the lessor, his heirs and assigns, not to sell or permit to be sold upon the demised premises during the term any wines or spirits other than shall have been supplied by or through the lessor (a wine and spirit merchant), or his successors or assigns, is a covenant touching the land, it runs with the land, and is binding on the assigns of the lessee, although assigns were not named in the covenant. The principles laid down in Tatem v. Chaplin (2 H. Bl. 133), Clegg v. Hands (59 L. J., Ch. 477; 44 Ch. D. 503), and Fleetwood v. Hull (58 L. J., Q. B. 341; 23 Q. B. D. 35), applied. White v. Southend Hotel Co., 66 L. J., Ch. 387; [1897] 1 Ch. 767; 76 L. T. 273; 45 W. R. 434—C. A.

—— Severance of Ownership of Reversion and of Lessor's Business.]—The fact that the ownership of the reversion to the demised property has become severed from the ownership of the business of the lessor does not prevent the lessor or his representatives from enforcing such a covenant. Ib.

—— Abatement of Rent on Observance of Covenant.]—The assigns of the lessee, if they comply with the covenant and purchase their wines and spirits from the successors in business of the lessor, will be entitled to the benefit of a proviso for abatement of rent contained in the lease to which the lessee was entitled on his observance of the covenant. Ib.

The lease of a public-house contained a covenant that the lessee and his assigns would, during the term, purchase all beer required for the business from the lessors, a proviso for re-entry or nonpayment of rent, or nonperformance of the covenants, and a provision for reduction of the rent so long as the lessee should purchase beer from the lessors:—Held, that the covenant to purchase beer was an absolute one, and that the lessee had not the alternative of dealing with a rival brewer and paying the unreduced rent. Hanbury v. Cundy, 58 L. T. 155.

Covenant not to do anything whereby Licence "may be Forfeited."]—The lessee of a public-house covenanted not to "do or suffer to be done on the premises any act whereby the licences necessary for using the said premises as an inn, tavern, or public-house may be forfeited or the renewal thereof withheld." He was twice convicted of offences as such tenant, and the convictions were indorsed on his licence. He assigned his lease, and a subsequent occupant of the premises obtained a renewal of the licence:—Held, that he had committed a breach of the covenant. Harmann v. Powell, 60 L. J., Q. B. 628; 65 L. T. 255; 56 J. P. 150.
